U. S. Supreme Court Renders a Number of Decisions More Favorable to Labor An Employers' Liability Bill With a Joker in it Offered to Congress by Employers' Committee--Progress of Labor Legislation Up to Date.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 — The United States Supreme Court has sustained the "fall crew" law of Indiana, in which a definite number of men on trains of a certain length is required. The test case was brought before the Indiana courts by the "B. & Four" railroad.

A few days previous to the "fall crew" law ruling, the Supreme Court sustained the federal "standardization of equipment" act which passed the Sixty-first Congress and which required foot boards, grab irons, sills and other appurtenances of railroad freight cars and locomotives, to be of standard sizes and to be placed in similar locations on instrumentalities of commerce of interstate railroads. The court held in the latter case, which was tested by the Southern Railway, that lack of state legislation was not sufficient to prevent a car being used in intra and inter-state commerce from being properly furnished with the standard equipments.

The federal act on "equipment" and the Indiana "full crew" act could very profitably be used as models for similar legislation in all the states.

In the tentative bill drafted by the United States Employers' Liability and Workmen's Compensation Commission, this peculiar and apparently innocent joker is incorporated:

"That in any proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission for rates, all amounts payable under this Act shall be considered as properly chargable to the operating expenses of the carrier."

For hours and for days attorneys for the railroads argued, debated, pounded, harranged and tried to browbeat the Federal Commission on Compensation to advocate legislation granting railroads higher transportation rates. The section quoted above was the most the commission would concede. It is herewith presented to the public with the warning that the attention of all United States Senators and Representatives should be called to it and they should be notified to give it no encouragement. It was only a few days ago that the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co. declared a dividend of 27 per cent, and then, for the first time in December 27, declared a dividend of 22 per cent and its earning after the dividend was announced showed a surplus of $47,786,663 for the last fiscal year. It cost the Lehigh Valley 31 cents to make a dollar in the year 1902, and through a variety of economies, chief among which is low wages, it made a dollar in 1910 by expending less than 59 cents. And yet these enormous corporations outrageously and flagrantly demand an over-burdened public to pay higher rates on transportation charges, as an excuse to be able to treat their injured employes with ordinary decency and who go to the present day have neglected and abused.

The Lloyd bill, H. R. 8390, which received much attention during the last session of Congress by the House Committee on Reform in the Civil Service, is still being strongly urged before that committee for early action. Mr. Hannibal L. Godwin, chairman of the committee, has called the committee to meet on January 10 for the purpose of giving further consideration to the measure, and he has promised to do his utmost to get it reported favorably.

The House Committee on Labor has decided to report favorably upon the Convict Labor bill, H. R. 8201. This bill is being strongly urged by labor. It is hoped this measure will be passed by the present Congress and thus relieve free labor from the existing competition with contract convict labor.

The Eight Hour bill, H. R. 8651, which passed the House of Representatives on December 14, has been referred to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. This committee is composed of the following Senators: Borah, Idaho; Penrose, Pennsylvania; du Pont, Delaware; Page, Vermont; McLean, Connecticut; Kenyon, Iowa; Rayner, Maryland; Bankhead, Alabama; Shively, Indiana; Swanson, Virginia, and Martine, New Jersey. President Gompers has urged the committee to take action upon the bill at an early date. It would be well if his example were followed by all the organizations, and if individual members would address their own senators urging them to give immediate and active support to this measure.

The clauses in the Clayton bill, H. R. 13273, were made by the House Committee on Judiciary last week. The committee showed a lively interest in all the statements made by friends and supporters of the measure, and closely questioned attorneys of the National Association of Manufacturers and the Anti-Boycott Association while they were making their opposing arguments. The hearings are in print and can be obtained on applica-

PREDICTED IRON AND STEEL BOOM.

IE facts underlying recent expressions of business optimism by such acknowledged authorities as Willis L. King are hardly capable of complete summary in the space of a short newspaper article, but one fact which counts for at least as much as any other is that the railroads have not yet satisfied their requirements but are on the contrary only tightly getting started as buyers.

The Iron Age as a result of a recent investigation into this phase of current conditions declares that the railroads placed only 10 per cent of the new business booked by the United States Steel corporation in November, whereas they ordinarily take 60 per cent of the corporation's annual output. Wall Street appears to be settling down to the conclusion that it was his knowledge that the railroads would soon be forced to buy extensively that led H. H. Price to make his recent prediction that 1912 would see the steel trade equaling the wonderful record of 1909. If the roads, on the whole were still backward in their orders last month when the new business booked showed the largest gain in about a year and a half, it is very reasonably argued that when they really get into the market as buyers, as they must, the iron and steel industry will experience a genuine boom. The exceptional railroad economies of the past year or two must have their limitations. The equipment companies this year have put out only about 75,000 cars, against 180,945 in 1910 and 284,000 in 1907. Of new locomotives, only 3,000 have been delivered this year, against 4,755 in 1910 and 7,362 in 1907. Steel rails tell the same story, when the production by years is studied.

A well-known market writer suggests that the Frick reason for optimism regarding the steel industry may be verified somewhat further by an examination of the November statistics of exports published after his interview had been printed. He contemplated as a feature of 1912, a heavy cash in the iron and steel export trade. The statistics certainly back him up. In November the agricultural exports fell off in value some $16,700,000, owing to the low price of cotton, yet all exports combined declined in value only $5,011,948. Non agricultural exports must have increased therefore, by about $11,700,000, and there can be little doubt that the increase should be credited to iron and steel exports. Steel exports have been increasing very notably during the past 11 months, the value for the same period in 1910 being about $30,000,000.

The Englebrecht who in a recent number of the Atlantic monthly attempted to prove that America was losing its share of the iron and steel export markets seems to have been getting his facts from his imagination. Such figures as Mr. Price has cited show that the United States has no difficulty in obtaining a very large export trade in iron and steel when domestic conditions make a resort to the export market desirable. If 1912 proves as good a year for the iron and steel mills as the best judges in the country are so freely anticipating now, it will make a record for 1911 off in comparison with the record of recent months. But it will only be because practically the full effective capacity of the mills will be required to satisfy the consumptive demand of the home market. That Pittsburgh will benefit in a pre-eminent degree from such a condition goes almost without saying.

The mine workers of Northumberland, England, have declared themselves in favor of a strike for the abolition of the three-shift system in use now.

The molders at Guelph, Ont., increased their day wage from $2.75 to $3.00 and piecework rates from $3.50 to $3.70 without strike.

There are now 108 unions in the Hebrew trades of New York City.

There are fifteen trade unions in China.

Medicine Hat, Canada, carpenters get 50 cents an hour.

There are seventy nine union labels

W. M. SHUSTER, PERSIA'S AMERICAN TREASURER GENERAL

WHEN the newly established constitutional government of Persia asked the administration at Washington to name an honest and capable man to put her finances on a business basis President Taft and Secretary Knox picked out the man who has for months been the storm center of Russo-Persian politics, William Morgan Shuster. The president particularly had reason to know his man. He had seen him at work—a youngster of less than thirty—as collector of customs at Manila and afterward as secretary of public instruction for the Philippines while Mr. Taft was governor general. Returning from the east, he took up the practice of law in Washington, but relinquished it at the president's request to undertake the task of straightening out Persia's tangled finances. As treasurer general he has antagonized the Russian government, which regards Persia as its legitimate prey, and under pressure from this source the Teheran government, which was in the midst of a ministerial quiescent at the time, disavowed some of the acts, such as the employment of a British officer as commander of the gendarmery, which irritated Russia.

THE YEAR IN THE COAL INDUSTRY.

The year 1911 was an unsatisfactory one for many bituminous coal operators, whose mines were employed to full capacity little if any of the time. On the other hand the anthracite trade enjoyed the greatest prosperity of many years. The production of 1911 as compared with that of 1910 was as follows as nearly as can be estimated at the time (the 1911 figures being obtained from the chief mine inspectors of the various states):

| | 1910. | 1911. |
|---|---|---|
| Alaska | 1,000 | 1,000 |
| Alabama | 16,111,462 | 14,000,000 |
| Arkansas | 1,905,955 | 2,100,000 |
| California | 11,164 | 4,000 |
| Colorado | 11,978,736 | 10,000,000 |
| Georgia | 177,196 | 140 000 |
| Idaho | ..... | 4,000 |
| Illinois | 45,300,246 | 50,500,000 |
| Indiana | 18,338,815 | 16,500,000 |
| Iowa | 7,928,120 | 7,900,000 |
| Kansas | 4,921,451 | 5,000,000 |
| Kentucky | 14,622,219 | 15,000,000 |
| Maryland | 5,217,152 | 5,000,000 |
| Michigan | 1,534,367 | 1,640,000 |
| Missouri | 3,982,433 | 3,500,000 |
| Montana | 2,320,970 | 2,300,000 |
| New Mexico | 3,566,321 | 4,000,000 |
| North Dakota | 390,041 | 400,000 |
| Ohio | 34,200,000 | 31,000,000 |
| Oklahoma | 2,640,224 | 2,000,000 |
| Pennsylvania, bituminous | 150,321,576 | 150,000,000 |
| Rhode Island | ..... | 1,000 |
| Tennessee | 7,121,380 | 7,000,000 |
| Texas | 1,392,176 | 2,000,000 |
| Utah | 2,617,809 | 2,600,000 |
| Virginia | 6,307,752 | 7,500,000 |
| Washington | 3,911,589 | 4,000,000 |
| West Virginia | 61,671,019 | 65,000,000 |
| Wyoming | 7,573,083 | 7,500,000 |
| Miscellaneous | 5,418 | ..... |
| Total bituminous | 417,691,059 | 419,759,000 |
| Pennsylvania anthracite | 84,485,236 | 89,712,400 |
| Total | 501,576,295 | 509,462,900 |

Thus it will be seen that while the year probably was the banner one of the trade, the large portion of the increase in production was due to the anthracite trade. The shipments of anthracite in long tons by months for the year, with December estimated are:

| | 1911. | 1910. |
|---|---|---|
| January | 5,964,117 | 5,396,618 |
| February | 5,070,948 | 5,081,784 |
| March | 5,966,894 | 5,174,166 |
| April | 5,384,913 | 4,224,356 |
| May | 6,317,582 | 4,675,601 |
| June | 6,215,257 | 5,386,122 |
| July | 4,854,605 | 4,202,052 |
| August | 5,541,780 | 4,990,941 |
| September | 5,730,935 | 4,967,516 |
| October | 6,269,179 | 5,622,995 |
| November | 6,193,314 | 5,671,746 |
| December | 6,250,000 | 6,211,379 |
| Total | 70,088,873 | 64,304,780 |

As the local trade and colliery consumption approximated 10,000,000 tons it is seen that the total production of anthracite was close to 80,100,000 long tons or 89,712,000 short tons, which is the greatest tonnage on record for the branch of the industry.

Unemployment In Massachusetts

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—The Bureau of Statistics has just issued Labor Bulletin No. 85, and trends of unemployment in the organized industries and the labor supply and demand at the state free employment offices. For the quarter ending September 30 complete returns were received from 78 per cent of the organizations representing approximately 70 per cent of the aggregate trade union membership, and 5.6 per cent were reported as employed. This percentage is lower by one point than the corresponding percentage (6.6) for the close of the preceding quarter. The condition of the labor market for the quarter showed a decided improvement over the same quarter last year. There was an increased demand for building tradesmen and metal workers, while the demand for general workers remained about the same as last year.

MILL RESUMPTIONS MARK THE NEW YEAR

A Well-Known Authority on Industrial Affairs Points Out a Number of Highly Encouraging Features in the Iron and Steel Trade at the Opening of 1912—Capacity Going Into Operation Very Rapidly.

(By B. E. V. LUTY.)

January production in the iron and steel industry promises to be between 80 and 85 per cent of the total capacity against about 75 per cent during the past three months. The majority of the steel works promise to run practically full, with attendant resumption of attached blast furnaces, while a number of merchant furnaces are going into blast. The Carnegie Steel Company, which was operating 39 of its 53 blast furnaces a week ago, has started blowing in additional furnaces, the resumptions to include two Columbus, two Ohio, one New Castle and four Edgar Thomson furnaces, increasing its operating list to 48. This will be 91 per cent in point of number, but as the idle furnaces are chiefly small emergency stacks and as about 5 per cent is normally out for relining and repairs, the company's blast furnace operations promise to reach 95 per cent of full normal output before the end of January.

A number of low-priced contracts for finished steel products, particularly bars and plates, expire with the old year, and on such contracts new business is large volume have been reaching the mills in the past week, despite the holiday season which has reduced the amount of contracting for forward delivery.

Actual specifications placed upon mill books in December have greatly exceeded the month's production and shipments, in some cases by nearly 100 per cent, and this, with the excess of specifications over shipments in November, has given the mills a very good lead for the new year, to such an extent that it is estimated that even with specifications running somewhat below the normal the mills would have steady work for three months, while the general estimate is that the steel trade enters the new year with full work assured for about five months.

But buying on a large scale has been resumed, orders reported in the past week declared as 400,000 tons for the Chicago & Northwestern, 40,000 tons for the Baltimore & Ohio, 15,000 tons for the Soo line, 50,000 tons for Stone & Webster, and 4,000 tons for the Nickel Plate, making a total of 125,000 tons. Upon these and other orders lately booked the railroads regime entirely to begin early, and the rail mills are thus comfortably fixed for the early months of the new year. The export trade continues good.

The question of general price advances in the finished steel trade is in abeyance. The recent advances which began specifically on November 20, have raised the general level by more than $1.00 a ton and have taken the market out of the rut in which semi-finished steel prices were hovering around the cost of production. The interest of the steel mills now is in securing specifications against the heavy contracts booked in the past two months, for the first quarter and half of the new year, and there is no disposition to push prices up at this time.

An exception as regards price advances is to be made of wire products, which are not unlike y to be advanced $1.00 a ton with the opening of the new year. This would place wire nails on the basis of $1.85. $2 a ton above the recent low point, but still $1 a ton below the level last April. On excellent authority it is stated that there is no basis for recent reports that merchant pipe would be advanced at the beginning of the new year.

Two new blast furnaces will be blown in early in the new year, a No. 3 at Buffalo by the Rogers Brown Iron Company, a merchant interest, and a No. 4 at Centerville by the Wheeling Brothers Company. These will bring the existing blast furnace capacity of the country up to nearly 37,000,000 tons, with eight furnaces under construction and likely to make a capacity of about 1,000,000 tons additional.

There has been a general resumption among the idle tin plate mills in the past month, November being always the month of lightest production. Fully 75 per cent of the tin plate mills are now in operation, and further resumptions planned for early January will bring the proportion up to about 90 per cent. There are now 148 independent tin plate mills in the country, regularly operative, distributed among 16 plants. The latest increases in the independent list have been the second unit of 12 mills at the Allquippa plant of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, of which four were placed in operation last week, with the remaining eight to start in early in January, and one additional mill at the Washington (Pa.) plant of the Washington Tin Plate Company. This plant has been completely rebuilt in the past few months and enlarged from five to six mills. It will resume in full the beginning of next week.

The local sheet trade has been quiet the past week, but with the heavy business done late in November and early in December the operating furnaces have a much larger tonnage of orders on their books than was the case three months ago, several of them being practically out of the market for any delivery prior to April 1. Prices are unchanged, at $13.90 for No. 2 foundry, $13.40 for basic, $13.15 for Bessemer, $13.65 for malleable and $13.40 for forge, delivered Pittsburgh.

MORE DYNAMITE ARRESTS.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30.—Three labor leaders of national prominence were indicted and arrested today in the Government's first round-up of men accused of connection with alleged national dynamiting conspiracies which Federal Grand Juries began investigating here and in Indianapolis directly after the McNamara brothers confessed, December 1.

The men arrested are Olaf Tveitmoe, secretary-treasurer of the California State Building Trades Council and head of the Asiatic Exclusion League; Anton Johannsen, president of the State Building Trades Council, and J. P. Ryan, head of the Salt Lake City local union of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, of which confederation John J. McNamara, now serving 15 years in prison, was international secretary and treasurer.

These men are charged with having conspired to transport nitroglycerine and other explosives from one State to another in violation of the Interstate Commerce law.

E. A. Clancy, formerly business agent of the Structural Ironworkers' union, in San Francisco, was charged with the same offense in the same indictment, but he has not been arrested.

In addition to these four, five other men were named in the indictment. They are Ortie McManigal, confessed accomplice of the McNamaras and chief aid of the Federal Grand Jury in gathering evidence; the McNamara brothers, David Kaplan and one Schmidt, alleged confederate of James B. McNamara in the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times building.

Tveitmoe, Johannsen and Ryan obtained bail in the sum of $5,000 after having been held prisoners in the United States Marshall's office for two hours. Lecompte Davis, one of the McNamara defense attorneys, and Job Harriman, wife of another one of the attorneys who represented the McNamaras, and John Murray, who formerly edited a labor union publication acted as bondsmen.

Legislation for Alaskian Miners

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The House Committee on Mines and Mining has appointed a sub committee, of which Representative William B. Wilson is chairman, for the purpose of recommending such legislation for the territory of Alaska as may be found necessary in reference to mining, covering safety regulations, etc. The committee is authorized to report its plans early during the session.

North Carolina has 125,000 cotton mill operatives.

STEEL WORKERS GET BONUSES.

One of the most welcome Christmas presents given this season was announced last week in a very brief statement, issued by the general offices of the United States Steel Corporation, in New York, when it was stated that $1,450,000 had been paid out as bonus distributed to employes of the corporation in all of its subsidiary companies, a total of bonuses provided for service and efficiency during the past year. The money was distributed among the employes of all the auxiliary concerns.

The statement further said that the rules of the bonus distribution were the same as had prevailed for the past nine years, and the cash was figured on a percentage of the earnings of the various companies over and above a certain fixed sum to cover depreciation and interest payments. From what could be learned among the general officers of subsidiary companies in Pittsburgh, Pittsburg employes received a generous share of these cash presents, the gifts going to mill workers, mill superintendents, officials in departments and executive offices.

In addition to this cash distribution, the corporation officials announced that 25,000 shares of common and preferred stock of the corporation had been purchased during the year for the employes to subscribe for on the Thrift-Investment plan, as in the past. The price for which this stock will be sold will be the average price that was paid for it during the year in the open market, and this is believed to be about $82 per share for the common and $106 for the preferred stock. The exact price to be charged for the stock will likely be announced during the first week of the new year. Already applications for subscriptions to the stock have been sufficient to take up all the shares for sale, and an allotment will likely be announced that will fix the amount of shares that will be distributed based on the salary and ability of the employe to carry it.

With such a showing in the bonus plan for the year 1911, the steel men in Pittsburgh regard the coming year with more than ordinary optimism.

Florida's Meetings.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. — The twelfth annual convention of the Florida State Federation of Labor will meet in the city of Jacksonville on Tuesday, January 9, 1912. Indications point to the largest meeting ever held by this state body. The eleventh annual convention of the Washington State Federation of Labor will take convene in Spokane, Wash., on Monday, January 15. This latter federation has been extraordinarily successful during the last few years and prospects are bright for future successes.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

THE JAPANESE COMPLIMENTED.

Pastor Russell Praises Their Kind Demeanor—Deplores Lack of Faith, Noted Preacher Discourses on the Importance of the Will and Its Proper Direction—New Year the Time to Choose a Right Line of Service—Faith in God of All Grace Necessary to Strength of Character and a Permanent Civilization.

TOKIO, Japan, Dec. 31.—The Foreign Missions Investigation Committee is here and are accorded every courtesy and every hospitality. Pastor Russell, Chairman of the Committee, delivered two addresses today. He had one of our finest Auditoriums, the Y. M. C. A., and a large attendance. In his audience of English residents were many Japanese. Very great attention was given him. We report one of his addresses from the text, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve" (Joshua xxiv, 15.) He said:

I am deeply impressed with the great progress which your nation has made, which is manifest on every hand. But alas! I fear that here, as in civilized lands, some of the progress is injurious. The Japanese and every other people need a faith ballast. It is necessary to strength of character and a permanent civilization. Without it, in a little while the whole world will be swept into anarchy. Indeed I foresee that awful condition approaching rapidly—in Europe, in America and here in Japan.

LAMENTS THE LACK OF FAITH BALLAST.

The basis of anarchy is a lack of faith ballast; and alas! our wonderful schools, with their fine equipments, are the real cause of the condition which is approaching. In Europe and America this infidelity is glossed over with the name of Higher Criticism, but here I see that you more candidly label it Agnosticism and Atheism. It appalled me to find that the progress of your scholars from Shintoism, Confucianism and Buddhism has not been toward Christianity, but toward total unbelief. I have been handed a report from three of your schools which has made me heartsick. Out of a total of 469 Students a professed Christianity, 17 the religion of your fathers, 10 declared themselves Atheists, 282 registered as Agnostics and 46 were so bewildered as to be non-committal.

Alas, my friends, even your proverbial politeness, gentleness, kindness of character and willingness to die for your Emperor cannot exist long under the influence of such a lack of faith ballast. And what your scholars of today believe will surely reflect in your masses shortly. And I am bound in candor to admit that a very similar condition of things prevails throughout Europe and America. The outlook is ominous indeed.

Whatever we may be, the closing of one year and the opening of another furnishes a favorable opportunity for retrospection as well as for good resolutions. I trust that my audience agrees with me in this. The greatest power in the universe is the power of the will, and we are all learning how important a matter it is that our own wills and the wills of our fellow-creatures be rightly directed. It is in line with this thought that the Wise men declared that "greater is a man that ruleth his own spirit than he who conquers a city," and, "As a man willeth in his heart, so is he." (Proverbs xvi, 32; xxiii, 7.)

WAR AND RAPINE NOT NOBLE OBJECTS.

Of old Alexander the Great willed to be the conqueror of the world, and at a cost of wealth and streams of blood he accomplished wonders. We are gradually learning, however, that war and rapine are not sufficiently noble objects for the human ambition and will. Instead, the bright minds of the world are turning toward the conquering of the earth. Highways are cast up, rails are laid, trains are run, mountains are pierced, rivers are spanned with bridges, and electrical power in every direction in the human will is using steam and a marvelous manner. I am not emphasizing these well known facts so common in our observation, but calling attention to the will behind all these results, without which they would not be attained.

And what is thus noted in the achievements of the world reminds us that we each and all have wills, which should be rightly directed and forcefully exercised in all of our personal affairs, our lives, our ambitions, our family and social attainments. A will less man is a good-for-naught. How important, then, it is that all of our wills should be wisely, rightly directed, that our lives may be made as successful and useful as possible, for the glory of our Creator and for the welfare of our fellows, as well as for our own sakes. I suggest to you, therefore, in harmony with our text, that we "choose this day" our course for the coming year, yea, for life, and, finding that we have chosen wisely, that we bend every energy to the outworking of that resolution or will.

JAPAN A FLOWERY KINGDOM.

This choice does not necessarily mean that all must turn right about face and go in the opposite direction to that in which we have been going. I am not a believer in the theory of man's total depravity. Wherever I travel I perceive marks of sin, depravity, human imperfection, weakness, but I also perceive evidences of good intentions, good endeavors, noble resolves.

It is not because sin at the present time is profitable, advantageous, pleasurable, or seems to be one or all of these, that it is sought after, desired and given so large a control in human affairs! It is not this true because we are now under the dominion of the Prince of darkness, the Prince of this world, whom the Scriptures declare shall be bound for a thousand years and deceive the nations no more, by putting light for darkness?

When the deception shall pass away and mankind shall see clearly the joys and rewards of righteousness, will they not prefer them? And if in that glorious Epoch right doing brings blessing and pleasure, and wrong doing brings all the disadvantages and stripes, may we not expect that the majority of humanity will seek righteousness, seek harmony with God, and thus seek the joys and blessings of divine favor and everlasting life?

My brief stay in Japan has given me a keen appreciation of what the Japanese have already attained as a people—entirely aside from Christianity. I perceive many things in Japan, closely connected with your religious customs, which put to the blush certain conditions prevalent in Europe and America, where Christianity has been dominant for centuries. We are to acknowledge the good wherever we see it, and so now I freely acknowledge that I perceive amongst your people an esthetic taste, a gentleness of demeanor and a loyalty of heart which I fully appreciate, even though these qualities came to the Japanese, not through Christianity, but through Shintoism and Buddhism. Indeed, I must apologize for much of the rudeness and crudeness of the so-called Christian people, of which you have heard through your learned men and of which you know something through contact with the soldiers and sailors of these lands who come to your ports.

I would have you understand that the teachings of Christianity cover every form of courtesy, gentleness, brotherly kindness and hospitality. The very keynote of Christ's instruction to His followers is love, out of a pure heart—and that each should do unto his neighbor as he would that his neighbor should do to him. The fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit of Christ are prominently set forth in the Bible—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, faith, hope, joy, love.

You should know, moreover, that, while these qualities are very generally ignored amongst the representatives of Christendom, there are, nevertheless, faithful disciples of Jesus who study daily to put into practice all these qualities marked by Divine approval. The difference seems to be that these esthetic qualities or graces in your land have become a national trait with the Japanese, while in Christendom, so-called, they are practiced only by a proportionately small number, the remainder rather boasting of and cultivating qualities the reverse of these, more hopeful in the battle for life and for money which is manifest everywhere among them.

DISAGREES WITH MISSIONARIES.

I find myself unable to agree with the teachings of the missionaries which have reached you, however hopeful our some of them may have been. Knowing that an essential feature of Shintoism is reverence for deceased ancestors, many missionaries feel, and, finding that we have chosen wisely, that we bend every energy to the outworking of that resolution or will.

JAPAN A FLOWERY KINGDOM.

This choice does not necessarily mean that all must turn right about face and go in the opposite direction to that in which we have been going. I am not a believer in the theory of man's total depravity. Wherever I travel I perceive marks of sin, depravity, human imperfection, weakness, but I also perceive evidences of good intentions, good endeavors, noble resolves.

It is not because sin at the present time is profitable, advantageous, pleasurable, or seems to be one or all of these, that it is sought after, desired and given so large a control in human affairs! Is not this true because we are now under the domination of the Prince of darkness, the Prince of this world, whom the Scriptures declare shall be bound for a thousand years and deceive the nations no more, by putting light for darkness?

When the deception shall pass away and mankind shall see clearly the joys and rewards of righteousness, will they not prefer them? And if in that glorious Epoch right doing brings blessing and pleasure, and wrong doing brings all the disadvantages and stripes, may we not expect that the majority of humanity will seek righteousness, seek harmony with God, and thus seek the joys and blessings of divine favor and everlasting life?

My brief stay in Japan has given me a keen appreciation of what the Japanese have already attained as a people—entirely aside from Christianity. I perceive many things in Japan, closely connected with your religious customs, which put to the blush certain conditions prevalent in Europe and America, where Christianity has been dominant for centuries. We are to acknowledge the good wherever we see it, and so now I freely acknowledge that I perceive amongst your people an esthetic taste, a gentleness of demeanor and a loyalty of heart which I fully appreciate, even though these qualities came to the Japanese, not through Christianity, but through Shintoism and Buddhism. Indeed, I must apologize for much of the rudeness and crudeness of the so-called Christian people, of which you have heard through your learned men and of which you know something through contact with the soldiers and sailors of these lands who come to your ports.

I would have you understand that the teachings of Christianity cover every form of courtesy, gentleness, brotherly kindness and hospitality.

DISAGREES WITH MISSIONARIES.

I find myself unable to agree with the teachings of the missionaries which have reached you, however hopeful some of them may have been. Knowing that an essential feature of Shintoism is reverence for deceased ancestors, many missionaries feel, and, finding that we have chosen, we feel, and, finding that we have chosen wisely, that we bend every energy to the outworking of that resolution or will.

the unjust, was not for a mere handful, but for the entire race. That sacrificial death took place more than five thousand years after Adam's sin, but it is to be made efficacious for Adam and all of his race—not merely for those who have heard the Message of Divine grace, nor merely for those who have lived since the sacrifice took place, but, as the Bible declares, "Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." Hebrews ii, 9.)

Another Scripture distinctly shows that the Divine favor and blessing resulting from Jesus' death is not only to be a benefit to the Church, to those who now believe and walk in the footsteps of the Redeemer, but will ultimately benefit all the remainder of mankind. Thus we read, "He is a propitiation (satisfaction) for our sins (the Church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." (1 John ii, 2.) All mankind, therefore, must finally receive benefit, a blessing, as a result of Jesus' death, and this will include your ancestors. This is the method God has adopted for the fulfillment of His glorious promises of thirty-five hundred years ago to Abraham—to which promise our Creator gave His oath, that we might have strong consolation and faith in its fulfilment. The promise is that "All the families of the earth shall be blessed," and, additionally, that the blessing shall come to them through Abraham's Seed.

CHRISTENDOM'S GREAT MISTAKE

The great mistake made by Christendom has been in overlooking the fact that God's great work thus far has been only the finding of the promised Seed of Abraham, through whom the blessing will reach all peoples. Primarily, this gracious offer was made to Abraham's natural posterity, the nation of Israel, if they could keep perfectly the terms of their Law Covenant. But they were unable so to do because, like the remainder of the race, they were imperfect. Then it was that God revealed to them that He would send them a Savior, who would deliver them from their own weakness and use them in carrying the blessing and favor to the whole world.

In due time God sent His Son, Jesus, to be the Redeemer. Jesus left the glory which He had with the Father and humbled Himself to be a man nature, yea, even to death, the ignominious death of the cross. Thus doing He provided the Ransom-Price for the sins of the whole world, for the penalty upon the race was a death penalty, the result of one man's disobedience. Thus the death of a Just One for the unjust is sufficient to constitute a satisfaction of the Divine Law, the redemption of the race from its death sentence. Thus was accounted for all an opportunity for resurrection: "As by a man came death by a Man also comes the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive, every man in his own order"—not all at once.—I Corinthians xv, 21, 23.

Jesus, the Redeemer, having finished His sacrifice, was returned to heavenly glory at the right hand of Divine Majesty, far superior to angels, etc. He now is ready for His great work.

Why the delay, do you ask? The Scriptures very clearly inform us that a special, saintly class, to be gathered out of all nations, peoples, kindreds and tongues, is to be associated with the Redeemer in His great work of blessing the world. It is for this foreordained company to be called, chosen and found faithful during the Messianic Kingdom reign. It is my opinion that the delay is nearly over—that very soon the last member of this glorious company will have passed beyond the veil, and that then, forthwith, the sufferings of The Christ, Head and Body, being ended, Messiah's glorious Kingdom will begin.

WHAT ISRAEL DID NOT OBTAIN.

St. Paul points us to the fact that the special class, or elect, in the Church of Jesus, accomplished a great moral uplift in that nation, but that the nation as a whole was not saintly and hence, as a whole, could not be the Redeemer's associates in His Messianic Kingdom. When Messiah came to His own and they received Him not, but crucified Him, they as a nation were rejected and cast off from favor. But some of them were Israelites indeed—some of them received Jesus, became His disciples, and were accepted by God by the begetting of the Holy Spirit, at and after Pentecost, to be members of the House of Some—members of spiritual Israel.

Since then Divine Providence has been selecting the saintly ones from every nation under heaven, to complete this spiritual Israel. Thus St. Paul declares again, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise"—the promise that all the families of the earth shall be blessed through this Seed—Galatians iii, 16, 29.

So today, on the threshold of the New Year, I urge upon you a recognition of the power of the will, and the importance of its proper exercise in choosing the true things now being represented in Christ and His glorious Gospel of the love of God. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve"—God or Mammon.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

"Now there are some missionaries who simply bring the Bible to the people. In their success better or worse than the success of the industrial, medical, or ethical missionary? Yes and no; yes, because they may find some believers; no, because they will not find very many who stay with them for any length of time.

"I highly esteem the fact that hundreds of Christians died in the Boxer troubles, but at the same time many sacrificed to their ideals. A Chinaman may astonish you by the way he takes in Christian teaching, and by-and-by show that his Christianity was only an outward show.

"I remember a Chinese pastor, who for over thirty years preached daily, and yet one day before his death he confessed that all the time he had worshipped his idols, too, and he trusted to be buried in a heathen way. Yet at the same time, Christians of one year's standing suffered martyrdom gladly.

"One Chinese Christian I remember was a handsome fellow, with the most polished manners. He seemed to be thoroughly good and trustworthy, and I would have wagered anything upon his honesty and integrity. One morning I woke up to find that he had been arrested as a murderer and pirate. They produced indisputable evidence of his guilt. I was utterly dumbfounded. This man was in the daytime a clean, honest gentleman, but at dark he girded on his daggers and pistols and became a murderer. He had been doing this for a long time.

Revival of Confucianism.

"It seems that since the Russo-Japanese War, Confucianism has revived in a wonderful way. Officials, students, and scholars united to give Confucianism a new lift up. Now they are the leaders of the common people, and as long as they are so hostile against Christianity, Christianity can make but very slow progress, if any progress at all.

"Another reason which makes Chinese hostile to Christianity especially is that white man have not always shown themselves true to their professions. White man and Christian are the same to any Chinaman. The Chinese, be they Mohammedan, or Buddhist, Taoist or Confucianist, are forbidden the drinking of intoxicants. Nevertheless, it is considered very hot to get drunk. Many white people in the East, soldiers and sailors especially, get drunk, and act in foolish ways. Then the Chinese will race-ally call your attention to these men and say that, if this is the outcome of Christianity, they will rather have none of it.

Foreign Money Only.

"Mission work in China, with its schools, hospitals, benevolent enterprise is that white man have not always shown themselves true to their professions. ## TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Ohio, Dec. 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I greatly enjoy and appreciate the Tribune because of the blessings we receive through reading Pastor Russell's Sermons, Question Box and Sunday School Lessons. May you continue the good work and be blessed in publishing as we are in reading them.

Yours in the truth,
HOMER J. MAY.

New York, Dec. 24.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Christmas and New Year's greetings for the editor and staff. Wish to thank you for your evident interest in things religious, which prompts you to publish some good spiritual nourishment along side the things of secular interest. You made a grand selection when you choose the Pastor Russell Sermons. There is something in them to think about during the week 'till the next one arrives.

The Lord bless you.
R. H. BARBER.

New York, Dec. 29.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

My interest in the sermons by Pastor Russell which you publish each week does not abate. Those words in the last sermon so impressed me: "Suppose we should convert all the heathen and make the whole world a Christendom of the same sort that we have in Europe and America! What then?" Would God's will be done on earth as it is done in heaven—perfectly?

It was brought out so forcibly that even if mankind should convert the world they never could bring about a reign of righteousness.

The whole sermon was grand. I am sure it will be able to receive time through your paper and enjoy also the other religious features of the Tribune.

Continue, I pray you, to give us these good things.

Sincerely yours,
DORA GRAHAM.

Kansas, Dec. 28.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

The religious section of your paper is very much appreciated and I think it's getting better all the time.

Respectfully,
J. L. PRICE.

Maryland, Dec. 28.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It gives my pleasure to renew again my subscription to your paper. I consider it money well invested when we receive in return a paper we can with confidence let our children read and know they as well as ourselves will profit by reading its contents. We are especially interested in Pastor Russell's Sermons as well as other interesting features including the Question Box.

I wish you success in the coming year and God's blessing for you for the part you take in helping in the harvest work.

Respectfully,
MRS. C. MACEY.

Indiana, Dec. 18.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

As a reader of your valuable paper I feel to express my thanks to you for the work you are doing for the public through the printed page.

I greatly enjoy the weekly visit of your valuable paper, especially the religious columns, in which I am particularly interested. Wishing you a prosperous New Year, I remain,

Very respectfully,
J. D. HILBEMAN.

Maine, Dec. 20.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

My subscription does not expire until March, 1912, but I find it convenient to renew now for another year.

I appreciate your paper more and more, on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons, also newly added religious features. I mail all my papers to friends, hoping to extend the find Tidings and perhaps bring you new subscriptions. Through this means so many are enabled to follow our Saviour's steps in His trouble and experiences around the world.

We cannot know how many are receiving blessings weekly from your hands, but you surely will receive a rich reward in due time.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. M. E. PARKER.

New York, Dec. 23.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed you will find my renewal for another year to the Labor Tribune. I enjoy your paper very much, especially Pastor Russell's sermons. I am a very old lady and the type is so large that I have no trouble in reading the paper. May God bless you for publishing Pastor Russell's sermons is my sincere wish.

MRS. LOUISA BURNS.

Iowa, Dec. 24.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It is a good plan for all persons to count their blessings. This I have just been doing in connection with your most excellent paper. I find I am very thankful for all of Pastor Russell's good sermons and other features of the great work being done. In fact I have taken the Tribune ever since you began this good work—Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days. Eccl. ii: 1.

I am again renewing my subscription and am thankful to have a weekly paper with so very many good spiritual labor news, interesting items, clean type, etc.

Yours, sincerely,
MRS. M. H. PLEAK.

Canada, Dec. 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Please find enclosed remittance for renewal of my subscription for the Tribune. I find no paper publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons equal to yours, for you give the sermons a prominent place, do not curtail or crowd them into a corner.

I appreciate the Sunday School Lessons and Question Box. It gives those who wish to understand the Scriptures a chance to ask and find a correct and sensible answer.

The Lord will reward those faithful to the Truth. Wishing you success,

Yours respectfully,
MRS. A. GLADWIN.

Ohio, Dec. 25.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I surely do appreciate your valuable paper, especially Pastor Russell's Sermons and all the Scripture Question Box, both of which I am deeply interested in. May God, our Heavenly Father, bless, guide and sustain you in the year to come.

Yours truly,
MISS MARIE LEHMAN.

Pennsylvania, Dec. 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We take other papers that publish Pastor Russell's Sermons, but we are especially interested in the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons. We prize the Tribune very highly on account of the religious page. There are also other features that are very interesting. We wish you a Merry Christmas and Happy and Prosperous New Year with much Christian love.

MR. AND MRS. J. C. RICKEY.

North Carolina, Dec. 25.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to your valuable paper. I cannot afford to do without it, for I greatly appreciate the religious features of your paper, especially Pastor Russell's Sermons. May our Heavenly Father richly reward you for the active part you are taking in the great harvest work is my prayer.

Most respectfully,
JENNIE YATES.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Permit me to commend you for turning out one of the best all-around papers that has ever been my lot to be a subscriber to your combinations of religious and general news, reaches and satisfies all classes. As long as you continue to publish Mr. Russells sermons you can count on my subscription.

Respectfully yours,
W. H. McALISTER.

POPULAR MECHANICS

SUSPENDED TROLLEY.

Car Is Driven by a Propeller Operated by Gas Engine.

While the use of a suspended car is not altogether new, yet the one now being tried out in Burbank, Cal., is unique in many ways. The chief point of interest is the fact that it is driven by a huge propeller, itself of novel design, which is operated by a twenty-six horsepower gas engine. The car is no mere toy model, but a fifty foot structure of steel and aluminum, which has a carrying capacity of thirty-six passengers. It is built in corrugated shape, and, while the photograph shows the uncovered ribs, the finished car will be covered with a light, dexible covering, with painted windows. In addition to the propeller in the rear, another will be placed in the front of the car, doubling its power and acting as an auxiliary in case of breakdown.

The short length of overhead track, about a quarter of a mile, has made it impossible to test the new device for speed, but it operates perfectly, showing that it is no mere theoretical invention. Forty people have been carried with ease at one time.

The six foot propeller is of great interest, being a radical departure from accepted forms. It will be noted that the two blades are like enormous fans, being formed of sheet metal on ribs of steel tubing. A number of ingenious devices, lifting planes to lighten the car while in motion, apparatus for raising and lowering the car at stations, etc., have been designed to perfect this new vehicle.

The Tenacious Microbe.

The microbe is tenacious of life, for, according to a French contemporary, Mignin found the bacillus leptosporus placed on a sheet of glass lived for five years. Germs of potato disease sealed in a tube were living after a period of eight years. In 1870 Rail of Prague, after a lapse of eighteen years, infected a mouse fatally with some bacilli. Nestler investigated clods of earth stored in a herbarium for over half a century and found 80,000 living stored to the gram. Some earth wrapped in paper since 1824 and protected from atmospheric germs showed a contamination 10,000 bacteria to the gram. Eighty seven years is a ripe age even for a microbe.

Cleaning Brass Fixtures.

Brass rules used in a printing office or brass fixtures of any kind can be cleaned with acetic acid. This is the best and cheapest cleaner obtainable and is a harmless substance to use. Acetic acid is strong vinegar and can be purchased at any local drug store. The soiling caused by water is hastened by the addition of salt to the acid. This substance is not harmful to the hands and can be used with impunity, while most other cleaners are harmful. The brass should be wiped with a dry cloth after the acid has removed the tarnish. The acid is also excellent for washing grease from glass articles, especially fly specked windows.

Cloth of Spruce Wood.

The word comes from Germany that an inventor of that country has succeeded in making a very acceptable fabric from spruce pulp. While efforts of a similar character have been made from time to time, these have either been something lacking in one result attained. The new product is called sylvain and is said to have a fine finish and much better surface than is usual with the natural fibers as yet used for spinning. When leather is in jury, while most other cleaners are harmful. The house should be wiped with a dry cloth after the acid has removed the tarnish. The acid is also excellent for washing grease from glass articles, especially fly specked windows.

When leather is in scarce supply, while efforts are used the new yarn, when used as warp or chains, is twelve and a half times as strong as jute and two and a half as wool or filling is thirty times as strong.

Core of the Earth.

At a meeting of the Seismological association at The Hague Professor Wichert asserted that his studies of the varying velocity of earthquake tremors passing through the interior of the globe lead to the conclusion that the earth consists of a central core of iron or steel about 5,580 miles in diameter surrounded with a stony shell 930 miles in thickness. Between the outer solid crust and the inner layer of molten metal the scientific core he thinks there is a layer of liquid or plastic material lying a little less than twenty miles below the surface of the earth.

Theory of Zodiacal Light.

The zodiacal light, still one of the unsolved mysteries, has shown very regular pulsations in intensity and form. In a communication to the French Academy of Sciences, M. Birkeland has pointed out that these variations agree closely with the periods of regular magnetic waves of solar regions, and this would seem to indicate that the zodiacal light is an electrical phenomenon. A number of experiments suggest that it may be part of a ring of luminous matter surrounding the sun in the plane of its magnetic equator.

RAILWAY MAIL EXCHANGE.

Automatic System For Collecting and Delivering Pouches.

Recently a system for unloading mail has developed a railway mail exchange system that is completely automatic. Either the compartment letters or the full sized mail car as now used in the railroad mail service can be equipped with the new exchange system. The car equipment consists of a receiving arm or chute attached to the sides of the car door and folded when not in actual use so that it extends but two inches from the side of the car. Running upon rollers in a false floor between the doors of the car is a steel delivery truck capable of handling more than a thousand pounds of mail matter and arranged to dump its contents upon a special platform at an appointed spot along the track. The platform stands away from the track to prevent the pouches from piling up as they are delivered, and a low railing placed on it to overhang the opening of the pouches rolling under the wheels of the truck.

The station equipment consists of from one to twelve steel station frames, as required, and one receiving platform, as just described. To one side of the track, 341 feet from the receiving platform is a trip, which comes into contact with its counterpart upon the mail car as the train passes. A cross gear attached to the middle of one of the axles of the mail car runs a sliding shaft provided with a clutch. This clutch throws the mechanism into gear when one of the car axles attached to it comes in contact with the trip located along the side of the trackway as the car passes it. The mechanism makes one revolution and then automatically throws itself out of gear.

The front quarter of the revolution runs a cone in the car to notify the mail clerk that an exchange is to be made, opens the car door by the second quarter pushes out the delivery truck until it dumps the mail and then the receiving chute; the third quarter holds the delivery truck in position while it dumps the mail and the receiving chute in position until the station crames are passed and the mail upon them is conducted into the car; the fourth quarter pulls the delivery truck back into the car in the position it occupied before the mechanism was tripped, folds the receiving chute into its original position and closes the door of the car. This completes the exchange, and the delivery truck is ready for the next exchange station.

To Avoid a Cold.

With the sudden fall of the temperature persons run a great risk of taking cold. There is one simple way of avoiding colds—keep your mouth shut while out of doors. The man or woman who comes out of an overheated room, especially late at night, and breathes through the mouth will either catch a bad cold or irritate the lungs sufficiently to cause annoyance and unpleasantness. Chills are often the result of people taking their first step out of doors just after leaving a room full of hot air, and theater goers who dismiss and laugh over the play on their way home are inviting illness.

When shifting gears on an automobile disengage the clutch quickly and shift the gears with a quick push or pull. At the same time close the throttle almost tight and allow the clutch to come back slowly as soon as the gears have been shifted.

PERPETUAL MOTION IDEAS.

Efforts of Inventors Who Strain After the Unattainable.

Perpetual motion, like the philosopher's stone is one of those things regularly sought after. Years ago it was proved that the idea was absurd, yet only a week or so ago another inventor came forward with a new perpetual motion notion.

Some of these perpetual motion machines are certainly extremely ingenious. One man thought he had discovered a way to run omnibuses by themselves. He had cylinders of water placed just above the axles, and so these cylinders was supposed the whole weight of the bus and passengers. Pipes led from the water in the back of the bus, curved round and ended in the back board of the bus.

The more passengers there were the greater the pressure on the cylinders of water and the faster the flow of the water to the back of the bus. The faster, too, will the bus rush forward. At least, so said the inventor, who actually took out a patent for his idea. Needless to say, no such buses are running.

Another ingenious idea was a wheel with narrow shelves instead of spokes. On each shelf was a lead ball, and the inventor claimed that since the wheel was nearer the hub on the falling side kept coming toward the circumference and so outweighed those on the rising side, which ran toward the center. One steered the wheel should keep on forever. Unfortunately it always stopped after a few turns.—Pearson's Weekly.

Preparing His Speech.

A rapid very characteristic of the statesman and diplomat who made it is given in the "Autobiography of Alfred Austin." Lord and Lady Salisbury were among the guests at Beverly Grange. Lord Salisbury had come to speak at a public meeting. On the morning of the day when the speech was to be delivered, seeing Lord Salisbury passing into the study, I said to him:

"I suppose you are going to think over what you will say tonight?"

"No," he said in his ironical way, "rather to think over what I must not say."

To Meet an Emergency.

"Madam, have you any old clothes to give away?"

"I have a son belonging to my husband, but I fear it is too big for you."

"Oh, that will be all right. You just set me out a square meal and watch me eat enough so that I can fill it."—Washington Times.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS — BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

PREPARING FOR THE KINGDOM.

Luke 1, 5-25—Jan. 7.

"If these things be so, what manner of persons ought we to be?"—2 Peter 3, 11.

OUR BIBLE STUDY course for the year has been mapped out by the International Committee. It continues a very fourth investigation of our Lord's dealings and promises up to the birth of John the Baptist, the Redeemer's Forerunner and herald.

Four thousand years before the birth of Jesus, God declared that the Seed of the woman should bruise the Serpent's head. This dark saying we now see signifies that sin with all its work of error in the world is to be offset and destroyed in due time, and that the power of God to this end will operate through a wonderful Son of the disobedient Eve. Centuries passed with no sign of a fulfillment of this promise. Our race became more degraded and dilapidated more and more into a hopeless condition.

"The Seed shall bruise the Serpent's head."

Then Enoch was born, of the line of Seth. "He walked with God" and was used as a Divine mouthpiece to give a further prophecy, saying, "Behold, the Lord cometh with myriads of His holy ones to execute judgment upon all." (Jude 14, 15.)

Seeking Abraham's Seed.

Another thousand years elapsed before God again specifically declared of His benevolent intention of giving the world a fresh trial or judgment. This was to Abraham, saying that He made known more fully still the hope of the world—the Gospel. God declared to Abraham His intention to bless all the families of the earth, and secondly, that this blessing upon mankind would come to them through Abraham's Seed. "In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."—Genesis xii. 3.

This implies not only that God not only declared His coming blessing, but that He made oath to the same. God's oath was necessary to Abraham's faith. He confidently believed; but, as St. Paul said, the oath was for our sake (Hebrews vi. 17). "In Him and His Seed should be so long deferred that we, who are so speedily interested in it, might have confidence in the fulfilling of the Divine Program. St. Paul assures us that the oath was in order that, "by two immutable things (God's Word and God's oath), we might have strong consolation (we, the Church), who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us (in the good tidings)," the promises, which hope we have as an anchor of our souls, sure and steadfast, within the veil, whither our Forerunner has for us entered." (Hebrews vi. 18-20). We see, then, by the Apostle's words, that the Abrahamic promise or Covenant has not yet been fulfilled—it is still an anchor for our faith.

Other Gracious Promises.

All of God's promises were to Abraham and his seed his natural seed primarily. Consequently all through the Jewish Age, while they as a people were trying to commend themselves as worthy to be the Seed of Abraham, by endeavoring to keep the Law, God was able to fulfill them prophetically. He informed them that it was His intention ultimately to make a New Covenant with them, still better than the one which Moses mediated. Under that New Covenant He would take away their sins and iniquities; but He did not tell them how these would be cancelled; that they would be cancelled through the merit of "better sacrifices" than those which they offered through the Law year by year.

God seemed then that the New Covenant would have a Mediator who would be higher than Moses. Of that Mediator Moses prophesied, saying, "A Prophet will the Lord thy God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren, like unto me (I am a type of Him); Him shall ye hear in all things, whosoever will not obey that Prophet shall be destroyed." (Acts iii. 23.) That greater Mediator is the One by and for whom they would be really helped up to a place where they could keep the Divine Law perfectly, and be used of God in blessing all people.—Jer. xxxi. 31.

Thus the Israelites had the precious promise respecting the coming of the Messiah—but not only so, but intimations that there would be special trials and difficulties on those living at that time.—Malachi iii. 1-3.

These promises led up to and culminated in the birth of John the Baptist, the incidents of which constitute the study of today. He was not to be Messiah, but His herald. He was not born of a miraculous conception of the Holy Spirit and without human father, but he was announced by a special messenger of God, as our lessons most beautifully tells.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS, OR BY MAIL IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS JOURNAL.

Q.—Why is it that the Churches of the day are losing in membership in nearly all of the various denominations? Not one is increasing in membership in proportion to the natural increase of the race, and the decline in spiritual interest is alarming. It was stated in the public press recently that in the city of Boston alone there were forty-two church buildings that had been deserted by their congregations, and in a certain western conference fifty-five ministers had resigned their pastorates because they were without support from their congregations. Is there an explanation for this sad condition of affairs? (R. S. M.)

Answer.—A well known clergyman of New York City declared in public utterance not long ago that "The spirit of the Lord was no longer in the Churches of the day; but instead thereof we find the spirit of the world—a worldly spirit." We believe this is the real reason for the decline in spiritual interest on the part of the people and consequently, the decrease in church membership, and loss of influence. All must admit that there are many of our modern churches that have declined from what some one has been pleased to term "social clubs," where elaborate musical programs are rendered and popular addresses given on worldly themes. The people can find better entertainment at the real clubs, and if the truth be told, many of them therefore do not care to attend "church services," where there is no spiritual food from true Gospel sermons. See II Timothy iv. 2-4.

Q.—II Thessalonians ii. 11, 12, reads "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth; but had pleasure in unrighteousness." Are we to understand that the Kingdom of God was in the hearts of those hypocritical Pharisees; or what is the meaning of the expression, "The Kingdom of God is within you?" (M. G. J.)

Answer.—Neither the preceding verses we see that the Lord had been telling the people about the Kingdom of God; and some permitted the thought to be developed, that a literal Kingdom was to be established in the earth such as the Jews had enjoyed during the days of King Solomon. With this thought in mind, the Pharisees, always seeking to entrap our Lord in His statements, inquired when this Kingdom would come; saying, no doubt, "Where are your soldiers?" "What are the signs or indications of its approach?" "What will be its appearance?" And the Lord replied "The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation (with outward show and manifestation, it is an invisible kingdom; neither shall they say, lo here! or, lo there! for behold, the Kingdom of God is among you (is present invisible, unseen; it is a spiritual Kingdom and will make us "a light in the night"). The words "within you" are a faulty translation from the original Greek.

Q.—Has Noah's Ark ever been discovered? (BH.EM.)

Answer.—In reply to this question we quote from an article published several years ago.—"The Rev. Dr. John Nevin, D. D., Ed. To. Chaldean archdeacon of Malabar and Jerusalem, political delegate ressent of Malabar and ex-grand secretary of the Metropolitan archdiocese of India and Persia, has found Noah's ark! At least he says he has, into a very straight though somewhat gorgeous story about it and has gained believers among men of piety and learning. He is of the Orthodox Greek church and his labors have been chiefly in Africa and Asia. After spending several years in African explorations, Dr. Nouri crossed the east mountains to the coast of Abyssinia, and was received with great honors. His expedition up the Euphrates and over the Ararat was an expensive affair, but he got there; camped on the mountain and climbed the two peaks. Between them is a valley, and from each side of it rise the two peaks—one 16,000 and the other nearly 18,000 feet high. Starting in March they found the snow drifts impassable, and had to make another ascent. Then they climbed to within sight of a narrow plateau almost on the summit, and on that plateau they saw the ark. "The bow and stern," says the archdeacon, "were clearly in view, but the center was buried in snow and one end of it had fallen off and decayed. It stood more than 100 feet high and was over 300 feet long. The wood was petrified, dark reddish in color, almost iron colored in fact, and seemed very thick. I think the cold has preserved the wood. I am very positive that we saw the real ark, though it is over 4,000 years old." Though within rifle shot they could not reach it, the slope from the 'beach' on which it rested being a glare of ice and snow, and they could not remain till the midsummer thaw."

Q.—Examining Luke xvii. 20, 21, we find that our Lord in addressing the Pharisees said—"Woe unto you, hypocrites and scribes." Our Lord in another place addressing the same class said—"Ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity." Are we to understand that the Kingdom of God was in the hearts of those hypocritical Pharisees; or what is the meaning of the expression, "The Kingdom of God is within you?" (M. G. J.)

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The Lawyers' Trust, of Which the Judges of All the Law Courts Are Members' A "Union" Which Never Loses a Chance to Knock Open-Shop--Mr. La Follette On a Labor Decision--Interesting and Instructive Statistical Exhibits of Trades Unionism.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.--The "Bar Association" is the professional title of the organization in which attorneys, solicitors, lawyers and brief writers are all enrolled. It is probably one of the oldest and strongest union of professional men in existence. Its first, second, last and only thought is self preservation. Its word is law, in fact, it is the law, and for the sake of that self same law, (of self preservation) it elects its own members to administer the law, and up to the present no other section of society has mustered strength enough to balk their plans. It never sleeps nor allows its interest to lag. It tolerates no non-unionists nor strike breakers. The much lauded "right to work" theory is not applicable to a non-union lawyer. No one would dare bring such a creature, so self respecting union attorney would walk with him, no dignified bended judge would give him recognition. For the proof of the toil of the lawyers to their union, reference is here made to a most comprehensive exposure on the "extravagant cost of the law," by Carl Snyder, in "Colliers of December 30, in which he says in part: "We have five times as many judges as there is any need for. The chief occupation of these judges is the obstruction of justice. In the United States, with 92 million people, there are over 3,600 judges. In England, with 32 million people, only 200 judges. The City of New York has 144, almost as many as in the whole of England." Mr. Snyder concludes his analytical exposure by saying, "Reduce the number of lawyers in Congress and the State Legislatures, and then, and not until then will there be a real reform of the law in this country."

The news letter cordially invites Mr. Snyder and his fellow reformers to co-operate with the American Federation of Labor in the accomplishment of the laudable object. Some headway was made in this direction during the last two Congressional campaigns. A bigger advance will be made in future campaigns.

During an address in Cincinnati Senator Robert M. La Follette attacked the decision of the United States Supreme Court in which it brought the organizations of labor under the restrictions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. His language was clear and definite. He said, "It is strange that when the court goes to its furthest limit in imposing penalties on combinations of capital, all of the capitalist owners get away with the full value of their property, but when the court goes to the same limit in enforcing penalties on combinations of labor, it takes away the homes and savings of the workman. The fact is, the law was not understood by the people so to apply to labor organizations, and it is a mistaken judicial construction that has made it so apply. The law should be amended, by labeling out from under its operation all labor organizations and all employers' associations." By this clear, straight forward statement Senator La Follette has demonstrated a spirit of high courage, sterling honesty and true justice, and in addition he has set a noble example to his contemporaries.

Under a decision rendered at the Navy Department, the private concerns which undertake the construction of the two new battleships, Arkansas and Oklahoma, will be obliged to establish the eight hour day throughout their entire plants, in order to conform to the Hughes amendment in the last naval appropriation bill. There is no doubt among naval officials that the practical effect of this ruling will be to force an eight hour day throughout the whole of any private shipyard undertaking the contract. The date of opening bids for the construction of the new battleships has been changed from January 4 to January 25, in order that the constructors may revise their figures, because of the official decision to apply the law to the full effect.

On last Thursday Messrs. Davenport and Merritt, attorneys for Deitrich E. Loewe et al filed a petition for a writ of certiorari to be addressed to the judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the second circuit and brief in support thereof. They submit the following reasons why the United States Supreme Court should exercise its extraordinary power to take a case of this character up by certiorari. First, the case was started over eight years ago and the plaintiffs were selected at the last moment. Second, the parties were engaged in active trial for twelve weeks, to the great expense of themselves, and to the inconvenience of their attorneys and litigants. Third, the final judgment in the case is ultimately have to be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States. Fourth, the question of the liability of the members of a labor union for the torts of the officers and agents committed within the scope of their authority is one of public importance and it would be highly beneficial to the country at large if it could be settled at this time, without waiting for further and protracted proceedings in this case. On Monday the eighth of January, 1912, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, the petition for the writ of certiorari will be submitted to the Supreme Court for its consideration and action. It is a

SAVING LIFE BY CO-OPERATION.

ONE of the finest examples that could be conceived of the right sort of co-operation between employers and employed in the common cause of making working conditions safer and better is offered by the new practice on some of the northwestern railroads. The Chicago papers announce that the safety committee system which the Illinois Steel Company elaborated last year with such signal success has been adopted with equal success on the Chicago & Northwestern railway. At a conference at St. Paul early this month the general claim agent of the road told how about 500 men were now studying conditions on the right of way and in the yards and roundhouses and suggesting improvements which might be made. Their activity had resulted, he said, in a great clearing up of yards and station platforms. Obstructions were removed, windows were cleaned, railings were put up, dangerous machinery was covered. During the 11 months in which the system had been working the company's accident record showed the following reductions: 47 per cent in trainmen killed; 40.8 per cent in trainmen injured; 26.7 per cent in switchmen killed; 18.5 per cent in switchmen injured; 50 per cent in stationmen killed; 10.5 per cent in stationmen injured; 50 per cent in crackmen injured; 34 per cent in bridgemen injured; 11.4 per cent in shop and roundhouse men injured; 83 per cent in car repairers and inspectors killed; total reduction of 17 employes killed; total reduction of 2,144 employes injured, or 27.7 per cent; 70 per cent in passengers killed; 10 per cent in passengers injured.

Here is a showing for co-operation which says anything ever accomplished in so short a period by legislation. Both employers and employed appear to have entered into the thing with the right spirit. The right result was under the circumstances inevitable. What caused the same plan be tried on all railroads as well as in other employments?

BATTLESHIPS VS. LABOR; A BETTERMENT.

THE BOSS' social workers who presented a petition to President Taft the other day asking that at least the price of a battleship be devoted to a careful inquiry into labor conditions in this country, echo no over-growing dissatisfaction with big navy expenditures. Last week bids were opened for two battleships, the Oklahoma and the Nevada. For these the lowest bids were slightly under six millions of dollars each, exclusive of the cost of the monster guns and their ammunition. About thirteen millions of dollars are thus to be expended on these two vessels, which may be out of date before they enter the water, and are destined to add their waves to the active list within ten years. That is, the navy plan is to keep battleships cruising for ten years as a part of the first line; for the next ten years they are to be carried in reserve, and then they go to the scrap heap and the thirteen millions have disappeared, plus all the cost of operating and repairing. It is no wonder that people draw comparisons and ask themselves what such sums would do in this or that humane cause.

Although the New York Evening Post is not a paper which sympathizes with trades unions, it admits that very much less than six millions of dollars spent in the labor conciliation desired might greatly improve the condition of working men and women throughout the United States.

AUGUSTUS O. STANLEY, GRAND INQUISITOR OF STEEL.

NO congressional inquiry for years has given promise of more interesting revelations than the investigation conducted by the Stanley committee into the affairs of the steel trust--a promise which was amply fulfilled in the charges made before the committee by the Merritt brothers, who alleged that John D. Rockefeller took an unfair advantage of their financial embarrassment to acquire their Minnesota iron holdings, which afterward became the property of the United States Steel corporation. Augustus Owsley Stanley, who is a successful Kentucky lawyer, is serving his fifth term in the house of representatives, and this investigation has brought him more fame in four or five months than all his steady going work as a legislator in nine years. The committee is largely responsible for the bringing of the suit for the dissolution of the steel trust, although the initial work was done by Herbert Knox Smith of the bureau of corporations, whose special investigators scrutinized the trust's activities for several months and add enormously to the country's happiness and efficiency. Again, there are those who desire a Congressional study of lawlessness and the failure properly to check and to punish crime. Others look at the untaught millions in the South and think what thirteen millions would do down there to root out illiteracy and build colleges and schools. But the Government continues to fling away its treasure on battleships. Admiral Dewey now wants four of them and some auxiliary boats every year, or about $50,000,000 annually for new construction.

HOURS FOR WORKING WOMEN.

WHEN the United States Supreme Court sustained the Oregon ten-hour law for women and decided that a State can constitutionally protect women workers — on the grounds that the future of the race and the general welfare of society may be conserved—it set a proper example to State courts. Since the celebrated Oregon decision, the courts of Illinois, Michigan, Louisiana, Virginia and Missouri have supported similar legislation in behalf of working women. The courts in California, Washington and Ohio have, at the present time, cases of a like character under consideration. Attorneys for notorious grad grinds and open shoppers have haranged the courts with all their old, moth-eaten pleas of the right to contract—and the right to work as many hours as one likes, or as many hours as the capricious and profit mongering boss determines to drive an employe; but the valiant, determined, persistent efforts of the trade unionists have had the effect of so educating the public and the courts, that it is not likely the State constitutions will be longer twisted to promote injustice by such absurd contentions—which are merely survivals of a decadent era—or that the welfare of society can be longer endangered for the advantage of the exploiting few.

Utah and Missouri have nine-hour laws for women, California and Washington have eight-hour laws. They were obtained by the organizations of labor. Local legislative committees in other states should immediately make plans and exert themselves to do as good, if not better for the protection of their women workers.

COURSE OF DIVIDENDS AND WAGES.

WHILE the high cost of living is a serious matter for the working classes—in such trades, at least, as have not received a wage advance in the last ten years, commensurate with the price rise during the same period—the survey of last years wage record is not wholly discouraging. The statistical bureaus assert that wages on the whole were appreciably advanced in 1911. It is certain that dividends to employers of labor increased, at all events. During the year 1909 it is stated that $720,000,000 in dividends were paid to the stockholders in more than 1,000 industrial corporations in the United States, $780,000,000 during the calendar year 1910, and $810,000,000 during the year 1911.

That is a fine record for the year just past, and should make some of those who were constant growlers at the slowness of trade feel like apologizing for their loss or confidence in the outcome.

The dividends of corporations in the United States paid at the close of the year's business in the aggregate amounted to a greater sum than in any prior year, and January and February of 1912 will see much of the money received in these dividends reinvested by the stockholders.

This in itself will be a stimulus for business of 1912, and, combined with other factors in the industrial and transportation branches of affairs, give promise to make the first few months of 1912 break all records for briskness and magnitude of business affairs.

VICE PRESIDENT VAN BITTNER ON THE ELECTION.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 6, 1912.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have noticed in the Observer and also in the "Rescue Ledger" a statement signed "Miner," giving his views on the recent election for District and National officer in District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America.

Among other things the writer says that the big interests were behind President Francis Feehan and wanted to see him re-elected.

I desire to say that the official organ of the big coal operators' interests in Western Pennsylvania was behind Halapy. Tom Lewis' Industrial Index, which is kept up by the advertising of large corporations in Ohio, was another organ that was behind Halapy in this election. This, my friends, no one can successfully contradict, because seeing is believing, and you can read these so-called labor papers for yourself. You can also take the public press of Pittsburgh, which is controlled by capitalistic interest, and again Halapy was supported. This should convince any well thinking man that the big interests were not for Feehan and the present administration.

I also claim the writer states that President Feehan was fighting Tim Donovan for re-election. Let me say now and the District Executive Board removed Donovan for cause and no one knows that he was properly removed better than Donovan himself, and when the case is presented in its true light before the District Annual Convention the delegates will be in a position to render an equitable decision and I haven't the least doubt that the action of the District Executive Board will be approved.

Now, so far as the vote is concerned, I know positively that when the tellers tabulated the vote they will find President Feehan re-elected by a majority of between 2,000 to 2,100.

So far as a square count is concerned, the tellers and their alternates were elected by the mine workers of this district and their verdict will be unbiased.

Charles Pritchard is Halapy's running mate and he is an alternate teller and if any of the tellers are not to count me will be one of the three men who will count the vote.

I allow me to say in conclusion that we are too busy arranging for a Joint conference of operators and miners to negotiate a wage scale at the expiration of the present contract, to waste any time discussing the election. This is a secondary consideration with us. The interests of the miners, their wives and families are first.

I issue this statement in contradiction to the coward who was afraid to sign his own name to the article signed "Miner" and I will be able to answer all other such statements in the District Annual Convention.

VAN BITTNER,

Great Weavers' Lockout Starts as a Result of Determined Stand Against Non-Union Labor--British Miners to Ballot For or Against National Strike for Minimum Wage--An Important Amalgamation Scheme - - Coalfield Enginemen Demand Eight Hour Day.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Jan. 2.--Every other happening in the British labor movement this week has been overshadowed by the great cotton trade crisis. This is a matter, as readers of this journal will know, has been threatening for some time. Now the storm has burst. On the morning of December 27 notices were posted at the mills in North and North East Lancashire proclaiming a general lock-out in the weaving section of the cotton industry. At the same time the master cotton spinners have resolved to only work their mills three days a week. The position at the moment therefore is that 160,000 weavers are thrown entirely out of work whilst nearly as many spinners will be only working in Fives. Altogether 320,000 looms are stopped and 50,000,000 spindles will be idle. The loss in wages is expected to be quite $1,000,000 per week whilst lock-out pay will be distributed in the amount of over $120,000 a week.

The lock-out results, from the very successful campaign undertaken by the Weavers' Union to sweep the district clear of non-unionists. In mill after mill any non-unionists found present were requested firmly to join the union. Where they refused to do so, the weavers walked out. The net result was that in a few months, 100,000 new members joined. In two mills, however, two weavers in each case refused to join. This nearly precipitated serious trouble before Christmas but time was given the recalcitrants for them to reconsider their position. One then came in. The other three, two women and one man, all ex-members of the union, stood out. Their union comrades struck therefore in each mill and the general lock-out is the master's reply.

The weavers have made an application for an advance in their wages of 5 per cent, and the employers promised to give a definite reply to the claim next week. This fact is likely to place difficulties in the way of an early settlement of the demandon both sides, for it is not unlikely that the weavers' amalgamation will include the claim for an advance in wages as one that must be satisfied when the non-union question is settled.

The weavers have certainly entered upon the fight with a determination to win. They declare their unwillingness to work with non-unionists. They have taken up this attitude for years and are greatly chagrined to find that they are maintaining an organization to improve their working conditions, financially and otherwise, and that there are workpeople who are willing to benefit by their labors but decline to contribute their share or accept any responsibility in maintaining that organization.

The three out-standing operatives are being made a great fuss of by the employers and the newspapers. It is rather amusing to quote the opinion of one pair of fervent non-unionists, a Mr. and Mrs Riley. In the course of an interview Mrs. Riley said they were still determined to remain outside the union. "The union lot," she said, "had asked for the trouble and they cannot grumble. It is not our doings. It will simply be a nine days' wonder." Riley himself said he was of opinion that there was a strong non-unionist element in the mills, and if he and his wife had not been the object of attack someone else would have been. "Majorities," he said, "do not always have right in the past, and I am convinced that they are wrong now. When I see a crowd driving in one direction, I always think it is time to begin to think." On being reminded that the weavers were asking for a 5 per cent advance, and asked whether he would accept it he were in employment, Riley said, "Certainly I would accept it, and I should be justified. They glibly talk about what they do, but, after all, it is the masters who grant the increase, and they grant it to all their employes."

Turning to the trouble next in importance the last meeting of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain unanimously decided to take a ballot of the whole of the coal miners, who are members of the Federation as to whether they are prepared to strike to secure the principles of a minimum wage for every man and boy employed in the mines. The membership of the Federation is between 60,000 and 700,000, and this momentous decision directly affects more than one million workers employed in and about the mines. The ballot of the men, should a strike on every industry in the United Kingdom is almost beyond the imagination as a stoppage of any duration would practically paralyze the whole trade of the kingdom.

The decision of the conference to take a strike ballot may be described as unanimous, for it would not be accurate to say that every delegate was of one mind, but practically all that these who favor a ballot of the men were in a majority the whole of the miners' ranks were united in support of the policy which was known to command a majority in the districts and in the conference. The resolutions which have been adopted by the conference give a clear two months

TENER NAMES BODY TO REVISE MINE LAWS.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 8.--Governor Tener tonight announced the appointment of a commission to revise and codify the present anthracite mining laws of Pennsylvania as follows:

Sterling R. Catlin, Wilkes-Barre, State Senator, chairman; Edward E. Jones, Susquehanna county, member House of Representatives, James E. Roderick, Hazleton, State Chief of Mines; W. R. Reinhardt, Shamokin, operator; W. G. Robertson, Scranton, operator; W. D. Owens, West Pittston, operator; Martin Nash, Glen Carbon, Luzerne county, mine worker; H. C. Moran, Scranton, mine worker; Peter O'Donnell, Wilkes Barre, mine worker.

The act of June, 1911, creating the commission, provides that it shall consist of nine members, three of whom shall be selected from American operators, managers and superintendents of the anthracite region; three from among the mine workers of that region; one shall be a member of the Senate; one member of the House of Representatives, and one shall be a person versed in the art of mining.

The commission will hold its meetings in the city of Wilkes Barre, where all persons who are interested in the framing and modification of the anthracite mining laws may appear and give expression to their views. The commissioners are authorized to call into consultation any person who, in their opinion, may be able to give information that will assist in the work of revision. The commission will make a report to the Legislature in 1913.

WOMEN WIN IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—The nine hour law, recently enacted by the Legislature of Ohio, for the protection of women wage earners, in a test case before Judge Dillon, was decided by him to be constitutional. His ruling it is expected will be appealed to the higher courts of the State, and it is further expected that, in line with decisions in other states upon the question of hours of working women, the Supreme Court of Ohio will confirm the decision just returned by Judge Dillon.

GOD'S INFINITE WISDOM AND LOVE.

The Creator's Noblest Gifts to Human It—He That Seeketh Findeth. Pastor Russell, in His Address at the Missionary Inspection Committee Welcome at Shanghai, Expresses Sympathy for the Chinese—Holds Out the Hope of the Gospel for Them—The New Testament Has a Message of Salvation for all People.

SHANGHAI, China, Jan. 7. China's hundreds of millions of patient, ignorant workers have had my sympathy from childhood. The philosophies of childhood are often as correct in the main as of mature years—sometimes more so. Well do I remember as a child inquiring what would be the fate of the heathen, and the answer that I got, namely, that only through faith in Jesus, the Redeemer, is there any salvation. Then I queried What is the penalty or ignorance of the Divine Name given under heaven by amongst men whereby we must be saved? The answer was the usual one of all of our "Orthodox creeds," that they would spend eternity in a hell of unutterable anguish. Now my heart went out sympathetic-ally toward every missionary movement on behalf of the heathen!

Then came maturer thinking and I said, Like others I am imperfect in every way; my sympathy and love, therefore, cannot be so great as that of our Creator. How is it possible that God, with all the force of the Universe at His command, could look calmly on and see the operation of His own laws carrying thousands of millions to eternal misery and yet refrain from giving those creatures the necessary information. I said, there is something wrong with the Bible and with our creeds which we have built upon it.

I threw all away and began to reason—but, thank God, not along irreverent lines. I reasoned that He who made the Universe also made man; that whatever some qualities I could find in humanity were the work of the Creator. I said, Man's noblest qualities are justice and love, and hence the Creator must possess these unlimited. I paused in worship before God, infinite in Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power.

HE THAT SEEKETH FINDETH.

I said, Oh, great, Almighty God, although unknown to me, I approach Thee! Thou art my Maker! My whole being cries out for the pleasure of more intimate acquaintance with Thee, that I might know Thy will regarding me and Thy purposes respecting humanity. I said, Assured I, as God is All-Wise, He must have an All-Wise purpose, of which I need not be ashamed. So sure as He is just, and loving, all of His plans and purposes must accord with these qualities, and having made me capable of appreciating these qualities, He will surely be willing to bestow the information which I desire—information as to how I can best please and serve Him and as to what His purposes and intentions are respecting mankind.

My prayers convinced me the more that there must be a Divine Revelation somewhere in the world. I thought that I had searched for it with faithfulness and proved it unreasonable and contrary to every conception I could have of a Divine Creator and His purposes; hence my eyes turned toward the Eastern land and your sacred books. I studied them for a time, only to find them far less satisfactory to my intellect than the Bible I had already cast aside.

I returned to the Bible. I asked myself, Might you have been prejudiced when you examined it before? Although I thought not, I made a fresh investigation, because I felt there must be a Revelation from the true God somewhere, and because the Bible thus far gave the best testimony. It indeed told of a God of Love, and no other religious books do, yet its teachings respecting the future of the non-elect staggered me, for I was sure that they were not God like, but the reverse.

PROVING THE BIBLE REASONABLE.

Disregarding the Old Testament Scriptures entirely, I began with the New. I said, Was not Jesus a most wonderful Character? Was it not true that "never man spake like this Man?" Both Friend and foe answered, Yes! His teachings are the noblest found on earth? His example fully compares with His teachings. I said, God, Can I rely upon the evidence? My mind replied, Yes. If just such men today told you their observations you would believe them implicitly. Then I was confident that they were honest and unlearned men, telling of their own weaknesses in a way that impostors would not do. Their Master's example in "good tidings of great joy for all people," and not merely for their own nationality. My heart began to take courage. I began to feel that I had found a footing for my faith and that the Bible indeed differed considerably from the various and conflicting creeds which claimed it as their support and Authority.

However, I suddenly remembered that much of the New Testament is composed of passages from the Old Testament and comments thereon. Alas! I said, for I cannot accept the Old Testament Scriptures. But the more I studied the matter the more convinced I was that if Jesus and the Apostles were at all what they claimed to be the Old Testament must be as true as the New—as St. Peter declared, "Holy men of old spoke and wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit."

Then I began a more critical study of the Old Testament, and to my joy, as I sought, I found as I looked the cover of Truth opened for me. I found the Bible teaching very different from what I had supposed it to be, very contrary to that of all the creeds. The history, moral, facts and all, that is truths taken from the Bible, but truths mingled with various human speculations and misconceptions—the false message as a whole divided amongst those creeds and made to contradict itself.

THE BIBLE HELL IS THE KEY.

To my surprise I found the presentations of the Bible not only more logical than anything else in the world, but amazingly the only logical presentation on earth. As interested as I was, and not by the creeds and theories of the Dark Ages, the Bible tells one beautiful, reasonable, harmonious story, from Genesis to Revelation. It tells the making of a perfect man and his proper dominion, and supplied with time for all eternity, to which Adam and his race were sentenced on account of sin. On the contrary, it declares that "the wages of sin is death."

It tells that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die," and tells that Adam sinned and came under the death penalty and that all of his race by the laws of heredity are subject to frailty, weakness mental, moral and physical and that these have triumphed in a reign of sin and death for now six thousand years. It tells that this death is the death into which Adam and all of his race go—sleep, the wages of the Bible, for all mankind, good and bad. It tells that there is no pain or suffering there, no knowledge, no work of any kind.

It tells that all, both good and bad, sleep awaiting the resurrection of the dead. It tells that man's death would have been an extinction as complete as that of the brute beast had God in His Wisdom and Love not arranged for human redemption and a resurrection of the dead, both of the Just and unjust. It tells that the Divine arrangement whereby God could be just and not repudiate the rulership of His own Court and yet recover man from the death sentence was arranged for. The arrangement was that Jesus, "by the grace of God should taste death for every man;" that as by a man came death by a Man also should come the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die even so all in Christ shall be made alive, every man in his own order."—Hebrews ii, 9; Cor. xv, 21, 22.

FIRST THE ELECT BRIDE.

With God "a thousand years are as one day." (II. Peter iii, 8.) He has therefore arranged that six of these great days shall constitute man's period of battling with sin and death and that the seventh, of three great days shall be the Day of Messiah, the Sabbath or Rest Day to the world, to which Messiah, as the Divine Representative, shall life up all the willing and obedient, opening their blind eyes, unstopping their deaf ears and causing all to know the Lord, from the least to the greatest.

As a result some will refuse and die the "Second Death"—under destruction. No more than a century of trial is to be granted, because we read, "The sinner a hundred years old shall be cut off"—a child a century old in sin shall be accursed—to the Second Death. (Isaiah lxv, 20.) But all who will accept Divine favor may then be brought to full, human perfection, similar to that which Adam enjoyed at the beginning, plus the knowledge of good and evil, which he lacked.

Of these willing and obedient ones it is written, "Every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God." Many of you Chinese, doubtless, will then be bowing before the great King of kings and Lord of lords, whom then you will know completely; and, confessing Him as Master, join the all the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep." And your forefathers, whom you reverence, will be there too; their eyes shall be opened and their ears unstopped. As it is written, "All the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped." What a great reunion and blessing will be to millions of the dead of all lands! Yes and all it more! As the Scriptures declare, all the families of the earth shall be blessed similarly with a knowledge of God and with a full opportunity for restitution to all that was lost in Adam—to all that was redeemed at Calvary.—Acts iii, 19-21.

Do you say to me, That news is too good to be true. Do you say, No missionary ever told us of such a gracious God and such a mighty Savior! Had we heard such a gracious Message it would have aroused our souls long ago, for our gods are non sympathetic —they are great, powerful and vicious! But we thought as we heard the Bible teaching very different from what we had supposed it to be, very contrary to that of all the creeds. The latter, moved, each and all, one by a truths taken from the Bible, but truths mingled with various human speculations and misconceptions—the false message as a whole divided amongst those creeds and made to contradict itself.

SATAN THE GOD OF THIS WORLD.

Alas! my dear friends, I know this very well and the Bible explains the whole matter. It tells us that we have been believing some lies of Satan, "the god of this world." These fictious doctrines in the past, where more I read, I believed less indeed, and some noble Christian people are most strenuous about.

We are all awaking from that old blindness, thank God. We are emerging slowly from the darkness of the past. We are in the very dawning of the morning of Messiah's Kingdom, which is to be the world. The filling of the Sun of Righteousness is to bring the New Day of emancipation from ignorance, superstition and death. The more a man grows or become the more clearly do we see the beauty of God's Word and the ridiculous inconsistency of things we once believed.

St. Paul explains to us why Satan strives to put darkness for light and light for darkness. He explains why Satan represents himself as an angel of light and endeavors to besmirch the Divine character with the false God the very representation of wickedness and injustice! It is a part of his general endeavor to thwart the Divine Plan, to mislead those who are seeking to know God. Hesken to the Apostle's words: "The god of the world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the glorious light of God's goodness be it illumine in the face of Jesus Christ our Lord, should shine into their hearts." (II Corinthians, iv, 4.)

In presenting as forcibly as we can Satan's character and His work in that same proportion does it appear in the Bible and its God, and then and only then do we find some reveal ed in the Bible. As I have told you, I had my own bitter experience along this line. How I thank God for the "everlasting" and for the glorious vistas of the Divine character and Plan which now stands out so distinctly before the eyes of my understanding!

GOOD TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY.

The Gospel of the Bible, the Message of the great God, infinite in Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power, is a Message of Hope, of mercy, as has emanated from no other quarter—as no other religious book in the world presents. And what else should we expect than that the great Source of being would be a Fountain of grace, of blessing to His dependent creatures. It should not surprise us, then, to find the Bible clearly teaching that the God of a Grace has in store for humanity great blessings—"times of restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the Holy Prophets since the world began." (Acts iii, 19-21.)

Another Message should not surprise us; it is the message that was sung by the angels on the night of Jesus' birth: "Behold, we bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people"—the thousands of millions of the Chinese included! It is a joy to me to be permitted to tell this glorious Message to such as have the ear to hear it. It is a further joy to me that in the Divine arrangement the time is coming when "all the deaf ears shall be unstopped" and when the clear knowledge of God's goodness shall fill the earth as the waters cover the deep.

God has told this Message of His benevolent designs toward humanity about thirty-six hundred years ago, when He declared to His friend Abraham, I intend to bless all the families of the earth, and this shall be done through your posterity—"in thee and in thy Seed shall the families of the earth be blessed." The natural seed of Abraham was first developed and instructed, and consequently uplifted, under a Law Covenant. This arrangement prepared the natural seed of Abraham more than others of the world's people to receive a testimony, hence, when He presented Himself, and when afterward His message was proclaimed by His twelve Apostles, comparatively few thousand Jews became His spiritual Israelites, accepting the favor of the Holy Spirit as Pentecostal believers and thus became heirs of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham.

THE NUMBER IN THE FIRST RESURRECTION.

But this number was short of the Divine intention—"a hundred and forty-four thousand." (Revelation xiv.) Hence, in due time, the Messiah or grace and the privilege of becoming members of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham was extended to one nation alter another—to the Jew first, but also to as many as the Lord our God has called, of every nation, people, kindred and tongue. This "elect" number of spirit-begotten followers of Jesus will very soon be completely changed by the glorious First Resurrection, when in a moment and corruptible shall put on immortality. All those found faithful will be made partakers of the divine nature, far above angels, principalities and powers—associates with the Redeemer (Ephesians i, 21) as joint-heirs of Abraham will be completed and qualified for its great work of blessing the race.

St. Paul declares, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" (I. Corinthians vi, 2.) The judging will be in the nature of a trial or testing to determine how many of humanity can be helped up to human perfection and harmony with God and everlasting life, and how many unworthy will be destroyed in the Second Death. God, who has elected these kings, priests and judges, has appointed a day in which they shall rule, bless, instruct, judge mankind in general. It will be the thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom, for "a day with the Lord is as a thousand years."—(II. Peter iii, 7, 8.)

It affords me great pleasure to have the opportunity of delivering this Message of the grace of God in this, the Chief earth. May the Lord bless it, not only to the Chinese, but to all who have hearing ears and hearts appreciative of the Divine character. May it assist some in making their "calling and election sure" to membership in the "little flock" to whom the Kingdom is soon to be given. May it hovorably influence others that they may walk nobly, reasonably, and be the better prepared to receive the Kingdom blessings and earthly restitution.

DARKNESS AND DAWN.

A Graveyard Reverie.

Oh, City of the Dead, what thou couldst tell,
What tales unfold!
Of all the captives thou hast here in hell,
The young, the old.

The soft, grass waves, the birds above them fly,
And loved ones rend the air with bitter cry;
But, deaf, unconscious of it all, they lie
So still and cold.

Oh City of the Dead, your master, death,
Came all the earth,
And sets his mark on Adam's hapless sons

A little while he may be kept at bay
And life prolonged a year, a month, a day
But soon or later, he demands his prey
At every hearth.

Sometimes he wastes them of his dread approach.
By cackling pain,
Gainst which are a watch combined with skill and power,
Are spent in vain.

Sometimes the thunderbolt from clearest sky
His victims doth without a word or cry;
And crews, and hearse and pall, all testify
To his dread reign.

Oh, City of the Dead with heads bowed low
They said to come,
And lay their dear loved dead with tender hands
In their last home.
And then poor souls—with breaking hearts they go
And leave them here where storms of rain and snow
And wintry winds beat wildly to and fro
With dreary moan.

As memoried wonders o'er the sin
Cursed earth,
I stand appalled:
On sinless thousand new made graves earth dar
The hot tears fall.
No wonder Jesus wept at Lazarus' tomb,
When he foresaw how deep would be the gloom
Ere He, his kingly power could assume,
And break sin's thrall.

That long procession, moving ever on,
Strikes our hearts dumb;
With sapless knee, we voice our only hope,
Thy Kingdom come.
Sore need have men of words of hope and cheer,
'Tis sure to tell them that the morn is near,
And all earth's sorrow clouds shall disappear
Before the Sun.

Death, I have come to have a word with thee,
To tell Thee here,
By these still graves, where thy dead victims lie,
Thine end is near.
Man's path through centuries, Thou hast marked with blood!
But, oh, thou Terror, in the Holy Word
Thy doom is writ'n, by Almighty God,
In language clear.

Jehovah sent His Son as mortal man,
That he might go,
Down in the tomb, he held in bonds by Thee
Man's deadly foe,
That man might be released, brought back again,
To shake the bonds of Messiah's reign
And that to life once lost, he might attain—
Its fulness know.

Think not, oh Death, Christ's new begotten mind
Shall perish by
The Father quickened him on highest plane—
Immortal free.
Divine in nature, now, He reigns in power
That shall increase with every passing hour;
He has thy keys, oh Death, He'll make thee cower.
And vanquish thee.

He is the master, Death, and when His time
Has fully come,
He who hath power of death, this world's dread power,
Shall meet his doom.
Those armies who have wrecked on man their hate,
And who have not regained their lost estate,
With hel, and thee grim Death, shall meet their fate
Within the tomb.

Appreciations.

Pennsylvania, Jan. 6.

Enclosed find P. O. order for subscription year 1915, appreciating very much your paper, especially for present studies of Daniel, Question Box and lessons.

Yours respectfully,
ERNEST McNEAL.

New York, Jan. 6.

Enclosed find P. O. order for renewal of two subscriptions to Labor Tribune. Your paper is so much superior to the yellow sheets you have substituted for it, that I enjoy reading it. May the Lord bless you for so doing, and continue those wonderful sermons. With kindest wishes,

Yours truly,
MRS. C. H. O.

Massachusetts, Jan. 6.

I am renewing my subscription to the Tribune. I want to tell you that I appreciate the stand to take paper but must confess it is wholly on account of Pastor Russell's sermons that I take it.

It was through the reading of this man's sermons that revealed so much of God's glorious character to me. He is preaching the good tidings which the Lord sent His Son to tell about our Redeemer was born. Why do the ministers not preach it instead of preaching the "doctrine of demons?"

Yours respectfully,
MRS. SARAH JAMES.

Pennsylvania, Jan. 4.

Although your valuable paper is received in my mother's name, I share in the reading of it. I greatly appreciate the good things you publish each week from Pastor Russell's pen, and the generous amount of space you give to them. Every Thursday evening I look for the Tribune and, if possible, I like to read it before retire. Wish to subscribe for the paper before long.

Wishing you many new subscribers for the New Year, I remain,

Very respectfully yours,
WILBUR E. ROBERTS.

Indiana, Dec. 2.

Editor National Labor Tribune

"I have renewed my subscription for another year. I wish to express to you my admiration of the general tone of your paper, one of the few which I permit my family to read, and I especially endorse the policy you pursue in featuring religious matter as you do in your columns. You have shown fine discernment in the selection of Pastor Russell's sermons, which are by far the best I have ever read. Furthermore, the addition of the Question Box to the Bible Class has greatly increased my interest in the Tribune. Wishing you continued success, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

POPULAR MECHANICS

COLORADO RI... BASIN.

AIRSHIP DESTROYER.

A Region of Vast Agricultural and Industrial Importance.

There is no more interesting river in the world than the Colorado. Industrially, scenically and geologically it presents more diverse conditions than any other stream in the United States.

From the crest of the Rocky mountains in Colorado and Wyoming it sweeps across the intervening country, traversing parts of Utah, New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada to the head of the gulf of California. the area drained being about 244,000 square miles. In the Rocky mountain region it flows through a country covered by eternal snows and rushes down to the most fertile and valuable agricultural lands in the world in western Colorado, northwestern New Mexico and eastern Utah.

It traverses the famous Grand Canyon of the Colorado, in the northern part of Arizona, and flushy passes over the broad, flat plains above the head of the gulf of California, where this lowermost portion the river strongly resembles the Nile, having annual floods which deposit rich silt over the adjoining lands and render them as fertile as those in the historic valley of north Africa.

The Colorado and its tributaries have other values than that of irrigation, for, unwinding in many channels, they present abundant opportunities for the development of water power. Power has been developed at a few points, but the resources of the Colorado basin are in this respect yet practically untached.

The size of the Colorado river is indicated by its total discharge in the year 1905, which was 16,000,000 acre feet, or enough water to cover that number of acres to a depth of one foot.—United States Geological Survey.

ALCOHOL FROM WASTE.

Good Quality of Spirit Produced From Henequen Residue.

An invention which will be of great interest to the planters of henequen or sisal hemp in particular, as well as of practical utility to the world at large, has since been patented by a Mr. Ernesto D. Castro, a native of Tabasco, but resident for some years in Yucatan, for utilizing the residue of the maguey, after the fiber has been taken for the manufacture of alcohol.

In the process of extracting the fiber the stem of the leaf is scraped off by machinery and this, with the exception of a small portion used in the manufacture of packing paper, has been heretofore simply thrown on the refuse heap. Mr. Castro, after years of experiment, has found that this waste, together with the juice which escapes during extraction of the fiber, will produce a good, merchantable alcohol, as high as 40 per cent Cartier.

The raw material is ground and mixed with water and allowed to ferment for two days, after which it passes into a specially arranged still. For some time the spirit produced was unsatisfactory, both as to taste and color, but in the tests, made in a factory and some 300 of Yucatan's most prominent business men, were entirely creditable to the inventor.

The waste of 1,000 leaves gives 400 liters, or liter equals 1.05 quarts, of juice, which in turn produces about eighty liters of alcohol of 40 per cent, perfectly good for all uses. The improvements in the ordinary still for correcting the taste and odor have been protected by patents.—Consular Report.

New Electrical Discovery.

At a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences Professor A. E. Kennelly of Columbia university said: "I have discovered a device which magnifies an electric current. I applied only a feeble current to my first machine and it was broken to pieces by the increased power emitted." He went on to say that with his new invention he could drive a train with the current used in the telephone and could take a weak wireless current and make it strong enough to be easily read. He said he was certain the principle was heretofore unknown and that he would go into details at the next meeting of the academy in April.

The Kubus of Sumatra.

Professor W. Volz of Breslau author ity has published in Petermanns Mitteilungen a paper on the Kubus, who live in the interior forests of Sumatra and owing to their complete isolation by several natural barriers, appear to be a typical example of an absolutely primitive race. The life of the Kubus is comparable to that of the anthropoid apes (gibbons), which inhabit the same forests. They appear to be at the lowest stage of economic development—the gathering stage—having yet no knowledge of hunters. Professor Volz believes that they totally lack religious conceptions.

Elements In Earth's Crust.

The solid crust of the earth, with a specific gravity of only about 2.5 as against 5.7 for the entire globe (crust and liquid or semiliquid interior) is said by Rosenbusch to consist of the various elements in the following proportions by weight: Oxygen, 47.20 per cent; silicon, 27.21; aluminium, 7.81; iron, 5.40; calcium, 3.77; magnesium, 2.08; sodium, 2.36; potassium, 2.40; hydrogen, 0.21; titanium, 0.36; carbon, 0.32; chlorine, 0.01; phosphorus, 0.10; manganese, 0.08; sulphur, 0.08; barium, 0.03; chromium, 0.01.

Naval Gun Throws Shell to Height of Over Three Miles.

After shooting a projectile 18,000 feet into the air and closer to the skies than an aeroplane has ever flown, the experiments with the new one pounder naval rifle, destined to destroy the airships of an enemy, were recently concluded at the Indian Head naval proving grounds, near Washington. It was announced that the new weapon and its carriage had proved eminently satisfactory.

Fifty rounds were fired in the tests. The maximum range of 18,000 feet was reached when the gun was elevated at an angle of eighty-five degrees. The shot flashed accurately through a course for 10,000 feet. Beyond that distance it lost its velocity and when it struck into the air perceptibly falling into the Potomac river 1,500 feet away from the spot where it had been projected it would drop. The airship destroying rifle is the invention of Rear Admiral Twining, chief of the naval ordnance bureau.

The idea of this one pounder will be developed into a three inch gun. Naval ordnance experts believe that such a weapon would send seven miles into the air with effect. The tremendous performance of the new carriage caused naval authorities to express the belief that before long American warships will be equipped with another battery of guns to fight hostile invaders in the air.—Popular Mechanics.

SELENIUM A RARE ELEMENT.

Used For Reproducing Photographs by Telegraph.

Selenium is a rare and little known element described by the United States geological survey as having its great est use in the manufacture of certain glasses to which it gives a red color and in coloring enameled ware red. It is used to overcome the sickish green color of ordinary glass and also in making glass of a distinct red color, such as that used on railroads for signal lights.

Selenium has the peculiar property of being a very poor conductor of electricity in the dark and a fairly good conductor in the light, and a number of electrical inventions depend on this property. It has been used in experiments in telephoning alone a ray of light and for transmitting sounds and photographs from one point to another by means of a telephonic or telegraph wire.

Double Power Propulsion.

A patent has been granted for a system of generating electricity whereby the power motors are a windmill and an internal combustion engine, both operating on the generating plant and connected together by means of a friction clutch. When the windmill is idle the load is taken by the engine, and as the windmill gathers speed it begins to drive the dynamo and the engine until the speed attains that which is designated as the critical point, when the engine is disconnected by governor balls, and the ignition circuit is opened, thus stopping the engine. A reduction in the speed of the dynamo causes the cycle of operations to work in the opposite order, with the consequence that the windmill runs free and the engine takes the load.

Introducing Fishes.

Among the most notable and successful examples of the introduction of fishes into a new environment are the cases of the shad and striped bass. These species (not found in Europe) are native to the Pacific coast, but were planted there by the government more than thirty years ago, and a small but slender colonies took root, thrived, multiplied and spread to such an extent that both of these species are now reckoned among the commonest food fishes of the western seaboard, the shad having a range of some 1,000 miles and the striped bass being more abundant in California than in any eastern state. The estimated cost of the introduction of these fishes into the Pacific states did not exceed $5,000.

Pointing Brick Walls.

When pointing up a crack in the mortar between bricks it is necessary to cut out the mortar a little longer than the crack and about half an inch deep. This should be filled with a half and half mixture of cement and clean, sharp sand. In repairing cracked or broken bricks, great care should be taken to see that the brick is firmly bedded into the mortar on all sides or the wall will leak and eventually settle in that portion or may

The things when baffled them are now made plain.
O'er Nature's forces they, the master

The loneliness, the pain, the awful fears
That wrung the heart, are washed away in tears.

Connecticut, Jan. 1.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed you will find five new subscribers. You will kindly see that they get your good paper and to begin with the first number in January. It is a pleasure to get new names for you, as the paper does print the sermons and Questions and Sunday Lesson so correct. May the Lord bless you and your paper. I will try and look after my renewals the first of March and hope for some new ones then.

Yours truly,
WILLIAM R. SAVAGE.

Iowa, Jan. 7.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am enclosing express money order for renewal to the Labor Tribune for 1915. Time expires January 3, and as I do not want to miss a single number of the paper and I look and wait for its coming each week for our dear Pastor Russell's sermons and all of the other religious items, the Sunday Schools Lessons, Question and Answers which are so helpful at this time of Scripture study.

May the New Year be one of happiness and prosperity and rich blessings to you is my prayer for you.

Deliverance From Enemies.

The second section or strophe of this prophetic poem runs from verse 7 to 12. It relates to the deliverance of God's people from the power of their enemies. One important thought here is that even God's people will not ever be delivered from the enemies here referred to.

During Elijah's reign of a thousand years, when all the blind eyes will be opened and all the deaf ears will be unstopped, and when the knowledge of the glory of God's character will be clearly manifested to the world, even the saintliest of men, members of some religious system that taught the sinner-burdening doctrine of eternal torment. Did the false teaching deter them from committing crimes? Those who believe that the purpose in God of love, and mercy, and justice, and that He has arranged seasons of blessings for the world in the coming age when mankind is to have its only chance of salvation, are invariably convicted, and confessed to lifetimes of servitude with greater reverence for their Creator, a God, whom in know, is to love. The truth sanctifies, while the error debases.

Q.—Would you please explain what is meant by John's Gospel, sixth chapter and forty-fourth verse; and does this harmonize with Revelation xxii, 17? "Whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely?" (H. S. M.)

Answer.—Jesus souls.—"No man can come to Me except the Father which sent Me draw him." Have long perplexed Bible scholars and Christian people in general. The thought usually is that the Lord is described that all mankind should be saved in the present Christian Era. And if this be so then why does the Father "draw" so few in that day? Why does He not draw all men unto Him? The difficulty is that many have failed to note the Scriptures teaching concerning the time and purpose. All Bible scholars recognize that the doctrine of "election" is taught in the Scriptures. And nearly all are aware that "free grace" is likewise set forth. In attempting to apply both these Bible teachings to the present Era confusion has resulted. God is now drawing to Christ such as He desires shall be members of His Church, the Bride of Christ. In other words, God is "calling" or "drawing a few—"the elect"—to be joint-heirs with His Son in the glories of the Kingdom. When this election is completed, then God's free grace will be extended to all the world of mankind.

THE VERY GREATEST PROPHET.

Luke i, 57-80—Jan. 14.

"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people."—V. 68.

O JOHN THE BAPTIST seems to have had very few admirers. Yet of those born of women there hath not risen a greater Prophet than John the Baptist; and yet we say unto you that the least in the Kingdom of God is greater than he."—Luke vii, 28.

These words are valuable as showing us that John was the last of the Prophets announcing the coming of Messiah and the beginning of the great work of selecting from amongst mankind a loyal class to be associates with the Redeemer in His Messianic Kingdom.

John could not be of the Kingdom class. His great work necessitated before the Redeemer's sacrifice was finished—to receive Pentecostal blessings came acceptingly some six months after he left his service to bear His cross.—John iii, 29.

"And groto—He must be John."

The Prophesy of Zacharias.

St. Peter distinctly tells us respecting the Old Testament Prophets, that "They sent of old were holy men as they were moved by the Holy Spirit;" that frequently they uttered deeper and broader spirits about us as there are men in the flesh. Among them are all the poets, authors, orators, statesmen and inventors of past ages. They know all they ever knew when they were in the flesh, and have been learning a great deal more since; and with their added powers and extended experiences they should be able to do what they could never do before. They have had free access to the public mind and public press, with no end of mediums through which to convey their wisdom, and thousands and thousands of anxious inquirers who have questioned them, and earnestly desired to obtain information from them. They have talked and rapped, they have fiddled and scribbled, they have materialized and dematerialized, they have entranced and inhabited, they have told us many things which we know before; many things which we do not know yet; and many other things which if we do matter whether we know or not; but when we come to real instruction, reliable information, or profitable and valuable knowledge, Spiritualism is as barren as Sahara, as empty as a hollow gourd."

Q.—Would not the teaching of a future probation tend to make the people careless and sinful in this life, knowing that they were to have a second chance in the life to come? (Dubious.)

Answer.—God nearly as much as to teach that a unrefined wretch by a deathbed confession would immediately be ushered into Heavenly bodies. A future probation would not signify a "second chance," save for a limited few, the Church of Christ, now being selected out of the world (Acts xv, 14), to be the Bride, the Lamb's Wife. Most of the criminals inhabiting the infernal regions of the land are, we were, members of some religious system that taught the sinner-burdening doctrine of eternal torment. Did the false teaching deter them from committing crimes? Those who believe that the purpose in God of love, and mercy, and justice, and that He has arranged seasons of blessings for the world in the coming age when mankind is to have its only chance of salvation, are invariably convicted, and confessed to lifetimes of servitude with greater reverence for their Creator, a God, whom in know, is to love. The truth sanctifies, while the error debases.

Q.—Would you please explain what is meant by John's Gospel, sixth chapter and forty-fourth verse; and does this harmonize with Revelation xxii, 17? "Whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely?" (H. S. M.)

Answer.—Jesus souls.—"No man can come to Me except the Father which sent Me draw him." Have long perplexed Bible scholars and Christian people in general. The thought usually is that the Lord is described that all mankind should be saved in the present Christian Era. And if this be so then why does the Father "draw" so few in that day? Why does He not draw all men unto Him? The difficulty is that many have failed to note the Scriptures teaching concerning the time and purpose. All Bible scholars recognize that the doctrine of "election" is taught in the Scriptures. And nearly all are aware that "free grace" is likewise set forth. In attempting to apply both these Bible teachings to the present Era confusion has resulted. God is now drawing to Christ such as He desires shall be members of His Church, the Bride of Christ. In other words, God is "calling" or "drawing a few—"the elect"—to be joint-heirs with His Son in the glories of the Kingdom. When this election is completed, then God's free grace will be extended to all the world of mankind.

Q.—If a man has lived a sinful life, committed murder, and robbed the widows and orphans, etc., and then at the last moment, with his dying breath, confesses his sins and accepts Christ as the Savior, will he not consequently go to Heaven and be with the Lord in glory? (W. A.)

Answer.—When we think of the vast numbers of vicious, depraved characters, hardened criminals, convicts, etc., who at the perfunctory ministrations of clergymen and religious devotees have "made their peace with God" at the last moment before being ushered into eternity by electrocution or by dying a natural death, we wonder that intelligent people would for an instant entertain the idea that these had all entered into Heaven! Is it possible that the saintly followers of Jesus, who walked the narrow way of self-sacrifice, suffering and death, and who developed characters of love and kindness and goodness—that these saintly few, for the saints are very few, when they reach Heaven, will find it crowded with the lowest scum of the earth! Such confusion of thought in this connection has resulted from the misapplication of the Savior's words addressed to the dying thief upon the cross. By placing the comma where it properly belongs, after the word "today," the meaning of the Lord's words is clear. The thief did not go to Heaven, or to Paradise that day; but went into the tomb there to remain until the Kingdom of Christ is set up at the time of second coming, when Paradise will be restored. Not only this, but the entire thief was not, any more than the entire Savior was, for they both died. Only a part of each died. The human life-principle—was removed from the body and returned to God, who is the source or fountain of all life. The living soul, the intelligent being, died. As the Bible says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die."—Ezekiel xviii, 4.) From these Scriptures it is evident that the spirit of the thief and of all who die returns to God. This animating principle spirit, called life, is to be given to all of the faithful and obedient in the resurrection.

Q.—Is a lie ever justifiable? (M. V. D.)

Answer.—The development of character is the great purpose of our present existence. The importance of this work is manifest when we reflect that our interests throughout eternity depend entirely upon the kind of character we develop in this life. It is by controlling our evil and adverse influences that character is formed. Nearly all of the influences of the conditions of this life are opposed to the principles of righteousness. Those who are willing to fight the good fight of faith, struggling in the darkness and the downward tendencies of this present evil world, are assured of a high and heavenly reward in the life to come, as well as receiving the reward in this present time of a clear conscience and the glorious satisfaction of having lived a noble, honest life! Those who follow the lines of least resistance drifting with the tide, they think more in the easiest way, but this is only a vain delusion, for, after all, they have traveled the hardest way. "Strait is the gate and narrow is hard." Proverbs xiii, 15). A lie is never justifiable, and not only so, if it is unfortunate, it reveals a weak character in proportion to the enormity of the offense involved in the relating of the lie. For this step away from truth will have to be retraced either in this life or in the life to come. Throughout the Scriptures lying is condemned. Satan is called "A liar from the beginning." The character of the Lord Jesus is the Standard of righteousness set before us, and to all His earthly experiences He set forth the truth and condemned the error. His spoke the truth at all times, and when it was not expedient to tell the truth, He was silent.

Meeting of Executive Council of Federation--The Controversy Between the Carpenters and Woodworkers Finally Adjusted--Sec'y. Morrison's Wonderfully Gratifying Report on Condition of American Labor Movement--Progress of Legislation in Congress and in Committees.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor convened at headquarters last Thursday and proceeded to take up the numerous matters referred to its requiring attention. One of the most important subjects dealt with was the Carpenter-Woodworker controversy. The Atlanta convention took action requiring the Amalgamated Woodworkers to amalgamate with the carpenters, and as a result the carpenters and woodworkers arrived at a satisfactory plan of amalgamation on January 10, representatives of both organizations signing the agreement, as well as the members of the executive council. The terms of the agreement fully protects the membership of the woodworkers in their benefits and trade regulations. It is also provided that after the merging of the two organizations the next convention of the carpenters will sanction the appointment of a committee composed of delegates representing locals of factory woodworkers, which committee shall formulate and submit to the convention a code which the factory woodworkers affiliated with the carpenters can vote on and decide on questions directly affecting the interests of the factory woodworkers. In case any differences arise relative to the carrying out the provisions of the agreement, they are to be referred to the Executive Council for adjustment.

The report of Secretary Morrison to the Executive Council was a revelation, and emphasizes the fact that the physical condition of the American labor movement is excellent. Secretary Morrison epitomizes his report in the following language: "We are now commencing 1912, and I know you will be pleased to hear that the first three months of the fiscal year show an increase of 45,029 members over the average membership of last year, and 97,305 members over the same months last year. This shows a good, healthy growth in membership, and I am of the opinion that each month will show a satisfactory increase during 1912."

From October 1, 1911, to December 31, 1911, the Federation issued 78 charters, as compared to 54 for the same period of 1910. So far as the growth of the American Federation of Labor is concerned it is gratifying, as is also the effectiveness of all the affiliated organizations.

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor appeared in a body on Thursday, January 11, before the House Judiciary Committee in behalf of the Wilson injunction limitation and Clayton contempt bills, and also before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in advocacy of an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law exempting organizations not formed for profit and without capital stock from the operation of the law. President Gompers presented the views of the council to both committees.

During an animated debate in the United States Senate on the Children's Bureau bill, Senator Borah warmed up to the occasion and answered some of the objections in this marking: "If we have the constitutional power to gather statistics and facts with reference to diseases of hogs and cattle, we have the constitutional power to gather data with reference to diseases of children. The United States constitution was not made for hogs alone, but also for men. We are devoting over three million dollars a year to the gathering of statistics referring to the treatment of diseases of cattle and hogs, certainly we can afford to look and dollars for the purpose of gathering such information as will enable us to deal intelligently with dependent and delinquent children." Senator Borah is making a most estimable effort to procure the passage of the Children's Bureau bill and is deserving of all the support which sympathetic citizens can render him.

Secretary of the Navy Meyer understook to establish in the Norfolk, Virginia, navy yard the pneumin boom system, patterned after one of the so-called high speed efficiency systems in vogue in the Maxim-Vickers shipyards at Barrow-in-Furness and Erith, England, which system is somewhat similar to the so-called Taylor system now being advocated by certain employers in this country. The Norfolk machinists protested against what they made their refusals so vigorous that the secretary gave assurance to the men that the system would not be forced upon them. All of the men who ceased work on January 9 returned without prejudice on January 3. This prompt action by the machinists at Norfolk also had a salutary effect on other mechanics employed at the Washington Navy Gun factory; the League Island, Philadelphia; the Brooklyn, New York; the Boston, Massachusetts; the Mare Island, California, and other navy yards throughout the country, as assurances were given by the secretary and by his assistant, Mr. Beekmsn Winthrop, that no further efforts to install the Taylor, or any other brand of premium bonus methods, would be proposed.

It looks as though the officials in charge of the Post Office Department know so little that they are determined they will learn nothing more. They have certainly set themselves like flint against progress, liberty and the free circulation of educational matter. In spite of general public

DEATH LURKS IN AMERICAN MINES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Dr. John R. Haynes of Los Angeles, speaking before the American Association for Labor Legislation, on December 30, 1911, on the subject of interstate mining, made this remarkable statement: "The death rate among miners in Colorado is twenty times as high as in Prussian Mines. The American death rate among miners is much greater than the average abroad. State regulation of mines is a woeful failure. The federal government could remedy conditions just as it has made its employment of railroad men safer by enforcing the use of automatic couplers and other safety appliances on railroads. Political influences lessen the efficiency of State mine inspectors. European experts who have examined American mines assert they can be made as safe as any in the world, if proper steps were taken." Dr. Haynes added. "In the last twenty years, 30,000 men have been killed and 60,000 injured in the coal mines of the United States." If expert testimony is rated at its full worth, public officials in the State and Nation should pay serious attention to these remarkable utterances made by such an eminent authority.

LABOR LEADERS REARRESTED

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 13.—Olaf A. Tveitmoe, E. A. Clancey and Anton Johannsen, labor leaders of San Francisco, and J. E. Munsey of Salt Lake City, were arrested here today on two new federal indictments charging them with having conspired to bring here the dynamite used to blow up the Los Angeles Times building, October 1, 1910, when 21 men were killed.

EMPLOYERS' LIA I I ' ' ACT WINS.

DECIDED step forward is taken by the federal judiciary in the decision of the Supreme Court at Washington on Monday sustaining the employers' liability act of 1908. This act applies only to railroad employes throughout the United States, and only, to those working on roads which carry interstate commerce. But as all important roads do this, the application is after all a very wide one, reaching probably more than 50 per cent of all railroad workers. Moreover, the opinion of the Supreme Justices, delivered on their behalf by Justice Vandeventer, appears to be a sweeping one. It affirms the validity of the act at every point, overruling the court below without qualification.

Not only is the right of Congress to prescribe what measures common carriers shall take for the protection of their employes clearly affirmed, but where state laws prescribe other (and usually less stringent measures) the Supreme Court declares that the act of Congress shall take precedence and no state law shall be valid which conflicts with it. The barbarous doctrine that the worker shall assume the risk of his occupation and that where a fellow servant is guilty of negligence there shall be no recovery of damages for injuries resulting from that negligence—these doctrines are specifically repudiated by the decision and opinion rendered by the highest court of the land yesterday.

It is not only a great victory for railroad workers throughout the country, but it is a triumph for humanitarianism in general, maintaining that where property rights and human rights oppose, property rights must give way. The decision will do much to retain the Supreme Court in popular confidence. Incidentally, full credit will be given to former President Roosevelt, for the act of 1908 (like the act of 1906, which was declared unconstitutional, and which the act of 1908 was passed to take the place of) was largely the fruit of his endeavor.

GOVERNMENT-TELEGRAPH PLAN POPULAR.

THOUGH President Taft is described by the Washington dispatches as having been taken utterly by surprise when he learned from the newspapers of Postmaster General Hitchcock's declaration in favor of government purchase of the telegraph lines, the postmaster general's plan appears to have made almost as much of an impression as if it had been an avowed administration measure. Leading members of Congress belonging to both parties have expressed themselves as favorable to it. Consequently, government ownership may become an actual fact in the near future. While Mr. Hitchcock was guilty of a rather unusual breach of official etiquet in declaring for so important an innovation upon government policy without taking his superior officer into his confidence, the question is larger than personalities or official etiquet and it may be doubted whether the open opposition of the President would suffice to stop the onward march of the nationalization of the telegraph lines and their operation as an adjunct of the postal department.

The question of price is of course an important one. It goes without saying that many who are endorsing the postmaster general's proposal are doing so with the proviso that the properties can be bought without payment on exorbitant sum of money for them.

It is interesting to note that the project of telegraph-company purchase has been promptly agreed to by some of the more progressive politicians at Washington with the supplementary suggestion that the telephone service should be administered by the government at the same time. Great Britain (which already operates the telegraphs) is setting this country the example of government telephone service also. Eighteen thousand employes of the National Telephone Company on the first day of the year passed into the employ of the British government and have been classed on a level with the 212,000 postal servants. This was the last step in the nationalization of the telephone service, representing $80,000,000 in capital. All the men and women operatives will henceforth become civil servants, and there will be added to the present postal telephone service about 1,253,380 more miles of wire and nearly 600,000 more subscribers to telephones. It is hardly likely that the United States government will attain government ownership both of telegraph lines and telephone lines at a single bound, but the readiness with which the Hitchcock program has been adopted by politicians of all parties, is strikingly significant of the new public attitude toward governmental problems.

MAHARAJAH OF JAIPUR, GREAT INDIAN POTENTATE.

ONE of the most enlightened of the native Indian princes whose presence lends splendor to such stately ceremonials as the Delhi Durbar is Sawai Madho Sing Bahadur, the maharajah of Jaipur. He is a wise and capable administrator of his dominion of some 15,000 square miles and takes a deep interest in all matters affecting the welfare of the British empire. He is princely in his benefactions, having subscribed 2,000,000 rupees toward the permanent Indian famine fund, and patriotic, too, from the British point of view, for he contributed 100,000 rupees for the Transvaal war fund. When he visited England for the coronation of King Edward he chartered a whole ship, and all smiling and drinking water for the long voyage was brought from India. He was made an LL. D. of Edinburgh university in 1908. He is entitled to a salute of twenty-one guns.

MINE WORKERS' NATIONAL CONVENTION.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 15.—Delegates to the twenty-third annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America began arriving today, and it is expected that more than 1,500 from the United States and Canada will be in attendance when the meeting is called to order by President John P. White, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, tomorrow morning. Members of the committees on constitution, grievances and resolutions arrived last week and have been in session preparing their reports to submit at the opening of the convention.

Delegates from several sections will have special trains and others will have special cars attached to regular trains. The Pennsylvania and Central Illinois miners will have special trains, which are scheduled to arrive tomorrow night.

President White and Secretary-Treasurer Edwin Perry are at their homes in Iowa, but are expected to return tomorrow to complete the final details of the convention.

Officials of the mine workers contend that the convention will be harmonious and that the work will be completed within two weeks. The only subject which, it is said, may result in sensational developments is in regard to the alleged disappearance from the miners headquarters here of several thousand ballots in the 1910 election for international officers. This may cause a fight between Lewis and White factions.

The main business will be the consideration of a scale for the two years beginning April 1. It is believed the convention will have everything ironed out of the way by January 25, the date set by President White for the opening of the joint wage-scale conference between the miners and bituminous operators of Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana.

Although no announcement of the result of the last election will be made until the tellers report to the convention, it was reported at the mine workers headquarters tonight that President White had defeated Thomas L. Lewis, of Bridgeport, O., the former president, for re-election by 50,000 majority. Vice President Frank Hayes, of Collinsville, Ill., it was reported, had won from Samuel Pascoe, of Framington, Ill., by 60,000. Pascoe, under the Lewis administration, was manager of the mine workers' journal. Secretary-Treasurer Perry had no opposition for re-election.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 15.—In today's issue of the Mine Workers' Journal, President John P. White, of the United Mine Workers of America, issued an official call for a joint conference of miners and operators of the bituminous coal states, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, to be held here January 25.

This is the third attempt to organize an interstate joint conference to agree on a wage scale for the five states, the other two—one at Chicago last month and the other here last Tuesday—having failed.

The annual national convention of the miners will also have next Tuesday. The convention probably will last three weeks.

Wages paid to women in the laundries of Russia are from 24 to 32 a month, with room and board included, but the living quarters are in the cellar, and the food of the coarsest kind. Mechanics in these laundries command, under the same conditions, about 70 cents a day.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Proposed Great Railway Workers Amalgamation--Miners Determined to Secure Minimum Wage--Further Strikes Against Non-Unionists -- Another Sympathetic Strike--British Bakers Very Dissatisfied --- Trade Union Organizers Demand Better Wages.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Jan. 8—The Joint Executives of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, the General Railway Workers' Union, and the United Pointsmen and Signalmen's Society (with headquarters at London, Leeds, Manchester and Bolton respectively), having appointed sub-committees to consider the fusion of Railway Trade Unions, concluded their sittings at Manchester on December 20. Each union was represented by three members of the executive, and it was decided that nothing should be issued to the press but a summarized report of what took place has leaked out. There was considerable feeling shown by some members, especially those representing the Locomotive Society and the Amalgamated Society. The former seeks to enlist all the locomotive men who are now members of the A. S. R. S., and to ensure that in future all new entrants of this grade should join the locomotive society. This idea was strongly opposed by members of the Amalgamated Society, who pointed out that their union had a considerably larger membership of locomotive men than even the A. S. L. E. F. The scheme of the latter union also required that all signalmen should be transferred to the United Pointsmen and Signalmen's Society. Great objection was taken to this clause, and the representatives of the Amalgamated Society stating that their organization had on its books several hundred of the signalmen as compared with the U. P. S. S. He added that practically all the members of the carting, goods, and engineering staffs were members of the Amalgamated Society, and yet the Locomotive Union wanted them to be transferred to the General Railway Workers' Union. After discussion the scheme of the Locomotive Society lasted over an hour, and then the alternative scheme submitted by the Amalgamated Society came up. When the debate on this began, Mr. Fox, general secretary of the Locomotive Union, and his colleagues left the room, stating that they declined to consider the alternative scheme. Mr. Fox explained that he was not permitted by the instructions of this Executive Committee to take part in the discussion of any scheme beyond the one submitted by his union. The members of the executive of the three remaining bodies, after discussing the Amalgamated Society's scheme, came to a unanimous decision on nearly the whole of the clauses, which will now be submitted to a joint meeting of all the members of the four executives.

The following official report was issued: "At a meeting of the joint executives of the Railwaymen's Unions at Manchester on December 20, the scheme for the amalgamation of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, the General Railway Workers' Union and the United Pointsmen and Signalmen's Society was completed." Evidently this statement does not mean that the scheme was adopted, for J. E. Williams, General Secretary of the Amalgamated Society, stated on January 1, that a general conference will be held in Unity House, Euston Road, at the end of this month "for the purpose of considering the proposals."

The Executive Council of the South Wales Miners' Federation on December 28 at Cardiff discussed the forthcoming ballot on the question of a general strike of miners to support the demand for a minimum wage. It was resolved that failing a settlement in the meantime, the members of the South Wales Federation be recommended to vote for a stoppage. In the event of a strike being decided on by the miners of the kingdom, notices will be served in South Wales on February 1 to terminate operations on March 1.

A proposal was put forward to ask for another meeting of the South Wales Conciliation Board to consider the minimum wage question, but a negative amendment was carried. So far as South Wales is concerned, therefore, there is little likelihood of an effort being made to settle the difficulty before proceeding to take a strike ballot.

At the Abergorky pits of the United National Combine Collieries Company, Treorky, 2,000 miners struck work as a protest against the employment of non-unionists. These colliers were the scene of a similar strike in August last.

Such strikes against the continued employment of non-union labor are a distinct feature of the present British trade union movement. Of course the great conflict on the Lancashire is the later case in point. Matters there have progressed no further since your correspondent wrote last week. There has been several meetings between Sir George Askwith who represents the Government in these disputes as chief commissioner of the new industrial council, and the representatives of the employers and the operatives. Almost at the time of writing the employers are meeting to consider whether they shall grant the demand of the weavers for a 5 per cent in-

LABOR TO LOSE BY TRUST LAWS-SCHWAB

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 13.—In the presence of 350 guests at the testimonial dinner given in his honor by the Iron and Steel section of the Manufacturers' club of Philadelphia tonight, Charles M. Schwab declared that labor must suffer the consequences of any legislation which may be enacted with the object of dissolving trade combinations now effective in the iron and steel industry.

"It is the farthest from my thought to say anything as to what should be the laws of the country as applied to great industries like the steel industry," said Mr. Schwab, "but I do want to say that it is necessary, in order to give the American steel industry world-precedence and our country preeminence in the commerce of the world, that it be remembered that the existing steel corporation was originated for effecting economies in order that it could make its business profitable on the basis of the big investment represented.

"Large scale organization has made possible a cheaper production that cannot be accomplished in any other way. I claim any legislation that will hinder such a system of manufacture is legislation that is going to hurt the industry, for it is the only system by which the average earnings of the workingman could have been consistently increased.

"This way of doing business has enabled manufacturers to pay better wages and to go through depressions such as we are now encountering without reducing wages.

"When reduced to the last analysis, there is nothing that enters into the cost of manufactured articles but labor."

THE BI-MONTHLY SETTLEMENT

The bi-monthly examination of the sale sheets of the Western Bar Iron Association has been made at the office of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, Youngstown, O., and the sheets show that iron has been selling at a price that would not warrant an advance in the scale, therefore puddlers will receive the same price for January and February as they received the previous two months.

THE REIGN OF THE MESSIAH.

It Will Be an Exclusive and Aristocratic Monarchy—Nature of the Kingdom—Pastor Russell in the Philippines. Describes the Fifth Universal Empire of Earth—Sin and Death Shall Be Overthrown and Humanity Uplifted from Ignorance and Superstition—General Hall and Comrades, Also of the Foreign Missions Investigation Committee, Visit the Islands.

MANILA, Philippine Islands, Jan. 14.—General W. P. Hall, second in command of the U. S. Army and, at one time Governor of the Philippines, is here in company with Pastor C. T. Russell, Professor F. H. Robinson, Dr. L. W. Jones, Mr. J. T. D. Pyles, Mr. E. W. V. Kuehn, and Mr. R. B. Maxwell, the special Committee of Fifteen Men Women Investigators appointed by the International Bible Students Association. They were heartily welcomed and given every aid for making civil and missionary activities amongst the Filipinos. Pastor Russell gave two addresses today to large audiences, chiefly Americans. He had a very earnest hearing. We report his address in the Manila Grand Opera House from the text, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." (Matthew vi. 10.) He said:—

Many of us have learned to appreciate a republican form of government as the very highest type of civil administration. I trust that I am not one who behind the most patriotic of you in my appreciation of the great government of the United States which many of us believe is the noblest that has yet risen amongst men. Nevertheless, the Bible teaches that Messiah's reign will be that of a Monarchy; not only so, it will be a very exclusive and aristocratic Monarchy. Additionally, it will be most autocratic—theocratic; the will of its subjects will not be consulted in the slightest particular.

THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL EMPIRE.

At first, in alarm, we are ready to say, would not that be a most dangerous condition of things? Could any royal family, however noble and generous, be entrusted with such autocratic power without fear of its being misused for the enslavement of the people, for the aggrandizement of the rulers? Have we not learned this in the history of the past six thousand years? Do we not see the necessity for curtailing and controlling the powers of kings and governors? Are we not more and more inclined to realize the necessity that the people shall rule, whether in Congress or in Parliament, in Doumas or in Chambers of Deputies?

Yes, yes, my dear friends, I heartily accede to all this; but when I shall describe to you the nature of the Kingdom that is to be established, and its personnel, all your fears will assuredly flee, and you will rejoice exceedingly that the Divine arrangement is what it is in respect to the theocratic Kingdom about to be established and to take over the government of the world.

Scripturally, it is described as the Fifth Universal Empire of earth. I remind you of the Divinely inspired dream of King Nebuchadnezzar, as interpreted by the Prophet Daniel. It was of an image majestic, grand. The head of the image was Nebuchadnezzar's own kingdom at Babylon, the first to rule over the earth. Next, represented in the breast and arms of silver, came Medo-Persia, its second Universal Empire of earth, the conqueror of Babylon. Next, represented in the belly and thighs of the image, came Greece, the third Universal Empire of earth, which conquered Medo-Persia. Next, represented in the legs of iron, came Rome, the fourth Universal Empire, conqueror of Greece. There are to be no more until Messiah's Kingdom; it will be the Fifth. Meantime, we have had two attempts at a fifth monarchy, both unsuccessful. One of these attempts was by Napoleon I, the other was that of the Papacy. During this time the present divisions, which resulted from the breaking up of the Roman Empire, are represented by the feet of the image, with their ten toes.

SMITING THE IMAGE'S FEET.

The prophecy declares (Daniel ii, 44) that in the days of these kings, represented by the toes of the image, the God of heaven will set up a Kingdom, which shall subdue all Kingdoms, and which shall never be overthrown. It shall "be given to the people, saints of the Most High God, and they shall take the Kingdom and possess it forever, even forever and ever." (Daniel vii, 18, 27.) In the picture God's Kingdom is symbolic ally represented as a great stone hewn from the mountain without hands—supernaturally. It shall smite the image in its feet, and forthwith the iron, the brass, the silver and the gold shall become like the chaff of a summer threshing floor, and the wind shall carry it away," but the mountain shall increase until "it shall fill the whole earth."

Thus, in a figure, or symbol, God pictures things now shortly to come to pass. I know not how much to expect from the war between Italy and Turkey, but Rome and Constantinople stand for, represent, the two legs of the image, for be it remembered that such in turn was the Roman Capital, and representative of the image. We are certainly justified in watching with considerable interest the present war and what it may be leading to in the way of involving all the five kingdoms represented in this prophecy.

But that is not the special point of interest in my subject; rather, I am discussing the character of Messiah's Kingdom, which is to rule the world, overthrow Sin and Death and uplift humanity from ignorance, superstition, sin, weakness and death. The declaration is that Messiah shall reign until He shall have put down all insubordination and that the last enemy to be destroyed will be death. (I Corinthians xv, 25, 26.)

This is the Kingdom for which the Master Himself taught His followers to pray. Nothing slight or insignificant will be the outcome of that glorious, Messianic reign of a thousand years. At its very beginning Satan will be bound, with all that this signifies—the repression of evil and darkness. For a thousand years the Sun of Righteousness shall spread forth the light of truth and grace upon our poor, fallen race until the knowledge of God's glory shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep. (Habakkuk ii, 14.) Speedily all wilful opponents of that Kingdom will die the Second Death, from which there will be no redemption, no recovery. But meantime, all the willing and obedient will be raised, not only from the tomb, but also out of all the weaknesses and frailties of the present time, up, up, up to the full issue of perfection of life, although they will not live again in this perfect sense until the thousand years shall be finished. With the close of that reign of righteousness, when it shall have accomplished its work of delivering the groaning creation from the bondage of corruption, sin and death, Messiah will obliterate the Throne, as it is written, "And then cometh the End, the Kingdom to God, even the Father, that He may be all in all."—I Corinthians xv, 24.

NO MORE SIGHING, CRYING, DYING.

What a glorious triumph that will be when every creature in heaven and earth and under the earth shall be heard saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever. (Revelation v, 13.) What a glorious condition of affairs obtain when there shall be no more crying, no more sighing, no more dying, for all the former things of sin and death, shall have passed away! Ah! He that sitteth upon the Throne said, "Behold, I make all things new!" Glad we are that our great Messiah is about to overthrow sin and evil, about to establish righteousness on a permanent and everlasting foundation, which will insure that to all eternity God's will shall be done as perfectly in this earth as it is now done in heaven.

I ask you to consider candidly—you need not reply—is there a Kingdom in the world today that is your judgment fitly represents a Divine government amongst men? Is there a perfect government, is there a single spot in all the earth where God's will is done as it is done in heaven? You are conversant with history. You know the bloody record which marks its pages. You know that so-called Christian Europe has been drenched with blood more than any other part of the world. You know that the cause of wrong has triumphed as often or oftener than the cause of right. You know that today these kingdoms of Europe, styled kingdoms of God, are threatening one another as they have done in the past. You know that great guns, great battleships and monster torpedoes, such as the world has never known before, are being prepared by these various nations for use, either aggressively or defensively, against one another, while they all claim to be Christ's kingdoms. Is this logical? Is this rational? Most assuredly not!

We must go to the Bible for true information on this subject. It tells us that these kingdoms are not the kingdoms of God, but "kingdoms of this world." It tells us that Satan is he Prince of this world (John xiv, 30; Ephesians ii, 2); that he is "the god of this world," "that now worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience"—so much more numerous than the children of obedience that he is rightly termed all the world's control. But with equal clearness the Bible declares the Divine Power and mastery over Satan and that he and his reign of evil and darkness are permitted of God for a limited time and for a special purpose. The testimony tells us that when the due time shall come Messiah shall take to Himself His great power and bring Satan shall be bound and all of the forces of sin and darkness be restrained. Then the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in its beams to flood the earth with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God.

THE ELECTION HATH OBTAINED IT.

Come with me and take a cursory view of God's great work thus far accomplished. For more than two thousand years God gave no clear intimation of what He intended to do for the fallen race. Then He made a statement to Abraham, so clear, so explicit, that St. Paul declares it was a mistatement of the Gospel of Christ. God said to Abraham, I intend to bless the world, which could only mean, I intend to relieve them of the curse of death which came upon them through Adam's sin. God added to Abraham, This blessing which I will bring to all the families of the earth will come through your Seed. "In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

God's due time for bringing this blessing was still future; the blessing intended could not come until Messiah should come; but meantime God gave to the natural seed of Abraham, through Moses, the Law Covenant, which offered them eternal life and a place of existence in the Kingdom if they could keep the Law. Of course, they could not keep the Law because it was the measure of a perfect man's ability, and like the remainder of the world, the Israelites were imperfect—sinners. Nevertheless the offer and their attempt to keep the Law brought them great spirit of heart, so that when Jesus came to them a considerable number were ready to receive Him, did receive him, and became His disciples. They became sons of God, through the begetting of the Holy Spirit, at Pentecost and afterward. These were the spiritual seed of Abraham, begotten of the Holy Spirit, Jesus Himself being the Head, or First; the others were counted in as members of His Body.

Israel had been hoping for a share in Messiah's Kingdom, and St. Paul explains, "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded." The blinded Israelites are still cast aside, but not forever. The Divine Blessings shall come to natural Israel just as soon as spiritual Israel shall be completed. (See Rom. xi, 25-34.)

THE KINGDOM SUFFERETH VIOLENCE.

What did the "election" obtain? Of what did the faithful "Israelites indeed" become heirs by accepting Jesus and by the Pentecostal blessing? We answer that they became identified with Messiah's Kingdom and heirs of inheritors of the glorious promise made to Abraham, that in this "elect" class for the Kingdom all earth should be blessed. But now note that there were not a sufficient number of Jews found worthy to complete the Kingdom class, and so Gentiles therefore could not be inaugurated then. God had foreseen this and through the Prophet had promised that some would be called from among the Gentiles to complete this King dom class. The entire work of this Gospel Age has been the calling of this "elect" class for the Kingdom. If we have rightly understood the matter the foreordained number will soon have been found, the election will be at an end, the accepted will be glorified as the Kingdom, and Messiah's reign of righteousness will begin.

But notice now the course of all belonging to the Kingdom class, throughout this age. They are not reigning with Christ, but suffering with Christ. And Jesus explained this; they are indeed of the Royal Family, because begotten of the Holy Spirit; they are indeed the Kingdom class, because they are affiliated with the great King; but they have not yet entered into their glory. They will do so only by the power of the First Resurrection. Thus it is written, "We must all be changed," because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

Our Lord Himself was the Pattern, the Forerunner of all these. After His consecration and His begetting of the Holy Spirit, He was tested even unto death, even the death of the cross, before He experienced His glorious resurrection change and ascended up and sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on High. Similarly all of His followers, after consecration must be tested, their loyalty must be proven, before they can share with Him in "His Resurrection."

Partly for the testing of these, their development takes place in a time when Satan is the Prince of this world, and when his power is permitted to be exercised against them as it was exercised against their Lord. The message to these is, "The Kingdom suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." As our Lord suffered violence from the Prince of this world, so will His followers, for "the disciple is not above His Lord." His promise to His followers is, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Revelation ii, 10.

"THE WORLD KNOWETH US NOT."

So then we perceive that God's Kingdom class, the followers of Jesus, have been suffering violence, just as did their Leader, for righteousness' sake. The persecutors had not known and done their evil work intentionally, St. Peter intimates when he says to the Jews, "I wot that in unbelief ye did it, as did also your rulers, for if they had known they would not have crucified the Prince of Life." Hence, in due time their business shall be turned away and they will look upon Him whom they pierced and mourn (Zechariah xii, 10), and God will pour upon them the spirit of prayer and supplication, and forthwith they will make the experience profitable to as many as shall prove willing.

Meantime, for thirteen centuries, the Scriptures declare, "The world knoweth us not because it knew Him not." God's saintly ones have not been generally the great, the influential, either in church or state, just as Jesus and the Apostles were not in their day. Nevertheless, the Lord knoweth those that are His. Scattered here and there, during the past eighteen centuries, He has been developing and preparing them, polishing them, fitting them as Jewels. And He tells us that at our Lord's second coming He will make up His Jewels—they will constitute the Kingdom class, for if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him.

I am sure you will agree with me that those whom the Lord has been so carefully selecting, instructing and polishing in the school of Christ, who have been so effectively polished with the trials and disciplines of evil, will be the very class above all others to whom the glorious dominion of earth may well be entrusted without fear. Only those thoroughly loyal to God and to principle will be in that Kingdom class.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Pennsylvania, Jan. 9.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Permit us to express our thanks for your promptness in sending us the Tribune for the past month and when our subscription expires in February next, we will be just as prompt to renew same for another year, and we trust that we may be able to be subscribers to your paper as long as you continue to polish those excellent sermons by Pastor C. T. Russell, also the Tabernacle Lessons, Question Box and Letters of Appreciation which we so dearly love to read, for it is also by this feature of the paper we are subscribers, although the other features of your paper, especially the labor news, are ably handled by you and give us the up-to-date news on the question.

This is an age of advanced thought, and more thinking is done now than ever before, especially along religious lines and the Truth as set forth in these wonderful sermons, is uplifting, and helps to build one another up in this most holy faith. They are without a doubt the only true presentations of God's Word as set forth in the Holy Scriptures and anyone who is hungering and thirsting for the Truth will surely find their wants satisfied by reading these weekly discourses.

We pray rich blessings upon you for the New Year, for we know that anyone who devotes so much space as you do in your valuable paper for the spread of the Gospel of Jesus Christ will surely not lose their reward. We most heartily congratulate you upon the neat and attractive way and clear type in which you publish them, and trust that you will continue this feature of your most excellent paper.

Yours for the Truth,
MR. AND MRS. WM. H. BOEKKEL.

Virginia, Jan. 9.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed please find money order for the Tribune for 1912.

I wish to express my thanks and appreciation of your valuable paper. We so much enjoy Pastor Russell's sermons. May God shower many blessings on you in the coming year. I consider you are doing a great work for the Master by publishing these excellent sermons.

Very truly yours,
J. M. J. JEWETT.

Georgia, Jan. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Your valued paper reaches us on time each week, for which we wish to express our appreciation.

It is the most unbiased labor paper we know of, and the publication of the sermons and Bible Questions which that you are as fair in religious matters as you are in the field of labor, and that is saying a great deal for your paper. With best wishes and the hope that you will continue the good fight.

Yours very truly,
R. R. MONTAGUE.

Ohio, Jan. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to also add my appreciation of your paper.

I enjoy the sermons you are publishing of Pastor Russell. Surely we are living in a time when ignorance and superstition are fleeing. Men are thinking and reasoning more deeply on religious matters. The time is coming to the Heavenly Father should be the desire of every man's heart for from Him comes our life and all we have or hope to be.

Sincerely yours,
CARLAS D. LEBERMAN.

Virginia, Jan. 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I appreciate your valuable paper more and more each issue. No wonder the column of names in your subscription list grows larger and larger each week.

It is a little hard sometimes for us just to see why the many couldn't be interested as we, but then we do know. That great sermon by Pastor Russell at Tokio, Japan, in your January 4 issue, seems to me should astound the entire world. Never since Paul on "Mars's Hill" has man been able to preach to a heathen nation the just and loving plan of God till that.

Long live the Tribune and its loving courageous editor. In the "Resurrection of the just," when Pastor Russell's labors will be rewarded, then those who have stood loyal and sang the song of "Moses and Lamb" to an appreciative people.

"O, bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard; which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved." Psa. 66: 8, 9.

Sincerely yours,
T. R. LEEDY.

Pennsylvania, Jan. 14.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed find subscription to Labor Tribune. I appreciate the Labor Tribune very much for the nice plain way you print Pastor Russell's sermons. May the dear Lord bless you abundantly both now and in the future is my wish.

Yours truly,
E. D. HOWELL.

New York, Jan. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have renewed the Tribune. May the dear Lord bless you for your deep interest in publishing Pastor Russell's sermons so faithfully and allowing it so much space in the paper, letting their light shine instead of crowding it into a corner as others do.

I remain yours,
THEO. TELLER.

Colorado, Jan. 13.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It is now six years since I began taking your excellent paper and have made arrangements to renew my subscription for another year, beginning January 1. It is because of Pastor Russell's sermons published in such clear type that I subscribe for your paper, but find it a clean good reading paper otherwise. I also find the Tabernacle Lessons and the Question Box quite instructive. I frequently advise others to subscribe for your paper.

Yours respectfully,
DORIS E. ASHBY.

Massachusetts, Jan. 14.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing the subscription to your paper, also sending a new subscription. I do not wish to miss one of Pastor Russell's sermons. May you continue in the blessed work of sending out the Glad Tidings.

Sincerely,
J. M. WOODRUFF.

New York, Jan. 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed please find renewal of your much appreciated paper. I can not afford to miss one copy. Praying the Lord's blessing on your efforts in sending the glad message to all your readers.

Yours truly,
W. H. DAVIS.

Oregon, Jan. 13.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to your valuable paper. We enjoy the sermons and Questions and Answers and the able manner you publish Brother Russell's sermons in your paper. We ask God's blessings on your work and the continuation of them.

Yours respectfully,
GEO. H. McKEE.

Virginia, Jan. 10.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

I would not like to miss any of Pastor Russell's sermons, the Bible Questions and Sunday School lessons. They are so encouraging to one striving to walk the narrow way that leads to that eternal home above.

May God bless you in the active part you are taking in the spreading of these grand and precious truths which shall in due time come to all people in my sincere wish.

Respectfully yours,
FRANK M. MITCHELL.

Pennsylvania, Jan. 1.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have been receiving your very interesting paper now for several weeks and I wish to tell you that I appreciate it very much. I subscribed especially to get Pastor Russell's weekly sermons, and I am very pleased with the manner in which you print them, the type being so clear and large. I also enjoy the Question Box and the Bible Studies. Although we receive the Bible Studies for each Sunday in the Watch Tower, I am so glad that your many readers, not all receiving the Watch Tower, can also be blessed by these studies, in connection with the sermons. I appreciate the general labor news very much, also help speaking, too, of the many encouraging letters you are receiving, which must surely be a great help to you. I think if I were editing a paper I would get the encouragement and kind remarks of my subscribers and I conclude from your constant publication of the same that your appreciation is manifest to us all. It is certainly wonderful to see the number of subscribers each week. Wishing you a prosperous year during 1912, and hoping that your good paper may yet be even more widely circulated, carrying as it surely does so much of the well meaning of His creatures.

I remain gratefully yours
MRS. CLARA McMASTERS.

Texas, Jan. 2.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have taken your valuable paper since February last and I wish to say I am highly pleased with it. Its clear white paper and bold type make it much easier to read than some papers I am taking on your paper especially on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons, as they have been right on the Scriptures and above God's word to be harmonious, reasonable, just and living. Thank God for the Truth. How it relieves us from the night mares we were formerly taught by those who no doubt were sincere, but mistaken. Hoping you will continue to publish the sermons, Sunday School Lessons and Questions, as many people are being blessed through these words of comfort and I am sure you will be rewarded by our Lord for what you are doing to spread the true Gospel of which St. Paul was not ashamed. Enclosed find money order for which send me one copy of your paper for year 1912 to Mrs. E. H. Wallingford. I am sending it to her as she is interested in the sermons.

Very respectfully yours,
GEO. WEISSGERBER.

Maryland, Jan. 5.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed find two subscribers. Dear friend, it gives me pleasure to be able to add some to your subscription list and a great deal more pleasure in having the privilege of being a subscriber myself; thereby enjoying the excellent reading found there. I wish you a happy and blessed New Year.

Yours kindly,
R. H. ATKINSON.

Canada, Jan. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Have just renewed my subscription for the Tribune. We appreciate the Tribune on account of the sermons, also Sunday School Lesson and Question Box.

Another year has passed and gone
The new year leaps in bold
And adds another unit on Toward the Heights of promised reign.
Nations will rejoice when Christ is King
In the beautiful Millennial Age.

Wishing you success in spreading the truth.

MR. and MRS. A. G. ARCHIBALD.

Pennsylvania, Jan. 2.

I wish to tell you that my appreciation of the Tribune will continue. I have been a subscriber for several years and hope to be as long as you give us such a high class paper. My chief interest centers in the religious department. The Question Box gives us very satisfactory answers to many perplexing Bible questions. The Tabernacle Bible Studies furnish us the best I have found along the lines of the Sunday School Lessons, and what a wonderfully clear and harmonious explanation of the Scriptures we get in Pastor Russell's sermons. The pastor is always a good Bible student. He gets right to the bottom of the matter and when he explains a passage of Scripture it seems all clear and reasonable. In reading his sermons I often think of the testimony of the people concerning Jesus, "He taught them as one having authority and not as the scribes." Matt. 7: 28. However it may be accounted for, there is a wide difference between the sermons of Pastor Russell and the sermons of other ministers.

Another matter I wish to mention is, that I am fully in sympathy with the C. T. Russell published from time to time in your paper, viz., that papers should be stopped at time subscription expires. I am one of the many known. We sometimes like to make a present to some friend or to a poor subscription, and might refrain from doing so because of not knowing that we could keep it paid up indefinitely and not wishing our friend to be annoyed by receiving a bill for a paper that they did not order. I hope you may see your way clear to stop at expiration of subscription some as much better way and fair to all concerned.

Now, Mr. Editor, wishing you a Happy and Prosperous New Year and the success your paper merits, I remain.

Sincerely yours,
R. H. BRICKER.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

POPULAR MECHANICS.

CASK MAKING MACHINE.

Various Processes of Manufacture Performed Automatically.

A demonstration given at Poplar, suburb of London, shows some new machines which have been designed for use in the various processes of cask making at speeds which are stated to be very much higher than those achieved up to the present. The wood for the staves, having been cut to the requisite length, is passed in places measuring six inches wide and about one inch thick or twice that thickness of a stave as used for a cask through a molding machine, which by means of rotary cutters placed on horizontal spindles above and below the plant gives a bevel to the stave, so that when assembled the cask is quite circular. A circular saw also embodied in the machine cuts the six inch wood into three inch widths, these double staves being produced at the rate of eighty a minute.

The next process is known as grolling. In it the machine takes the double staves and, by rotary cutters mounted on vertical spindles, tapers the edges from the center toward the ends so as to give the "bilge" and at the same time cuts tongues and grooves for the joints of the staves. This process is performed at the speed of forty double staves a minute. The double staves are then divided into single ones and are passed on to a crozing machine which provides the cross groove and chamfer at the ends to take the bottom and head of the cask. It also makes a saw cut across the center to enable the staves to be bended and when their ends are drawn together to form the cask.

The staves are assembled in a circular frame and are taken to a bilging machine, which, by means of tension applied to a wire rope passed round their ends, compresses them together sufficiently to hold the head and to enable the iron hoop to be placed in position. All the machines are adjustable for the manufacture of casks in various sizes, and all the movements are provided with ball bearings.—London Times.

GIANT DUTCH WINDMILL.

Largest of Its Kind and Pumps Water in San Francisco.

The Dutch windmill recently completed in Golden Gate park, San Francisco, is said to be the largest windmill of its kind in the world, if not, even excepting those in Holland. Its height is eighty-six feet, the giant wings have a radius of fifty-seven feet and its capacity in a thirty mile breeze is 70,000 gallons of water per hour, pumped through a twelve inch pipe line to a distance of two miles and a height of 200 feet.

WORLD'S LARGEST WINDMILL.

The rest of the mill was $25,000, all of which was donated by leading citizens of San Francisco.

Puncture Proof Tires.

A novel French invention for rendering pneumatic tires puncture proof is described in a recent issue of Le Petit Havre. The expedient to which the inventor resorts is to insert between the inner tube and the outer casing a cloth belt upon which metal scales are riveted.

This invention has been put to very severe tests not only by running on automobile equipped with the device over long distances, but by deliberately running nails and spikes into the tire. The tests were entirely successful, the tire appearing to be perfectly puncture proof.

Lake Superior Iron District.

The Mesaba iron range in Minnesota produced in 1910, according to the United States geological survey, 53% per cent of the entire iron ore production of the United States. The Lake Superior district, including Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin, produced 91½ per cent of our total iron ore production. Figures from other countries are not yet available for 1910, but this is probably a greater production than the entire year's output for any foreign country.

Ingenious Method of Advertisement.

A fair given for the benefit of the fire air mission at Indianapolis, Ind., was ingeniously advertised by placing a specially constructed spring actuated cannon on a motor truck and discharging advertising cards from it while the truck was being driven through the streets. The spring was sufficiently powerful to throw the packages of cards a considerable distance, and the cards, scattered by the winds, fell in showers over the people in the streets.

MODERN DEVELOPMENT.

Accepted Knowledge Not Always the Keynote to Science.

The science of human surgery has been evolved from study and observations of, experiments on and experience with an unvarying structure over a period as long as the story of animal life is old. In the sense that the profession of surgery has ever followed methods founded on accepted knowledge it has always practiced scientific management. During that time however, it has known and taught many things that were not so. It was within the memory of men now living that surgery learned the immediate evils of absolute cleanliness. Wounded sufferers on the battlefield were tied under scientific management to fester in the consuming fever. Patients perishing of thirst were denied water because accepted knowledge decreed that it must not be administered. Many important discoveries were thrust upon the medical profession through what were regarded as blunders. Nature asserting itself through a tortured patient, insane from suffering, transgressed some inscrutable rule and revolutionized a science.

The development of the modern locomotive has in many instances been accomplished in spite of accepted principles and disregarding the mandates of accepted knowledge. The injector is an instance in point. From the scientific point of accepted knowledge it was regarded as so abominable for a jet of steam under a given pressure to enter a boiler against the same pressure and at the same time heat and carry along water that it constituted one of the dignant scientists immortalized their ignorance by writing learned dissertations to prove that it contravened all the laws of conservation of energy. Dogmatic instructions are often limiting. Unlike the human stomach, the bones, muscles, arteries and nerves of a locomotive are not of the same structure in two classes of locomotives. Conditions and requirements are constantly changing. The railroad surgeon is a specialist and a specialist constantly confronted by new conditions and called upon to solve problems on which past experience gives little or no light and afforded but little guidance.—George J. Roure in Engineering Magazine.

SANITARY PUMP.

Bubbling Bowl Equipment Converts It Into Fountain.

An ingenious adaptation of the sanitary drinking bowl to the old fashioned country pump receiving its supply of water from a well has been made by a rural mail carrier and inventor of Oblong, Ill., says Popular Mechanics. Working the pump handle up and down three or four times fills the cylinder at the top. This cylinder holds a gallon of water, which flows out through the spigot and operates the bubbling bowl. The amount of water pumped into the cylinder by the few strokes of the handle is sufficient to keep the bowl bubbling long enough for three or four persons to drink.

Petroleum Production.

More than 200,000,000 barrels of oil, with a value of nearly $125,000,000, were produced in the United States in 1910, according to David T. Day of the United States geological survey. The United States is now by far the greatest oil producing country. In fact, it produces more than all the rest of the world together. In 1910 the wells of this country yielded nearly 64 per cent of the total production. Russia scoring a very poor second, with about 70,000,000 barrels, or 21 per cent. The production of other countries is comparatively negligible, the third on the list, Galicia, contributing only 3.87 per cent of the total.

Recuperation From Fatigue.

According to a French physician a short period of rest is sufficient to prepare a person for new exertion after an attack of intense, protracted work; while longer rest is necessary after continuous work of a lighter nature.

Protection Against Acid.

Jumpers and overalls used when working about acid can be made impervious by rubbing the goods carefully all over with a piece of beeswax or paraffin and ironing with a warm smoothing iron.

TREE FELLING DEVICE.

Trunks Cut by Thin Steel Wire Heated by Friction.

The attempts from time to time to cut trees with a wire heated by electricity so far have not given satisfactory results.

Now a Berlin inventor, Hugo Gattke, has recently succeeded in designing an extremely simple device for the mechanical felling of trees. The trunks are cut by the friction of an ordinary steel wire about one millimeter in diameter (No. 18 B and S gage) which, as shown by practical tests, is able to saw through a tree about twenty inches in diameter in six minutes.

The steel wire, driven by an electric motor, is heated so intensely by friction on the wood as to form a thin red hot heated kerf, which in both smother and cleanse than the cut of a saw. The charcoal layer adhering to the trunk is extremely thin and shows the structure and any disease of the wood to be distinctly recognized. It enables the tree to be marked with chalk and at the same time serves to preserve any trunks that may be left temporarily in the woods.

Unlike other saws, this felling machine will work freely even on the thickest trees without requiring any wedges to be inserted into the cut, for instead of any shavings we have only smoke and steam and hence there is no danger of the cut's becoming obstructed. The trees may be cut close to the ground or even below the ground as far north as the beginning of the roots will permit. In the latter case the stump and its safely left to the soil. The electric motor that drives the steel wire is placed where it is not in danger of being struck when the tree falls.

While mechanical operation is in itself much more rapid than hand labor, a further economy is derived from the absence of any intervals of rest between two cuts. As a new piece of steel wire resulting but a few cents is taken for each cut there is no loss of time due to the sharpening of saws, etc. Only one hand is required to operate the machine as against two men working with hand saws, and the larger the tree the higher is the relative cutting speed.

Movements of Eels.

A circular letter has just been received from Hamburg by all the fisheries of France asking them to look out for a number of eels which have left the German port. Men of science in Germany are anxious to discover the exact spot where the eel travels on its fixed system. It does travel a long way, it travels a great deal, and its love of strange shakes out history a somewhat uncertain means of livelihood. Some German scientists in Hamburg, therefore, have labeled a number of eels with little silver plates which bear the letter "H" and a number. The eels cannot get rid of the plates, for they have been slipped under their skins before they were thrown back into the sea. And the scientists of Hamburg are offering a reward of a sovereign for each eel found with a silver plate inside it, provided that the finder states the exact spot where he found it.

Praise For American Shipyards.

United States shipbuilders recently were held a flattering tribute by Admiral Garcia of the Argentine navy. The admiral has made a close and careful study of European shipyards in connection with the letting of the contracts for the new battleships that are being built respectively at the Fore River yard and at those of the New York Shipbuilding company. He stated that in many points of equipment and management our shipyards are decidedly superior to the most renowned shipyards of Europe, a statement which will not be surprising to those who are familiar with conditions in the best of our home yards.—Scientific American.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

SAVIOR'S LEADING

A SAVIOR—A LIFE GIVER.

Luke ii, 1-20—Jan. 21.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ, the Lord."

TODAY'S STUDY is a most interesting one, relating to the birth of Jesus. The Scriptures are very careful to clear unto us that He was not begotten after the usual manner, that He had no earthly father, but was begotten by the Holy Spirit.

The necessity for this is manifest. The father is the life-giver, the mother is the nourisher of the offspring. If Jesus had received His life from a human father it would have been tainted, impaired, under condemnation of death, as is that of all others. This would have destroyed any work on His part as the world's Redeemer, because no imperfect man could have redeemed a perfect one, as Adam before his decline (Psalm xix. 7.) Again we read, "He was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners."

"For our sakes he became poor."

And again, "A body hast Thou prepared Me." Here the suffering of death.

It is not enough then, that we recognize Jesus as good, well disposed in mind. We must see in His death a propitiation, sufficient "For our sakes he became poor." as a sacrifice to cover the forfeited life of the first perfect man, Adam.

For Our Sakes He Became Poor.

Few ladies in all Judea or in all the world were born in a more humble place than Jesus. Joseph and Mary had gone to their native city, Bethlehem, for the registration, under the imperial edict. The little city was crowded with others on similar errand. Not a room was to be had save in a cattle stall, where Joseph and Mary had been compelled, to lodge for the night.

Ah! we cannot wonder that it is difficult for many to understand why our Heavenly Father sent forth His Son for our redemption under such ignominious conditions! Only those who realize the spirit of the Divine Plan, through the begetting of the Holy Spirit, can see the wherefore.

The message of the angels was surely an inspired one, fully in harmony with God's promise to Abraham—only in a much grander sense of the word—the same "all people" to be blessed—and it was still good tidings and it still meant great joy—but now, two thousand years later, the Message pointed out the very individual through whom the good things would have fulfillment—the Babe of Bethlehem.

The Message declared that a Savior had been born, that He entailed the Lord. There is a special force or meaning in this word Savior—it signifies life-giver. The Scriptures render the one from which Savior is translated life-giver; and Syrian was likely the language spoken by Jesus and others of Palestine at that time.

And is there not a special fitness in appropriateness in the name life-giver? What had man lost and what would we wish to have back? The Scriptures answer that Adam lost life and was sold under the penalty, "Dying, thou shalt die." He did not lose heaven, for he never possessed it. He lost earthly life, an Eden home, human perfection. And Jesus declared that He "came to seek and to redeem that which was lost."—Matthew xviii. 11.

The Hallelujah Chorus.

In verse 14 we have a kind of Hallelujah chorus or angelic response to the

"To shall bed the baby lying in a manger."

Message, of the angel already in sight. A heavenly host sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." How grand! How inspiring! But we see not yet this glorious condition achieved. To whose power glory to God is not yet rendered on earth as it is in heaven. Nor does peace yet exist where he pleases, even over so-called Christendom.

What is the matter? Ah, said the Apostle, this is a secret, a mystery, hidden from past Ages and Dispensations! The mystery is that God not only intends to have Jesus for His Anointed One, to rule and bless the world, but He has foreordained also a company of footstep followers to be with Him and share His work, and this entire Gospel Age has been devoted to the work of selecting this class, variously called the Body of Christ and the "espoused virgin," which constitutes the "little flock" remaining of the Lord, is to become "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife" and joint-heir.

It is for this that the Apostle declares that the whole creation groans and travails in pain until now—waiting for the manifestation of the Sons of God—the revelation of Jesus and His Bride to the glory of the Kingdom, for the blessing of natural Israel and all the families of the earth with knowledge and assistance, that the uplifting and obedient may be recovered to the image and likeness of God and to everlasting life.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS OR MAY BE SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS JOURNAL.

Q.—Please explain Isaiah lxv, 20, which reads: "There shall no more come thence an infant of days, nor an old man that shall not have his full length of his days: for as a lad shall one die a hundred years old: and a sinner shall be accursed he who dieth at an hundred years old?" (C. A. N.)

Answer.—The lines connecting our present day with the future millennial age in which divine favor and blessings are to be disseminated over the world, and when the germs of salvation are much more favorable to humanity than now, that an incorrigible sinner dying at an hundred years of age will be but as a child. The apparent heeding of the Scriptures is, that all mankind may have been set under the Creator's plan of salvation, and that this period of time, constituting the judgment-day of the world, will be immediately follow the Christian Era. In the meantime those who are to be the judges and rulers over the world in that day are now being prepared and qualified for that future work. Acts xvii. 31; 1 Corinthians vi. 2, 3. In that Age of joy and blessing (Psalm xcvii. 4-6), when a wayfaring man though a fool shall not err therein, the way of salvation (Isaiah xxxv. 8-10), all will have at least an hundred years to make some progress in the way of righteousness. Failing to do this they will die as an infant, and in an hundred years of age, comparatively speaking, is but an infant to one a thousand years old, for all will be enough with the "knowledge of righteousness will live to the end of the thousand years, and may make their existence eternal if they overcome. Only endure the final trial or test at the end of that Age, when Satan is loosed for a little season.—Revelation xx. 7.

Q.—If God is a God of love, as the Bible says, how can we understand His command to the children of Israel to destroy their enemies, men, women, and children? (B. R.)

Answer.—The Land of Canaan belonged to the Israelites as it had been given to Abraham and promised to his seed as an everlasting possession. The Philistines, Amorites and others who inhabited the land at the time when Moses under Divine direction led the Israelites out of Egypt, were a semi-barbarous race whose sins and iniquities had come to the full. It was because they had become so abhorrent that the Lord saw that it would be best to destroy them. Let us suppose that a people occupying the land of Canada today, were to become so degraded and corrupt that they were a menace to civilization, robbing and massacring innocent people, and in all ways being obnoxious both to themselves and to their neighbors. Would it be thought an unwise, unjust, or unloving arrangement for the Lord to cause their removal and settle the destruction in order to make way for the establishment of the Israelites in their own land? Many of the prophecies of the Scriptures clearly indicate that we may expect within the next few years just such a development of affairs, and that the Israelites will be gathered back into their own country from the uttermost parts of the earth. (Jeremiah xxxi. 36-44). Reverting to the question: we see women and children, young and old, dying of in multitudes every day with but very little evidence of the Lord's love in any direction. However, the Lord has arranged in His plan of salvation a time and a way when all the race shall be delivered from the death conditions.—Isaiah xxxv. 5-10; Revelation xxi. 3-5.

Q.—We know what becomes of the obedient and disobedient, but there is another class, which really cannot be called obedient nor yet disobedient, I mean the irresponsible, and they who love this present world and have not even a desire to know what God requires of them, and which, in my opinion, forms the vast majority of mankind even in this enlightened age (so-called). What becomes of them? (P. E. T.)

Answer.—The answering of this question involves the consideration of the doctrines of "Election" and "Predestination," both clearly taught in the Scriptures, as all Bible Scholars recognize. It is only within recent years that the beautiful harmony existing between these two doctrines has been recognized. From many Scriptures, one of which we will only cite a few, it will be seen that the entire Christian Era, from the time of our Lord Jesus' first advent down to the time of His second coming, is the period in which the "Election" takes place, the election or selection of those who shall constitute the Bride, the Church of Christ. (See 1 Peter i. 2; Ephesians i. 4; II Peter i. 10; Acts xv. 14-17.) When, at the close of this Christian Age, the work of election is consummated, then God's free grace will be extended to all the remainder of mankind, through the selected class, who were elected to be kings and priests unto God and with their Lord Jesus to reign for the space of a thousand years over the nations of the earth for the purpose of lifting them up out of sin and death to human perfection and eternal life. Now is the Church's opportunity to make her calling and election sure; then will be the world's opportunity of receiving God's free grace Election now and Free Grace then. See Acts xv. 14-18; Revelation xxii. 17; Acts iii. 19-21.

Q.—When will the world come to an end? (T. W. L.)

Answer.—According to the Scriptures, the term "world" signifies not of dissolution, but of the order of things existing on the earth. The present order of things will be changed at the end of this Age, but the earth will remain forever. Ecclesiastes i. 4. The world will be delivered in the Divine plan of the Ages, as revealed in the Bible. (See 2 Peter iii. 5-13.) The first "world" or dispensation passed away at the time of the Flood. The second "world," or "present evil world," is likewise to pass away, in a fiery time of trouble—not a literal "fire," but a destructive session of lawlessness that will destroy the "elements"—labor, capitalistic order, etc., that go to make up the present social order. "The world to come" wherein dwelleth righteousness" will never come to end, but is to continue throughout eternity. "The world that now is"—Titus ii. 12—is already being violently shaken, and is beginning to crumble and burn literally, financially, socially, and ecclesiastically. The evidences about us, in the fulfillment of the Scripture prophecies, are clear and strong that within the next decade, the new and better order ("the world to come") will be established in the earth.

Q.—"Now ye not that the saints shall judge the world?"—1 Corinthians vi. 2. Does the dignity that the world is not now on trial for eternal life? (C. W.)

Answer.—The Scripture is in conformity with the united testimony of the members of both the Synoptic and the Apostles to the effect that the world's judgment day, or trial time, is not in this present Christian Era; but, as yet, future. God hath appointed a day (a thousand year day—2 Peter iii. 8) in the which He will judge the world in righteousness." (Acts xvii. 31.) Those who, by association with Christ, shall judge the world in mercy, justice and love, are now being qualified for their high office, by having developed in them saintly Christlike characters. These "saints," who have learned to love their neighbors as themselves and who even love their enemies, are the ones who, in the future age, will offer every inducement to the world of mankind to come into harmony with the gracious requirements of the Divine Law of love and justice and receive eternal life. The fact that the followers of Christ are not judging now proves conclusively that the world is not on trial for eternal life at the present time. The judgment day, in place of being a time of terror, distress and sorrow, is represented in the Scriptures as being a special time of joy and gladness for the world.—Psalm xcvi.

Q.—What is meant by Divine nature, angelic nature, and human nature, and What is the meaning of the word nature in these connections? (A. P. N.)

Answer.—The word "nature" in its true sense, as applied to creatures, or beings, signifies the kind of organism and nature of existence to which they live and move and have their being. Thus when human nature is referred to, it signifies the conditions of existence relating to the human race. The angelic nature is in a higher and different sphere of existence than that of humanity. (Psalm viii.) As there is a vast difference between the conditions of existence of a fish and a bird, so we may reasonably suppose there is just as wide a difference between the human and angelic. The Divine nature is the highest of all natures, and is different from all others in that regard—it possesses inherent life and is, therefore, immortal. Whereas all other natures possess life that is not inherent, but is sustained by partaking of the life-giving elements peculiar to the different natures. A blending of natures would be a hybrid thing—a monstrosity. The Lord Jesus experienced two changes of nature—from spiritual to human (Hebrews ii. 16, 17) and then from human to Divine. It is promised in the Scriptures that the faithful followers of Christ shall also experience a change of nature, and will "become partakers of the Divine nature"—the nature of God. —II Peter i. 4.

Q.—"For we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men."—1 Corinthians iv. 9. How were the Apostles made a "spectacle" to the angels? (Curious.)

Answer.—Evidently the angels and all other spirit beings, of which there are myriads upon myriads, (Revelation v. 11) are very much interested in the events transpiring upon this little globe of ours. What the race of mankind is learning by actual experience the spirit beings are learning by observation. As the poet has expressed the thought—"All the world's a stage and men and women merely players." The word "spectacle," in the marginal rendering of the Authorized Version, is theatre. The Apostles were being set "a show of" before the world, and angels, and men, because of their loyalty to the cause of Christ. Enduring all manner of hardships, bitter persecutions, and regarded as religious fanatics—"fools"—because of their prominence in advocating the teachings of Christ, they were specially observed. Thus it was with the Master Himself, by His sufferings, His death, and His resurrection. He preached a powerful sermon in particular to the "spirits in prison" (The fallen angels who disobeyed in the time of Noah. II Peter ii. 4; I Peter iii. 18-20).

Principles of Action.

There are five good principles of action to be adopted—to benefit others without being harsh, to encourage labor without being harsh, to add to your resources without being covetous, to be dignified without being supercilious and to inspire awe without being austere.—Confucius.

COAL MINERS IN NATIONAL CONVENTION

Charges Made that Pennsylvania Operators Offered Big Inducements to Members to Turn Traitor--President Feehan Wins Again Over the Rump Conventionists--John Mitchell Gets Great Ovation.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 22. — The charge that certain coal operators in Pennsylvania will pay from $25 to $150 monthly to members of the United Mine Workers who will turn traitors and work to destroy the organization marked the United Mine Workers international convention here on Saturday.

Francis Feehan, president of the organized miners in the Pittsburgh district, made the assertion during the progress of a debate over the seating of Robert Gibbons, Abraham Keverhart and James Sablac. Feehan asserted that Gibbons and his associates are not members of the union in good standing and that they have worked in opposition to the interest of the miners.

Gibbons had previously spoken and denied charges made against him. The delegates voted almost unanimously to unseat the Gibbons faction.

Feehan not only scored a victory in having these three men unseated, but he scored an earlier victory when the credentials committee reported in favor of the seating of two Feehan men, William Smart and F. P. Hennessy, also members of No. 5, who had been protested by Keyhart.

Delegates asserted that the re-establishment of the interstate joint wage conference was the most important action yet recorded in the present meeting. Replies received Saturday from Pennsylvania and Ohio operators indicate that they have agreed. The conference will be the first time since 1906 that a general conference of representatives of the miners and operators, from Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia has been held.

Since 1906, the Pennsylvania and Ohio operators have refused to attend. Conferences only with the district organizations would be agreed to.

The date of this joint conference is now unsettled. It was originally fixed for Thursday, January 25. A whole day however, was lost with the Gibbons-Feehan contest.

Another day will be occupied tomorrow with a defense of their action as delegates by former President John Mitchell and Congressman W. B. Wilson, of Pennsylvania. That leaves only Monday and Wednesday for the Scale committee to make its arrangements and this will not likely be done by Friday or Saturday. It had been expected, too, that the anthracite scale would be settled "at the same time, but President George T. P. Baer sent word that the joint convention for that purpose would meet in the offices of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in New York, on February 27, and the Mine Workers agreed on that date.

John Mitchell's great popularity with the convention was attested last Friday when the tellers read their report of the miners' election which made known that John P. White had been re-elected president by a majority of 85,424; over Thomas L. Lewis, and that Mitchell had received 197,457 votes for delegate to the American Federation of Labor. Of the six other delegates chosen, President White got the highest vote, 91,256. Other delegates elected to the American Federation of Labor convention, as announced were as follows: Thomas L. Lewis, Ohio; Frank J. Hayes, John R. Walker and Duncan McDonald, Illinois, and William Green, Ohio.

The convention is grinding out a new constitution. The main feature of this instrument is that it calls for a convention every two years, instead of yearly, as at present, and this, of course, would give the officers a two years' term instead of one year. One of the reasons offered for the change is that the officers have just about got down to the conduct of the affairs of their office when they have to surrender the office to another, who has to begin all over again. Another and equally potent reason is the enormous expense the convention entails. It has been estimated it costs a total of $50,000 to run the convention for 15 days.

The scale committee got down to work Saturday afternoon and after an extended session, turned over to a sub-committee, to report Tuesday night, all the resolutions that had been received from the various locals with regard to a general advance and payment for work in and around the mines. It may be generally said that Illinois demands a 10 per cent increase, with Indiana in the same class, while Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia "demand an increase of 5 per cent. Each state too, demands a day of not more than eight hours, while some resolutions from all the states, demand a week of five days, or not more than five and one-half days. The eight-hour day is going to cause trouble, as in the proposed constitution there is here included not more than eight hours from bank to bank in each 24 hours, shall be worked by members of our local organization."

This means that in cases where, at present, after a miner has reached the mine, it takes 20, 30, 40, or more minutes to reach the actual place where he works, this necessary time shall not be taken from the eight hours. It also means that the operators must pay for all this time occupied in going to and coming from actual work. As the present agreement stands with Pittsburgh district No. 5, it reads as follows:

"That an eight-hour day means eight hours work in the mines at usual working places for all classes of inside day labor. This shall be exclusive of the time required in reaching such working places in the morning and departing from the same at night."

OPERATORS AGREE TO CONFERENCE.

An important meeting of coal operators was held in the rooms of the Pittsburgh Coal Operators' association last Thursday. It was attended by representatives of Ohio, Indiana and Western Pennsylvania. They wanted to come to some understanding as to what attitude they should take regarding the admission of illinois to a "wage-conference." To this was objected to, the Ohio and Pennsylvania operators being most emphatic in their stand. Indiana operators leaned a little more toward admitting Illinois again to the conference, and finally it was decided that a joint conference would be possible, provided it undertook to discuss only the wage rate. Local and State differences were to be left to the operators of each State to adjust with the miners' organizations in their own State.

In placing this matter before the meeting and later in authorizing that it be transmitted to John P. White, of the United Mine Workers, at Indianapolis, the following was adopted as the sense of the meeting:

"At a joint conference of the operators of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana convened in Pittsburgh today to consider the invitation for a joint conference on January 25, at Indianapolis, Ind., as per your letter of January 9, the following action was taken:

"Resolved, That we accept Mr. White's invitation and we will be at Indianapolis on the 25th of January, to negotiate a wage scale; with the understanding that the conference be restricted to a discussion of the question of eight operators and eight miners from each State represented."

The same was later put in form of a letter and addressed to President White.

Wages for unskilled labor in Mexico, which ten years ago were about 25 cents a day and have since slowly risen by a few cents, have now been raised to 50 and 60 cents. This applies particularly to mining and railway work.

The usual hours of work in Japan are twelve a day. Male workers of 14 get from 16 to 25 cents a day; those under 14 from 6 to 10 cents a day. Females over 15 are paid from 10 to 14 cents a day.

THE MINERS' CONVENTION

ASIDE from the ovation to John Mitchell and the sweeping victory won by President Feehan over his enemies in the Pittsburgh district, the chief feature of the national convention of United Mine Workers at Indianapolis the past week has been the improved outlook for wage settlement without strike. The miners of both the anthracite and the bituminous fields will demand an advance, but the threat of a great national strike is less serious than it was two or three weeks ago when the bituminous operators of several states were refusing to go into a conference if the illinois operators were included. During the past week the operators agreed to go in conference anyhow, and although several questions, aside from wage scales, are reserved, there has at least been progress toward a settlement by peaceful agreement.

The operators and miners of the bituminous fields will meet today in Indianapolis to consider a new wage scale to go into effect April 1. A new wage contract between the mine owners and workers of the anthracite field, also to be in force from April 1, will be negotiated at a conference February 27, at the office of the Central Railway of New Jersey, in New York. The two joint wage conferences were announced last Saturday by President John P. White to the convention, the Scale Committee of which is preparing the miners' demands.

Bituminous miners and operators of Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are to meet here, and the conference at New York will include employers and miners of all three of the anthracite districts of Pennsylvania.

President Feehan on Saturday and Monday virtually swept the Gibbons faction off the floor of the convention. Gibbons, Kephart and others of the so-called "insurgent" faction were denounced by Mr. Feehan as enemies of organized labor, and the convention after full hearing decided that they were not entitled to sit as delegates for the simple and sufficient reason that they are not members of the United Mine Workers of America. They have been duly and properly expelled and the expulsion stands.

GREED OF THE BUTTER TRUST.

ELGIN (Ill.) Board of Trade, otherwise known as the American butter trust, is making itself unduly conspicuous at a time when a wise trust would be seeking shelter. The eve of a presidential campaign offers a poor opportunity to trust magnates for further extension of their fields and enlarge profits. Their time for "lightening the screws" is after the election, when, under cover of the dark and silence, they have put through their candidates and purchased immunity and security for four years' more exploitation of the helpless masses. All of which the butter plunderbund appears to have forgotten in advancing the price of butter 10 cents at Elgin, which means almost prohibitive price at practically every large city in the United States (the Elgin price fixing the prices everywhere.)

It is to be trusted our contemporary, the Washington Post, is well-advised by its counsel when it declares that not even the Sherman law is required to stop this arbitrary advance of the price of such a necessary commodity. Our contemporary continues. "The common law covers the case very clearly, making plain the punishment due to the officials acted upon those who enter into an agreement to fix the price of any necessity of life. A similar case was tried several years ago in Philadelphia, when a number of dealers in ice were haled into court and charged with having entered into an agreement to fix the price of that commodity. All were found guilty and heavily fined. Under the law they might have been sent to jail." Unfortunately, it would seem as if only the courts at Elgin can reach the offenders in the case now under consideration.

Our Washington contemporary makes the entirely practicable suggestion that the executions of the Elgin board are a strong argument in favor of the establishment of a parcels post system. At the present time the consumer is at the mercy of the board. It is certain that the farmer who makes the butter gets nothing like 40 cents a pound for it. The profits go to the hands of the middlemen. With a parcels post system in operation the city residents might contract direct with the farmer for his butter and egg supply and receive fresh farm products by the morning mail. Then it would be certain that the weather, and not the greed of an irresponsible board, was regulating the price of the commodity.

GREAT BRITAIN'S COAL STRIKE.

COAL miners of Great Britain by a vote of nearly four to one have agreed upon a general strike. A coal miners' strike in any country is likely to have grave consequences. In some degree, directly or indirectly, it affects every industrial nation. In Great Britain a long continued tie-up of the collieries would be a national calamity. In addition to the industrial losses, the inconvenience and discomforts that would follow, it would make the dread of a foreign war even more real and acute than it is. The question of national defense would become much more serious should a coal famine, or even a long continued shortage, ensue. That great navy which the British have built and maintain to guard their dominions must have coal. Without it the dreadnoughts, cruisers and destroyers are useless. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, while other departments of the government are preparing to make the most determined efforts to prevent the strike, the admiralty is anxiously seeking coal supplies elsewhere, and Englishmen generally are experiencing a feeling of considerable apprehension. In the end it can be depended on the strike will be avoided if vigorous intervention by the government can prevent it and it is doubtful if the coal operators will care to antagonize the government at this time.

ROOSEVELT'S LABOR LAW UPHELD.

THE Federal Supreme Court's decision upholding the constitutionality of the employers' liability law covering the railroads of the country recall's the controversy between Colonel Roosevelt and the late Judge (now Governor) Baldwin of Connecticut. Colonel Roosevelt may, in fact, feel that the opinion of the federal justices entitles him to phone himself. In overruling the decision by which the then Judge Baldwin undertook to overthrow the act and deny its protection to hundreds of thousands of railroad employes, the Supreme Court does not use language as vigorous as that which Colonel Roosevelt used in criticising Judge Baldwin. But the court is fully as positive as Colonel Roosevelt was in declaring Judge Baldwin wrong at every point.

Baldwin was wrong in holding that Congress had not the power to abolish the "fellow servant" rule of the common law, under which an employe cannot recover for injuries due to the negligence of a co-worker. He was wrong in holding that under the constitution a worker must assume all the risk of his employment. He was wrong in holding that Congress had no constitutional right to abolish the rule of "contributory negligence," by which heretofore a worker was prevented from recovering damages where his own negligence contributed to his injuries.

When Judge Baldwin rendered the decision which practically nullified the employers' liability act of Connecticut, Colonel Roosevelt was in the midst of his campaign for the presidency. He was then a candidate for the nomination on the Republican ticket. He was then a candidate for the nomination on the Republican ticket. He was then a candidate for the nomination on the Republican ticket

PASTOR RUSSELL TO CHINESE.

Pays Warm Tribute to Their Patient Courtesy—Examples to Christendom—The Preacher Pointed Out That the Hope for All People Is in Messiah's Kingdom—Those Who Have Faith in God's Promise Shall Be Blessed—Revelation of the Divine Power of the Lord.

HONG KONG, China, January 21.—The Foreign Missions Investigation Committee of the International Bible Students Association spent several days in Hong Kong, Canton and vicinity. For efficiency they divided, some giving more attention to one and the others to another phase of the missionary interest. They seemed well pleased with the treatment accorded them. Pastor Russell's address to the Chinese in their fine City Hall Auditorium was both helpful and encouraging. He declared that he came as a follower of Jesus and a friend to all humanity. He directed special attention to the words of Paul, the great Apostle, applicable to humanity in general and at the present time especially to the Chinese. "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now —waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God" (Romans viii. 22.) China's war experiences in recent years have been severe trials, particularly to a people of their temperament —peace preferring, gentle, courteous to each other and to foreigners.

Pastor Russell feared for them terrible experiences with anarchy, but they will have it merely in advance of other peoples—to all of which the promise as a result of discontent, inspired by greatly increased knowledge, combined with selfishness. The hope for all is in Messiah's Kingdom, now near at hand. Those who most quickly learn faith in God and justice and mercy toward others will soonest share the coming blessings. Some of us already share those coming blessings in the exercise of faith in the glorious promises of the Bible. The Pastor had been told that their courtesy of manner arose, not from love and sympathy, but from law and custom centuries old. He could not judge the heart, but had sincerely wished that some of the favored race of so-called Christendom possessed the larger degree some of the admirable traits of the Chinese, their respectful demeanor, quiet courtesy, their civility and energy.

It shall not be my mission, he said, to urge you to become identified with any sects or parties of Christendom, nor to recommend to you any of their creeds. Nevertheless, in all of their creeds there is more or less of the most wonderful truth which ever came to the ears of humanity, but, alas! in a darker period it became so mixed with human tradition as to be today dishonoring to God, offensive to the intelligence of many, and thus an offense to those who still accept those creeds. We can readily see reasons why you have not been more influenced by Christianity. You felt that you had as good or better than has been offered you. Very properly your heads and hearts refused adherence and worship to One whom you were told had foreordained whatever comes to pass, had foreordained the eternal torment of your ancestors and of all mankind except a mere favored few. It is to your credit that you were not attracted by such a message, nor driven by such a fear.

THE GOD OF ALL GRACE.

I may never again have the opportunity of addressing you; let me therefore tell you now of another Christianity, of which probably you have never before heard, from the same Bible used by the missionaries here and confessed by us all to be God's Message, but at present a very different Message from that which any brother confess. I call them "brethren" because I assume that they are sincere in their presentations. I once held similar views. I once preached also the damnation and eternal torture of all who do not accept Jesus in the present life and become His footstep followers. I should be sympathetic toward them, and I am. Nevertheless, this must not hinder me from using this opportunity to make known to you the clearer light that now shines upon God's Word.

I find that the darkness of error which beclouded my eyes of understanding came from the creeds and that the Bible most beautifully and most simply presents a God of all Grace, a Father of Mercies, from whom cometh every good and every perfect gift, and with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. (James i. 17.) I know from my examinations of our religious books that the Bible alone presents His God of kindness, compassion and sympathy. All other gods are full of pride, anger, hatred, malice, and no kind appeasement to avert their fury.

The God of the Bible, the true God of Christianity, is All Loving, All Kind, Ever-Merciful, and tells us so. It is a great fallacy which declares that He has damned humanity to a hell of torture at the hands of fire-proof demons. On the contrary, the Bible declares that the wages or penalty of sin is death, and that this is the explanation of the general prevalence of human weakness and frailty, mental, moral and physical—death, in our text St. Paul tells us that the whole creation—all mankind—are groaning and travailing in pain now because of sin and its death penalty. This has been in progress for six thousand years. It comes not through Divine persecution of His creatures, but by natural laws of heredity passing on the weakness, mental, moral and physical, from parent to child, from generation to generation, by a law of nature. God has simply permitted this Law to take its course in disobedient man.

DOES GOD PITY US?

You may perhaps ask me if the God one is loving, generous and kind does not pity humanity in its present dying condition, even though we have come into this state through the violation of Divine law. Could not a God of Love do something for our aid?

That, my dear friends, is exactly what I wish to point out. The Bible declares that the Divine Law broken, its sentence must stand unless in some manner justly satisfied. If a perfect man could be found, willing to sacrifice his life in reparation for father Adam's disobedience and forfeited life, then God could be just and accept the sacrifice and allow Adam and the remainder of his race to be free from the death sentence. But no such perfect man could be found. There is none righteous, no, not one. All were born in sin; none therefore could give to God a ransom for his brother, as the Scriptures declare. (Psalm xlix. 7.) What then? God figuratively represents His sympathy, saying that He looked down in pity on our condition and He hearkened to the groans of the prisoners of sin and death. He beheld that there was none that could pity or succor because all were under sentence. "Then His own eye pitied and His own Arm brought salvation." How beautiful are the pictures in these words, portraying to the groaning creation!

THE ARM OF THE LORD REVEALED.

The Arm of God means, symbolically, Divine Power. He revealed His Arm in the arrangement which He made for the payment of our death penalty, in the sending of His Son, the Man Christ Jesus, who, "by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." As a perfect man had redeemed, God provided a perfect man to be the Redeemer, "that as by man came death, by a Man also should come the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so shall all in Christ be made alive, every man in his own order.—1 Corinthians xv, 22.

Do you now catch a glimpse of the mercy, the compassion, the love of the Christian God to us, who appeals to the heart as being different from any other god of whom you have ever had knowledge? Think of a God, Infinite in Power, as being careful of His fallen creatures, and providing, even at self-sacrifice, for their recovery!

But you will say, Where is the recovery? Are we not still sick, mentally, morally and physically—a dying race? What has the death of Jesus accomplished for us? That is a good question; the answer to it will bring you much enlightenment respecting God's loving character and glorious Plan for humanity. The Bible teaches us that Jesus, who redeemed mankind, is to be made the great King, whose Kingdom shall dominate the whole world—"under the whole heavens." (Daniel vii. 27.) It will not be an earthly kingdom; nor will the King be visible to men, even as God is not visible, because He is a Spirit. The great Messiah will be invisible. He will be invisible because He is a Spirit. "The express Image of the Father's person." (Hebrews i. 3.) The Kingdom will be exercised through human agencies and it will increase and spread until all shall know God truly, and until every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to Him—and those who will reject His grace shall perish totally in the Second Death.

WAITING FOR THE SONS OF GOD.

My text declares that the relief for the groaning creation waits for the manifestation of the sons of God. We have learned from the Bible that the preeminent Son of God, died for our sins and ascended to the right hand of Divine Majesty, where He is waiting and meantime the groaning creation must wait. Those who will reject His grace shall perish totally in the Second Death.

THE NON-ELECT ALSO EXHORTED

The wonderful blessings of our day, which make it so different from any other Epoch in the world's history, have reached even here to China, and we now see what should be the work of the beginning of wonderful things. Evidently Divine Power, within the past century, has been lifting the veil, because we are just on the threshold of the new Dispensation —because the Church (the elect sons of God) is about complete—because the manifestation of the sons of God for the aid of the groaning creation" is at hand—because Messiah's Kingdom glory is about to be ushered in. The blessings of the present are only a foretaste of those glorious blessings for the world of mankind. Oh, what compensations our loving God has provided for all the lessons of sin and sorrow, pain and death! He has promised that the former things shall be removed, nor can the mind comprehend what the glory of the future things will be!

So then, to the patient, persevering, civil Chinese, my message is an assurance that God's blessing is nigh at hand. For eighteen centuries He has been pouring out His Holy Spirit upon these saintly ones, His servants and handmaidens, and they comfort and joy and preparation for the Kingdom glory. The next thing in order is the pouring out of His spirit upon all flesh; that will include your race and all the families of the earth.

I cannot hope that many of you will rest down to become footstep followers of the lowly Nazarene, and even if many of you should so desire, we have the assurance of the Scriptures that the entire number will be but a "little flock," but I do set before you the glorious prospects of human restitution to all that was lost by Adam, to all that was redeemed at Calvary. I admonish you that all development of character you may make at the present time means so much of preparation and advancement for the future, and that all violation of conscience and antagonism to the principles of righteousness will work to your disadvantage in the future.

Therefore, as the Scriptures enjoin, "Seek meekness, seek righteousness: it may be that ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's wrath." (Zephaniah ii. 3.) The day of Divine anger and special retribution is to the close of this Age, at the inauguration of the Kingdom.

The whole world of mankind will then be transferred into the hands of Messiah, who will take them just as they are. They will be in various conditions. Some will be more depraved, others less depraved; some will be more seared in their consciences and some less; and these deficiencies of character will depend upon the way in which each one accepted or rejected this grand opportunity in the present time.

The selfishness which has marked the world's experiences, particularly within the past half century, is very reprehensible in God's sight, and Christendom, so highly favored of God, is to be held proportionately responsible. Hence the great time of trouble will also be more severely upon Christendom. When you shall perceive this, call not against Christianity, but realize that the Scriptures are being fulfilled, and that the darkness will be but temporary, and that behind it is hidden the most glorious vista of human blessing possible for the human mind to conceive. Be prepare for it and especially seek to know the God of All Grace.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

North Carolina, Jan. 5.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

In the International Sunday School Lesson for December 31, 1911, Mr. William E. Ellis declares that "labor and religion movement" is proving a failure because "the bulk of our people do not heed."

Could I convey my sentiments to Mr. Ellis and to others I would say:

The main reason is—men are not interested in religion. Men are interested in politics. Men are not studying about religion, but money, politics and popularity.

Religion thrown among men all my life I have made them a study to some extent. Mention religion to the average man and he will look at you in astonishment. Not long ago I was talking to a man about Russian workers and I found that he was a little interested in religious matters, along the same line of my way of seeing things, I thought I had some good material to work on, but to my surprise this man has shunned me ever since. Why? Because the man feels humiliated to be identified with religion! That may sound funny to Mr. Ellis but it's a fact.

Ninety-nine men out of a thousand are ignorant concerning the Bible. There are not one man in a thousand that cares anything about the Bible and religion. But how many men what he thinks about the preachers and he will tell you that he thinks that are all hypocrites, that they are preaching for the money. What could the "Men and Religion Movement" accomplish by taking to the people that same old horrible nightmare of eternal torture? Nothing. Oh, well, says the average preacher, "we don't care what you believe just so you join some church of the church." That may sound heavy to "The Men and Religion Movement," but it won't bring the desired result.

Now I must not take up too much of your space and time, I will but say that "The Men and Religion Movement" is a fake. God is not dealing with men now. "He hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness." Acts 17: 30, 31. Then there will be a successful movement inaugurated that will be a grand success. "The everlasting gospel." Rev. 14: 6. That will get the men saved—They will come a-running too!" Yours for "the times of refreshing." Acts 3: 19.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

As we are entering upon a new year may I ask for a little space in your valuable paper to express my thankfulness for your boldness in giving so much space to such inspiring reading as Pastor Russell's Bernacle Sermons, the International Sunday School Lesson, Bible Questions and Answers, etc.

In reading these sermons there could be no comparison between them and others, nor could 52 sermons from other sources substitute one of the Brooklyn Tabernacle ones, according to my way of looking at it. I deplore that there are so little of that kind of preaching in our pulpits or churches throughout the world today.

If the truth were more appreciated and accepted than it is, the world would be a better one for all classes to live in; happiness and contentment would prevail all around us instead of selfishness and discontentment even under the imperfect conditions.

But as has been brought to our attention through said sermons, how glad should we not be to learn from God's own book, that the time is not far off, when these imperfect conditions shall be exchanged for or substituted with perfect righteousness inscribed through the Great Messiah, who shall rule and reign a thousand years for the blessing and uplifting of all nations, kindreds and tongues.

How beautifully this is expressed by the poet in the following verse:

"Now we are free there's no condamnation;
Jesus will soon perfect our salvation;
His Kingdom soon shall rule the earth,
Saving the willing from their fall."

With new years greeting.

Yours truly,

H. FINJORD.

Canada, Jan. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

My attention has been drawn to Pastor Russell's sermons in your paper. The extensive report which you give of the sermons highly pleases me and I herewith wish to place myself on your subscription list.

The writings of Pastor Russell have brightened my life and lead me to love my dear Master whom so many know not as they should. I trust that you, yourself, are being encouraged to look into God's word through the pastor's clear expositions so find the hope that will cheer you and give you joy unspeakable.

Thanking you, I remain, yours truly,

Editor National Labor Tribune:

The China Missionary "fizzle" was related in Hindsight. It is very apparent that this whole missionary business is about to explode. I am sending herewith a clipping on the "fizzle" that is manifesting itself in India, taken from the Weekly Infer Ocean, of December 22. The "fish" in the Euphrates are swimming in very shallow water. Soon the water gets so low as to expose a part of their backs "any" but they will squirm.

Appreciating your every effort to take the smoke out of our eyes, I am, Yours,

C. E. STEWART.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Dr. Evans, who has spent many years in India, said in a Free Church conference meeting recently that the reports sent home by missionaries are "cooked," so that the public may be induced to continue contributions.

"When I was out in India," he said, "complaints were made to me by missionaries in many parts of the country that reports they sent home on the unfavorable side of their work were trimmed—if published at all—so that they would not have an unfavorable effect on missionary contributions.

"The whole system of missionaries in India requires revising. Christianity in relation to the Indian is European garb, and the Bible is treated as a Western book. Many Indians have complained that Jesus Christ is pictured to them in a top hat and frock coat, which is not their ideal gentleman.

The principles of Christianity should be given to them with the Bible, and let them read and understand it in their own way.

"It is a well known fact in India that Christian servants are to be distrusted, that there is deception. They are not as truthful and honest as Mahometans and Hindoos, and it is native to wean drink it is ten to one he is a Christian. In fact, Mahometans and Hindoos are detested from religious convictions.

"Missionaries have complained that the sensitives of their particular missions at home write to them calling attention to the lack of practicalness of other denominations in their particular district—have sent home reports showing increased conversions, while their membership is stationary. They have found that these Christians migrate from one denomination to the other, and it is but natural that missionaries have flocks of varying dimensions."

Pennsylvania, Jan. 19.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am pleased with the large type, especially the way you print Pastor Russell's sermons. Also Bible Study Tabernacle Studies and Question Box. I like to read up on the labor news, also the news in your paper. While I have got my paper so far all right since December 15, yet you have not my name down on the list. Oh, my name is May Rich, not May Rice, as on the list. There are families of Rice's here in the neighborhood. I am afraid my paper will go astray unless name on paper is corrected. So please correct name.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. MAY RICH.

NEW GRAIN EVOLVED.

Black Winter Emmer May Help Solve the Food Problem.

A new grain known as black winter emmer has been evolved after years of study by Professor Buffum, who conducts an experiment farm in the Big Horn basin, near Worland, Wyo., in addition to solving the forage problem, set to speak of the general food problem of the world, says Chicago Tribune. The grain is somewhat larger than wheat and is a cross of wheat and several other lines known grains. It will grow in much drier soil than wheat, and four times as much can be grown to the acre. It weighs more to the bushel than wheat and, while hardly so fine as that grain for food purposes, may assist materially in solving the general food problem owing to its excellence and cheapness as fodder for the animals whose flesh figures on the dinner tables of men.

Emmer itself is not a novelty. It has been raised for many centuries and has been given much attention by farmers in Russia. It is believed that emmer, or spelt, was the cause of Ptiny, which he said was used by the Latins 300 years before they knew how to make bread. It is one of the primitive forms of wheat, but resembles barley in character, as it is bearded, and the grain is flatly held in the calyx.

UNLOADER FOR SHIPS.

Endless Chain Device For Handling Frozen Meat Carcasses.

An endless chain unloader designed for the handling of frozen meat carcasses is being used in unloading provision ships in English ports, says Popular Mechanics. Each crosspiece of the endless chain is provided with six hanging hooks on which the frozen carcasses are placed by the men working in the hold. Two or three men in the hold are all that are required to feed the unloader, and it automatically discharges the load into a large car next to the wharf alongside the ship. It is said that a whole cargo can be discharged by users of this arrangement in about a third of the time usually taken by hand.

UNLOADING FROZEN SHEEP.

Concrete Resembles Granite.

By the use of mica concrete work has been made that bears a striking resemblance to granite. For surfacing concrete it has proved very effective for this purpose, as it gives an artistic finish to the work and adds life and sparkle to the surface, inking away that flat, dead appearance that a foundation so requires. About five pounds of mica is sufficient to cover a hundred square feet. The electric light columns in Lincoln park, Chicago, were treated in this way. Crushed red granite was used with the mica, so that the finished surface has the appearance of polished granite. The granite and mica surfacing material were applied to the inner surface of the square iron trough in which the columns were cast, and after their removal the joints were scrubbed with mica, which removed the sand from the surface of the mica particles, when the surface showed a close resemblance to granite.

Meat Shrinkage in Cooking.

A recent consular report calls attention to the tests at the London selected exhibition which demonstrated that the shrinkage of meat when cooked in a coal range is somewhat greater than that of the same meat cooked in a gas range and considerably more than when cooked in an electric range. A leg of mutton weighing 5 pounds 8 ounces showed a shrinkage of 2 pounds 11 ounces when cooked in the coal range, whereas a leg of mutton weighing nine pounds showed a loss of 2 pound 4 ounces when cooked in an electric oven. The shrinkage for the gas oven was 2 pounds 4 ounces on an eight pound leg of mutton.

Bran in Bread.

An English commission has been looking into the subject of bread, and in reference to the use of whole wheat it finds that the presence of bran, which in the water, celestial of the wheat grain, may be advantageous in special cases, but in general it is an undesirable element in bread. The bran is indigestible of itself, and it interferes with the digestion of other nutritious factors in food. In the case of milk, for instance, 3 per cent less was found to be digested when it was taken with whole wheat bread than when taken alone or with white bread.

CYLINDRICAL LIFEBOAT.

Nonsinkable Motor Craft That Dives From Ship's Deck.

An Irishman after many disappointments believes he has perfected a nonsinkable, noncapsizable motor driven lifeboat which, something from a shape is in the nature of a dive, says Popular Mechanics. The boat resembles an exceptionally corpulent cigar and comprises a cylinder within a cylinder. The outside cylinder, which revolves freely with the action of the waves, is twenty-four feet long and seven feet in diameter. The inner cylinder, or cradle, in which the passengers and the propelling mechanism are carried is six feet in diameter and eighteen feet long, suspended at its two ends in the bulkheads situated at the rear end of the outer cylinder or shell. No matter how violent the rolling action of the outer parts, it is claimed that the passengers are guarded against it by the force of gravity acting upon their cradle. It is likewise claimed that forty persons may be carried.

The problems of providing fresh air supplying the exhausted air and driving the strange craft by motor power are met in the following manner: The fittings sealing into the inner cradle have a hollow center, through which is run an air tube with the outer end curved upward about two feet, so that it is well above the water. At the inner end of the tube is a small pump which, worked by the passengers, draws in the fresh air. The exhausted air is expelled in an ingenious arrangement of valves, which automatically close when the cylinder to which they are attached receives them beneath the water level. A number of these valves are always above the water line and open to the air. In the engine installation the exhaust is carried through the bearings to the open air. The operation of the propeller through the turning outer shell is simple. The propeller connection with the engine situated within the cradle, depends entirely upon gear wheels. Therefore it revolves entirely independent of the relative position of the inner and outer cylinders.

One of the most important features claimed for the boat is that it now stands is the fact that, instead of having to be lowered over the ship's side by tackle, where it would be in danger of being crushed by the heavy seas, it rests in a cradle from which it slides and dives into the sea when released. In the trials given at Toronto the boat, carrying passengers, was launched into the water, as shown in the illustration.

Graphite Made From Coal.

Graphite, the commonest use of which is seen in the "lead" pencil is almost pure carbon. This mineral is therefore only a step removed from coal, and in fact some of the natural graphite deposits are found in coal beds where the intrusion of masses of intensely heated liquefied igneous rock has metamorphosed the coal, thus forming graphite. An example of this natural manufacture of graphite out of coal is described in one of the reports of the United States geological survey on the Raton coal field of New Mexico. On the other hand, large quantities of high grade graphite are artificially manufactured direct from ordinary coal. In making lead pencils the graphite is mixed with a clay of fine grain, and the greater the proportion of the clay constituent the harder the pencil. Exceedingly soft pencils with large leads contain but little clay.

Wonderful Lakes.

On the Mangishlak peninsula, in the Caspian sea, there are five small lakes. One of these is covered with salt crystals strong enough to allow a man and horse to cross the lake on foot. Another is as round as any circle and of a lovely rose color. The banks of salt crystals form a setting as white as snow to the water, which not only shows all the colors from violet to rosy red, but from it also rises a perfume as of violets. Both the perfume and the color are the result of the presence of sea weeds.

Using Old Inner Tubes.

Do not throw away old tubes for scrap old inner tubes which have sound sections of unperished rubber. By saving the old valves and cutting out and sending the sound sections to a tire company they may be joined into a new tube, says Cycle and Automobile Trade Journal. While this joined tube does not have a good appearance, it will be found reliable of giving good service, and when the shoe is put on only the owner will know how the tube looks

VALUE OF WASTE WOOD.

Vast Storehouse of Treasure Waiting to Be Unlocked.

The conservation of natural resources is twin sister to the economic use of present waste materials, and in no case is this more obvious than in our forest products. In the waste wood of the south and northwest from the lumber industry there is more than sufficient material to yield annually all the papers (except news), paper and box board and building board requirements for which wood is suitable. Moreover, alcohol, acetate of lime and charcoal can be produced from it that is now made in the country, and large quantities of ethyl alcohol may also be recovered. There are millions of acres of cut over land covered with stumps and dead and down timber, all of which because of its unsound value decays very slowly, enduring for years.

The tops, stumps, slabs and sawdust dead and down timber from fires and storms furnish one of the great undeveloped resources of the country. From this waste wood the entire output of the Norway pine of the central north and Douglas fir of the northwest could be produced for the purely working them.—Agricultural Department Bulletin.

Huge Tank For Natural Gas.

The contract has been awarded and work is about to be undertaken on the largest tank for the storage of natural gas that has ever been built. It will be 250 feet in diameter and 208 feet in height when filled and will have a capacity of 9,000,000 cubic feet. The material of which it is built will weigh 5,000 tons. These tanks will be filled at night and during the day and the following day by the consumers of that part of Pittsburgh north of the Allegheny river.

IRISH FOX HUNTERS.

Their Horses Are Said to Be Wonders For Endurance.

"Fox hunting has thrived for centuries in Ireland" said a Belfast man. "It is the great sport among those who can afford it, and it hardly becomes a gentleman in our country not to have ridden to the hounds and been in at the death at some time.

"To follow the dogs on their hunt for the wily reynard is not child's play. It brings into play the most consummate skill as a rider, for one has to be able to stick to his horse through all kinds of going. Some of the fences are high, the jumps being much more formidable than those in the English country, but our horses are up to it. There is no finer horse in the world than the Irish hunter. It is of fine, wiry build, with the thoroughbred and the standard bred horse given as credit for having produced a wonderful equine. He can run and jump and pack a great load, and his endurance is beyond that of any other horse.

"The supply of foxes seems to hold out all right. There are plenty of them in Ireland among the presents there is a superstition that the fox knows his end and further enjoys it, for he likes to be hunted and to double on his tracks and watch his pursuers go by."—Detroit Free Press.

John Fell Secure.

There was a knock on the door in the midst of the parching, and the little globe trotter opened it to behold Jean Chinamon with her laundry bundle. "I'll not need you again, John. I'm going away to China," was the small boy explanation. "He go back some day, too," he replied. "Got wife and lil' boy in Canton. No see more 'fi year." The Manhattan girl, who was to accompany the little globe trotter on the several hour journey mirrored at this juncture. "Aren't you afraid your wife will run off with some other Chinese while you are away, John?" she asked. Without so much as vouchsafing a glance at the inquisitive he picked up his bundle and when he reached the door retorted, "My wife she no Melican woman; she Chinese lady."

CONSECRATION IN THE TEMPLE

Luke ii, 22-39—Jan. 28.

"For mine eyes have seen Thy salvation, which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people."—Lu. ii, 30, 31.

WHEN JESUS was forty days old, Joseph and Mary took Him to Jerusalem and presented Him in consecration in the Temple. This was in accordance with the custom which related specially to the first born in each family.

Although the first-born of the entire nation were passed over and the holy service from Egypt, they had been exchanged for the one tribe of Levi, which had been specially devoted to God's service; and the same principle was exemplified in respect to the first-born of each family. It was to be devoted specially to God and His service.

The significance of this we see when we remember that the elect Church being gathered during this Gospel Age, is styled the Church of the Firstborns. Again, St. James tells us that we are "a kind of first-fruits of a new creature." The clear light of Truth in all this is that after the church shall have been gathered to heavenly glory by the power of the First Resurrection, then there shall be established will bring blessings to all the families of the earth, giving them also the opportunity of becoming sons of God, on the earthly plane, by restitution processes.—Acts iii. 19-21.

"Now your eyes see my salvation."

"But For the Fall and Rising Again of Many in Israel."

At the time of the consecration ceremony at the Temple, an aged Prophet came forward and took the babe Jesus in his arms and praised God.

By some power Divine this aged Prophet recognized the child, and, after saying, "Now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation"—the way in which Thy salvation shall come to Israel and to all the families of the earth—he proceeded to say, "which Thou hast prepared in the presence of all people—the Light of the world and the Glory of Thy people Israel."

Simeon, addressing Mary, declared prophetically that the Child was "set for the fall and the rising of many in Israel, and for a sign (mark or standard), which shall be spoken against, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed."

How wonderful a prophecy! It reminds us of the words of St. Paul, that our Lord is "a stone of stumbling and rock of offence" to many in Israel, that many should be offended, disappointed. And St. Paul told also of the rising again of many who stumbled. He declares, "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded" (not to be blinded) aside from Divine favor.—Romans xi. 7.

Not a sufficient number of "Israelites indeed" received Him to make up the foreordained elect, and hence the Jewish nation went beyond Abraham's natural seed to gather during this Gospel Age the saints of every nation, people, kindred and tongue.

"All Israel Shall Be Saved."

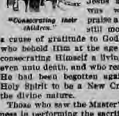
A saintly woman, Anna, a Prophetess over a century old, resided in Jerusalem and in the precincts of the Temple courts. She, also, moved by the Holy Spirit, recognized the Babe and gave praise to God and mentioned the matter to the saintly ones who were waiting for the redemption of the Abrahamic promise—"for the consolation of Israel."



"Consecrating their children to God."

If the seeing of Jesus as a babe was worthy of praise and thanks, all more was it a cause of gratitude to God for those who beheld Him at the age of thirty, consecrating Himself a living sacrifice even unto death, and who realized that He had been begotten again by the Holy Spirit to be a New Creature, of the divine nature.

Those who saw the Master's faithful ones in symbol at the time of their consecration during the three and a half years of His ministry beheld still more fully which is to be God's plan. And when He had finished His course at Calvary and was raised from the dead the third day, and forty days later ascended up on high where He was before, happy were they who recognized the glorious purposes of the Divine Plan for man's salvation—the blessing of all the families of the earth.

Still more blessed were those who at Pentecost received the Holy Spirit as a begetting power and those who since have received the same, evidencing that they are the children of God and, "if children, then heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ"—heirs of their Lord to the great inheritance—to the earth-bound promise made to Abraham, that through them all the families of the earth shall be blessed.

Q.—Is the doctrine of "the survival of the fittest" true, and is it in harmony with the teachings of the Scriptures? (Troglodyte.)

Answer.—The continued testimony of the evidences in nature, aside from the inspired revelations of the Scriptures is opposed to the theory of the best surviving the worst. In the realm of vegetation it is universally recognized that the finest flowers, fruits and vegetables, are produced only by the utmost care in training and cultivation. These, when varieties, if left to themselves, quickly deteriorate in quality, or else are entirely overborne by the weeds, thorns and briars. Even so not the same principle holds in the animal kingdom? High-bred horses, dogs, and cattle, if left without the guiding hand of man, quickly degenerate into lower breeds, or else are entirely destroyed by inferior species of animals. The same principle is true with the races of men, as all history demonstrates, and as foretold in the Scriptures. Beginning with the Babylonian Empire, which at last reached the very pinnacle of human glory, it fell in one night, yielding to the inferior kingdom of the Medes and Persians. These in turn yielded to the inferior Greeks, and with all her learning succumbed to the inferior Latin races. And what is now left of the mighty Empire of Rome which arose on the ruins of Greece? In the shattered remains of the Roman Empire, in the various nations of Europe and America, another mighty civilization has reared its crest to a vast height, but it also is doomed to overthrow (Daniel ii. 21-45.) This present evil world, with its conditions of "the survival of the fittest," is to pass away; and on its ruins will be established a new order of things, called "The world to come wherein is righteousness," in which "the survival of the fittest" will be absolutely true.—II Peter iii. 13.

Q.—What did Jesus mean when He declared, "There hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding, he that is least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than he?"—(I, 9, 8.)

Answer.—To understand this statement of the Master it is necessary to remember the clearly marked distinction between the different "Ages." John was the last of the Prophets and belonged to the dispensation which was closing. The Apostles and other followers of Jesus, on the contrary, belonged to the New Dispensation, which Jesus was inaugurating. The Gospel call is a call to participate in the Kingdom of God—Messiah's Kingdom. Our Lord Jesus is to be the Great King of the World during that coming age; and the Heavenly Father promises to select from among men a "little flock" to be our Lord's associates in the work of uplifting and blessing the world of mankind. The first to be accepted into this Kingdom condition received it by the spirit at Pentecost. Since then, all who similarly consecrate and are similarly begotten of the holy spirit are accepted as of the same class, namely, as members of the Kingdom class. If faithful through the trials and testings of the present life, these shall be "kings and priests unto God" and unto Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years for the uplifting and blessing of mankind. (Revelation i. 6; xx. 4.) The least of these in the view will have a higher station than John the Baptist or any of the Prophets of the preceding dispensation, for all of these will be spiritbeings on the spirit plane. On the contrary, while John, with all the faithful of the past, will have great blessings, yet, since they will be on the earthly plane, their blessings will be restitution blessings to human perfection, etc.

Q.—Are we to understand from the words of St. Peter (II Peter iii. 10) that the earth is to be burned up at some time or other? And what is the meaning of the expression "the elements shall melt with fervent heat?"

Answer.—The passage to which Q. St. Peter's prophecy doubtless refers to the social order of things or organized society, represented in the various forms of government now existing. In referring to the last times or the last days, our Lord foretold a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation—Matthew xxiv. 21, and the Scriptures in general show that this "trouble" will be developed, and that it will be so destructive in character that it will result in the dissolution of the present evil, selfish, social structure, preparatory to the establishment of the "new earth"—verse 13—founded upon principles of equity, justice and love. The "elements" which constitute the present "earth" or social order, are the various social classes, the capitalistic element, the labor element, etc. Who can not see that the friction existing between the various elements is constantly increasing, and that it is a question of but a short time when the "fire" has done its work the Lord will "then" turn to the people a pure language.—Zephaniah iii. 8, 9.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED UNDER THIS COLUMNS, OR BY MAIL IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL.

Q.—Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in His Kingdom."—Matthew xvi. 28. Does this mean that some living at that time would continue to live on until the Lord's second advent? (C. W.)

Answer.—The word "Kingdom" properly rendered is royal majesty. Considering the narrative on down into the next chapter, it is stated that six days afterwards, the Lord took Peter, James and John and went apart from the rest of the disciples, up into a high mountain, and was there transfigured before them. His face was gloriously illuminated and became as resplendent as the sun, while His raiment was white as the light. The royal majesty of the Lord's appearance, together with the "brightness" of Moses and Elijah, and the bright cloud overshadowing all, formed an overwhelming arrangement of "power and glory" which Peter, John afterwards, in writing of this glorious scene, declared that they were eyewitnesses of the majestic royal honors of the Lord Jesus, and that they also heard the voice of the Heavenly Father owning Christ's royal majesty and glory.—II Peter i. 16-18. In this way Matthew xvi. 28, was fulfilled. None were condemned to live until Christ's second advent.

Q.—What becomes of the soul at death? Does it fly away, as a bird, the body one does it fly away, in a disembodied state, and go somewhere else, so to speak), at the resurrection? (J. A. G.)

Answer.—There is much confusion of thought regarding this matter. Many are disposed to express the matter in terms of saying that they have a soul in place of saying that they are a soul. There is considerable difference in having a view and being a view! All living beings are souls from the Scriptural standpoint. (Genesis i. 20-30; ii. 7.) When Father Adam disobeyed the Lord, it was not his body, the dust of the ground that sinned. Neither was it the energizing principle, the breath of life, that sinned. But it was Adam himself, the living intelligent being, the soul, that sinned. Therefore, it was the soul that died as the Scriptures declare, "The soul that sinneth it shall die."—(Ezekiel xviii. 4.) In the resurrection, it is the soul that is to be resuscitated. "Thou will not leave my soul in Sheol —the tomb"—was spoken of our Lord Jesus.

Q.—If the dead are asleep in the graves awaiting the time of the resurrection at Christ's second advent, when all who are in their graves shall be awakened and shall come forth, as the Scriptures affirm; how shall we understand the experiences of some who are at the time of their departure from this life, see heavenly visions of the glory and hear the strains of celestial music? (W. E. D.)

Answer.—As it is emphatically set forth throughout the Scriptures, that the dead are "asleep" "in their graves," and that "the dead know not anything," "for there is neither wisdom, nor device, nor knowledge in the grave whither thou goest," and that all will remain in the state of death until the awakening time, when "all who are in their graves shall come out at the voice of the Son of God," we must conclude that the dying ones did not enter at once into Heaven; and that what they saw was not an actual glimpse of celestial glories, but merely a phantasmagoria induced by an extreme condition of the imaginative power of the mind, with a correspondingly dormant state of the reasoning faculties. The Lord Jesus declared at His first advent that no one had ascended into Heaven; and the Apostle says that the saints now will be awakened and changed at the second advent.—See John iii. 13; I Corinthians xv. 51, 52.

Q.—Can you explain these two passages of Scripture: John i. 18, "No man hath seen God at any time;" and John xiv. 9, "Ye that have seen me, have seen my Father also?" (L. M.)

Answer.—The first expression should be understood in the concrete sense. No mortal being could see the Lord God and live—Whom no man hath seen, nor can see." The last expression is to be understood in harmony with the first, should be considered in the abstract. As it was impossible for the Lord's followers to actually see God, the Heavenly Father, the only way then in which they could see God was in the representative sense. Our Lord Jesus fully and perfectly represented the Father. He was God manifest in the flesh. The Father's love and mercy, justice, and wisdom, were all manifest in the life and teachings of the Lord Jesus. Those then, who became acquainted with the Lord Jesus, were made acquainted with the Father. The Lord Jesus never claimed to be the Heavenly Father personally; but always taught that He was the Son of God. The Scriptures declare that God and His only begotten Son into the world. God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself in the same sense in which He will be "all in all" when the Son shall have delivered up the Kingdom to the Father at the close of Christ's Millennial reign.—I Corinthians xv. 17, 28.

WORKERS IN MILLS TREATED LIKE SLAVES

Department of Commerce in a Report for Transmission to U. S. Senate Confirms Serious Charges Concerning Conditions Prevailing in Certain Departments of Steel Industry--Bethlehem Strike Occasioned the Investigation--Many Men Work 84 Hours a Week.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Following a sweeping investigation covering almost everything concerning the steel manufacturing industry in the United States, the Department of Commerce and Labor in a report now ready for the Senate accuses practically every plant of maintaining a system of labor as cruel, relentless and unnecessary as the galleys of ancient time.

Making the direct statement that these corporations have instituted a policy of eliminating the skilled artisan and putting in his place the lowest form of unskilled workmen, who is paid 14 cents per hour, the report states that the men were forced to remain on duty without relief as long as twenty-four hours at a stretch and that in some plants eighteen-hour shifts are the rule rather than the exception.

One-fifth of the 173,000 employes of blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills work eighty-four hours, or twelve hours a day, for seven days per week. Many of them go to their homes "only to eat and sleep."

In May, 1910, the period covered by the investigation, it was found that 55,000 furnace and steel mill employes worked regularly seven days a week and that 34,000 worked eighty-four hours or more a week.

"A due significance attaches to the conditions of labor here described," says the report, "when we consider that the general tendency for years past has been toward a shorter working day."

"Years ago the ten-hour day became almost a standard; since that time further reductions have brought the working day to nine, and in many cases to eight hours, and this reduction has been accomplished by a partholiday on Saturday. It is, therefore, in striking contrast to the general tendency in other industries to find in a great basic industry such as that part of the iron and steel industry covered in this report, that approximately only 14 per cent of the 173,000 employes worked less than sixty hours per week and almost 43 per cent worked seventy-two hours or over per week.

"Another striking characteristic of the labor conditions in the iron and steel industry is the large proportion of unskilled workmen in the labor force. Not far from one-half of the 91,463 employes in the furnace, iron and steel occupations included within this investigation were of the class of unskilled workmen. In the blast furnace department more than two-thirds of the 47,227 employes in productive occupations were unskilled employes, a large proportion of whom do not speak or understand English."

The investigation was authorized by a Senate resolution following the revelations that progress received in the strike at the Bethlehem Steel Company's plant two years ago.

Attention is called to the fact that, while there is a metallurgical necessity for continuous operation of the blast furnaces, no such necessity exists in other departments, even the seven-day week has also been the rule.

In some cases the hardship of the twelve-hour day and 84 seven-day week is added to by a change from day to night work and vice versa, at the end of the week, one crew of men having to work a shift of twenty-four hours to make the change.

It is also pointed out that, at the time of the investigation of the Bethlehem works in 1910, the President of the Steel Corporation directed the rigid enforcement of a resolution adopted three years previous, cutting out a large part of Sunday work, except in the blast furnace department.

"Since the beginning of the present investigation," says the report, "this matter of abolishing seven-day work for the individual employes in the blast furnace, as well as in other departments of the industry, has received the attention of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and a plan has been proposed which gives each employe one day of rest each week and does away with the twenty-four or the eighteen hours of consecutive work."

This plan, it is stated, has been successfully operated by several plants throughout the country.

The report shows that of the 172,706 employes, 73,539 had a working week of seventy-two hours or more. Over one-fourth of all the employes had a regular working week of more than seventy-two hours. Over 25,000 had a working week of eighty-four or more hours, while only 14.29 per cent had a working week of less than sixty hours.

"Nothing has been said by the manufacturers," continues the report, "nor have any proposals been made by them for the proportion of men working seventy-two hours or more per week, or at least twelve hours a day for six days a week. The proportion as shown in this investigation (43 per cent) remains unchanged, being unaffected by the plan to give the men who were working eighty-four hours or other industries depend—will be placed upon a more stable basis. In the meantime, there is believed to be a substantial promise of a peaceful settlement of the mining scale before April 1, on which date the present scale expires.

FREE TRADE STEEL BILL PASSES.

TARIFF bill which reduces the duties of steel 58 per cent and generally leaves American steel mills without protection against the low-paid labor of Europe was jammed through the House of Representatives at Washington by the Democratic majority on Monday evening. Republican members wished to debate a measure of such tremendous effect upon American industry, but the Democratic leaders gagged them and the bill was passed without discussion, for the simple reason that discussion would have made too plain the harmfulness of the measure and the dangers of its enactment. In view of the fact that these same Democratic leaders have consumed months in debating some trivial resolution when they were themselves the minority, their gagging the Republican minority last evening convicts them of the most reckless inefficiency. As for the 21 so-called Republican "insurgents", who voted for the bill in the absence of any reliable data showing how much reduction there can be in steel duties without destroying protection, they are traitors to the platform upon which they were elected, and have no right to call themselves Republicans. If, as is now feared, the bill will be passed in the Senate also by the aid of "insurgent" votes, President Taft cannot too promptly veto it. The issue of protection of American industry has been made the paramount issue of the presidential campaign. The Republican party should not fear to fight the battle upon it.

GIVE MEN WORK.

RABBI JOSEPH KRAUSKOPF of Philadelphia in an address last week in Kansas City excited considerable comment by declaring: "When a great mass of people clamor for bread, it is idle to hope they will be calmed by reports of the tens of millions of dollars given for the study of Greek, Latin or Hebrew. In well-regulated homes cake and candy are not served before the staples of life. May we not exempt the philanthropists the wisdom displayed by the average housekeeper?"

Rabbi Krauskopf's plan is colonization on western farms. Without saying a word against the building of public libraries and the endowment of colleges by our multimillionaires, one may still admit that there is much force in Rabbi Krauskopf's criticism. The mind must be nurtured, but so must the body. It is all right to give the people libraries and colleges but first let us give them work. Their demands for the latter must be met. If the existing social and economic system cannot find work for all who are able and willing to work, it is a failure and cannot last much longer. The man who thinks otherwise is simply unable to read the signs of the times. At the present moment immortality is waiting for the philanthropist who works out a practicable scheme of western colonization and induces his brother magnates to aid him in putting it within the power of tens of thousands of workmen to take advantage of it.

Portland, Or., the other day furnished an object lesson in illustration of Rabbi Krauskopf's remarks. Packed together like cattle, in the railway yards of the city were 127 men, mostly of the homeless class, who had been arrested on the charge of vagrancy. Upon the recommendation of the committee and President John P. White, the convention accepted the terms of the operators in confining the joint committee to eight representatives from each side from the five states connected with the interstate joint movement.

A recommendation that the demands of the tridistrict convention, composed of districts 1, 17 and 2, held at Pottsville, Pa., November 21, 1911, be made a part of the demands of the convention was passed. International officers were instructed to co-operate with the districts in the make the demands effective. These will be presented to the anthracite operators at a joint conference in New York on February 27. The demands of the anthracite districts, in brief, follows:

A one-year contract; a workday of not more than eight hours; a demand for a 20 per cent increase of wages over those awarded in 1902; a minimum scale of $3.00 a day for miners and $2.75 a day for laborers engaged in construction work, and a demand that coal be mined and paid for by the ton of 2,240 pounds, wherever practicable. The latter recommendations were passed by the convention.

The formulating of formal demands to present to the mine operators was accomplished with less friction on the convention floor than had been anticipated. The delegates worked hard today in completing what is considered the most important task of the present convention, and even then the work was not completed until the rules and order of business were suspended, that an extra hour might be used for consideration of the report after the regular time of adjournment.

Bituminous Wage Demands.

The wage demands of the bituminous miners follows:

1. That all coal be weighed before being screened, and paid for on the mine run basis, and that the readjustment of the prices be made on the basis of the actual percentage of screenings as compared with lump coal.

2. That we demand a flat 10 cents a ton increase at the basing points.

3. Twenty per cent increase on all dead work, yardage and day labor.

4. Uniform two-cent wage scale for all classes of outside and inside day labor.

5. Uniform readjustment of the machine differential at the basing points in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

6. That a uniform day of seven hours shall be the working pace for all classes of inside labor be made the basis of the above scale, based on present prices.

7. That seven hours constitute a day's work on Saturday.

8. We demand weekly payments. The coal companies shall not be permitted to have more than two days' wages held in their offices at any one time.

9. We demand that there shall be no limit to the amount of deductions made through the companies' offices for the miners' organization.

10. We demand that there shall be no discrimination by the coal companies in the employment of mine workers on account of creed, color or nationality.

11. We demand that all local inequalities and internal differences be referred to the districts affected.

12. We demand that this contract shall be entered into for a period of two years, becoming effective April 1, 1912.

It by a foregone conclusion that the operators will refuse to grant the demands of the miners. They always do.

Then a sub-committee of the joint scale committee will be appointed, consisting of two operators and two miners from each district. This joint scale committee will hold secret sessions to fight it out. If this joint committee agrees on a scale it will report back to the joint conference for ratification.

It will be noted that the scale committee did not make any recommendation in regard to the policy to be pursued in case of a disagreement. That was left open for the convention to handle. But there is known to be a strong sentiment against a strike of a general strike on April 1 in case a part of the districts are failed to sign up. This sentiment which is found in almost every district, is explained by some of the miners to mean that district settlements will be possible in case of a disagreement of the joint committee.

The operators present from Pittsburgh were Mrs. W. K. Field, John Donaldson, G. W. Schluederberg, J. T. M. Somerod, W. W. Kester, W. A. Luce, Lawrence Stevenson, J. M. Laing, J. O'Neil and S. A. Taylor, of the Pittsburgh Operators' Association. From a canvass of the operators it was evident that they did not expect to effect a settlement before the expiration of the present scale, on April 1. "At least," said one of them, "such an action would be a great surprise."

The eight delegates from the Pittsburgh miners who acted as the miners' representatives in the scale discussion are: Francis Feehan, Van Bittner, Stephen Lesko, Patrick Gadway, James Charlton, William Harpest, John O'Leary and Sidney Davis.

By action taken at the meeting of the United Mine Workers of America on Tuesday morning, after the usual annual elections international officers will be chosen biennially instead of annually, as has been the custom in the past. A report of the constitution committee to this effect was embodied in the new constitution after a long debate, in which an effort was made to keep the clause out of the constitution until it had received the indorsement of the membership through a referendum vote.

Almost the entire day was devoted to hearing of the constitution committee's report. Two hours were spent in debate during the afternoon session discussing an article that fixed the salaries of officers for the year. The following will be the salaries of officers for the next year: President, John F. White, $2,000; vice president, Frank J. Hayes, $2,500; secretary-treasurer, Edwin Perry, $2,500; Michael Halapy, editor of the Mine Workers' Journal, in case of a reappointment, $2,500; members of the international executive board, $4 a day; delegates, auditors and delegates to the American Federation of Labor, $4.50 a day while employed.

There was a sharp fight on the section which defined the requirements for eligibility of members to hold international offices. The constitution committee in its report recommended that only men who have been members of the organization for three con-

SHOCKING CHARGES ABOUT CHILD LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Several surprising statements were made in the Senate yesterday in a debate on a bill proposing the creation of a national children's bureau in Washington, the object of which will be to collect information concerning dependent children.

Senator Overman, of North Carolina, a notorious child labor man, said that a few years ago Congress had appropriated money to investigate the conditions under which women and children are employed in factories and mines. The result of this expenditure, according to his view, was a report so offensive to many communities that part of it was suppressed.

Senator Gallinger, veteran reactionary, added that he himself had read some of the report and blue-penciled it, as he evidently didn't agree with it.

Senator Overman declared that the report had charged that in one county of the south there was not a virtuous woman. He added the government investigation had pictured the small children as going about naked and chewing tobacco. But he didn't explain that this was due to the small wages paid the parents of the children, with the resulting poor conditions.

Didn't most of the complaints against the report come from the owners and operators of cotton mills in the south?" inquired Senator Dixon, of Montana, a backer of the bill.

Senator Overman replied that the complaints received had come mainly from people in the counties of North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia in which no mills were located.

Senator Dixon brought out the fact that North Carolina now permits children to work eleven hours a day in the mills.

Senator Borah, who is in charge of the bill, maintained that the important thing about the report was as to the truth. He believed the only way

JUDGE HOOK, JURIST WHO PLEASED THE PRESIDENT.

WILLIAM CATHER HOOK, conspicuously mentioned as successor to John Marshall Harlan on the supreme court bench, is a comparatively young man for such high judicial honors. He was born in Pennsylvania in September, 1857. He was educated at Leavenworth, Kan., which has been his home since boyhood, and was graduated from the St. Louis Law school in 1878. He has served successively as United States district judge for the Kansas district and as Judge of the Eighth federal circuit. In the latter court, as one of the four judges in the Standard Oil and Harriman merger cases, he became for the first time a national figure and the more so since his dissenting opinion in the merger case was the basis for the government's appeal to the supreme court, before which it will be argued on Feb. 19. It is understood that Judge Hook's views as expressed in these cases gave much satisfaction to President Taft.

MINERS MAKE KNOWN THEIR SCALE DEMANDS.

Will Insist on an Advance of Ten Cents a Ton for Mining and of 20 Per Cent for Day Labor, With a Seven-Hour Day and Weekly Payments--Scale Must be for Two Years--Operators Declare They Will Not Agree to the Conventions Demands, and a Long Wrangle in Conference Sub-Committee is the Prospect.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 29.—Following long debates, the report of the wage scale committee of the United Mine Workers of America was accepted almost without alteration last Friday afternoon by the convention of mine workers.

A committee composed of eight delegates from each of the five states connected with the interstate joint movement will meet as many operators tomorrow afternoon in an open joint conference, in which work will begin to settle wage scale disputes affecting virtually every bituminous mining district of the country. Upon the recommendation of the committee and President John P. White, the convention accepted the terms of the operators in confining the joint committee to eight representatives from each side from the five states connected with the interstate joint movement.

A recommendation that the demands of the tridistrict convention, composed of districts 1, 17 and 2, held at Pottsville, Pa., November 21, 1911, be made a part of the demands of the convention was passed. # Pastor Russell's Sermon

ALL MANKIND TO BE BLESSED.

The Glory of God Shall Fill the Whole Earth—The Gospel of the Kingdom. Pastor Russell, at Singapore, Declares the First Work of the Messiah's Reign Will Be the Binding of Satan—Error, Ignorance and Superstition Will Be Scattered and Obliterated—Heathen and Christian Alike Shall Be Saved.

SINGAPORE, Jan. 23.—Pastor Russell's text was, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted of Him."—Acts 10: 34, 35. A report of his address follows:—

Never before have I seen so cosmopolitan a city as Singapore. The swarms of Chinese, Malays, Hindoos, Javanese, Siamese, Singhalese, Burmese, Afghans, Madrasei, Tamils and many other nationalities are here attempered by representatives of practically every nation in the world. Henceforth New York City must in my mind take second place as respects cosmopolitan population. The sight of these commingled peoples, only a few of whom know of worship, or in any wise acknowledge "the Only True God, and Jesus Christ whom He hath sent," stirs my heart, and my head as well. My heart goes out in sympathy for them. My head inquires respecting God's provision for the three-fourths of humanity who have never heard of Him and the salvation which He has provided in Christ.

We recognize the clear statement of the Apostle that "Without faith it is impossible to please God" (Heb. 11: 6; 4: 2); and his question, "How shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard?" (Romans x. 14) and also the commission: "The Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness; and then shall the end come" (Matthew xxiv. 14.) Properly enough we ask, What kind of an end is coming, and what will it means to the twelve millions who know not God and to the thousands of millions of their ancestors who died similarly ignorant of Him?

I am, of course, familiar with the diverse theories of the various denominations of Christians, voiced by their creeds. I defer to them to the extent of saying that many godly men are today and have in time past been associated with these Christian denominations and their differing presentations. On account of their piety and learning these men deserve respectful attention, but we cannot admit that they were inspired nor that their conclusions are infallible. It is our privilege, nay, it is our duty, to try their suggestions as we would test a gold coin. First, we would ring it. If the ring were unsatisfactory, we would apply the world test and this demonstrate it. Similarly, no human creed should be accepted as infallibly correct without the application of tests. Does it have the right ring? Does its teaching comport with the Divine character? Is it reasonable, just, etc.? Secondly, Will it stand the acid test of the Word of God? If not, it must be rejected, even though its baser metal be covered with a plating of the gold of Truth.

TRIED AND FOUND WANTING.

It will not do for us to say what we guess or what is our opinion or what is somebody's else's guess, while at the same time we acknowledge that faith is to be the Divine Message. If the Bible be the Divine Message, as St. Paul says, "It is worthy of all acceptation" (1 Timothy iv. 8.) If not worthy of all acceptation, it is not worthy of acceptance at all, and all Christian hopes built upon the Bible would correspondingly fall. The lesson of this is the sufficiency of the Truth—the Bible. What does it say about the heathen? We ask this question of the various creeds of Christendom and hearken to their reply.

A considerable class of very good people by their creeds tell us that if God had foreordained the heathen to damnation He would have seen to it that the Gospel would be preached to them; and that their not hearing the Gospel signifies that God "passed them by" as "non elect;" that the "elect" are to be found only amongst those who have been favored of God and who accept that favor and are "sanctified by the Truth" and "made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light." (Colossians i, 12.)

Another class of people by their creeds, which no longer truly represent them, tell us that they believe as above, only that the add another condition, namely, that "the elect," in order to be of "the elect," must be brought to a knowledge of water baptism—complete immersion—and must obey this teaching; otherwise they are not the only "elect." Thus these agree with the former class that the heathen masses are completely passed by, have no hope for the future, that they are lost—and by lost they mean torments for an eternity of fiery torture—most horrible suffering.

Another theory held by equally good Christian people denies that there is any "election" in respect to the matter, and denies that any particular amount of water is necessary, although it does recommend a little. This creed or theory denies God's love for the heathen, but says that He made faith in Jesus' sacrificial death a condition of salvation and that the responsibility for the heathen's not knowing, and consequently their going to eternal torment, rests with Christians themselves. They say that God did His part in providing the Savior and that the carrying of this knowledge is wholly dependent upon Christians. One would think that with this view few Christians would be able to sleep a single night, after presenting to such a responsibility and realizing how little they have done or have been able to do to meet their responsibility.

Some dear people during the views last mentioned have started a "Men and Religion Forward Movement." They propose to use about two million dollars in starting the movement, and thereby to collect a total of thirty millions dollars (six million pounds.) Dear people! How I love them for their zeal, even though it be as the zeal of Jehu, "not according to knowledge"—Romans x. 2.

If they could stand in Singapore's streets and journey with us a little the eyes of their understanding would be opened. They would begin to figure out that the sum they expect to raise in converting the world would be little over half a penny per soul! They must indeed think the heathens cheap when they reflect that the total salaries on the work of the Rev. Billy Sunday a year after his meetings show a cost of about six hundred dollars per soul, with double entertained respecting the existing of seven Jesse. The United States Government statistics and the British Government statistics show that a century ago the numbers of heathen were six hundred millions and that today the number is double that, namely, twelve hundred millions.

A BETTER HOPE FOUND.

Whichever of the foregoing views might seem to us less objectionable than the others, sure's none of them could satisfy our heads or our hearts. Surely the good men of the past who wrote these creeds in the light of the hollow candle, if writing them today in the light of the arc lamp, would amend them considerably, or else leave them unwritten and merely say, We know not the fate of the heathen. Some, repudiating the creeds of the past as no longer tenable, built the Bible with being the basis for those creeds and threw it away with the creeds. These are becoming Agnostics, Higher Critics, Evolutionists, Spiritists, etc. And because of their worldly wisdom and social standing these Higher Critics are rapidly undermining all faith in the Bible as an inspired Message from God to His people. They are adrift, some sailing in one direction and some in another—they have lost their Chart of the Ages and the great Compass of Divine Truth in the depths of the sea of human wisdom, which, from the Divine standpoint, is declared to be foolishness. Let us not take their course.

Let us, on the contrary, declare that the difficulty with the creeds of the past has been that they divided up the Word of God amongst them, and that each one has a certain amount of gold as well as a large accumulation of dross. It would be too serious an undertaking for Sixtes to put all the creeds into a crucible and separate the gold from the dross. Besides, all the sectarian prejudices of our natures would contend against us in such a procedure. Let us take the easier, the simpler method, to which all Christian people should be willing to accede, namely, to wholly cast aside our creeds and go back to the Word of God—to the Bible—to the utterances of Jesus and His Apostles and Prophets. Thus doing many will find to their surprise that, while the creeds have gathered precious jewels of Truth from the Bible, they have given these false settings by which they misrepresent the Truth which they profess to illuminate.

St. Paul's declaration is that the Word of God is sufficient that the man of God may be fully furnished. (II Timothy iii. 17.) His further suggestion is that we "rightly divide the Word of Truth" and that "it is able to make us wise unto salvation." Let us follow this course and allow God's Word to be its own interpreter—allow one passage to throw light upon another; and thus let us reject none of the Divine testimony, but, bringing the whole together, find therein the wisdom of God, the Justice of God, the Love of God, the Power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth—to Jew and Gentile.

ALL MANKIND TO BE BLESSED.

St. Peter, by birth a Jew, understood that the promise made to Abraham—that in posterity should bless the world—meant that the Jewish nation should have the honor. He did, indeed, know that in all the centuries from Moses to Christ the Jew was not accepted to the heavenly position to be given the privilege of blessing the world. He realized that this was because, being imperfect through the fall, they could not keep God's perfect law. He realized also what St. Paul expressed, saying, Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded (Romans xi. 7.

Peter supposed that the entire number of "the elect" would be Jews. He had overlooked the prophecies which declare that only a remnant of Israel would be found worthy and that Gentiles would be called in to complete the number of "the elect." Consequently, it was a surprise to him when the Lord sent him to preach the Gospel to Cornelius, a Gentile. He did not think of the Gentiles as being under consideration to eternal torment, but he did understand that the privileges of being of the elect seed of Abraham to bless the world belonged to Jews only.

When, therefore, the Holy Spirit came upon Cornelius, begetting him as a son of God and a joint-heir with Jesus the astonished St. Peter, in the words of our text, said, "I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted with Him." We have had evidences of this same Truth throughout this Gospel Age, for now more than eighteen centuries. God has been accepting people of all nationalities to be members of this "elect" class. To-day, as soon as they are consecrated to God, on a basis of faith in Jesus' atoning work, the Holy Spirit is given. They become members of the School of Christ—"Disciples indeed." Individually they become co-laborers with God in searching out others who have the hearing ear and responsiveness of heart.

"EVERY KNEE SHALL BOW."

Under this arrangement the Lord has graciously been assembling the foreordained number of His spirit-begotten children of the New Creation. Of these He declares, "They shall be Mine, saith the Lord, in that day when I make up My Jewels." (Malachi iii. 17.) But when these jewels shall have been made up or completed—when the First Resurrection shall have ushered them into their promised estate of glory, honor and immortality, then will come the next feature of the work—the use of this class, the "Seed of Abraham," for the blessing of all the families of the earth. Natural Israel will be the first to receive the benefits, as the Scriptures clearly point out (Romans xi. 25-24.) They will in turn be used in extending the blessing far and wide.

As the result "the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the sea." Then will be the trial or testing time to the non elect world. So many as will accept Divine favor and seek to walk in the ways of righteousness will be helped and uplifted out of their weaknesses, physical, mental, moral, to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary.

Finally, all the unwilling and disobedient will be destroyed in the Second Death—without hope of recovery. As St. Peter declared, they shall perish like the brute beast, hopelessly. On the other hand, the willing and obedient shall be blessed and "shall build houses and inhabit them. They shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them;" "and long enjoy the work of their hands." Eventually, "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess," to the glory of God—in loyalty. (Isaiah lxv. 21, 22.) The earth shall become the everlasting habitation of saintly men redeemed by the precious blood of Christ and restored to human perfection during the period of His Reign.

As, therefore, I looked at the composite population of Singapore, I said to myself, Quite probably, from all these peoples, God has selected a few through the Message of the Gospel—a few saints to be joint-heirs with His Son in the Kingdom. But at all events, even if none of the elect class were taken from amongst the heathen peoples, surely the riches of God's grace is about to be abundantly manifested to all the families of the earth through "the elect"—through their administration of the Kingdom.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM.

Ah! how much meaning there is in this expression. "The Gospel of the Kingdom!"—the good news that God will have a Kingdom under the whole heavens! It will not be a Kingdom merely in name but in power, in influence. "He shall reign from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth." (Psalm lxxii. 8.) He must reign until He shall have put down all insubordination. "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." (I Corinthians xv. 25, 26.)

And as for the elect, the Church, the Bride-class, to her belongs the glorious promises—"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in my throne." "To him that overcometh will I grant power over the nations." (Revelation iii. 21, ii. 26.)

One of the first works of the Kingdom will be the binding of Satan. Then will follow the scattering of the darkness of error, ignorance and superstition, which now beclouds mankind. Then the Sun of Righteousness and Truth will enlighten the world and fill it with the blessings and joys of the Lord. Well did the angels proclaim this same Message, saying, "Fear not! Behold, we bring you tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people!" a glorious message it is now to thousands who have the hearing ears and who make their election sure to the spirit plane and a share in the First Resurrection! A glorious message it will be by and by to the whole world of mankind, to learn of the blessings and privileges of restitution which will then be opened, with the broadest of free grace to every creature.

Let me exhort, then, to choose earnestly the best thing, the privileges and opportunities of the present time. If you are the elect, harden not your hearts, but esteem that you are living in the blessed time in which God is willing to accept your title all through the merit of Jesus' sacrifice. Present and resume or appreciate all of my message, at least take this little to your comfort—There is a better day coming—the day of Jesus Christ and of the world—and that you seek to live soberly and righteously, you will be the better prepared for that glorious Epoch and make the more rapid advances back to full harmony with God.

Pastor Russell Writes from Honolulu.

Beloved in the Lord: I drop this note at Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, I wish you to know of my continued love for you all. We daily remember you and all the dear Israel of God at the Throne of Heavenly Grace, and feel sure you are remembering us. I will report the journey thus far.

We had a delightful day at Pitcairn, December 1, on which all brethren were consecrated, a church election was held and a discourse was delivered to about 250; the house overflowed. At St. Louis, December 5, I had much pleasure in meeting the dear friends, and addressed them for about an hour.

Dallas, Tex., was our next stopon December 6. We had quite a little convention. Eight children were consecrated.

San Antonio gave us a hearty greeting on the 7th. We had meetings all day. The interest and spirit were splendid. That class of Bible students seems to be growing steadily, both in numbers and in grace, yet not without trials.

Los Angeles, Cal., was reached in due time for Sunday services, December 10. A more hearty welcome could not be asked. "Love Divine, all love excelling," seems to be the secret of this class' precious fellowship. We were present in the forenoon and about 2,100 at the afternoon meeting for the public.

Fresno, Cal., we reached for services on the 11th. About 60 of the friends from surrounding country assembled during the day, and at the public meeting at night the auditorium was packed. Matters went exceedingly well, considering that there is no Class of Bible Students there.

San Francisco, Cal., was reached on December 12 (for rather Oakland). Good interest in the Truth evidenced showed that the class here are in splendid condition—apparently full of zeal and faith. The forenoon meeting was on consecration and the evening meeting in English. At our request no advertising was done, so the attendance of about 300 must have been chiefly interested people. About 26 symbolized their consecration. The occasion closed with an enjoyable Love Feast. Your servant nearly 100 bade us goodby and sang us away on our journey to the steamship Shinyo Maru left dock.

With much love to you—one and all—your brother and servant,

C. T. RUSSELL.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Texas, Jan. 23.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We are today through the Watch Tower and Tract society receiving the subscription to your most excellent paper, made more so by the addition of the Sunday School Lessons, Question Box and other valuable Bible-leal information in all of which we are greatly interested. May the Lord bless you more and more as you continue in the good work.

Yours in the love of the Truth,
MRS. IVA MCCONOGHY.

North Carolina, Jan. 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Please find check for my subscription for 1912. I have taken your paper for so long I don't know when I began and appreciate it more and more and look forward to it coming with delight and I think that will be so with me as long as you publish Brother Russell's sermons which are so plain, practical, reasonable and Scriptural. They do inspire a faith and hope which is indeed an anchor to the soul sure and steadfast which I thank you personally for the stand and courage you manifest in publishing them.

With highest regards,
L. T. HOWARD.

Ohio, Jan. 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We are very much pleased for the way in which you continue to publish Pastor Russell's sermons. They are becoming better every week, and trust you will continue to give space to the same as they are indeed meat in due season to the household of faith.

Of course we like the other features of your paper, as they give us the condition of the labor field.

Yours respectfully,
FRED GREENOUGH.

Georgia, Jan. 17.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It gives me pleasure to forward you four new subscribers to the Tribune in the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. The writings of Pastor Russell have been the means under God's providence of many and precious blessings to me during my life.

Not only does the light which his writings throw on the Scriptures inspire in me a greater love and appreciation than mere money, or honor from men could ever do, but they help me to love my Heavenly Father and His dear Son, the world's Redeemer as I never could before. And make me take pleasure in doing good to all men as I have opportunity, as I could not have done years ago when I believed the traditions of men which my good parents taught me. In all good conscience, but without Scriptural grounds. I shall never cease to praise the Lord for what He has done for me through Pastor Russel, and so I take pleasure in bringing the Tribune to the attention of my friends because it puts his sermons and other writings in cred ble shape and thus honors the God whom Pastor Russel serves shows the wisdom and good character of the editor, and compliments the intelligence of its large family of readers. God bless the Labor Tribune as it carries the message of the Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power of our great Creator, as pointed out by "the man with the ink horn by his side." (Ezek. 9), and may a blessing come to all who are in sympathy with the truths its bright clean pages convey around the world. I count on my being its warm friend and supporter as long as it holds its present front rank among newspapers.

Very respectfully yours,
E. S. MASON.

Georgia, Jan. 17.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Please mail to my address 30 extra copies of the National Labor Tribune, issue of January 11, 1912, containing a poem under the captain, "Darkness and Dawn," by Rebecca Paff Dorey. I read this poem and appreciate it very highly, indeed, as it embodies so much truth which relates to the divine plan for the ultimate recovery from sin and death, of Adam and his race.

I also enjoy reading Pastor Russell's sermons each week, which come to me with the great good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." (Luke 2: 10.) And I am so thankful that these sermons can reach such a wide circle of readers through the press.

Having only recently come into the light of "present truth," and finding God's plan as taught in the Scriptures so grand and glorious, and so thoroughly in keeping with His loving, merciful character and attributes, and finding the various features of this divine plan so clearly, forcibly and beautifully set forth in the Sermons of Pastor Russell as published in the various papers weekly, and in such good print, I desire these several copies for distribution amongst some friends. In appreciation of your paper on account of the Pastor Russell Sermons feature I recently subscribed for it, though I get the sermons regularly in other papers closer by.

Very truly yours,
CHAS. W. LYLENS.

New Hampshire, Jan. 19.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

When I renewed my subscription to the Labor Tribune, I could not stop to write a word of appreciation of the paper, but they say "money talks" and so perhaps the money sent may have spoken louder than any words that I shall be able to write.

Be that as it may, a word of honest praise is without flattery, will probably do no harm. When people subscribe for newspapers or other periodicals, they do so, of course because some of the subject matter contained therein is of special interest and importance to them. I am no exception to the rule, and while I have nothing but praise for the Tribune as a whole, the Bible study department, including the weekly sermons, is what specially appeals to me. I wonder if the people whose privilege it is to receive the Bible in half a dozen papers that section of it, or realize what a wonderful light is being thrown upon the Bible that answers to the saying and reveals its undreamed of depths or riches? No one but an independent in religious thought, could possibly bring out such marvelous harmony and harmony of the Scriptures as the author of these studies is doing; and he could not, except it were given him of the Lord and because the due time had come for the knowledge to be revealed, and the world ready desire it and are willing to seek for it. The Question Box is great, and is solving many a perplexing riddle for many people. At first I thought of clipping those questions from the paper and pasting them into a book, but finally decided I could not spare the room for the second number by sending the whole paper to others, where the whole family could get the benefit not only of the Question Box, but also of the International Sunday School Lessons and the Sermons, and they in turn pass it along to others, perhaps. Consequently after reading my Tribune I always send it away, and two of those to whom I have sent copies of this will soon become subscribers. I believe in passing a good thing along and the Tribune is certainly good clear through. I enjoy reading the letters too, and all these things in addition to the news relating to labor interests, make the Tribune one splendid paper for any one to take, and I thank you for my share of the blessings received through its columns.

In all sincerity I wish you and the National Labor Tribune a most flourishing and Prosperous New Year.

Very truly yours,
MRS. C. H. BURKE.

Illinois, Jan. 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We are renewing our subscription as we notice ours expires January 16. Enclosed find P. O. order.

Feeling, dear editor, we would prefer to sacrifice many other things it we found it necessary rather than do without the Tribune. We always notice the questions and the logical answers given in reply.

We also appreciate the other many good features, above all Pastor Russell's presentation of the Bible truths. Thanking your for the spreading of the God Colden in this manner.

Respectfully,
LOYAL H. OSTRANDER.

Canada, Jan. 24.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I would just like to try and tell you a little of how I enjoy your splendid paper. It is one of the finest and best papers that comes to our home and is such good cheer.

And we appreciate Pastor Russell's Sermons. You always print them in full. We also appreciate the Question Box, and Bible Readings. I got your paper as a present and I can assure you it was a great surprise. I was away going to send for it as some of my friends around here get it, and I used to get a loan of it to read.

I wish you ever success, dear editor, and may God bless you richly as you co-operate with Him in spreading the grand and glorious truth. I always want to remain a subscriber to your paper as long as you print Pastor Russell's sermons.

Yours respectfully,
MISS ROSE GIBSON.

PROLIFIC BEANS FOR SEED.

Slater Smith of Nebraska recently discovered one stalk of beans which she declares yielded so prolifically that she calls it the Millennial Bean. She desires to get the beans into the hands of others, and at the same time we make a donation to our Tract Fund per the sending forth of free spiritual food to the hungry. Accordingly the beans have been sent to our office.

We believe the product quite a prosper one, and if the beans be as prolific elsewhere as in Nebraska, we would be glad to purchase them at the rate of five beans for one dollar. (We have heard of seed wheat selling at one dollar per grain.)

However, in view of unfriendly criticism of females, we think it best not to sell these beans, but to give them free to our subscribers who have gardens and who will request a few of five beans each.

Slater Smith writes that they should be planted one bean to the hill and the hills six feet apart. They should be planted in April. They keep bearing right along for weeks, and five should supply a small family. They will be ready to ship in February.—Watch Tower.

CURE FOR APPENDICITIS.

It is known that only about three out of every one hundred operated upon for appendicitis really have a diseased appendix needing removal. We give below a simple cure for appendicitis symptoms. The pain in the appendix region is caused by the biting of worms near the junction of the transverse colon with the small intestines, low down on the right side of the abdomen.

This remedy is recommended also for typhoid fever, which is also a worm disease. The medicine is Santonine; dose, 3 grains, an hour before breakfast, repeated for four mornings, or until all the symptoms disappear. Then one dose per month for three months to eradicate all germs.

This recipe is of incalculable value. Not only will it save the surgeon's and hospital fees of from $100 to $250, but it saves weeks of ill health, inconvenience, consequent loss of salary.—Watch Tower.

POPULAR MECHANICS

NOVEL QUADRANT CRANE.

Load Moves in Horizontal Line as Beam Is Raised.

Recently a patent has been granted on a crane which is a decided innovation. The crane has no mast, but consists merely of a beam mounted on a frame in such a way that it can swing forward like the boom of a derrick, while the load it carries moves on a virtually horizontal line as the beam is raised to the vertical position.

The beam is built up of ruled steel and is secured to a pair of quadrants of cast steel formed with teeth to engage racks at the foot of the frame. The frame is mounted on a swivel base. The beam is raised or lowered by means of a horizontal screw which passes through a nut journaled to the quadrants. As the screw is operated the quadrants roll on the toothed foot of the frame; hence the fulcrum, which is the point of contact of the quadrant with the frame, moves outward as the beam moves toward the horizontal, and at the same time the length of the lever from load to fulcrum is reduced, owing to the fact that the crank form of the beam and quadrants.

The compensating mechanism consists of a pair of arms hinged to the beam near the upper end and secured to one end of a cable, which passes over a sheave at the top of the beam and then runs to a point on the frame where it is permanently secured. As the beam is moved back and forward the arms are correspondingly swung on their hinges, so that their outer ends trace a practically horizontal line. At these outer ends the arms support the upper blocks of the hoisting tackle over which the hoisting cables run to a pair of winding drums. As a result of this "parallel motion" the load is not materially raised as the crane is swung upward, and the leverage moment on the beam is greatly reduced.

Energy in Meat Foods.

In his recently published work Dr. Robert Hutchinson observes that energy is not to be confused with muscular strength. Nerves feel energy, but strong; a corn fed hunter is energetic. Energy is a property of the nervous system, and most of the energy we consume give us the power to do work; the nervous system gives us the intuitive to start it. Muscles do their work upon carbohydrates (starch foods), which are the characteristic nutritive constituents of vegetable foods; the brain appears to require nitrogen, which can only be attained in a concentrated form from animal sources. If proteid food, therefore, be regarded as a nervous food, a rich diet is it will make for intellectual capacity and bodily energy, and it is not without reason that the more energetic races of the world have been meat eaters.—Chicago Tribune.

New Acid Proof Vessels.

New acid proof vessels, the invention of Dr. W. Gunther, are cast of pure iron without any latter have a fusing melting temperature and are practically indestructible. Pure iron oxide may be obtained by fusing pure iron molten iron, apparatus and containers made of this material may be manipulated like other metallic vessels. As compared with that of platinum or quartz vessels, the cost is comparatively low. Acids and alkalies can be manipulated, and salts and organic preparations can be prepared absolutely pure in such vessels. They can also be used for drying and melting substances, which would decompose metallic iron.

Lightning and Concrete.

The effect of lightning on concrete, which has long been a matter of dispute, has been observed by a leading member of the American Society of Civil Engineers who has a re-enforced concrete water tank on his country estate. This was struck by lightning which caused no injury, but changed the texture of the concrete in places from granular to vitreous. The tank was heavily re-enforced.

CONCERNING CEMENT.

Comparison of the Natural and Artificial Products.

A dozen years ago the production of natural cement was nearly 10,000,000 barrels. Last year it was but 4,120,220 barrels, while 76,540,951 barrels of Portland were produced. It seems that it is a case of the survival of the fittest, and Portland cement has largely displaced natural cement.

Natural cements differ from Portland cements in the following important particulars:

Natural cements are not made from carefully prepared and finely ground artificial mixtures, but from natural limestone rock.

Natural cements are burned at a lower temperature than Portland, the mass in the kiln never being heated high enough even to approach the fusing or clinkering point.

Natural cements after burning and grinding are usually yellow to brown in color and light in weight, having a specific gravity of 2.7 to 3.1—that is, the cement weigh from 2.7 to 3.1 times the weight of water. Portland cement is commonly blue to gray in color and heavier. Its specific gravity ranging from 3 to 3.2.

Natural cements set more rapidly than Portland cement, but do not attain so high tensile strength.

Portland cement is a definite product, its percentages of lime, silica, alumina and iron oxide varying only between certain limits, while brands of natural cements vary greatly in composition.

The fineness of the natural cement industry, according to Mr. Burchard of the United States geological survey, seems to depend on means of refinement in the manufacture of the cement chemically or by better mechanical devices whereby it may be brought nearer to the specifications for high grade Portland cement. The decline in the use of natural cement has been due principally to the greater tensile strength of Portland cement. Natural cements have hydraulic properties, but less, if properly prepared it will set under water.

AUTOMOBILE SLEIGH.

High Speed Produced by Motor Driven Propeller.

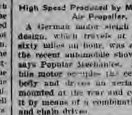
A German motor sleigh of unusual design, which travels at a speed of sixty miles an hour, was exhibited at the recent automobile show in Berlin, says Popular Mechanics. An automobile motor occupies the center of the body and drives an aerial propeller, mounted at the rear and connected to it by means of a combination of shaft and chain drives.

The steel arms above trailing under the rear of the body are the brakes



GERMAN MOTOR SLEIGH.

They are forced down upon the running surface, where they act as drags, by either of the two levers shown outside the body. The two levers are provided so that the brakes may be actuated from the driver's or the mechanician's seat, steering is accomplished by means of the light forward set of runners.

Food Value of Walnuts.

The food value of walnuts is very high. They are very rich in fat, containing as much as 63 per cent, while the proteins amount to nearly 16 per cent. It has been calculated that only large walnut kernels contain as much fat as two and three-quarters pounds of lean beef, and yet the walnut is used as a supplement to a square meal. Added to this the gluss of port, say two full ounces, contains about 180 grains of alcohol, 70 grains of grape sugar. In the combination, therefore, we have all the elements which make for a complete diet—viz, fat, protein, carbohydrate, to which must be added mineral salts. Fortunately walnuts after a feast are therefore from a nutritive point of view "ridiculous nonsense" and may lead to digestive disturbance. Both walnuts and port wine contain tannin, which is unsuited to some constitutions.

Daily Earnings of Locomotive.

An article in the Railway and Engineering Review recently gave the interesting results of a computation of the daily earnings of locomotives on the American locomotive. The estimate took account of time spent in the repair shop, increased cost of fuel and renewals, and the cost of fuel, water and the engine crew. The average earnings per locomotive per day in the east are $124.84 and on the western roads $130.84. The highest earnings in the east are those of the Pacific locomotives, which work out at $149.53 per day. The highest earnings in the west are on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, where the average is $147.06 per day.

AUSTRALIAN TREES.

Several Varieties Produce Valuable Oils and Extracts.

The Sydney Daily Telegraph recently contained an article relating to the research work being done at the technological museum, in which it was stated that a tree of the cinnamomum family has been discovered in New South Wales, whose leaves produce an oil from which the camphor of commerce can be extracted and that some Germans have taken up land on the north coast on which to plant these trees, with the intention of extracting camphor. At the museum it has also been ascertained that an Australian it tree is richer in eulyptol oil than the finest of Java.

From one particular it tree can be obtained an oil that is quite different from anything yet extracted in the way of eulyptols. It contains a substance from which, if its chemical combination could be altered a fruc'dic, "vanillin" might be extracted. Vanillin is the flavoring used in vanilla ice cream and chocolate. A great deal of research work is being done on the pines of Tasmania as well as of this continent. One result is the discovery of a pine needle oil that has a medicinal value. Another result is perhaps more important. From the bark of the pine tree is obtained an oxidation called sandarach, which is useful for varnishes. Kauri gum is used at present, but the demand for this is increasing, the supply decreasing and the price climbing.

From the pine bark the museum experts have extracted 14 to 40 per cent of tannin against 10 to 12 per cent obtained in England from oak bar... and they have demonstrated that the wood of the Australian native pine, the mountain ash and giant gum is suitable for the manufacture of golf clubs.—Consular Report.

CREDSOTING WOOD.

Air Pressure Process an Improvement Over Old Methods.

A new process of creosoting wood, claimed to be a great improvement over old methods, is now being tested. At a recent demonstration various stages and kinds of wood were weighed and measured and then sealed up in a cylinder, where they were subjected for an hour to a pressure of 200 pounds per square inch. The cylinder was filled with creosote, the air pressure still being maintained, and then the pressure was raised to eighty pounds per square inch, after which the pressure was released and the timber removed. The timber was then taken out and reweighed, and various pieces were cross cut, and the depth and concentration of oil, nearly to the center, which, it is claimed, is impossible in the old creosoting process at great cost. One feature claimed for this process is the cleanliness of the wood, it being quite dry and clean to handle. It is likewise claimed that the cost of creosoting is much reduced by this method, a waste of 10 gallons per cubic foot being entirely avoided.—Popular Mechanics.

New Water Finder.

The hazel twig as a water finder has been supplanted by a remarkable invention consisting of a magnetic needle, the principle on which the instrument works is the measuring of the strength of electric currents which flow between the earth and the atmosphere. These are always strongest in the vicinity of subterranean water courses, and the tester with which they are charged with electricity to a certain degree. The apparatus thus the size of a box shaped instrument fixed on a tripod, with a dial on which a needle is used to indicate the presence of water. If the needle remains stationary it may be taken for granted that no subterranean spring exists. The spot where the greatest movement of the needle is obtained is that where well boring operations should be made.

Appreciations

New Hampshire, Jan. 25.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

While notifying you of change of address as indicated will avail myself of the opportunity of expressing my continued appreciation of your weekly visits, and I desire you to continue your visits even though you may have a few more miles to travel. Of course the special feature to me is the Pastor Russell Sermons and the other features are also enjoyed, but interested as a part of history, showing the fulfillment of prophecy. Praising the Lord's blessings with you, I remain.

Yours respectfully,
THOMAS [illegible]VOSA.

Massachusetts, Jan. 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to express my appreciation for your paper which I receive. I especially enjoy the part you devote to Pastor Russell's work.

Wishing you every success, I am, Yours very truly,
OTTO ANDERSON.

LET PATIENCE HAVE HER PER FECT WORK—Jas. 1: 4.

I know my Lord will come, 'ere long,
To hear me safely home to rest.
Twill not be long to bear the pain,
To suffer here, endure the test.

My soul would welcome him today
With shouts of joy, my Lord, I'd greet
If I could only go and see
My God and all the saints to meet.

But then I know full well, my Lord
Desires, in me, the fruits to see,
Which are so precious in his sight,
Before his own dear face I see.

So here in patience, let we wait,
Still trusting in my Lord for grace
To help me bear my pathway while,
To fit me for the heavenly place.

A few more prunings will I need,
More of His Spirit in my heart,
Before I hear him bid me come,
His kingly throne, to share a part.

My soul, art thou not glad to hear
A few more sorrows here below,
Since thy dear Lord, to thee, will give
A crown, if faithfulness thou'lt show.

Be calm, my soul, and wait a while,
Thy Lord desires to see thee stand
And prove by patience, here below,
He'll use for the heavenly place.

My word of patience thou hast kept,
Thy faith and love hath stood the test,
And now arise, I bid thee come,
With me, in glory, thou shalt rest.
—Grace Mabie.

Ohio, Jan. 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed please find money for my renewal of my subscription to your valuable and much appreciated paper. I do not want to miss one number of my dear old Tribune, and I wish to state that I receive it regularly each week and it is like a welcoming guest in our home. It is an all around splendid paper, but I especially love to read what Pastor Russell's sermons are, printed in it, the type so large and clear, and then I like the Tabernacle Bible Studies and the Question Box is so helpful, also the letters of appreciation are quite interesting too.

May our dear Lord bless you abundantly and richly reward you for the active part you are taking in spreading these wonderfully grand and precious truths to all people.

I always speak a good word for the Tribune wherever I can and have been the means of several subscribing for it, for I know that any one who subscribes for the National Labor Tribune, to get Pastor Russell's Sermons will be more than pleased.

Gratefully yours,
MRS. J. S. PFISTER.

Ohio, Jan. 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We are subscribing today through the W. T. B. and T. S. Our time will not be out until next month. We are interested in Pastor Russell's sermons, so make haste to renew our subscription. We have not missed one single copy for a year, and we send you a new subscriber to prove our appreciation.

Yours sincerely,
MR. AND MRS. C. K. CHAMBERLAIN.

"BORN KING OF THE JEWS."
Matthew ii. 1-12—Feb. 4.
"Look unto Me and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth: for I am God and there is none else."—Isaiah xlv. 22.

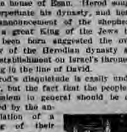
TODAY'S STUDY relates to the Wise Men of the East and their seeing of a wonderful star which as astrologers they recognized to import a great event. At the time Palestine was a province of the Roman Empire, and its King, Herod, was not a scion of the House of Jacob, but a representative of the house of Esau. Herod sought to perpetuate his dynasty, and hence the announcement of the shepherds that a great King of the Jews had just been born angered the overthrow of the Herodian dynasty and this establishment on Israel's throne of a King in the line of David.

Herod's disquietude is easily understood, but the fact that the people of Jerusalem in general should be disturbed by the announcation of a king of their own awakens thought. Under the Romans they had the impression a big great prosperity. Herod, the Edomite, had built them a temple the grandeur of which at times shone that of Solomon. Evidently the people were not satisfied with their attainments that they had ceased to specially long for and pray for the coming of the Messiah.



"There came wise men from the East."

A very similar condition of things may be expected in conjunction with the second advent of Christ. The powers that be today are styled Christ's Kingdom, "Christendom," but they are really "Kingdoms of this world." Any announcement today that Messiah's Kingdom is nigh—that He will soon take into Himself His great power and reign (Revelation xi. 17) meets with resentment.

If in some way we say why this indifference respecting the fulfilment of our prayer, "Thy Kingdom come," the answer is, "Let well enough alone;" we agitate that subject; it may bring in strife and contention, because many are prospering so well under the reign of the 'Prince of this world' that they could not look upon a change as likely to bring any improvement in their condition—indeed some of them have reason to fear that Messiah's Kingdom will overthrow their unmerited privileges and monopolistic control of the wonderful blessings of our day?

Priestly Indifference on the Subject.

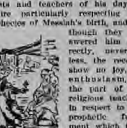
Although King Herod called the priests and teachers of his day to him and carefully questioned the prophecies of Messiah's birth, and although they answered correctly, nevertheless, the records show no joy, no enthusiasm, on the part of the religious leaders in respect to the prophetic fulfillment which they had followed by implicit trust in and to long for its coming. None of them followed to Bethlehem to find the new born King of the Jews. They had become Higher Critics and no longer believed the prophecies.



"Gold, Frankincense and Myrrh."

And do we not find an antitype in this day? Are not the chief priests and rulers of Christendom likewise so out of harmony with the Divine promises and so faithless as respects the Bible statements concerning the time which the Bible tells, that they are ashamed to identify themselves in any manner with those who seek the Lord and wait for His Kingdom?

Alas! even the Mohammedans and Brahmins of the East are waiting for Messiah and the Golden Age and disposed to seek the evidences—but amongst the professed followers of "Christendom" there is apparent unbelief, Higher Criticism, Evolution and ignorance of the Second Messiah and His Kingdom. Let the civil government fight down if it chooses everything anywhere professing New Dispensation; these are quite indifferent; they have plans and schemes of their own by which they hope to bring in and accomplish the work predicted for Messiah. Alas for them! how clearly they are mistaken!

It has required all this Gospel Age for the selecting of the Spiritual Seed. With the Kingdom in power, the call will be inaugurated. Then the earthly blessings promised will be fulfilled to the natural seed of Israel. "They shall build houses and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit thereof." "In your land shall the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth;" to Him "every knee will bow and every tongue confess." Those who refuse shall be destroyed in the Second Death. (Isaiah lxv. 21; Habakkuk ii. 14; Romans xiv. 11.)

During the next Age He will be crowned Lord of all by natural Israel, and all other nationalities will enjoy the privilege of becoming brotherly children of Abraham, in the flesh. Messiah will reign in His Mediatorial Kingdom for the very purpose of bringing these blessings to natural Israel and through her to all nations.

Q.—Where is hell, and who created it? (T. N. J.)

Answer.—The so-called "orthodox" belief of a vast furnace of fire and brimstone, manned by fire-proof devils with pitch forks in their hands, who are busily engaged in jabbing and tormenting the millions of poor unfortunates—all of the human race, with the exception of the few saints, who with much difficulty manage to squeeze through the pearly gates into the heavenly city—exists only in the feeble minds and perverted imaginations of those who have given heed to the "doctrines of demons." (I Timothy iv. 1) and who have never thoroughly and fully studied the Scriptures. This "hell" was created in the Dark Ages of the past by corrupt and designing priests influenced by evil spirits who misrepresented and blasphemed the character of the Almighty God, who is wise and good, loving and merciful, as the Scriptures everywhere affirm in the increasing light of our day when the people are breaking the smoke and dust of the Ages of gloom from their eyes, it is clearly seen that "hell" is not the Scriptures, is nothing more than the condition of death—the tomb. The Hebrew word sheol and the Greek hades from which the word hell is used in the English translations, have this significance. All go to hell—to the grave—to death state, and will remain there until the resurrection. Adam created, or brought this "hell" and penalty of death upon the race by His disobedience. See Romans v. 12.

Q.—Why don't you kindly explain Philippians ii. 21, "For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better?" (Bertha.)

Answer.—The context shows that the two things in the Apostle's mind (and answer to "me") cannot be "real" life and death. A third thing, however, enters in, which he has no difficulty in deciding is far better than either living in the flesh or dying in the Lord. This he earnestly desired. He, the young saints of Christ, at whose return he hoped to be changed, made like Him, and be with Him. The Greek word translated "depart" in the above quotation is the same as that translated "return" in Luke xii. 36, and he uses the same idea when he said to his disciples: "If I go * * * I will come again." In coming again to the world (Revelation—Acts iii. 20), He would "depart" from the Father and at the same time "return" to His disciples. Had the Apostle's words "to depart" been translated "for the returning" they would be equally correct and would harmonize with the other Scriptures.

Q.—In Jude, 9th verse, is described a contention and dispute between Michael, the Archangel, and the Devil about the body of Moses. Why this dispute? (C. W. W.)

Answer.—We quote from an eminent authority as explaining as to the reason for the contention between Michael and the Devil:—"The Lord Himself buried Moses, hiding the place of his sepulchre. The primary reason for this probably was to hinder the Israelites from carrying the corpse as a memorial, which in after times might have become a temptation to idolatry. The passage and Epistle to which mentions Michael contending with Satan concerning the body of Moses, is a thing along this line that Satan desired to take the corpse to use it for the further misleading of the people, but that the Lord through Michael the Archangel defended, prevented this, and kept the burial place a secret from the Israelites. But Jesus is another view of this matter, which is interesting because it relates to Spiritual Israelites. Jesus and the Church unitedly constitute the antitypical, or greater Moses—the Spiritual. Their inheritance is not to be earthly, but heavenly, and a grave is a symbol of hope as respects an earthly resurrection. Hence it was appropriate that the type should not show an earthly grave since the antitype has no hope in that connection."

Q.—Does the Bible teach a return of the Jews to Palestine, and is that country large enough for all of Abraham's descendants? (F. W.)

Answer.—The Bible answers yes to both questions. It says it will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and will bring you into the land of Israel." "Ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be My people, and I will be your God." "Ye shall not defile the land that I gave to you: for I dwell in the midst of the land: for I the Lord dwell among the children of Israel." (Ezekiel xxxvii. 12, xxxvi. 28, xliii. 7). In what is known as the land of Palestine is but a very small part of the promised land, which is to stretch from the Nile to the Euphrates (Genesis xv. 18), and supposes to include Arabia as well as parts of Egypt and the Soudan, an area equal to the half of Europe. Much of this will be in a desert land, but "the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose" (Isaiah xxxv. 1). Thus there will be ample space and abundant provision made for the Israelites in the promised land—promised for an everlasting possession to Abraham and his descendants—when God's favor will have returned to them as foretold by the Prophets.—Romans xi. 25-27.

Q.—Which day should be observed as the Sabbath Day, the first day or the seventh day of the week? (C. S. S. A.)

Answer.—It would depend upon the religious belief of the one who asks the question. To the Jew the seventh day immediately at the end to be observed, as it was commanded in the Law that was given to the Israelites that they should keep the seventh day as a holy day. To the Seventh Day Adventist they believe that the seventh day is the day that God's Law is still binding upon the Jews. If a Seventh Day Adventist does let him keep the seventh day, for he believes that he is under the Law, and with that belief he certainly should keep the seventh day. To those who are members of some one of the various Protestant Churches, or of the Roman Catholic Church, let them observe the first day (Sunday) as the day of rest, as they believe that it is so commanded, and surely it would not be right for them to violate their conscience by doing otherwise. To the true Christian, the consecrated child of God, let these keep every day holy unto the Lord and not merely one day in seven. And let these enjoy a rest by faith in the Lord and His sure promises. Let no one attempt to judge another in respect to this matter of observing the sabbath day or any day. No one has the right to judge his fellowman in this regard; but let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind (Romans xiv. 4, 5). If any one presumes to judge another in these matters, he is violating a direct command of the Lord as expressed by one of His inspired Apostles (Colossians ii. 16). If any one should say that we are not saved and that we are not in error we do not observe some special day, just him gently but firmly—"Who made thee a judge?"

Q.—What is the meaning of the sentence, "Jeroboam reigned two years, three times and a half?" How long was a "time?" (W. H. G.)

Answer.—"A year" or "time," according to the old Hebrew method of preserving chronological records, was ordinarily a year of twelve lunar months of approximately thirty days each, or 360 days. In the symbolic prophecies of the Bible, however, a day stood for a year. (See Ezekiel iv. 1-8; Numbers xiv. 32, 34). A "time" therefore, of twelve lunar months of sixty days, is a prophetic period of sixty years. In the expression under consideration there are three and one-half times, or 1260 years. The same period is mentioned in the book of Revelation (Revelation xii. 14). It is called three and one half times (360 x 3½ = 1,260); in chapter xiii. 5, it is named forty and two months (30 x 42 = 1,260); and in chapter xi. 6, it is called twelve hundred and sixty days. Bible students generally have reached the conclusion that these twelve hundred and sixty years came to an end in the year 1799 A. D., during the Papal power, which began in the year 800 B. C. Three times and two thousand five hundred and twenty years, bring us to the date 1844, when the Lord's people restored to their own land, to have a government or kingdom of their own, which has been the desire of their hearts for several governments so frequently referred to in the Scriptural prophecies.

Q.—Since Christ is referred to as the "Prince of Peace" (Isaiah ix. 6) and the angels announced at His birth, "Peace on earth, good will to men" (Luke ii. 14), how is it that He said, "Think not I am come to send peace on the earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division?" (F. W.)

Answer.—The whole history of the Christian Era shows how one of blood-shed, wars and strife. And these for the most part have been brought about by differences of religious opinions. In Matthew 24th chapter, our Lord set forth a wonderful prophecy relating to the conditions that would prevail in the world down to the time when He would return to establish His own Kingdom or Government in the earth. There would be wars and rumors of war, earthquakes, famines, pestilences, and famine, in the very end of the Age. "A time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." He foretold that His followers would suffer violence; that they would be persecuted and misrepresented; and that even in their own households there would be division. The Master taught that conditions of peace and prosperity would be established in the earth prior to His second coming; but not to the contrary. The object of His coming again is to thoroughly destroy the present evil order of things, and then to inaugurate the Creator's Government which will bring about universal peace and joy and happiness to all the families of the earth. Then Christ the Lord will be the "Prince of Peace;" and then, and not till then, will the angels' song be realized—"Peace on earth; good will towards men."

Senate Passes Children's Bureau Bill. Hearing on Eight-Hour Bill--Latest Immigration Statistics - - Another Order Illustrating How Things are Done in the Postoffice Department.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Senate, after a prolonged debate, on Wednesday, January 31, passed the Children's Bureau Bill by a vote of 54 to 20, there being only one important amendment to the bill. The bill met with considerable opposition, but Senator Borah, who was the author of the bill, was finally successful in securing its passage.

President Gompers made an argument before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor on Saturday, January 27, for the passage of the Hughes bill, already passed by the House by an unanimous vote. President Gompers stated that the passage of such a law by Congress would aid materially in the general establishment of an eight hour day for all workers, but he contended that no proposition will give more of an impetus to the general progress in this country among the people and further the understanding of civic duties than the eight hour work day. He criticised the opponents of the measure. When they appear before the committees of Congress he said, they argue that such legislation is the proper function of the individual states and should be left to them; when they appear before the Committee of the State Legislatures, he added, they argue that no state should put its employers at a disadvantage as against other states by enacting an eight hour law and that such legislation should be general and undertaken by congress. We are made shuttlecocks between the Federal and State battledores.

The Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization has just finished compiling the September immigration statistics. During the month immigrants there were admitted into this country 62,599 immigrants, the largest number of any single race being the Hebrews with 9,592; the next in point of numbers is the Southern Italians with 6,670; then Germans with 5,359; English, 4,843; Irish, 4,286; Polish, 4,138; Scandinavians, 3,564; Mexicans, 2,504, and the balance scattered among twenty-five or thirty other races.

Chinese, like other foreigners, may be deported by order of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and also are entitled to have a judicial determination for their rights to remain in this country. The Supreme court has so decided, holding that the United States Circuit Court of Appeals was wrong in permanently enjoining Burton from deporting Wong You and four other Chinamen, alleged to have been smuggled into New York from Canada. Secretary Nagel said that the decision of the lower court greatly compromised his department.

At a hearing before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor there appeared recently James A. Emery, general counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, who attacked the Hughes Eight Hour Bill, which recently passed the House, as being vague and ambiguous. This statement brought forth from Senator Borah, Chairman of the Committee, the following retort: "Upon reports of the Department of Commerce and Labor on the steel industry, it is shown that the United States Steel Corporation is paying millions of dollars in dividends, and have in their employ men who have worked twelve hours a day, seven days in the week, and others who work eighteen to twenty-four hours in one shift. This is something no man who has taken an oath of office can ignore."

In a recent order issued by the Postmaster General there is included an executive order from the president amending Civil Service Rule XII, relating to removals and reduction of classified employes. It is rather a one sided affair, done without question to close the situation, and practically gives no redress to any postal employe so far as removal or reduction is concerned. Under Section 2 of the order, it states: "A person whose removal is requested shall be furnished with a statement of reasons and be allowed a reasonable time for personally answering such reasons in writing, but no examination of witnesses nor any trial or hearing shall be required except in the discretion of the officers making the removal. Copy of such reasons and answer and of the order of removal shall be made a part of the records of the proper department of office, and the commission shall upon its request be furnished with a copy of the record in the case." The above procedure shall be followed in like manner in reduction in grade or compensation." But now look at the fouth section, in view of what is contained in Section 2: "The commission shall have no jurisdiction to review the findings of a removing officer upon the reasons and answer provided for in Section 2 of this rule, nor shall the commission have authority to investigate any removal or reduction unless it is alleged, with offer of proof, that the provisions of section by Section 2, of this rule has not been followed, or that the removal was made for political or religious reasons." Apparently the Post Office Department is determined not to permit an appeal from the decision of any department head.

On Monday of last week a subpoena was served on the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor to appear before the Federal Grand Jury now in session in Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 1. The writ requires Secretary Morrison to produce cancelled checks, and records of all receipts and disbursements made by the American Federation of Labor or by himself from January 1, 1911 and January 26, 1912. In accordance therewith Secretary Morrison has taken to Indianapolis, two large packing boxes of books, records and letters relating to the financial operations of the American Federation of Labor. When called upon for a statement, Mr. Morrison said: "I appreciate the opportunity to show all of our books and have the Federation's accounts investigated by the Federal authorities."

IRON CITY TRADES COUNCIL ELECTS LEADERS

The annual election of officers of the Iron City Trades Council, which is the central body of unions in the Pittsburgh district affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, was held early last Thursday morning in the Labor Temple, Washington place and Webster avenue.

The following were elected: President, Valentine Barle of the Molders' Union; vice president, P. J. McGrath of the Street Car Men's Union; recording secretary, Miss Emmaline Pitt of the Garment Workers; financial secretary, John Hoehn of the Bakery Workers' Union No. 144; reading clerk, George Meesham of the Longshoremen's Union; treasurer, J. H. Tapken of the Blacksmiths' Union; warden, H. B. Smith of the Machinists' Union; sergeant-at-arms, J. J. Maloney of the Musicians' Union; board of trustees, Charles Miller of the Hotsting Engineers, A. Bittner of the Molders and George Abernathy of the Bill Posters' Union; executive board, Peter Bollenbacher of Brewery Workers No. 53, J. J. Thorpe of the Street Car Men's Union; R. J. McGrath of the Patternmakers' Union, John Fitzpatrick, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers; J. Charles Hackett of the Bartenders' Union, and Controller of the Boilermakers, E. A. Maginn of the Steamfitters, Jerry Grosenor, of the Structural Iron Workers and Joseph Sinnejas of the Barbers' Union.

Chicago's unemployed are to be the subject of municipal investigation. There are more than 150,000 persons out of work. Charles R. Henderson, professor of the University of Chicago and chairman of the executive committee of the United Charities, asked Mayor Harrison to have the investigation undertaken. The mayor decided to put the entire situation before the city council.

A general strike of workers engaged in the bakery trade is on at Lisbon, Portugal.

New York shirtmakers will demand a 10 per cent increase in wages.

COMBATING OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES.

THE National Civic Federation, which is commended by representative employers as well as representative leaders of labor—such as John Mitchell and Samuel Gompers—has published many instructive reports calling attention to industrial diseases and their ravages. The latest report under the Federation auspices is one dealing with the question of mercurial poisoning in the industries of New York city and vicinity. The fact that industry is the only one in which the use of mercury remains a menace. But here it does attain serious dimensions, to induce which the report brings forward several specific recommendations. Of these the most important, "the heart of the whole matter," provides that the industry shall be regulated by special legislation, "requiring the elimination from the atmosphere of steam, acid, and mercury fumes, fur, and dust, at their source of production."

The New York Evening Post declares that what may be accomplished by an honest and energetic endeavor to deal with the problem is shown in a report on industrial lead-poisoning in England, compiled by Sir Thomas Oliver, and forming one of the three papers contained in a bulletin published not long ago by the Department of Commerce and Labor. Within 15 years there has been a reduction of 50 per cent in the number of cases of lead-poisoning, chiefly in the dusty trades which are carried on indoors, such as white lead work, potteries, and paint factories. The campaign against occupational diseases has shown how frequently the inevitable becomes the preventable, if a serious attempt to prevent is made.

It is worth noting that not only the National Civic Federation, a highly representative and powerfully influential body, but also the labor and amusement organizations are earnestly striving to improve the conditions of employment throughout the country. One of the most active of all these agencies is the Consumers' League, which has its branches in all large cities, Pittsburgh included. Much good we are sure, has already been done, but much more is still left to do. It is a conservation work of the highest importance—the conservation of men and women and children, who are worth more to the nation than coal, or mines, and forests. Not only the National Civic Federation but the Consumers' League merits the most generous public support in these genuinely progressive endeavors.

TIN WORKERS PROTEST TARIFF CUT.

PRESIDENT Walter Larkins of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tinplate Workers is preparing in behalf of the workmen in all the independent tinplate mills of the country on the subject of the threatened reduction of tinplate duties in the Underwood metal tariff bill, sought to warn the Democratic politicians at Washington not to go so fast. In passing a bill which reduces the duties on iron and steel and tinplate more than 30 to 40 per cent they are helping nobody except the manufacturers of other countries and possibly the steel trust in the United States.

The sweeping tariff cuts embodied in the Underwood bill would work havoc to the independent mill's of this country. If the men who voted for the Underwood iniquity did so under the supposition that they were making a strong bid for the votes of the working class they need to think twice. The mass of the American people are governed solely by their consumers, and if the industries in which they are employed should be so crippled as to throw them out of work it will matter little to them whether broadcloth coats and silk neckties are a few cents cheaper or not.

It is notorious that the Underwood bill was passed without any pretense of investigation into protecting costs. The effect of this recklessness is best stated in the language of the tinplate workers' remonstrance. They admit that the United States Steel Corporation does not care much whether the tariff is reduced or not, but it is far different with the owners and fans of thousands of employes and of the independent plants. These pay union wages and are otherwise so situated and organized that it is simply impossible for them to meet foreign competition under the reduced tariff proposed by the Democrats unless the wages of the workers are cut in virtually the same proportion as the tariff. Tinplate is said by its workers to cost over $10 less a ton to manufacture in Wales than in the United States.

It is plain that it would be ruinous to the American tinplate industry—or at least that part of it not controlled by the trust—to be deprived of the protection which is afforded it by the existing tariff. There are 15 independent tin plants with a combined capital of no less than $12,000,000 and 25,000 employes. This capital, and the livelihood of the 25,000 employes, are endangered by the Democratic steel bill. President Taft will save them by vetoing the bill, but the workers of the country should learn from this example what they must be prepared to expect if a Democratic President should be elected.

POSTAL BANKS VINDICATED.

WHEN the advisability of establishing postal savings banks was being discussed the National Labor Tribune was among those expressing a belief that they would not injure existing banks but rather help them by keeping in this country money which was formerly sent abroad by foreign-born population for safekeeping. It is gratifying to note that this prediction is now verified by the reports of the postoffice department. The latest quarterly statement also contains evidence that the domestic practice of many of investing their savings in money orders to be held until the cash is required, is on the wane. These are the conclusions reached by Charles A. Keim, auditor for the postoffice department, based upon the money order figures in the statement.

During the quarter covered by the report there were 17,718,207 domestic money orders issued, aggregating $135,477,326.39, and 872,467 international money orders issued, aggregating $22,726,869.04. There was a decrease of $1,326,084.17 in the amount of money sent abroad through the medium of international money orders. This falling off of over 14 per cent, the auditor says, is undoubtedly attributable to the establishment of the postal savings bank system. The system has been in operation less than a year but it is already so largely justified that no proposition to distablish it could secure a corporal's guard of votes in congress.

Ohio Court Backs Woman's Labor Law

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3.—The constitutionality of the Green 54-hour working week for women was upheld today by the Supreme Court of Ohio. The decision was rendered in the friendly suit brought against Miss Amelia Hawley, a Columbus milliner, to test the new law. Thousands of employes throughout the State will be affected.

The Green 54-hour workday law for women was passed at the latest session of the Legislature. It limits the hours of labor of women employed in any factory, workshop, telephone or telegraph office, millinery or dressmaking establishment, restaurant or in the distribution or transmission or messages, to 10 hours in any one day, or 54 hours in any one week.

There are about 60,000 union mechanists.

TANG SHAO YI, PEACE COMMISSIONER AT SHANGHAI.

BOTH of the two peace conferees at Shanghai, Wu Ting Fang and Tang Shao Yi, are well known in this country—the former, of course, by reason of his service as minister at Washington, the latter as head of the special embassy sent to thank the United States government for its remission of the greater part of the Boxer indemnity. His selection at that time was due to the influence of his patron, Yuan Shih Kai, who put down the Boxer rising and was expected by the throne to make short work of the present revolution. Tang was sent to America as a representative of the progressive element in official life and because, having been educated at Columbia university, he had a practical acquaintance with the English language and American affairs. At Shanghai he showed his liberal tendencies by saying, "I am convinced that only the abdication of the emperor and the establishment of a republic will satisfy the people and prevent the further wholesale shedding of blood."

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

British Labor Party in Convention--Coal Miners Outline Their Demands for Minimum Wage--Transport Workers Arrange Big Fighting Convention. Cotton Lockout Called Off--London Railway Carmen Strike.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The twelfth annual conference of the Labor Party opened in Birmingham, on January 26. The gathering promises to be an important one. There are many subjects of industrial and political interest on the agenda—a successor has to be appointed to Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., as secretary of the party, a position likely to be filled by the election of Arthur Henderson, M. P., who has acted as secretary during MacDonald's absence in India and Canada; and the Parliamentary report contains a protest against the disunity of the party on the National Insurance bill.

The report of the executive shows that 127 trade unions, with a membership of 1,409,251, two socialist societies with a membership of 21,408 and 146 trade councils are now affiliated with the party. The executive regretted they were unable to report any change in the law laid down by the Osborne judgment, and they called upon the affiliated societies to renew their demands upon their members and candidates for a solution of this grave legal injustice. The general funds show a balance of $4,845, the Parliamentary fund a balance of $66,050, $20,000 had been paid to members for maintenance of which $19,000 has been refunded by them as a result of the introduction of payment of members by the State. Payment of members removed the necessity for the Parliamentary maintenance fund, and they appointed a sub-committee to report upon the changes that would be necessary in consequence in the finances of the party. They proposed for the future the same charge on affiliated trade unions and socialist societies should be 2 cents per member, with a minimum of $2.50 for any organization. On the basis of 1910 this change should yield some thing over the $25,000 a year which they deem necessary for their work. Owing to the continued enforcement of the Osborne judgment they could not safely reckon on receiving the full amount due from the affiliated societies.

The Parliamentary Committee in their report on the work of the year, stated that the measure that took up most of the time of the session was the insurance bill. Unfortunately the party on this occasion was not so united as might have been wished, and its influence in getting amendments accepted by the government was lessened in consequence.

Representatives of the coal owners and the miners in the English federated districts forming the Conciliation Board area held a meeting on January 23 to further consider the question of a guaranteed minimum wage for all men working underground. The meeting was called by the joint secretaries at the request of the conference for the purpose of a fuller discussion of the men's proposals.

There was a general discussion on the men's proposals for a guaranteed minimum wage, which extended over about an hour. The man's proposals were set forth under three heads:

(1) The desirability of the right to do a day's work to establish the workmen's right to the agreed minimum wage.

(2) That aged and physically infirm workmen admitted to be incapable of doing a full day's work to be exempt from the payment of the minimum wage.

(3) Machinery to be set up, composed of an equal representation of employers and workmen to consider all cases where the workmen has not earned the wage.

The difficulty which again presented itself was the method of determining whether a workman had done a fair day's work, when he had failed to earn the wage under the scheme. After a general discussion, the conference appointed a sub-committee, consisting of an equal number of employers and employed, to endeavor to draft proposals which would satisfactorily cover this disputed point. The sub-committee sat for two hours, and as their labors were then incomplete it was decided to adjourn the conference.

The conference at which the organization and the future policy of the Transport Workers' Federation is to be thrashed out has been fixed to take place in Manchester on February 22. Innerwick, James Anderson, secretary of the Federation in reply to a question as to the possible future relations between his organization and the General Federation of Trade Unions, said that they did not mean to take any of its functions away from that body. The Transport Workers was a fighting federation. In consequence of its enormous growth they found it necessary to appoint district committees in all the large centers.

At the forthcoming conference a recommendation from the Executive Committee would be brought up in favor of local departments. They had already provisionally formed a committee in Glasgow, and two more departments were being made for similar committees to be established in Glasgow, Hull, London, the Bristol Channel, and on the Tyne, and probably a district would also soon be established for the East Coast of Scotland.

MINERS' NATIONAL CONVENTION ENDS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 2 — The United Mine Workers' international convention, at its closing session today, instructed the wage scale committee of the organization to continue its efforts to negotiate a new contract with the bituminous coal operators. The result will be submitted to a referendum vote of the union or a re-convening of the international convention.

The miners are insistent that they are, at this time, entitled to an advance while the operators desire a reduction of 10 cents a ton in the present scale, which expires on March 31.

After some weeks of negotiations the special committees of miners and operators will meet at Hot Springs, Ark., for the purpose of trying to effect a settlement, and if this cannot be done, a general strike will be declared.

A. Germer of Illinois and George W. Lasley of Indiana, were elected delegates to the Mining Congress of the World at Paris this year, while Francis Feehan of Pittsburgh, was elected the alternate. For 1913, John Moore of Ohio was elected by acclamation, with Duncan McDonald of Illinois as the second delegate, Frank Dawson of Wisconsin and Jamie Lord of Illinois were elected delegates to the convention of the Western Mining Federation. Indianapolis was again selected for the convention in 1914, although being a close second, with Pittsburgh also mentioned.

A resolution was introduced by Delegate J. Tunstall of Six Mile Run, near Pittsburgh, Pa., in favor of plans for the formation of a department of a sick and accident benefit department in the organization, and it was adopted.

The constitution committee, under the guidance of Van Bittner, of the Pittsburgh district, had the proposed program adopted and it will now go into effect on April 1, especially as it is the initiative, referendum and recall, biennial election of officers, biennial convention and, for the first time, the use of the Journal, the weekly organ of the mine workers, for political purposes.

This was sanctioned into this action soon after a bitter fight put up by Bittner and other leaders. The session was a lively one.

The policy of the Journal as outlined by the convention, will be to take up a State, such as Pennsylvania, before or during election time, and during the meeting of a legislature, and devote considerable space to showing the workers who and what the candi-

Pastor Russell's Sermon

PREACHING TO THE HEATHEN.

Pastor Russell Delivers Message of Cheer—On India's Coral Strand, Preacher Asks Mohammedans to Remember God's Promise to Abraham—With the Coming of the Messiah the Glory of the Lord Shall Fill All the Earth—Darkness Shall Be No More and God's Promises Shall Be Fulfilled.

TRAVANCORE, India, Feb. 4.—The Foreign Missions Committee of the International Bible Students Association has reached here. Pastor Russell, Chairman of the Committee, is widely known in this District. His coming has been a topic of interest for several weeks. Not only are Christian natives alert to meet him, but their Hindoo countrymen are also interested. Mohammedans are inquiring. Has Pastor Russell any especial message for us? The strange event is that the Pastor shall spend a full week in this District and to at Madras next Sunday. He will, of course, be speaking every day and, although this will be done through an interpreter, the natives are keenly alert to hear what they call, God's Love Message. Addressing a large crowd under rather unfavorable circumstances, the Pastor said:—

I have chosen as my text on this occasion the Message of the angels at the birth of our Redeemer—"Fear not! Behold, we bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people." (Luke ii. 10.) I feel that I am not entirely a stranger to many of you, nor you to me. For a considerable time I have seen regular reports sent in from this District to the International Bible Students Association, of which I have the honor of being President. These reports informed us of your growing love for God and for the Message of His grace set before us in the Bible. Everything of interest that transpires amongst you here is promptly reported to us—the numbers who attend the meetings, the numbers of adults immersed and the numbers of children consecrated by their parents.

These reports in turn are published to the Bible Students all over the world. We want you to know of the Christian love of these children of God of various nationalities are represented by the Committee now before you. We desire to know of your spiritual state and of what may be done wisely and economically to forward the same. Our Society is not wealthy, but the little that it possesses is most cheerfully and economically used in the service of the Lord and His Cause.

Even some of your faces are familiar to us, for Brother Devasahayam sent us the photos of his native assistants of this District. No doubt he explained to you his own marvelous experiences, as he told them to us: How, as the son of a native Methodist missionary, he thought to follow in his father's footsteps, after obtaining an education. He came to America, and as a result of a four years' course in a Methodist College in Ohio, found himself an agnostic—a Higher Critic, an Evolutionist, a thorough unbeliever in the inspiration of the Bible. Too honest to preach what he no longer believed, he abandoned missionary intentions.

Later, six Volumes of "Studies in the Scriptures," published by the International Bible Students association, brought the brother back to the Bible and to a fuller and more intelligent faith than he had ever before known. Then he had a Message of "good tidings" for his race, and God's providence sent him back to you; and now the true Light, through its instrumentality, has reached many of your hearts and brought gladness through a more intelligent knowledge of God through His Word. Ah, dear friends, we all know what a joyful Message of Truth has come to you, and we trust that you will be faithful in letting your light shine before others and thus glorify your Father in Heaven.

THE FATHER OF MERCIES.

Two days ago, on the island of Ceylon, my attention was drawn to the tomb of the good Bishop Heber. Immediately to my mind came the words of his well-known hymn.

"What though the spicy breezes
Blow soft o'er Ceylon's Isle,
And every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile!"

From childhood I had sung those words, and finally found myself on Ceylon's Isle. But, my dear hearers, I am glad to say that the good Bishop exaggerated a little the vileness of the human types of this vicinity. Poverty, indeed, I see on every hand, and, if vileness be measured by our great Creator by lack of wealth, then certainly you are vile in comparison to some more wealthy. But can it really believe that this is the Bishop standard? Shall we not rather believe the words of Jehovah, "Man looketh upon the outward appearance, but God looketh upon the heart!" (1 Samuel xvi. 7.)

I am not here to flatter you—not here to say that poverty is a proof of purity of heart. On the contrary, it is my duty as a minister of Christ to declare that there is none righteous, no, not one. But I may say to you that, admitting that all men have sinned—sons in ways more peculiar to one nationality and some to another, it is ours to point out the need of an Atonement for sin and the fact that "the blood (the sacrifice) of Jesus Christ our Lord, cleanseth us from all sin"—Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other Name given under heaven or among men whereby we must be saved"—Jew or Gentile, book or tree, Caucasian or Indian.

I believe, therefore, that I cannot do better than to relate to you the "Old, Old Story," of the love of God manifested in Christ, the Redeemer. My text tells that O'd Story in precious words of life, which had evidently been lost during the darker ages and since; for many of you may be surprised to know that the vast majority of people in Christian lands have very slight conception of the love of God! Indeed, I am sorry that it is true, but the faith of many Christians, as expressed in their creeds, is more terrible, more God-dishonoring, than are the beliefs of any heathen in the whole world.

I am glad to tell you, however, that really very few people in Christian lands any longer believe these vile creeds. I know not how much or them are preached here. True Christian people are much better than their creeds. They have a sympathy for you who live in these parts and for residents of other benighted lands. Many of them give liberally, whether largely or not, in their desire to benefit the brethren.

I assure you that however much their creeds assert it, these kind-hearted people do not believe that the masses of mankind are bound to eternal misery because of not having heard of the "Only Name." They really do not know what they believe. The smoke of the "dark ages" still prevails to such an extent that their eyes of understanding cannot see the length and the breadth and the height and the depth of the love of God, which passeth all understanding. They do know, however, that, although they are fallen from God's image through sin, they still have too much of His likeness in the quality of love to torture anybody, or even dumb brutes; hence they realize that there must be some mistake in the creeds which they have so long preached, which consign all except "the elect" to eternal misery.

NOW LOOK AT OUR TEXT.

Note in our text the terms of a blessing intended of God for every creature. Two thousand years before the angels uttered those words God gave the same Message of hope and joy to Father Abraham. Let those of this audience who are Mohammedans, as well as others, call to mind the promise to which I refer. It was the promise with the oath. God, foreknowing that the fulfilment of the promise would be long delayed, made oath for it, so that all who trust in Him might have the consolation of that promise. And what is the promise? God said to Abraham, "In thee and to thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Abraham was very glad! He rejoiced that the curse that had rested upon the race would ultimately be lifted; secondly, he rejoiced that the blessing of the Almighty would reach mankind through his posterity. Neither Jahmael nor Isaac was the promised seed—neither blessed the world. Neither Jacob nor Esau was the promised Seed of Abraham to bless the world, for neither of them did the work. Neither did the nation of Israel succeed in blessing the world; nor did they attain eternal life for themselves. The Divine Purpose looked down to Messias and saw in Him the real Seed of Abraham through whom eventually Divine Power will be exercised and Divine Grace be shed abroad among men.

According to the Scriptures, the Messiah, the Deliverer, is composite—composed of numerous members. Each one of these members must be tested and proven in respect to his loyalty to God and to the principles of righteousness before he can attain to his glorious reward—the divine nature. God has foreordained how many shall constitute this Messiah company and what shall be their character-likeness and blessing, according to which they may make their "calling and their election sure.

They must be so torn to God and to the principles of righteousness that they will gladly sacrifice every earthly interest, yea, life itself. It will be readily seen that there are not very many of such deep devotion in this, in the whole world. However, God, who knows the end from the beginning, declares that His purposes shall not fail, which means that the will succeed in the anointed three in finding the predestinated number of the proper faith, obedience, character.

RESTRICTIONS AT FIRST ONLY.

The primary restrictions were that this glorious opportunity to become members of the Messiah, "The Seed of Abraham" for the blessing of the world, must be first offered to the natural seed of Abraham. Only after the worship of these had been gathered could that great privilege be extended to others. But mark you well—the selection of this special class does not involve the "non elect" in eternal torment, nor in any disaster, for the coming to the gathering of the "elect" should be regarded as an assurance on God's part of the fulfilment of His larger promise, that through these saintly ones, for the Messianic Body, great blessings are to be answered upon Abraham's natural seed; yea, and upon all the families of the earth.

The blessing of the word will be Restitution. If, as the Evolutionists tell us, the Bible theory, that man was created in God's image, is wrong and he is really the offspring of an ape, then restitution would be the worst thing that could possibly come to mankind—to restore him to simian conditions. But the Bible is quite consistent in giving the declaration to man that he was created perfect and upright and in the image and likeness of God and that our defilement came through the sin of disobedience and that our degradation came through heredity and that we needed to be redeemed with the life of another—that "as by a man came death, by a man also should come the resurrection of the dead." The simple story of the Bible is of human degradation and death, of redemption and of a coming time of uplifting from sin and death conditions to perfection and life. This offer will be as world-wide as was the condemnation which came upon our race through Adam. For six thousand years our race has been living under a reign of sin and death, but the Seventh Thousand will be the great Sabbath typified by Israel's Jubilee Year, in whatever debtors went free and every man returned to his former estate.

The glorious possibilities of that thousand years are variously presented to us in the Bible. It is to be a New Day, to be ushered in by the Sun of Righteousness with healing in His beams. Ignorance and sin, sorrow and death, shall flee away—dark and superstition shall vanish. Satan shall be bound for a thousand years and deceive man no more. Messiah will reign with Divine Power. A Priest upon His Throne, He will extend mercy to those whom He rules. He will instruct them, succor them, uplift them, and, as the hand of God, will wipe away all tears.

Meantime the earth itself will be made to "blossom as the rose" and to "yield her increase," and "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad." The knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the sea." The result will be that "every knee will bow and every tongue confess" to the glory of God, for all will shall reject this wonderful demonstration of Divine Power and love will be esteemed unworthy of any further favors and will be destroyed from among the people in the Second Death. St. Peter tells us that all the holy Prophets told this blessed story of coming restitution. See his plain statement of the matter in Acts iii. 19-24.

A REDEMPTIVE SACRIFICE NECESSARY.

We must not forget that in the Divine arrangement as sacrifice for sins was necessary. Because of his disobedience, Adam was condemned to death, but not to eternal torment, as our creeds mistakenly declare. His life was lost to him, with all that it had—mentally, morally and physically wrecked. God could not justly set aside His own sentence and declare us worthy of his favor and its gift of eternal life. But since all came into this condemned condition through one man's disobedience, it was possible that all should be released from the death sentence through the sacrifice of one Redeemer. "As all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive"—every man in his own order."—I Corinthians xv. 22, 23.

Here we have an important question: Has a Redeemer been provided for that God can justly punish Messiah to awaken the sleeping members of our race and to uplift all out of sin and death, back to human perfection and an earthly Edon, world-wide? The answer is, Yes. Jesus left His heavenly glory and was made flesh, "that He by the grace of God should taste death (not eternal torment) for every man." (Hebrews ii. 9.) His reward of the Father was a glorious exaltation to the right hand of Divine Majesty, "far above angels, principalities and powers." This He was qualified to receive and to bless those whom His death redeemed.

Why, then, does the Messianic work delay? Why did Jesus not immediately begin the work of restitution? The Bible answers the question most clearly. It assures us that before that work can begin there must be selected from amongst men, by a special call and by special tests, a saintly class, a "little flock," to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom in joint-heirship with His only Son, the Redeemer. So, then, what remains is for all of this class to finish their course with joy and then, by the First Resurrection, to pass beyond the veil to be forever with their Lord as spirit beings—partakers of the divine nature, far above angels, principalities and powers.

Then the spiritual Seed of Abraham will be complete, and then it will begin its work of blessing, first the natural seed of Abraham, and subsequently, all the families of the earth. If at first we were inclined to feel impatient of the long delay, we are checked by the thought that if the work of God in the selection of the spiritual Seed of Abraham, "the stars of heaven," had been completed sooner, we would have missed the glorious opportunity of becoming members of it. Rather, therefore, let us rejoice in the fact, realizing that the world in general suffers nothing in death, but merely sleeps until the resurrection morning. Let us be glad and rejoice to give glory to God and strive to make our "calling and our election sure" in a place in Abraham's spiritual Seed, at whom St. Paul declares, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed and heirs according to the promise." (Galatians iii. 29.) How much we will may rejoice and how much we will may rejoice in the glorious Plan of our God, whose heights and breadth and height and depth transcend our highest hopes and ambitions!

continue those precious truths and may the spirit of the Lord rest upon you in do-ing so much space to those religious features.

Respectfully yours,

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Having been a reader of your paper since September, I desire to express my heartfelt appreciation of your most welcome paper in our home. We look forward to it each week with great pleasure.

We so heartily enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons, they appeal to one's common reasoning, for they are reasonable in every sense of the word.

We also enjoy the interesting Question Box and Sunday School Lessons; they are so helpful and instructive. We prize your paper highly, also tell others of it and its good type.

We know it is due time for the seals of the Bible to be broken and the knowledge of the Truth shall be spread broadcast in the land.

Your appreciative and interesting reader,
MRS. H. E. WHITCOMB.

"I HAVE FOUND A RANSOM." Job. 33: 24. "FOR ALL." 1 Timothy 2: 5, 6.

What soothing words are those I hear!
"I have found a ransom."
Fills my soul with hope and cheer.
"I have found a ransom."
Jesus paid the "Ransom price,"
Gave His life, great sacrifice;
The mystery in He sees it twice!
"I have found a ransom."
"I have found a ransom."

First He uses it for his friends.
"I have found a ransom."
Then from sin's enemies when this age ends.
"I have found a ransom."
"I have found a ransom."
"Other sheep not of this fold."
With Him His gracious love behold;
And sing with the Prophet Job of old.
"I have found a ransom."
"I have found a ransom."

The Higher Critics fail to see—
"I have found a ransom."
Those words are naught to the great "D. D."
"I have found a ransom."
Where the Evolutionist failed to look,
The Christ and sectarian both forsook
You'll find the key to the grand old book
"I have found a ransom."
"I have found a ransom."

Sweeter than the song of birds
"I have found a ransom."
What a depth of meaning in so few words
"I have found a ransom."
Oh, what joy in a few more years!
When the great Messiah to all appears,
And all the earth this message hears!
"I have found a ransom."
"I have found a ransom."

"For All." Adds the inspired Paul.
"I have found a ransom."
All were lost in the fall.
"I have found a ransom."
From Shoal—Hades—all the tomb,
Then the glorious Millenial kingdom—
Singing, shouting as they come!
"I have found a ransom."
"I have found a ransom."

When the New Covenant with Israel is sealed,
"I have found a ransom."
Then God's great plan will be revealed.
"I have found a ransom."
In palace, hovel, desert and street,
In all the earth where mankind meet,
This message will be soft and sweet.
"I have found a ransom."
"I have found a ransom."

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

New York, Feb. 4.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am reading your splendid paper each week and enjoy the grand sermons by Pastor Russell and also the Question Box, and Sunday School Lessons. Your paper is the best one among the several which I take. Have been pleased to speak of it to others. The Lord bless you in the good work you are taking in spreading the glorious Truth.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. CLARA AKINS.

Canada, Feb. 3.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

Have just received the first copy of your paper. It was kindly recommended to me as giving excellent service in the publishing of Pastor Russell's sermons, Sunday School Lesson, comments, etc. I must say I am delighted with the copy received. Have been using some a book which gives a one column report and the half a loaf is better than no bread I will not be satisfied with it again. Ten years ago the printed Scripture expositions of this noble man of God pointed me to the Bible for the great light of God's plan that has led me into the freedom and liberty of the Truth away from the doctrines of the dark ages. I have almost carried at the local, fearless yet humble defense of truth which he by the grace of God is carrying on. I must not, dare not, deny myself of the great privilege of reading on the words thus supplied under the Lord's favor. The Lord bless you and all helpers in spreading the glorious Truth.

Yours truly,
J. S. WILLIAMS.

I have had great pleasure in recently renewing through the Watch Tower Society, my yearly subscription to the Tribune, and consider that the appropriate time for sending you an expression of continued appreciation of the weekly sermons and other precious features of your paper. As these are given an unusually prominent position, it is to be hoped that all who subscribe because of their particular interest in these sermons will do their best to widen the interest still further and thereby encourage the continued publication of features that are worthy of the highest commendation. With all good wishes for continued success.

Sincerely yours,

CANAL LOCK FENDERS.

Spring Buffer Stringers to Protect Walls From Damage.

Fenders in the form of a continuous line of beams or stringers, 12 by 12 inches in section, suspended by short chains or hangers and bearing every five feet against castings supported on four helical springs, placed in cups in the concrete, will protect the walls of the approaches to the Panama canal locks against damage from the ships.

The approach to the locks is formed by an enlargement of the canal until a distance varying from 1,445 to 1,700 feet beyond the first lock gates and by walls which make an angle of about 30 degrees with the outside walls and extend 300 to 400 feet beyond them. When the ships bump against these walls as they are towed into the locks by the electric towing locomotives the stringers will take the shock. The hangers are located every fifteen feet along the wall, so that one of stringers on the lower approach walls at Gatun will have a length of 1,302 feet, and the shortest, that on the 970 feet in length on the upper approach wall at Gatun. In all the locks there will be forty-four of these stringers, requiring 31,200 feet of timber. On all the walls but the upper ones of the Miraflores and Pedro Miguel locks there will be a double line of buffers on each wall, the upper buffer being placed two and a half feet below the top of the wall and the second one ten feet below the top. The buffer castings required will weigh 2,079,800 pounds.—Popular Mechanics.

Canning Mangoes in India.

The process of canning the mango is precisely the same as that employed in canning freestone peaches in California. The mangoes are carefully pared and the stones taken out. Overripe, bruised or otherwise unfit fruits are rejected. The mangoes are then sliced off their peel and stones are put in cans, which are then weighed and filled with syrup. Then the cans are tapered on to the opening of the can with a capping steel, leaving a vent hole in the middle of the can for driving out the air inside. Steam from a boiler is passed into water in a large wooden tank and the cans are placed in the boiling water in crates suspended from a crane. This is called exhausting. After the air has been driven out the vent hole is soldered up and the cans are put in boiling water. This operation is called processing. After a certain time the cans are taken out and placed in the cooling vat. Some of the cans are put in an incubator and the fruit examined with a microscope to see whether it is free from bacteria.—Consular Report.

Machanical Tide Prophet.

One of the latest developments of the chemical contrivances is a tide prophet recently completed. It does the work of seven sixty computers and foretells with accuracy the depth and time of high and low tide in any part of the United States at any instant of any day a year or two in advance. It will be used in seventy of the greatest ports of the world, counting none of the nineteen harbors. Such information as the tide prophet can furnish is desired by the marine engineer who plans alterations in the ports. The photographic surveyor also depends upon the knowledge afforded by the machine for the purposes of his survey. The machine lets gears to represent the influences of the sun, others which serve for planetary movements and others which represent local conditions. The machine stands by an electrical device when high and low tide is reached.

Former Waste Worth Millions.

For more than thirty years the lead mills of the middle west have been turning out tons of refuse, which at any time threatened to engulf the industry, and the contents of this dump are estimated at 100,000,000 tons. A few years ago it had little or no value, but now it is estimated to be worth $20,000,000. This material is being worked up chemically into cement, and great works are being performed with it. It has also been found to make fine railroad ballast and pavement for highways. In the form of cement it is largely taking the place of wood. Only 5 per cent of the material handled by a lead mill is available ore, and therefore the waste represents 95 per cent of the material taken from the ground and worked over.

COMPASS VARIATIONS.

Magnetic Needle Rarely Points True to the North Pole.

"True as the magnetic needle to the pole" is a familiar saying. How untrue it is may be learned from a current publication by the coast and geodetic survey, department of commerce and labor, containing tables showing the changes that have taken place in the direction of the magnetic needle in every section of the United States from 1750 to 1910.

That the places where the magnetic needle does point true to the pole are limited to a small region of the earth is well known to land surveyors, navigators and explorers, who, in the pursuit of their duties, have to be guided by the indications of the compass needle.

History furnishes interesting instances of the early ignorance of this fact. On Sept. 13, 1492, consternation prevailed among the sailors on board Columbus' ship when it was noticed for the first time that the compass needle, instead of pointing a little east of the north star, as it had done all along since their leaving European shores, though, to be sure, by a gradually diminishing amount, pointed exactly somewhat west of the north star and continued to do so as the ship passed to the westward.

Thus it was that Columbus on his first voyage not only discovered a new world, but also the important and salient fact that the compass needle not only does not point true to the pole, but that it varies in its direction from place to place. Before that time the deviation of the needle from the true north was considered due to the imperfection in the mechanical construction of the magnetic needles and was not before recognized as a matter of scientific fact. Incidentally it may also be stated that during this first voyage Columbus passed through only one place a little west of Fayal island, Azores, where the needle pointed to the true north, and the next one after Sebastian Cabot observed another such place somewhere farther to the northeast, between Newfoundland and Pedro Miguel locks there will be a double line of buffers on each wall, the upper buffer being placed two and a half feet below the top of the wall and the second one ten feet below the top. The buffer castings required will weigh 2,079,800 pounds.—Popular Mechanics.

Canning Mangoes in India.

The process of canning the mango is precisely the same as that employed in canning freestone peaches in California. The mangoes are carefully pared and the stones taken out. Overripe, bruised or otherwise unfit fruits are rejected. The mangoes are carefully peeled of their peel and stones are put in cans, which are then weighed and filled with syrup. Then the cans are tapered on to the opening of the can with a capping steel, leaving a vent hole in the middle of the can for driving out the air inside. Steam from a boiler is passed into water in a large wooden tank and the cans are placed in the boiling water in crates suspended from a crane. This is called exhausting. After the air has been driven out the vent hole is soldered up and the cans are put in boiling water. This operation is called processing. After a certain time the cans are taken out and placed in the cooling vat. Some of the cans are put in an incubator and the fruit examined with a microscope to see whether it is free from bacteria.—Consular Report.

Mechanical Tide Prophet.

One of the latest developments of the chemical contrivances is a tide prophet recently completed. It does the work of seven sixty computers and foretells with accuracy the depth and time of high and low tide in any part of the United States at any instant of any day a year or two in advance. It will be used in seventy of the greatest ports of the world, counting none of the nineteen harbors. Such information as the tide prophet can furnish is desired by the marine engineer who plans alterations in the ports. The photographic surveyor also depends upon the knowledge afforded by the machine for the purposes of his survey. The machine lets gears to represent the influences of the sun, others which serve for planetary movements and others which represent local conditions. The machine stands by an electrical device when high and low tide is reached.

NOVEL MIXING VALVE.

Automatic Device For Controlling Temperature of Bath Water.

The accompanying illustration shows a unique German electrically operated mixing valve by which any desired warm water temperature may be kept constant. It is adapted for use in large institutions, such as baths, sanitariums and the like, as well as for various industrial purposes where constant temperatures are required.

It will be observed that the temperature is controlled by a thermometer whose bulb reaches into the pipe containing the mixed hot and cold water. This thermometer is provided with platinum contact points connected to a double switch lever, which may be set for the maximum and minimum temperature desired. This double switch may be seen directly over the latch in the illustration. Wires run from the switch to a set of relays, shown at the left hand side, which control the circuit of a motor that operates the mixing valve. This valve connects either the hot water pipe or the cold water pipe or both with the mixed water supply pipe.

The operation of the device is as follows:

If it be desired to keep the temperatures within the limits of 78 degrees and 82 degrees F. the two switch levers are adjusted accordingly. There after the valve will operate automatically. If the temperature in the pipe with which the thermometer connects is below 78 degrees, the circuit of the motor will close automatically, opening the valve to the hot water supply pipe until the temperature in the pipe has been raised to or above 78 degrees. If the mixture grows warmer than 82 degrees operation will automatically be supplied. A large number of institutes may be supplied through a single pipe line, and the temperature of the water supplied to each tub will automatically be maintained between the predetermined limits.

AUTOMATIC MIXING VALVE.

Queer Effect of Soda Ash.

A new soda ash plant started abroad employs many men in the process of charging the salt as it comes from the huge vats which underlie the locality. When these men went to work they wore hair that ranged from the light blond of youth to the auburn. Before the salt was shiny locks that grew upon the heads of other races. Gradually it was noticed that the hair of the blond men was assuming a golden tinge, and as time wore on the golden hue deepened. Negroes' hair in time ranges through all the shades of red, from a golden auburn to a deep red. The change from the brown hair of some of the men to the reddish tinge appeared to be slower, while the black hair resisted longest. But now virtually every man who has worked in the plant more than a year can only say that his hair is red. Mustaches and beards have been affected the same way.

OUR STRONGEST MUSCLES.

The Chief One and the Largest Is the Gluteus Maximus.

The strongest muscle in the human body is the gluteus maximus. Hardly a movement of the lower extremities can be made without bringing it into play, but its chief duty is to balance the pelvis on the head of the thigh bone. It assists in carrying the body forward and onward in walking, and without its aid any movement of the body from the hips would be impossible.

As it is the strongest, so is it also the largest muscle we possess. In the full grown man it can exert a force of 110 pounds to the square inch of its section in the thickest part.

Another strong muscle, which is situated in the calf of the leg, is capable of sustaining seven times the weight of the body. The great tendon which is inserted in the heel bone and which is called tendon achillis, is also of singular strength. When removed from the body it has sustained a weight of 2,000 pounds, yet sometimes by the sudden action of the muscles of the calf, to which it belongs, it has been snapped across.

The Cree Indian's Weeing.

The Cree Indian girl is sought in marriage not for love, but because she is strong and useful. The young brave who wishes to take her for his squaw is often faint hearted and frequently sends by a disinterested person or secretly leaves in her tent a goody silk handkerchief purchased from the Hudson Bay company. When his intentions are thus declared he goes shy and awkward, to the father and asks for the hand of his daughter. Should the parent refuse consent to the union the undaunted wooer seeks a bride elsewhere. He never sulks or mopes; he never feels that his heart will break, but calmly selects and, if possible, weds for another maiden. Women are plentiful, and perseverance is sure to end in success.—Wide World Magazine.

A Tragic Possibility.

Uncle Lereu, a gridded, old wood sawyer, was told by a lady for whom he had been working to wait in the kitchen for his supper. Aunt Caroline, the cook, filled his plate with choice bits from the finest dishes obtainable. Uncle Loren fell upon them with relish. Soon, however, a cloud crossed his face.

"What all you, Unc' Loren?" asked Aunt Caroline solicitously. "Is you got ar pain?"

"Tain't dat, Sis' Caline," said Uncle Loren. "But I's feared I'll git filled up like I eats all I wants."—Youth's Companion.

A Cigar Lighter.

Gibbs—I went a railway journey the other day and took a box of cigars with me. Nibbs—Well, I suppose you had a good smoke? Gibbs—Aye, I had that, but when the train had started I found I'd no matches. Nibbs—No matches, and yet you'd a good smoke? How did you manage for a light? Gibbs—Why, I screwed the box lid right out one and that made the box a cigar lighter.—London Tit-Bits.

The Cure.

"Alas, I am blind!" wailed Love. "Why don't you consult a doctor?" asked Experience. "I know a famous specialist who could cure you?"

"What is his name?" asked Love.

"Marriage," replied Experience.—Philadelphia Record.

Ate With Tears in His Eyes.

On one occasion General Scott attended a banquet at which the states of the Union were represented by a dish in some way characteristic of each commonwealth. Pennsylvania was represented by a bowl of sauerkraut, and in speaking of the fact the next morning the general remarked, by partook of it with tears in my eyes." The fondness of Scott for the good things of life is well known in connection with the famous "nasty plate of soup" incident, gave point to the name of "Marshal Sauerkraut," with which he was once saluted by the Rev. Dr. Smith Pyne, an inveterate punster. It was Dr. Pyne who once exclaimed after hearing Ole Bull play, "If honorary degrees were conferred upon musicians Ole Bull would be Bulle D. D."—Marian Gouverneur in "As I Remember."

THE SAVIOR TEACHING BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

"ABOUT MY FATHER'S BUSINESS."

Luke ii, 40-52—Feb. 11.

"How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?"—V. 49.

THE WONDERFUL BABE of Bethlehem "grew and waxed strong, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon Him." The perfect boy was of course far in advance of imperfect children. The schooling privileges of today were unknown. The education gleaned by the masses came to them chiefly through contact with their elders, likely itself being handed down from generation to generation, except for the scholarly.

Today's more opportunities than this—few were able to read; but Jesus was amongst those few—not because of schooling privileges in His youth, but because He was brilliant mind, which gathered everything that came to it.

The superiority of the children of Jesus are attested by the fact that He was created the synagogue ruler in His own city, Nazareth, a reader and expounder was generally recognized that the service was usually turned over to Him. (Luke iv, 16). Yet the people marvelled, and said, "Is not this Jesus in a son of letters, having never gone to school? And they all bare Him witness, and wondered at the graces of His speech (Luke iv, 22). The explanation is that Jesus was perfect, while all about Him were imperfect.

Our lesson relates particularly to an incident which occurred when Jesus had just passed twelve years of age. He was then obeyed the Mosaic Law by attending the Feast of Passover at Jerusalem several days. The great throng assembled was with them. The expression, "parents," does not imply that Saint Luke supposes that Joseph was not the father of Jesus any more than that Mary so considered the matter when she spoke of Joseph as being "thy father." He was the foster father of Jesus. The language is in exact harmony with what the world has under such circumstances today.

Jesus knew of His peculiar birth and of the great prophecies then centered in Him, related by Gabriel to His mother, and He was on the alert to fulfill His obligations to the God the Heavenly Father. He surmised that since at twelve years of age Jewish boys were under the requirements of the Law Covenant, this arrangement might possibly have been made as an addition of the proper course.

Therefore He resolved to consult the very highest authorities respecting the teachings of the Law on this subject. He sought information from the learned Scribes and Pharisees and Doctors. During a considerable part of the time of the Passover week the gracious words of His nation were engaged in public functions, and hence His best opportunity for consulting them was to be at the close of the feast, and whenever He could gain their attention.

When the time came for the return journey He had not finished His investigations of the Scripture teachings on the point. He presumed that those with Him was in the company with some of their relatives, went a day's journey homeward before He missed them. But He was not in the company. Then they returned and sought Him and finally found Him in the temple, discussing the question which to Him were the all important one of the time at which the public ministry might be begun, according to the Law. Evidently He had just finished His quest and found that although a boy of twelve years He was amenable to the Law, none could enter upon a teaching or preaching service until thirty years of age.

"They found Him in the Temple."

Jesus Increased in Wisdom.

In the last verse of our study we read: "Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and with men." It was not a boy who was to be the Redeemer, even as it was not a boy who was to be the world's conqueror, to be a "corresponding price" for Father Adam and the race which lost life in Adam. He must first to be developed into manhood.

For eighteen years He kept growing in wisdom and in favor with God and men. He did not grow in the Father's favor in the sense of becoming less sinful and more righteous, but in the sense of becoming developed—reaching human perfection. Just as a piece of fruit in growing from the green state to its ripe state is

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Hearings on the Proposed Amendment of the Immigration Laws--Congressman McCall, of Massachusetts, Wants Amendment of Federal Constitution to Permit Regulation of Hours of Labor in all States by National Congress--Assistance for Striking Textile Workers at Lawrence.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Senate Immigration Committee has modified the Dillingham Immigration bill in a manner calculated to remove the possibility of recurrence of trouble with Japan. Under the terms of the bill, originally reported from the committee, it excluded Chinese and Japanese laborers, thus barring laborers from countries whose subjects cannot become naturalized Americans. Under the general agreement now in force between this country and Japan the State Department protested and in accordance with that protest the bill was modified.

Arguments favoring Congressional legislation restricting immigration and having as the chief restriction strict enforcement of the illiteracy test were recently advanced by representatives of the Junior Order of American Mechanics before the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization of the House. Rev. Lichliter, Chief Clerk of the Agriculture Department of Pennsylvania, was the chief spokesman. During his remarks the reverend gentleman declared that the foreign laborer could live under conditions and circumstances where it would be impossible for an American laborer to exist, and quoted from a report by President Samuel Gompers regarding existing conditions in the anthracite coal regions of Western Pennsylvania, which declared that European labor has almost supplanted American labor in the mines.

A resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, granting Congress the power to pass laws regulating the hours of labor generally throughout the United States, has been introduced in the House by Congressman Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts.

In the Stenographers' Journal for this month, General Secretary-Treasurer James F. McHugh announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election. Mr. McHugh has held his present office for twenty years, and is known by the members of our movement as a thorough-going outspoken trade unionist, without any attached irons. The retirement of Mr. McHugh will be a distinct loss to the labor movement of this country.

Representatives of the coal miners of Indiana, Illinois and Pennsylvania urged the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee recently to create an interstate Trade Commission with the same control over the coal mining industry that the Interstate Commerce Commission has over transportation.

"I am satisfied that the cause of organized labor has not been injured in the least by the testimony I gave before the Federal Grand Jury at Indianapolis," asserted Secretary Morrison upon his return. "I gave the Grand Jury all the information at my command, and the books of the American Federation of Labor were thrown open to the probers. Further than I am confident that the cause of labor will be benefitted by the results, quite naturally, I cannot divulge the nature of the testimony I gave before the Grand Jury. We have nothing to conceal and quite willingly gave the probers all the information possible."

The Executive Board of the United Textile Workers of America has decided to give all assistance possible to the striking textile workers in Lawrence, Mass., and has issued a statement and appeal for aid. The Executive Board requested the A. F. of L. to indorse its appeal. In answer thereto the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor asked John Golden, President of the United Textile Workers' Union, as follows: "The Executive Council of the A. F. of L. approves the statement issued in regard to the Textile Workers' strike in Lawrence and gives its hearty endorsement to the appeal for funds in the aid of the struggling men and women and their dependents of Lawrence. It is earnestly hoped that labor and our friends will generally respond. That success attend the protest, the strike and the movement. You may use this endorsement on your circular appeal." All funds should be sent to James H. Moseley, Treasurer, 154 Broadway, Lawrence, Mass. Money thus forwarded will reach the duly accredited headquarters of the American Federation of Labor and the United Textile Workers of America, and expended exclusively in aid of the strikers.

PLEAD NOT GUILTY TO CHARGE

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10.—Olaf Tveitmoe, Anton Johannsen and E. A. Clancy of San Francisco, and J. B. Mooney of Salt Lake City, pleaded not guilty, when arraigned before Judge Olin Wellborn in the United States District Court, on indictments charging them with entering into a conspiracy to transport dynamite on railroad trains in violation of the interstate commerce laws. The attorney for the accused men informed the court that his clients desired a speedy trial.

A new and promising union of jewelry workers was recently formed at a meeting in Providence, R. I.

HOW TO HELP "PHOSSY JAW" VICTIMS.

A READER interested in the fight phosphorus bill issue writes suggesting that even if Congress shou'd refuse to make that bill law, the fight for the rescue of the workers in match factories from the awful disease known as "phossy jaw" ought not to be regarded as hopeless. Of course, the quickest and most effective way of ending the ravages of "phossy jaw" is to have the use of phosphorus in match manufacture prohibited by Congress. If there had been such an act 10 years ago it would never have been necessary to indict our industrial system with the "phossy jaw" horror.

It is notorious that not less than 15 to 20 per cent of the employes of many of the match factories of the United States have had to have their jaws cut out in the last three or four years, owing solely to the disease that the use of the phosphorus induces. Many of the manufacturers assert that they desire to eliminate the use of phosphorus, but that competitive conditions forbid. One will not quit until all quit, and there are some who will not quit until the law compels them. Unfortunately, there is not as certain a prospect of the passage of the Esch bill at Washington as there ought to be. In default of its enactment, the reader of whom we have already spoken suggests that municipalities and state legislatures should pass acts or ordinances prohibiting the sale or use of matches containing any white phosphorus. The ground upon which states—and even cities—may outlaw all such matches is that children endanger their health by putting such matches into their mouths; not only that, but such matches are peculiarly subject to accidental ignition. To prohibit their sale or use is therefore apparently well within the police powers of municipalities.

Even a board of health would seem to need no special investment of new powers in order to place a ban on the white phosphorus matches, thus reaching the match-workers and protecting the publish health and safety simultaneously. The power of city councils to deal with the evil appears unquestioned. "Thus "phossy jaw" may be exterminated in spite of the strength of the white phosphorus lobby in Congress. New York city has already acted, a rule having been adopted and officially published by the Municipal Explosives Commission as follows:

Article VIII, Section 3. On and after the first day of January, 1913, it shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture, transport, store, sell, or give away in the City of New York, any matches in the manufacture of which white phosphorus enters as an ingredient."

THE UNFAIR TAX ON OLEO

IN connection with the boycott of butter, which was inaugurated recently by the women's club of Pittsburgh, a Pittsburgh newspaper has received a communication from George M. Whitaker, secretary of the National Dairy Union, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., objecting to a statement to the effect that the federal law "virtually places a tax of 10 cents a pound on oleomargarine for the express purpose of preventing its consumption and maintaining a butter monopoly." To this statement Secretary Whitaker replies: "The 10-cent tax is not on normal oleomargarine but on oleomargarine made to counterfeit butter. It is therefore merely a tax on counterfeiting and could in no way affect the price of butter."

In spite of the criticism of Secretary Whitaker, speaking as a representative of the butter interests, the statement to which he objects was entirely correct and fully warranted. Mr. Whitaker's description of the tax as a tax on "normal oleomargarine" calls attention to the care with which he avoids using the word "colored." The fact of the matter is that the law levies the tax on all oleomargarine that is colored.

Now, neither butter nor oleomargarine looks palatable uncolored. Practically all butter made for sale is colored, to take away the lard-like or tasteless appearance that it was in its uncolored (that is, in the language of Secretary Whitaker its normal) state. All that the oleomargarine manufacturers ask is that they be permitted to use the same harmless coloring matter to make their product marketable as butter is made marketable. To permit the butter makers to use coloring matter, but forbid its use to the oleomargarine makers, is a discrimination for which no excuse that holds water can be found.

It plainly betrays the purpose of the tax—which is not to prevent the sale of oleomargarine as butter, but to restrict and hamper its sale at all. In a word, it is a tax on coloring—a tax in prevent oleo from being treated in the same way as butter to make it presentable and fit for the table.

If the only object of the law were to prevent deception, it would free oleomargarine from the discriminating tax, allow it to be colored in the same way and by the same means as butter, and require every package exposed by dealers for sale to be plainly labeled o'comargarine, with penalties for false labeling similar to the penalties for false labeling of any other food. To argue that the tax of 10 cents a pound now imposed on the coloring of oleomargarine (but not on the coloring of butter) does not cause an enormous decrease in the consumption of oleomargarine not only among the well-to-do but among the poor, is nonsensical. That is the effect of the tax, and it is the effect the butter monopoly (which forced the legislation) intended.

If the women's clubs, to say nothing of the labor organizations, decide to strike a telling blow at the butter trust and bring the price of butter down at least ten cents, they will insist that Congress repeal the oleomargarine tax.

The Miners' Federation of England has decided to take a vote on the question of national stoppage of the work in the mines in February, based upon the question of a minimum wage scale.

DR. ABBE, FATHER OF THE U. S. WEATHER BUREAU.

PROBABLY most people will learn with surprise that the original "Old Probe," the father of the United States weather bureau, is still active in the person of Dr. Cleveland Abbe, meteorologist in charge of the government station at Mount Weather, Va. His eminent scientific achievements are to be recognized by the Royal Meteorological society of England, which will present to him the Symons gold medal on Jan. 17. Dr. Abbe will receive it in person, journeying to London for that purpose. On Sept. 1, 1869, he began making daily weather reports for the Cincinnati chamber of commerce, and the United States government at once took up similar work. He entered the signal service in 1871 and has been attached to the United States weather bureau since 1891. He is seventy-three years old.

President White In Pittsburg

John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, was in Pittsburg Saturday in conference with Francis Feehan and other officials of the Pittsburgh district.

At the Indianapolis conference recently the operators and miners' representatives failed to reach an agreement and adjournment was taken. President White stated that all of his time was now being devoted to preparing to meet with the anthracite coal operators in New York on February 27. He expressed the feeling that an amicable adjustment would be arrived at. After the anthracite scale is disposed of he, will turn his attention to the bituminous wage scale proposition.

Liability Commission Is Named

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10.—Governor Tener today appointed a commission to study industrial accidents and draft an employers' liability bill for the consideration of the next legislature.

The commission was authorized by an act of the last legislature and at the instance of Governor Tener, who is desirous of securing the enactment of a satisfactory employers' law before the close of his administration.

The commission is composed as follows: David H. Reed, a prominent attorney of Pittsburgh; J. Barry Colahan, lawyer of Philadelphia, who has made a specialty of liability cases; William Morris, official of the Lehigh Coal Co., Philadelphia; George C. Hetsel, textile manufacturer, Philadelphia; Francis Feehan of Pittsburgh, district president of the United Mine Workers of America; John J. Cushing, rod mill roller, Pace Woven Wire Co., Monessen; Secretary Francis H. Bohlen, professor of Torts in the Pennsylvania University Law School.

SCHWAB TO QUIT IF TARIFF IS CUT.

"If the Underwood steel bill becomes a law I will retire from the steel industry," said Charles M. Schwab, of Bethlehem, Pa., before the Senate Finance Committee last Friday. "Existing rates of duties are necessary to the welfare of the steel industry. To lower them would be ruinous."

Reminded of the statements of Andrew Carnegie that the steel industry was not dependent upon a protective tariff, Mr. Schwab replied that Mr. Carnegie had been like a father to him and he would not be drawn into any controversy with him.

Mr. Schwab admitted, however, that Mr. Carnegie did not have as much practical knowledge as he of steel-making.

"Has Mr. Carnegie ever interested himself in studying out the details of the business?"

"No; but he had a fine general knowledge of the business, and he showed the greatest wisdom by giving half of what he earned to the men who made his business successful."

When Senator Simmons remarked that Mr. Carnegie had accumulated an enormous fortune, Mr. Schwab said: "Not half as much as he deserved."

The Missouri Senator said he thought that "four or five hundred millions was a pretty good pot."

"Most emphatically I believe in the principle of protection," Mr. Schwab declared. "The steel industry, especially in the East, could not prosper. I am enraged in the steel business solely with the desire to build up a successful enterprise. I don't need the income. I have no children or other heirs to whom to leave any estate. I am simply in it for the love of the game."

Mr. Schwab went on to say that without protection he would regard as wasted the $25,000,000 which recently had been invested in his business.

"After all my work and the investment of my fortune, I have never taken a penny out of the industry, and if the proposed tariff is to be the law

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Important Resolutions at British Labor Convention--Coal Miners Still Negotiating on Minimum Wage Question--Outlook Brighter--Seven Thousand Glasgow Dock Laborers Strike Against Attempts to Go Beneath Agreements -- Scottish Ironmolders to Strike.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The annual convention of the British labor party produced some very interesting sessions. One striking fraternal de'egate was Hermann Molkenbuhr who delivered a stirring speech in favor of the international unity of labor. The convention demanded an eight-hours day for all workers and a minimum wage of $7.50 per week. A land policy was outlined and one speaker delivered himself as follows: "I think the State should be asked to contribute $40 to 100 million dollars per year toward buying great farms and estates, where agriculture can be developed, afforestation encouraged, and the landless man and maniess land be brought together. If we could save building four to eight battleships per year and allow a wise example there that other nations might follow then we could use the money for that purpose, thus preventing life being wasted and creating channels for useful work." The nationalization of mines and minerals was also declared by the delegates overdue, while housing reform was urgent. Further amendment of the workmen's compensation act and other measures affecting labor was also demanded. The 470 delegates showed a striking unanimity—on most questions—but were sharply divided on women's suffrage. The 606,000 votes controlled by the mines could easily cast against the demand for votes for women being incorporated in the part's program but the coal miners found themselves in a minority when the addition was made.

It has been definitely decided to attempt the establishment of a daily newspaper to represent labor. The scheme is far advanced and the subscription of the necessary funds will soon be sought. It will be a one cent morning paper and will be called the Daily Citizen. Depending on present proposals it will be a general newspaper, dealing not only with labor proposals but with every other interest—news of all kinds covering social, political and industrial life, leaders, and sport. It will have its foreign correspondents, who will concern themselves specially with the democratic movement abroad. It promises to give vigorous support to the women's movement.

The new journal will be launched under the auspices of a joint committee of the Labor Party and the Independent Labor Party, which comprises in this country has no special organ, whereas Germany has 74 and Denmark 33 labor organs. The committee admits that the difficulties of such a project have hitherto proved insuperable, but now, it thinks, they are not.

The new venture will be owned by a company of which there will be ten directors, including Ramsay MacDonald, who will be chairman; J. R. Clynes, Arthur Henderson, and John Hodge. All these gentlemen are labor members of Parliament. Besides these there will be on the board two journalists, William Crawford Anderson, of Reynolds' Newspaper who will be vice chairman of the company and John Bruce Hasler The secretary of the Fabian Society, a middle class socialist society, E. R. Pease, will also be on the board.

The capital of the company will be $750,000 in $5 shares, and unless 50,000 are subscribed before the middle of March the prospectus will not probably appear during the week ending February 3—the company will not proceed to a allotment, and as far as it is concerned the scheme will be abandoned. The shares will be made payable after the first $1.25 by easy installments extending throughout next year and well into 1912.

Arrangements are being made to prevent, if possible, rivalry in the control of the paper by the various labor sections. The shares will be classified in order that they may be held as far as possible by those various sections, and that each class may have its representative on the board. Any profits will go to paying a dividend of not more than 4 per cent on the shares, and balance going to a reserve fund for the general purposes of the enterprise and its extension. From the point of view of circulation the success of the scheme points out that there will be the advantage of the fact that there are between two and three million trade unionists in the country who from among themselves are expected to furnish a sufficient public for the paper.

Negotiations between the miners' unions and the coal owners are serious. The outlook is better and brighter but the decision to remit to the districts certain proposals for defining the precise conditions under the minimum wage indicates that the parties so far have failed to agree. It was found at an early stage that there was very little likelihood of unanimity owing to the difficulty of satisfying every district, two districts were quite ready to assent to a minimum of $1.85 per day, another considered it too high, and to at least one district the men insisted on $2. A similar difficulty arose about the question of payment. Under these circumstances all that the two sections of the subcommittee could do was to frame the broad outlines of a settlement and leave it to each district to fill in the

WORKMEN'S INSURANCE IN GERMANY.

Washington, Feb. 10.—In view of the recent decision of the Ohio Supreme court declaring the workmen's compensation law valid, the bulletin on the new workmen's insurance code of Germany, just issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, is particularly interesting. The German government has enacted a new insurance code affording a general reorganization of its system of insurance covering accidents, sickness and invalidity and old age. The new code brings under the compulsory sickness insurance for the first time: household servants, clerks and apprentices in pharmacies, members of orchestras and theatrical companies, teachers and tutors, persons engaged in homeworking industries, ships' crews of German sea-going vessels engaged in inland navigation.

The existing plan of having employers pay one-third and the insured persons two-thirds of the contributions has been retained; in cases of members of guild sick funds, however, the contributions may be levied in the proportion of one-half upon each party. The benefits of the sickness insurance consist of medical care, a sick wage, hospital care and care in the home, together with an allowance for the family in case of hospital treatment; in addition, a pecuniary sick benefit is paid in case of invalidity cases for a period of eight weeks. The financial basis consists of the taxes the amount of the wage of the insured person used as a basis for computing the sick benefit, and of the quality of the sick funds are allowed to vary these benefits in a number of ways, and likewise the funds may extend the amount and duration of the benefits in certain cases.

The classes of persons eligible to receive accident insurance are composed of workmen and administrative and operating officials. The new industry branches included in the insurance are certain groups of breweries, pharmacies, tanneries, bath establishments, fishing inland water, fish culture, ice cutting and establishments conducted as a business for

PLAIN WORDS TO RICH AND POOR.

Pastor Russell Delivers a Message of Peace—God the Source of Wealth. Speaking in Madras, India, the Preacher Explained the Divine Plan of Redemption—God Is No Respecter of Persons and All Mankind Shall Be Measured by the Same Standard—Possession of Riches No Bar to the Lord's Favor—The Sin of Selfishness.

MADRAS, India, Feb. 11.—The Foreign Missions Investigation Committee is here. Our finest auditorium, the Victoria Hall, was crowded to hear Pastor Russell. He spoke here twice. We report one of his discourses from the text, "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich; and He addeth no sorrow therewith."—Prov. 10: 22. He said:

The thing which strikes me specially as I visit your great city for the first time is the marked contrast between the palaces of your superior quarter and the hovels of filth—the contrast between great riches and great poverty. Not since not that I have come into your midst, to speak words which won't engender strife or even discontent. Rather my message will be one of peace. I hear you the Message of the Kingdom of God's dear Son—the Kingdom for which we have all so long prayed, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven."

This inequalities, mental and physical, which prevail amongst us as members of a fallen race, produce naturally our inequalities as respects wealth and social conditions. It is well, therefore, that we should not accept the rabid views entertained by many, but we should think soberly, dispassionately. We should not be quick to think of the wealthy as robbers of the poor and injurious to the general welfare, wholly selfish and under Divine reprobation. We should remember that God Himself is very rich. All the gold and the silver are His, and the cattle upon a thousand hills, with infinite power, beyond human comprehension.

We should remember that it is written that "Abraham was very rich," and that his riches did not interfere with the fact that he "was the friend of God," and that to him God gave that great promise secured by the Divine oath, which is the basis of all hope for the blessing of the world: "In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Other noble characters on the pages of history are noted as having possessed great wealth. Many of us have erred in thinking that the wealthy are to be measured by other standards than are the poor. And could anyone properly urge that if rich and poor be measured by the same moral standards the poor would be found more noble minded than the rich? We think not.

We should therefore view the matter of poverty and riches philosophically. Both poor and rich should be encouraged to use faithfully the opportunities which they possess and to wait patiently for the Lord's time and way for the introduction of the new order of things which He has promised, assured that it is not in our power to either hasten or delay the Divine program.

BIBLE COUNSEL FOR THE RICH.

The Apostle says, "Charge those amongst you who are rich that they trust not in uncertain riches." The history of centuries corroborates the Apostle's words. The rich and prominent of one day become the poor and forgotten of another. "Riches take wings" in a manner that poverty rarely imitates.

The talents and opportunities which have brought great wealth in some of our prominent Americans have brought wealth and prosperity in smaller measure to those associated with them in their enterprises. Indeed, in some respects the entire world, and particularly America, owes them a debt of gratitude for their energy and perseverance in the exercise of their talents and opportunities along such broad lines. And if some of these have been negligent of their opportunities for the redistribution of their wealth, in the interest of their fellow men, all the more should this throw a halo of honor about the heads of those who have remembered that wealth, like all other great talents, is to be used, not too selfishly, but for the public good.

My mind took this course of reason as I looked at the handsome edifice occupied by the Y. M. C. A. of this city, and I was informed that it was the gift of one of our American merchant princes, Mr. John Wanamaker, of New York and Philadelphia. I said to myself, Behold an instance in which riches have been generously expended, even in a far-off land, for the benefit of the masses, and with a desire to promote clean and noble manhood along Christian lines.

Another of my countrymen, Mr. Rockefeller, has done much to promote the enlightenment of the world by the introduction of system into the business of oil refining. The low prices thus obtained have permitted the use of oil by thousands of humble homes, where its price would have been prohibitive without Mr. Rockefeller's business genius for organization. He has thus assisted in lighting India. And even the rewards of his enterprise, represented in enormous wealth, he is daily seeking to turn into useful channels for the blessing of humanity.

Even if we must dispute the wisdom of investing millions in great colleges for the teaching of Higher Criticism and Evolution and tips for the undermining of the influence of the Bible and of a living faith therein, we must, nevertheless compliment the evident good intention and must trust that the Lord will not hold a generous heart responsible for the terrible evils which are sweeping over the world, breeding discontent and anarchy as a result of unwise and improper distribution of wealth.

In this connection I must not neglect to mention that generosity and public spirit are not associated merely with Christianity. Even here, on the opposite side of our globe, you have doubtless heard of our great steel manufacturer, who declares that it has any belief in a religious way he is a Buddhist, and thus musk in sympathy with the religion of millions in India. This man of genius, while putting into practice methods of steel manufacture which have greatly reduced the cost thereof, and thus benefitted the world, incidentally reaped for himself a huge fortune. Feeling entitled, he has publicly announced his intention to use his vast wealth in the public interest, wisely declaring that it is a shame for any man to die very rich, while so many fellow-creatures are very poor. All over the world Mr. Carnegie's generosity and public spirit are manifested in public libraries which he has freely donated.

It is not for us to discuss the wisdom or unwisdom of Mr. Carnegie's gifts or whether he could have done better; it is for us to congratulate our race upon the generosity of this son of its number and upon his proper appreciation of his relationship to the race as manifested in his desire to give back in the public the rewards of his genius.

Not so familiar with the rich of India, I nevertheless counsel them with the Divine Message, to "trust not in uncertain riches"—to make not these the treasure of their hearts—rather to consider them as blessed opportunities for doing good to their fellowmen. I counsel them that the riches of Divine favor alone endure for eternity. If they are enterprising and ambitious, let their eyes rest upon the greater "prize," which the Master calls figuratively, "The Pearl of Great Price"—a share in the Messianic Kingdom.

BIBLE COUNSEL TO THE POOR.

The Gospel of the Kingdom is for rich and poor, male and female, white and colored, on the same terms. God is not a respecter of persons. For a time he was a respecter of nationalities; for a time He confined the offer of priesthood only with Jesus in the Kingdom to those Jews who would hear and respond to the Message. But after gathering out the "Israelites indeed," after begetting these by the Holy Spirit, the call was made general and has been sent to the four quarters of the earth.

Tradition says that one of the Apostles, St. Thomas, brought the Message here to India, and we are pointed to his tomb. No matter whether the tradition be true or false, the fact stand: (1) the Gospel privileges have stood open to India and to every nation for centuries; (2) The Gospel was not sent to convert India nor any nation, but merely to bear witness. That witness has been borne and I am re-echoing it today. The Message is for the calling, instruction, sanctifying of as many as desire to walk in the footsteps of Jesus, and no others. Only those who appreciate this great offer will sacrifice every earthly interest in order to obtain this "Pearl of Great Price." The masses have no ear to hear God's Message—they have no desire to self-sacrificingly take up their cross and follow the Redeemer.

However, all God's purposes shall be accomplished; His Word shall not return unto Him void; it shall accomplish that which He pleases. It will find the elect number of worthy characters whom the Father foreordained shall be with the Redeemer and share His glory throughout His Messianic reign.

I have a special word for the encouragement of the poor of India and of every land. I wish the poor to realize this truth, namely, that poverty is not unfavorable to their best interests for the development of character, but helpful. Hence the Scriptures tell us that "not many great, wise, learned or rich" will be heirs of the Kingdom, but "chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith." (1 Corinthians 1: 26-28; James 2: 5.)

It is not that God more highly esteems poverty than wealth, but that they have less to fill and satisfy their hearts now and are, therefore, more hungry and thirsty for the right way of the Lord and more ready to receive the whole truth, which says to both rich and poor, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The rich usually feel self-satisfied and busy with their affairs—they have more to console them in the things of this present time. The poor, on the contrary, having fewer of the blessings of the present, are hungering and thirsting for some better thing for the future and thus meantime find the Lord and are glad to receive His blessings upon His only terms—the surrender of mind and body, time and purse.

GOD'S BLESSING MAKETH RICH.

Our text is an epitomized statement of the Gospel of Christ. All God's blessing for our race will come through His Seed of Abraham—the Christ. The giving of His Son to be man's Redeemer and Deliverer from sin and death was God's blessing to man—making man rich. Messiah, by the sacrificing of the ransom of the world, is about to bestow upon men the Divine blessing promised to Abraham, "In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

That blessing to the non-elect world will be a glorious opportunity for rising up out of sin and death conditions to full human perfection in the image and likeness of God—as Adam possessed this before his fall. It will mean the bringing of the earth to the condition pictured in Eden. The earth, God declares, is formed not in vain, but to be inhabited. At present man is in a condition of enmity and separation from His Creator and his earthly home is disordered. During the past six thousand years, has been the scene of a terrible reign of Sin and Death.

WHY THE DELAY IN THE REMOVAL OF SIN AND DEATH?

The only hope is in Messiah's Kingdom, which God has promised shall be established for the overthrow of Satan, the abolishing of ignorance and superstition, the enlightenment of mankind and the uplift of all the willing and obedient and for the destruction of the wilfully wicked in the Second Death. But before the Kingdom could be established a redemptive work was necessary for the satisfaction of Justice on behalf of Adam, the sinner, and his race involved with him. By the grace of God Jesus has appeared and, as a corresponding price, has died, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us back into harmony with God and bring in the glorious and long-promised thousand years of restitution.—Acts 3: 19-21.

Eighteen centuries ago Jesus accomplished His redemptive work and was rewarded, in His resurrection, with glory, honor and immortality. Ever since then He is at the right hand of Jehovah God, merely awaiting the Divinely ordained time when He shall take unto Himself His great power and reign. Of that time we read prophetically, "Ask of Me, and I will give Thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession." (Psalm ii, 8.)

But why so long a delay between the time when He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself and the time when He shall appear in His glory to establish the reign of righteousness and lift up the world of mankind for whom He died? The Bible alone answers this question, and oh, how much we are interested in its answer! It tells us that in this interim between the death of the Savior and the inauguration of His Kingdom a special and great work is to be accomplished according to the Divine arrangement—the calling and the choosing of a faithful few from amongst the redeemed race to constitute a Royal Priesthood to serve and reign in association with the Savior.

These heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ are first and previously described in the Scriptures. Under one figure they are spoken of as being members of the Body of which He is the Head. Thus is shown the oneness of Christ and His faithful followers. In another picture Jesus is spoken of as the heavenly Bridegroom and the Church is described as His espoused virgin. The second coming of Jesus His espoused virgin Church is to be made alive from the dead and thus to be married to the Bridegroom and become His Bride and joint-heir to the glory, honor and immortality which are His by virtue of the heavenly Father's arrangement and of the Savior's worthiness—faithfulness unto death, even the death of the Cross.

HOW RICH WE SHALL BE MADE!

Thus see, God, the Fountain of every good and every perfect gift, proposes, first, to make rich the Church, the Elect of this Gospel Age. Then He purposes to bless richly a spirit nature, glory, honor, in our Redeemer—"far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named." The blessing of the Lord will make these rich indeed, and after they shall have entered into the riches of this reward, in the First Resurrection, they will be absolutely perfect. God will add no sorrow to that completed blessing. All the imperfections of the present will be past and we shall be like our Redeemer and share His glory and see Him as He is.

And as for the world, we have already seen that God is waiting to be gracious to all who will accept His favors. He is waiting for the completion of the Church of the Firstborn, who constitute "a kind of firstfruits unto God of His creatures" (James 1, 18.) He is waiting for the Kingdom Class to be fully selected, fully developed, fully shaped and polished in the Redeemer's likeness before bestowing the blessing upon mankind, natural Israel. The blessing of the world will require a thousand years for its outpouring upon every nation, people, kindred and tongue. "They shall obtain mercy through your mercy." (Rom. xi, 31.) The blessing will come to natural Israel and, gradually, through natural Israel, to other nations.

Gradually the blessing of the Lord will be making rich all who will come under the terms of the New Covenant, and of Messiah's glorious reign. By the close of that thousand years the world will be perfect—no more sighing, no more crying and no more dying. The blessing of the Lord will have made rich, and then will be added still and eternally the "no-sorrow of sin and Death will have been learned before mankind will thus be enriched by the Savior through restitution processes and uplift from sin and death.

JOSEPH'S WORKSHOP FOUND.

Excavations at Nazareth have uncovered the site upon which, it is declared by competent archaeologists, stood the carpenter's workshop of Joseph, husband of Mary, mother of Jesus. The Franciscan monks on whose property the discovery was made, have bought up all the adjoining buildings and intend to erect a magnificent temple to mark the spot.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Ohio, Feb. 8.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Your favor of recent date at hand and will say that your paper is a regular weekly visitor and a welcome one it is. So full of news indicating the signs of the times in which we are living. It is good all through. With many thanks for the same, I realize I already received hoping and trusting the Lord will use you in the spreading of these wonderful truths until the harvest is ended and the wheat all garnered in.

Respectfully your brother in the one hope,

JOHN FENDRICH.

Pennsylvania, Feb. 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have renewed my subscription to your valuable paper for another year through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. I appreciate the way in which you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons, also the Sunday School Lessons and Question Box. I also appreciate the other good features in your paper. Hoping you may continue to publish the Gospel. May God bless you in the good work.

Yours truly,
A. V. PLIMMER.

Ohio, Feb. 6.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We again wish to say that the "Old Reliable" Tribune is appreciated more and more by myself and family. Its visits are looked forward to and it takes its place as next to the Watch Tower in our estimation with the sermon, the Letters, Sunday School Lessons and especially the Question Box. Keep it up and you will surely receive your reward.

Respectfully,
J. I.Y. MORGAN.

Pennsylvania, Feb. 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to express my appreciation of the way in which your paper prints Pastor Russell's Sermons feeling sure they will bring a great blessing to many readers.

Yours very truly,
W. B. SPILL.

Maryland, Feb. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

My attention was attracted to your paper by what to me seems the most attractive and valuable sermons it has ever been my privilege to read. If these sermons by Pastor Russell that are in your paper this coming year I wish to subscribe for same, and in that event please send back numbers. They have thrown such a flood of light on God's Word that I feel I can't afford to miss getting one of them.

Yours truly,
MRS. J. J. WILSON.

Massachusetts, Feb. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am very sorry to find I am behind on my subscription but so thankful you did not stop the paper for I should not like to miss even one copy, while I have other papers publishing Pastor Russell's sermons for which I especially take the Tribune, none of them can compare with your paper. And may the dear Lord in his own good time bless you abundantly for the good work you are doing.

Very truly,
MRS. R. J. CALKIN.

Texas, Feb. 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I write to thank you for sending me back number of your valuble paper I had lost out on. I am now going to recommend your best of all papers to all my friends and I feel sure you will get a number of subscribers from this place in the near future. God bless you as you spread the glorious gospel of good things. Would like to see your paper in every home. A well wisher.

A. G. ECKOLS.

Canada, Feb. 12.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed you will find an express order for which please send the Labor Tribune to above address for one year.

We have read your paper with much interest and enjoy very much reading Pastor Russell's writings, they are so clear and so easily understood. We feel sure that you will be greatly benefited by permitting your paper to be used in spreading these glad tidings so freely.

Trusting that you will continue in this good work, I remain,

Yours truly,
MRS. THOS. POTTS.

Indiana, Feb. 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have just finished reading the latest issue of your excellent paper, which we recently subscribed for. I truly appreciate the apparent straightforwardness with which every subject is treated. The labor question and religious department are most interesting to me. Especially did Pastor Russell's sermon impress me today, where he speaks of "the Gospel of the Kingdom." Only there are some who long for God's Kingdom, when "He shall reign from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth" it was my depressing experience in my childhood to be an eye witness to some of the horrors of slavery and I can truthfully say that the condition of the masses of the people today in their struggle with sin, death and opposition, in various forms, seems equally as distressing to me. Reason, therefore, assures me that the views presented by Pastor Russell are worthy of our careful study. I realize here I do judge Jehovah's works by my own, or those of fellow creatures. I could have no hope of such a coming Kingdom, but, believing God's word, when he says: "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways." I can believe that such a blessing in store for his people is exactly like our God. You will surely be rewarded for your part in giving these scriptural questions such a far-bearing (Matt. 10: 27.) We always send the paper on to some one else when we have read it. With you the very best of success in the coming year.

I am your sincere well wisher,
ELLEN E. MORTON.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

About three months ago a friend of your paper and admirer of the sermons sent me Bible Question Box, induced me to subscribe for your paper.

It is with pleasure that I express my own appreciation of your valued weekly, and especially with the Pastor Russell Sermons, the Letters, Question Box, etc. Thinking people generally must conclude that we have come to a period in the world's history pointing to a decided change in sentiment and mindset, a change which those illumined by the word of God and his spirit rejoice in, because it will bring the "desire of all nations," though preceded by a silver lined storm cloud.

I contemplate your paper in being favored with a share in this work of enlightenment, leading up to the blessed condition for mankind. As I appreciate work in this direction, it was with pleasure I recently sent through the Watch Tower office another subscriber for your paper.

I shall thank you to correct the spelling of my name on your address slip, as below.

With good wishes, your respectfully,
N. A. LINDBERG.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed find P. O. order for new subscribers. All these, whose names I have sent you are taking the paper principally because of the fact that they consider your journal next in value to the Watch Tower as a truth journal. We greatly appreciate the excellent manner that you are publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, also the "Berean Sunday" School Lesson, which is the International Lesson; also the Question Box along Scriptural lines. We want to congratulate Mr. Editor in that you are putting out a religious journal that is doing more good than the most of journals which are entirely given up in the work of God.

Yours very truly,

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Not long since a friend sent me the pages from National Labor Tribune containing Pastor Russell's sermon, the Question Box and so on. These we very much appreciated.

We trust you are realizing the blessing which comes to those, who are workers together with the Lord in proclaiming the tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.

The storm tossed world has great need of this message of truth you are sending out to them through the circulating printed pages of your most creditable publication.

With kindest wishes for your continued success, I am

We are made very glad by the weekly visits of your excellent paper. We feel sure it is highly appreciated wherever it goes, we think there could not be a better exposition of Scripture than is furnished in Pastor Russell's sermons, and were glad when the newspapers began publishing the same.

We have long appreciated Pastor Russell's writing, and know they have an upbuilding influence wherever they reach, and that is almost everywhere except where the "blind readers of the blind" have gotten in their perverting work, but thank God their influence over the masses is now broken and the word of God prevails in spite of them.

We can truly be grateful to the newspapers for their reconstructive work and in the providing of a pure source for Scripture study.

So with best wishes for your continued success.

I buy your paraben. It has just dawned on me that I have overlooked the expiration date mark on your valuable paper.

I herewith mail you a draft for another year's subscription.

Again I would have you know that I still admire the Tribune and its manly editor, its cleanliness, its plain bold type and its purpose to publish to the world that which is good and right.

I have praise and sincere respect for the Tribune because of its unwillingness to set apart departments on its pages, religious teachings, such as Pastor Russell's Sermons, Bible Studies, Lessons for Sunday Schools, the satisfactory Question Box, Scriptural Instructions, all these for fallen humanities uplift.

May the Good Master over us all, give you many more years of such usefulness in this world, so that the Glad Tidings, the Message of Peace, may come to all your readers and Christ be King.

Yours in the good work,
D. BORTS.

POPULAR MECHANICS

PHASES OF THE MOON.

Easily Demonstrated by Very Simple Experiments.

We are likely to regard the moon as the only thing in the heavens that exhibits phases such as the quarter, the half and the full. As a matter of fact, all planets and their satellites exhibit separately such phases, and most of them can be easily seen with a small power telescope. Tims Mars and Venus, which are comparatively close to the earth, show through the telescope at times a beautiful crescent, at other times a half planet fully as brilliant, considering the distance, as does our satellite.

At times also the planets suffer eclipse just as the earth, the moon and the sun, and these eclipses are foretold with as great accuracy. As to just what causes the phases, say, of the moon is easy to comprehend by a homely analogy.

If one stands in a corner of a room, placing a globe of some description in the next corner and a light in the third corner, the phenomenon of the half moon is seen. The light, representing the sun, shines, of course, on half the globe, representing the moon, but the observer in the corner sees only half of the surface toward him illuminated. If, now, the light be placed behind the observer and a little above his head a full moon will be seen, the "sun," however, shining on the same area of surface as before, merely shivering the time it were from the "earth" of the whole amount of illumination. All the phases can be demonstrated in this manner by moving the "moon" directly outward from its corner.—Chicago Tribune.

THE YOUNG OF LEECHES.

Some Interesting Facts Gathered by a Russian Scientist.

It is known that leeches of the species family show an interesting periodicity in the fact that the females carry the eggs on their under surface, and when the young are hatched they likewise fix themselves to the surfaces by means of their suckers. They remain there for some time, until they reach about one-third the length of an adult specimen, then they drop off and become independent, says the Scientific American. Recently M. Mashchenko, a Russian scientist, observed this fact upon no less than five species of clepsine from central Russia.

The number of young is variable, being usually from seven to twelve, but in the case of the Hemiclepsis marginata there are often as many as forty-five small leeches fixed upon the female. If one of these is taken off it crawls until it meets with an adult leech, upon which it becomes fixed. This may be a species of sexual or different family. Sometimes the females is seen carrying the young, but there are only one or two of these which are larger than the rest, and these no doubt came from outside and fixed themselves upon the female.

Electricity From Cider.

We are familiar with the simple cayenne and zinc cell in which life depends upon the slow consumption of the zinc in a solution of sal ammoniac, says Popular Electricity.

The cell described generates its current by the fermentation of apple cider

CONSTRUCTION OF CIDER BATTERY.

Procure a quart jar and fill it to within an inch of the top with sweet cider, to which a pinch of salt has been added to lower its internal resistance. Sprinkle about a half inch of carbon dust on the surface of the cider, then fasten a hard piece of carbon to the top of the jar so as to press upon the dust, securing it by a copper wire. This forms the positive pole of the battery. For the negative pole immerse a piece of spiral copper wire in the cider, being careful to insulate it from the carbon by a piece of rubber tubing. A current flows and long as fermentation takes place.

Velocity of a Rifle Ball.

It appears that the greatest velocity of a rifle ball is not at the muzzle, but some distance in front. An average of ten shots with the German infantry rifle has shown a muzzle velocity of 2,068 feet per second, with a maximum velocity of 2,123 feet per second at ten feet from the muzzle.

WHEN A VOLCANO BELCHES.

Phenomena That Attended the Eruption of Taal Mountain.

The eruption of Taal volcano, in the Philippine Islands, which took place on Jan. 30, 1911, and caused a loss of 1,300 lives, has been the subject of a large amount of important papers in the scientific journals, besides the official reports of the Philippine bureau of science. One of the most graphic descriptions is that of Rev. M. Sader vs Masa, which is published as a special bulletin of the Philippine weather bureau, says the Scientific American. This account is noteworthy for the effort it records to the meteorological and seismological features of the eruption, and in this respect it is an important contribution to the science of vulcanology.

This volcano has been the seat of repeated disastrous eruptions. The greatest of which was that of 1754. All the eruptions of which a record has been preserved have had the same character as the recent one, consisting of violent explosions which hurled the volcanic products to great distances. The base vapor column of the last explosion rose to a height of from 20,000 to 25,000 feet and was from 250 miles away, where it was mistaken for a distant thunderstorm. One remarkable feature of the volcano is that no lava has ever issued from it in a liquid state, the dives being blown to dust and ashes by the pressure of gases or steam.

The lake standing appears to have been marked by unusually magnificent displays of volcanic lightning. For three days preceding the eruption a constant succession of earthquakes were felt over a wide area, and they caused much alarm in Manila until the moment of the explosion, when the resulting illumination of atmospheric pressure set up strong winds blowing in the opposite direction. The wind was felt as far away as Manila, thirty-three miles. At points nearer the volcano it assumed almost hurricane violence, imparting the movements of people who were trying to flee and to the surrounding waters of Lake Bonin, causing waves of iron rolling to the northeast. At a distance of fifteen miles either from Mass was the region grass from the wind which had been broken down by a storm. He is of the opinion that the wind assumed a rotary motion in accordance with the general law of storms, so as to produce a transient tornado in and wind. The atmospheric waves propagated out from the volcano were registered on barographs to a distance of 280 miles.

Underground Water Power.

The rivers of the northwestern and middle eastern portions of the United States are the best known in the country, and the earliest in point of development, and their water uses as sources of power and centers of industry have been demonstrated for several generations. Nevertheless it has been shown by the work of the United States geological survey that during past years, and it is again demonstrated in a report just issued in the survey, that in spite of the long familiarity of manufacturer and industrial men in general with most of these rivers, the water resources are still vastly in excess of those appreciated and by no means developed to their fullest extent. In fact, there are very few rivers in this great region in which the developments of water power have come anywhere near the maximum possible degree of usefulness.

Thistledown Parachutes.

Careful examination has been made of the seeds of Canada thistledown in order to determine their efficiency as parachutes carrying the seeds of the plant to great distances through the air. The results of this research station are quite remarkable. Calculation shows that a thistledown starting from an elevation of twenty feet in still air would require two-thirds of a minute to reach the ground. With a wind blowing seventy miles an hour it would be carried on the average about a fifth of a mile. The total surface exposed to the air in an average thistledown is on account of the great number of hairs a little more than one-third of a square foot. Another well known and very beautiful example of nature's parachutes is furnished by the light silken threads with the aid of which the little gossamer spider makes long aerial voyages.

The Lathe as a Chip Producer.

Joseph Chilton in a paper read before the Northeast Coast Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders states that as a chip producer the lathe is the most unsatisfactory of machine tools. He finds that a well designed lathe under favorable conditions produces half a pound of cast iron chips per every minute when cutting mild steel, the pressure on the tool being approximately 100 lbs per square inch "area of cut"—this last meaning the depth of cut multiplied by the feed, a cut half an inch deep with an eighth of an inch feed having an area of a sixteenth of a square inch.

Apparatus May Be Operated Without Stopping the Car.

A rather unique switching apparatus, by means of which the motorman of an electric car can throw a switch without leaving his position or completely stopping the car, has been designed by a Texas inventor. The mechanism is an arrangement of two J shaped throw rods, at the ends of which are striker heads. The rods are pivoted close into position to the foot of the motorman and are returned to their original position by a coiled spring when the foot pressure is withdrawn.

The track device consists of a sway bar pivoted to a tie by means of a pin through the center of the bar, a bridle connected to the two switch points and itself attached to one end of the sway bar near the pin. Normal, leaving a small groove formed within its upper surface articulated to the other end of the sway bar. The latter motorman wishes to throw the switch he presses down one of the other of the throw rods, depending upon what position the switch is in. This brings the striker head of the throw rod in direct alignment with the V shaped groove, and the sway bar is actuated to throw the switch.

Huge Brazilian Beryl.

Jewel experts throughout the world have been thrown into a state of excitement by the appearance of a beryl that weighs 240.1 pounds and is 18.9 inches high and from 13.75 inches to 10.5 inches in width. This is the largest beryl ever found and is reported to have been sold by the finder for nearly $25,000. The beryl was picked up by a Turk in the state of Minas Geraes, Brazil. Its color is a greenish blue, and it is absolutely free from impurities. It is estimated that this one crystal will furnish at least 2,000,000 carats of jewels of various sizes.

Tensile Strength of Manel.

The adaptability of the mineral alloy "monel" metal for use in large propeller blades was recently practically demonstrated in the presence of a United States government inspector by dropping twenty-one times through a distance of twenty feet a 4,000 pound weight upon one of the blades without causing fracture. This cast iron shows a tensile strength of over 75,000 pounds per square inch.

Endurance of Spanish Horses.

The American consul at Jerez de la Frontera, the most noted center for horse breeding in Andalusia, ascribes the well known toughness and endurance of these animals to the fact that, apart to the climate, but principally to their feeding on a rich wild clover called "sulla," which grows only in the province of Cadiz and which is claimed to be the finest food in the world for carrying flesh. It never cost-veted, but grows a child to a height of three or four feet, preferring the same chalky and clayey soil that produces the famous Jerez or sherry wines.

Legal Customs From the Church.

When one lawyer refers to another as "brother attorney" he is paying an ancient phrase peculiar to religious and legal fraternities and suggests the close historical relation between the callings. In England for two and a half centuries after the Norman conquest all rich legal offices were filled by churchmen. Laymen could not hope for advancement or for clients, and indeed the only path to the employment of a professional education lay through holy orders. The fraternal form of address common to the church passed naturally into legal phraseology. Brother Sound-so of the monastic order was "brother" also of the bar. So strong was popular prejudice against admitting the competency of mere laymen at law when the close began to press, about 1200, that the barristers adopted a black velvet skullcap or coif to conceal their lack of tonsure, the distinguishing mark of the priest or clerk. Down to our day both the form of address and the peculiar headgear have remained, although we have ceased to associate the two professions whose early intimacy was the original reason for their existence.—Green Bag.

The Swastika.

The origin and history of the curious charm known as the swastika have been exhaustively described by Dr. T. Cary, an English antiquarian. He claims that the origin of the swastika dates back to pre-Christian days. Its destination has led him to believe that it was originally the symbol of phallic worship and that it was the most ancient and widely distributed symbol that had ever existed. It has been found in Chaldea, among the ruins of the earlier cities of Troy, in Egypt, on the prehistoric relics of Greece, on Hittite remains, on prehistoric American Indian mounds in South America, on Buddist remains in India, on Roman altars, on Runic crosses in Great Britain, in Celtic churches of the Irish Christians and in English houses of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. It is still used in India. The Chinese regard it as a sign of long life, good wishes and good fortune; it is also used by the Lapps and the Finns.

"Cutting of the Khalig."

One of the most interesting of Egyptian customs is that known as the "cutting of the Khalig," which is celebrated on the occasion of the swelling of the dams of the Khalig canal, there by causing the flooding of the land for cultivation purposes. The ceremony takes place in August, when the Nile reaches its highest level, and is really a thanksgiving service. According to ancient belief the old time Egyptians had a custom of casting a young virgin gayly dressed into the river as a sacrifice to the gods, but at the present time the offering takes the more humane form of a dummy. A procession of dancers, singers and bargemen passes along the river, one specially craft being used for the ceremony. This boat, rigged to represent an old time warship, is towed by a decorated tug and is well provided with musicians, who play Arab airs on the oldtime guns, which are fired at intervals in honor of the occasion.—Wide World Magazine.

A Revised Opinion.

A well known after dinner speaker of New York was going home from a banquet on a surface car. At his corner he signaled the conductor to stop and, as he swung off the platform, the car started up again and he plowed the asphalt for ten feet with his face and hands. He scrambled to his feet, saw the car fading away and a large, tired looking policeman contemplating him from the sidewalk.

"Did you see that?" demanded the victim as he limped toward the policeman.

"I did," said the policeman, "for it was your own fault."

"I didn't ask you whose fault it was!" snapped back the after dinner speaker. "I asked you—Did you see it?"

"I did not!" said the policeman.—Saturday Evening Post.

Necessarily to the Jew First.

Although God had not mentioned this elect class which He purposed should be associated with the Messiah in the heavenly estate, nevertheless God determined that the opportunity to become members of His elect, spirit class should be given to the Jews after His death, the privilege of becoming His Bride and joint-heir was to be offered after the flesh.

Later, it was sent on equal terms also to the Gentiles. Saint Paul tells us that it was necessary that the Gospel Message should go first to the Jews because this was the Divine arrangement. But he adds, "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for"—the best of God's gifts, the privilege of becoming members of the spiritual Seed. Only the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded." (Romans xi, 7.) The stumbling and fall of the Jewish nation was to result in the completion of the elect, spiritual class—then the blinding would be taken away and he be saved or recovered to the Divine favor after eighteen centuries ago (See Romans xi, 25-27).

As Jesus declared: "My Kingdom is not of this world (Age)," and as He further said, "Many are called but few chosen," so the first ordeal, but merely began the work of calling the "elect," so the work of Elijah, the forerunner, began with the Jew and proportionately only was he the antitype of Elijah. A larger antitype of Elijah and John and also as forerunners, we may now see, Jesus in the flesh, and all His faithful followers in the spirit, the Kingdom class, have constituted the antitype of John the Baptist. The King whose Kingdom they announced to be composed of Jesus and His glorified Bride, beyond the veil. These soon shall take the Kingdom and rule righteously as Abraham's Seed for the blessing of all the families of the earth.

"The warned you to flee from the wrath to come?"

The Church has cried "In the wilderness" in the sense that she has been alienated and separated from the world. She has called upon all who would hear to prepare for Messiah's Kingdom. She has told more fully than did John the Baptist of the office-work of Messiah's Kingdom. She has told more fully than did John the Baptist of the ef-fecting up of the valleys, the lifting up of the poor, the breaking down of the high things, that thus all flesh might see, appreciate, understand, experience the salvation of God. Both John and the Church declare that this salvation is to be brought through Jesus and His glorified Bride to Kingdom power. The point we are making is that while John the Baptist was an antitype of Elijah and was a forerunner of Messiah's Kingdom, only more particularly, the Church in the flesh is a higher antitype of Elijah, and will have a similarly a herald of the Messianic Kingdom.

Jesus did a harvesting work for the Jewish nation only. He gathered the wheat into the garner of the Gospel Age by begetting them of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. But now the Jewish nation is "burned up" the nation in a time of trouble with which their Age ended, in A. D. 70—but now the larger antitypical—world-wide. In the end of this Age, all the "wheat" class are to be gathered into the heavenly garner by the change of the First Resurrection, and in the time of trouble coming all others will be cast from all association with the Church and from all opportunity of membership in it—as tares they will be burned—reduced to the level of the beasts of mankind. But thank God! at that time will begin the work of blessing the masses of mankind—all the families of the earth—by the glorious Messianic Kingdom.

PREPARE YE FOR THE KINGDOM

Luke iii, 1-17—Feb. 18.

"Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand."—Matthew iii, 2.

JOHN THE BAPTIST was the herald of the Prophets and declared that none of them was his superior—"There hath not arisen a greater Prophet than John the Baptist;" and yet I say unto you that the least in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than he" (Matthew xi, 11). Every member of the Kingdom of Heaven class must be higher than John became begotten of the Holy Spirit. They are reckoned as members of the House of Sons, while the Prophets belong to the preceding House of Servants—Hebrews iii, 5, 6.

God proposed before the foundation of the world that He would redeem man and would establish His Kingdom for their restoration. The Redeemer of the world was to be the King by whose reign of a thousand years the work of Satan would be undone; the head of the Seriest would be crushed and humanity would be uplifted out of sin and death and be brought back to the condition in which Adam was at first.

God proposed also to select from among the fallen race a number of saints who should be associated with Messiah in His Kingdom work for the world. These were to be selected during the Gospel Age, and from the time of Abraham's natural seed. For the three and a half years of Jesus' ministry, and from Pentecost to the end of the years after His death, the privilege of becoming His Bride and joint-heir was offered to the Jews after the flesh.

Later, it was sent on equal terms also to the Gentiles. Saint Paul tells us that it was necessary that the Gospel Message should go first to the Jews because this was the Divine arrangement. But he adds, "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for"—the best of God's gifts, the privilege of becoming members of the spiritual Seed. Only the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded" (Romans xi, 7). The stumbling and fall of the Jewish nation was to result in the completion of the elect, spiritual class—then the blinding would be taken away and he be saved or recovered to the Divine favor after eighteen centuries ago (See Romans xi, 25-27).

As Jesus declared: "My Kingdom is not of this world (Age)," and as He further said, "Many are called but few chosen," so the first ordeal, but merely began the work of calling the "elect," so the work of Elijah, the forerunner, began with the Jew and proportionately only was he the antitype of Elijah. ## EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS ANSWERED IN THIS SPECIAL COLUMN, OR BY MAIL, IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS PAPER.

Q.—What is meant by the term "Doomsday?" (A. S. C.)

Answer.—It is that last dreadful day in the which according to the antediluvian theory of an ordinary time-like-ligent formation, the Lord will return to the earth, and take His seat upon a great white throne, and then all mankind will be gathered before Him, for judgment. As the judgments proceed, the mountains and the rocks will come tumbling down, and the sea and the waves will roar under the agonizing fear of a mighty storm. About this time a terrific earthquake will shake things up so severely that all the things that can be shaken will be removed. In connection with these trifling phenomena of nature, there will be the sounding of the last trump, and innumerable voices will be heard on the air. Amidst this deafening uproar, while "the wrath of matter and the crash of worlds" is transpiring, the 200,000,000 and more of the human race will be judged—all within the five nations of a twenty-four hour day! When the final summing up takes place, the Great Judge will invite the few saints, "the little flock," to enter into the conditions of bliss, while to the vast majority of the race He will issue the command to depart into an eternity of torment in fire and brimstone. At the commencement of the final sentence of doom, a terrific fire will break forth; the elements will melt with fervent heat; and the heavens and earth being on fire shall be dissolved! This lurid picture of the "Doomsday" has been wildly conformed by some one with highly developed imaginative powers, who gathered a number of scrambled and figurative expressions from the Scriptures with which to produce this dreadful sketch of "Doomsday," which has served to frighten some good and bad children nearly to death!

Q.—Is there any positive proof that our Lord Jesus was born on Christmas Day, Dec. 25th, and if so where can it be found? (A. S.)

Answer.—There is nothing to prove that Christ was born December 25th, but the evidence is clear and strong that the time of His birth was about the 1st of Tisri. It is generally recognized that Jesus was crucified on Friday, April 3d, A. D. 33. The fact that His crucifixion occurred at the close of the fourteenth day of the month Nisan and that this date rarely falls on Friday, but this is the year in which the astronomers that date so thoroughly that even Tisher, who adopted B. C. 4 as the date of Jesus' birth, was forced to admit that His crucifixion was A. D. 33. Our Lord was thirty years of age when He began His ministry, and it is clear that His ministry was for three and a half years only. This gives the correct date in the year in which Daniel's prophecy (Daniel ix, 25-27) concerning Christ's cutting off in the middle of the seventieth week of Israel's favor. The "seventy weeks" is day for a year—490 days, or 490 years—divided by 10, is dating from 454 B. C., when the city Jerusalem was rebuilt, terminated A. D. 36. In the "midst" of that last week of seven years, the seventieth week, Christ was "cut off"—crucified—April 3d, A. D. 33. As Daniel's exact fact is proved by ### Manufacturers of Defective Rails Have No Answer for Brandes--Contempt Case Still On--A Constitutional Amendment Proposed to Make Presicent of U. S. Ineligible for Re-Election--Machinists' Headquarters Not To be Removed.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—None of the steel rail manufacturers accused by Louis D. Brandies of being largely responsible for railroad accidents in the United States by making inferior rails, has uttered a word on this important subject. In accentuation of the serious menace to life and property caused by alleged defective rails, dispatches from various sections of the country during the recent severe cold weather state that "railroad rails have crushed like wood and on many roads pilot engines have been sent ahead of every important train." In this connection railroad men recall a broad but positive assertion made a few years ago by E. H. Harriman, that one of the chief difficulties encountered in increasing the efficiency of the railroads was found in the poor quality of rails with which he had found the lines he controlled had been equipped. A scathing report was made by experts of the Interstate Commerce Commission in November last, in reference to the terrible disaster on the Lehigh Valley R. R. at Manchester, N. Y., in which 29 lives were lost. It is also recalled, that at that time the commissioner sanipped two chief experts, Hiram W. Belnap, chief inspector of safety appliances, and James E. Howard, to make an investigation." They report that defects in rails were so common that it was recommended that a sweeping investigation should be made of all the railroads in the United States. It is said that the development of these defects progresses with the age of rails, and the fear has been expressed that a long series of serious accidents must be expected if a remedy is not applied. The broken rail causing the accident at Manchester, N. Y., was manufactured by the Bethlehem Steel Company, open-hearth process, 20 per cent discard, 90 pounds to the yard, and was rolled December 4, 1909, and was known as "A" rail, which is the rail rolled from the ingot. After the accident it was found that this rail had been broken into many pieces, the first being 31 inches. Inspection showed that it was defective, being what is known as a piped rail. Analysis of this defective part showed that piping is due to slag originating in the steel furnace.

The controversy between the plate printers' union and the Senate printing committee, the latter desiring to install power presses, to be used in the printing of all government money and securities, has been adjusted. The agreement reached provides that thereafter the proviso to the act of July 1, 1898, directing that all bonds, notes and checks shall be printed on hand roller presses, shall not apply to checks, the backs and tints of all United States bonds, the backs and tints of all United States paper money and the backs and tints of bonds and paper money issued by any of the insular possessions of the United States; any or all of which shall be printed from intaglio plates and on such plate printing presses as may be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury, said processes to be operated by plate printers except that checks and bills may be printed by any desired process. In addition, the backs of all United States paper money shall be printed from four-subject plates and the faces of all interest revenue stamps now printed from intaglio plates on hand roller or power plate printing presses shall continue to be printed from intaglio plates, on hand roller or power plate printing presses, as the secretary of the Treasury may determine, and said presses to be operated by plate printers. The agreement further provides that not more than one-fifth of the total number of hand roller presses shall be displaced in each fiscal year. The contention of the plate printers is that the printing done by the government on power presses opens the way for extensive counterfeiting.

The celebrated contempt case is still in progress in Justice Wright's court. John Mitchell has completed his testimony and left the city. Secretary Frank Morrison has been on the witness stand for a considerable length of time. One feature of the examination of Mr. Morrison is worthy of note. Attorney Davenport, for the Anti-Boycott Association, questioned Mr. Morrison on the word "allegiance," which occurs in the obligation of the typographical union, of which, as all know, Mr. Morrison is a member. The inference of Attorney Davenport was clearly to the effect that the word "allegiance" in the typographical obligation was inimical to American citizenship. The introductory paragraph to the typographical obligation states specifically that the obligation refers only to the printing trades, and by no stretch of imagination could the obligation be construed as vitiating the loyalty, fealty, or devotion of its members to the government of the United States. What is purposed by this angle in the interrogatories is not plain, but evidently is done to cast only cloud the ## COAL STRIKE IN ENGLAND SURE.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The acuteness of the crisis in the British coal trade is emphasized by the prohibitive rate of 94s per cent asked by Lloyds on insurance against a national strike.

Both sides in the contest are making every preparation for war. The colliery owners are insuring not only the collieries, but their private residences as well against the strike, as military authorities also have been making inquiries in the coal mining districts as to the facilities for billeting soldiers in dwellings, mines and hotels.

No fewer than 800,000 miners already have handed in their notices to quit work in 13 days from today. On March 1, unless one side or the other unexpectedly yields, the country will face a national stoppage which will paralyze every industry and send up the cost of necessaries of life to famine prices.

The authorities estimate that only two weeks supply of coal is in stock, although of course the railroads, gas companies and other big concerns with storage facilities are better supplied.

The Federation of National Transport Workers has pledged itself not to handle "blackleg" coal, so that imported coal will only be landed with great difficulty.

The Government announces that it will take the crisis in hand early next week, although there is as yet no indication of how it proposes to attempt to break the deadlock.

B. C. Lewis Named Tin Plate Vice

B. G. Lewis, of Wheeling, was named vice president of the Fifth district by the executive board of the Tin Plate Workers' International Protective Association at the recent meeting in Wheeling. The meeting was called by President W. S. Hunt, and those in attendance were President Hunt, Arthur Watkins, James E. Kain and Secretary-treasurer John Labor. Many matters of minor importance were attended to.

Horseshoers have increased their wages in La Crosse, Wis., the scale now being $3 per day.

Draperioom weavers of Brunswick, Me., secured 4 per cent increase.

THE DYNAMITE ARRESTS.

THE arrest of thirty-eight labor officials ranging in rank from vice presidents and former vice presidents of nation wide labor organizations grasping the most serious situation organized labor ever has confronted in the United States. The charges, that of shipping explosives and otherwise" conspiring against the law, are extremely grave. The scope and nature of the offenses alleged are staggering.

The fairest statement of opinion we have seen in the daily newspaper press is that of the Chicago Tribune, which says that "the American people will await the trial of these charges with temperance and justice. They are not disposed to condemn without proof or to permit their detestation of proved violence to sweep them into premature condemnation or unjust reaction against the humane and righteous cause of organized labor."

On the other hand, the responsible representatives of unionism and the great industrious rightminded rank and file must keep themselves clear of hysterical partisanship. And "if these heinous activities have been going on in the name of union labor they must be quick to repudiate those who have betrayed them and strong to stamp out the evil and to choose and support wiser and better leaders."

We are free to say that we believe a conspiracy of gigantic proportions backed by vast capital, exists to discredit union labor by these dynamite charges. However, this opinion (like most of the people who believe the accused guilty) can wait. The cases should be decided by the evidence. If the evidence is convincing, and proves that there has indeed been as widespread a dynamite plot as is alleged, then organized labor cannot too forcibly add its condemnation to the law's condemnation of the criminals. The unions must expel all men who sympathize with dynamite propaganda. The party of trades unionism in America is not in such men as the McNamaras but in such men as John Mitchell.

WARNING TO CORPORATION SERVING STATES.

CONGRESSMAN McCALL, Republican, of Massachusetts, cries out that the agitation of the rising tide of progressiveness in New England by presenting in the House at Washington a resolution amending the federal constitution so as to permit the regulation of the hours of labor in the states by federal authority. It is the alarm of reaction against the refusal of many states to give labor the protection that enlightened conscience demands for it. The lack of uniformity among the states, even in legislation which states produced printing trades, and by no stretch of imagination could the obligation be construed as vitiating the loyalty, fealty, or devotion of its members to the government of the United States. What is purposed by this angle in the interrogatories is not plain, but evidently is done to not only cloud the JUDGE JULIAN W. MACK, FRIEND OF CHILDREN.

BEFORE he became judge of the commerce court at Washington Julian W. Mack presided over the Chicago juvenile court and is still much interested in the welfare of the unfortunate boys who fall into the clutches of the law. He is now appealing to Chicago civic organizations for their help in bringing about by the legislative the creation of special judges for the children's courts. Judge Mack has long been identified with philanthropic work. He is president of the national conference of charities and correction and has been head of the national conference of Jewish charities. He is also a member of the Friends of Russian Freedom and the League For the Protection of Immigrants.

ments are guided by a sense of discretion, but Mr. Roberts seems unable to open his mouth without getting his foot in it.

Perhaps it was in view of his propensity for that sort of thing that the Stanley investigating committee with malice aforethought summoned him as a witness, if it counsed on his furnishing it with ammunition to use against the concern he is supposed to represent, the expectation was not disppointed.

Mr. Roberts aired his views at trades unions, which of course he doesn't like, particularly their efforts to maintain the closed shop. To a capitalist engaged in an effort to monopolize the steel market an ambition of workingmen to monopolize the labor market would of course seem utter depravity. It might not be out of place to point out to Mr. Roberts, however, that between what he calls the "closed-shop monopoly" of the trades unions and the attempted market monopoly of a trust such as he is a part of there is as much difference as between day and night.

The trades union is not trying to crush out its competitors (calling non-union workmen competitors of the unionists for the sake of the argument) and make it impossible for them to earn a livelihood, as the United States Steel Corporation, the Standard Oil Company, the beef combine, and all other trusts try to exterminate competitors or drive them from business. With the unions, on the contrary, it is not a case of shutting out but a case of inviting everybody in. Nothing would please them more than to see their fellow-work ingmen all equally enjoying the benefits accruing from the organization.

Was it to distribute the profits of steel-making in the same spirit among the largest number possible instead of fewest possible, that the steel corporation was organized? Until Mr. Roberts produces evidence that it was, his application of the word "monopoly" to the association was in no sense misleading.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 17.—Ten prominent and wealthy lumbermen are being tried in the United States district court on grounds charges. The defendants, it is alleged, have held workmen prisoners while they worked in the mountains, there being 26 counts in the indictments.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

What the British Miners Demand--An Explanation of Coal Wages in Great Britain--Colliery Surface Workers Will Also Strike--Retirement of Old English Labor Leader--British Sailors and Firemen Demand Further Increases.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Feb. 15.—For the proper understanding of the great movement now on foot amongst British miners a few words of explanation may not be out of place to American readers. It may serve some useful purpose to explain briefly the British coal miners' wage system as it exists at present, and to indicate the direction in which the miners were attempting to alter it. The underlying principle of the wage system in the coal trade is that the earnings of the miners should bear a direct and intimate relation to the fluctuations in price and to trade conditions, but it is modified by conditions which prevent wages falling below or rising above a certain level. The wage arrangements founded upon that principle take the cutting prices and the day wage rates in a certain four as a working basis. The prices and the day rates in that selected year are called the standard prices or rates. In the South Wales, Durham, Northumberland and Somerset coalfields the standard taken is that of 1879, and in the Federated districts—South Staffordshire, Bristol, Forest of Dean and Scotland—the standard year is 1888. In addition to these standard rates the miners are guaranteed under the wage agreements of the several districts, certain minimum percentages.

In the South Wales coalfield the minimum is 5 per cent, above the standard rates of 1879; in the Federated districts it is 27½ per cent above the standard rates of 1888, and in Scotland 9 per cent. above 1888. Northumberland and Durham have no such minimums, but they have a local custom approximating the percentage minimum principle in the county average system. The standard years are arbitrarily chosen, and in themselves they do not possess any particular significance; but the extra wage payment guaranteed in the form of the minimum percentage is, together with the earnings of the miner on his standard, intended to meet the minimum wage requirements of efficient labor, but it is only on very rare occasions that the percentages fall to the minimum.

Today they are above the minimum in all the coalfields, and in the South Wales coalfield, where the minimum is 35 per cent above the standard rates of 1879, the men are at present being paid at the rate of 56 per cent above their standard rates—in other words, 15 per cent above their minimum. Against this system, however, the miners complain not only that under conditions of a trade depression, when, in sympathy with a decline in the average selling prices of coal, the percentages come tumbling down, or of abnormal working places, where physical conditions render it impossible for the collier to produce his average quantity of coal, earnings not only vary a great deal over long periods, but also have no fixed bedrock bottom. It is open to them when working in places which are normal to increase their outputs to such an extent as to counterbalance the fall in the percentages paid to them on their standard price-list earnings; but to the great majority of them the application of increased effort is impossible. They are not asking for the discontinuance of the piece rate system entirely, but they are demanding that it shall have a bottom in the form of a guaranteed minimum wage of from $2.05 to $2.75 a day, which will protect them against the incidence on their earnings of the fluctuations in coal prices and secure them against inadequate allowances by the management where their working places become abnormal.

There have been prolonged negotiations and conferences in London this week over the miners' wages difficulty, but no final agreement was reached and negotiations will be resumed.

The ballot of the National Federation of Colliery Surface Workers has resulted as follows: For a strike, 7,218; against, 285. It is stated that their object is to strike with the miners.

There seems a determination among the operative weavers to proceed with the movement to obtain an advance of wages. The Committee of the Northern Counties Textile Federation, of which T. Shaw is secretary, will meet to decide what course of action immediately to be pursued and a meeting will be held of the Northern Counties Weavers' Amalgamation.

The unrest among the operative weavers is undoubtedly acute, and

WORLD-WIDE CAMPAIGN

LAWRENCE, Feb. 17.—Vigorous efforts to attract public attention and support are being made by the strike committee of the I. W. W. Encouraged by the success of their big postcard campaign, the "strike intendents," with appropriate captions, a manifesto is about to be issued. Its composition occupied three hours of a special session this afternoon.

The document purports to set forth, for the enlightenment not only of America, but of Europe also, the conditions that have led to the present strike and the incidents attending what is termed "its violent repression." As soon as its printing has been completed proofs are to be sent to Paris and Amsterdam, the manifesto translated into seven languages and distributed broadcast over France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Italy and Spain.

The most important of the strike gatherings held today was a mass meeting at the Star theater, where speeches were delivered by James Thompson, William Lawrence and Miss Pearl McGill, the organizer of the Pearl Button Makers' strike at Muscatine, Ia.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS.

Realization of the Divine Promise to Mankind — Shall Reign on the Earth—Pastor Russell, Preaching at Calcutta, Says That the Fulfilment of the Lord's Plan for the Salvation of the World Is Just Beginning. Points Forward to Messianic Kingdom as the Time When All the Families of the Earth Shall Be Blessed.

CALCUTTA, India, Feb. 18.—The Foreign Mission Investigation Committee, appointed by the International Bible Students Association, is here. The Committee expects their work by each giving special attention to a different feature of their investigation. This is the third week in India and they have now travelled nearly two thousand miles. They are keenly interested in the heathen and in the Bible, but they decline to give in advance any hint of what their report will be as respects the missionaries and their work.

Pastor Russell, Chairman of the Committee, preached twice today to large and attentive audiences in our Hindu Auditorium. One of his addresses, from Jeremiah ix. 23, 24, we report. He said:—

Your "City of Palaces" greatly impresses me, as doubtless it does all who visit it. But as I look at its splendor I am reminded of that portion of my text which declares, "Let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord, which exerciseth loving-kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth." Wherever we go we perceive that man, by virtue of his creation, is a worshipper. The organs of reverence and spirituality, although only partially developed and much shattered by ignorance and superstition, are to be found in every man and their position is the very highest in his organism. My journey in this city has impressed this thought deeply.

I stopped en route at Juggernaut; the very name called up the stories of my childhood which so greatly pained my sympathies for the poor heathen. Missionary reports told of how in his ignorance the natives would throw themselves before the great Car of Juggernaut, feeling it an honor to thus sacrifice their lives in false god. And now, here I am on the Ganges River, of which in childhood I heard so much that thrilled my heart with sympathy—how women and children had to the Ganges, not because they had no sympathy with their offspring, but because they desired to sacrifice to and propitiate their gods. Now that I am here I do thank God that, although the heathen have not been converted to a true knowledge of the great Jehovah, they have, nevertheless, come under the strong hand of the British government, which, whatever its defects, seeks at least to protect its subjects from the extremes of their own ignorance and superstition.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS.

While it is true that the worst form of government imaginable is preferable to anarchy, and while it is also true that the British Government is amongst the most just in the world, nevertheless, no government that fallen man has ever made or can make can ever satisfy the ideals of the more intelligent. Hence for centuries the heathen world has dreamed of a Golden Age to come and Bible Students have rejoiced in the Divine promise that the Messianic Kingdom will follow our present arrangements, and that it will be proved to be "the desire of all nations."

Oh, since we perceive the ignorance and superstition of heathendom, our hearts cry out for the promised reign of Messiah and the blessing that then will accrue to mankind! The very best that we have yet attained, in the most civilized lands, comes far short of the Divine promise of the conditions to prevail as a result of Messiah's rule. Then all ignorance, all superstition, all sin, all sorrow, all pain, all death shall be abolished and finally, with the willfully wicked destroyed in the Second Death, the time will have come when God's will shall be done on earth as fully as completely as it is now done in heaven. When every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God, when the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep," when "no man will need say to his neighbor, know ye the Lord, for all shall know Him from the least of them to the greatest of them"—it is for that glorious Epoch, my dear hearers, that we should be looking, planning, praying and striving to prepare ourselves.

"NOW WE KNOW IN PART."

Saint Paul wrote, "Now we know in part, but then we shall know even as also we are known." (I Corinthians xiii. 12.) And every intelligent Christian realizes how his own knowledge of God and that of his forefathers has so slightly exceeded the knowledge of the heathen and that he found it difficult to glory in his understanding of God. Only those who are adherents to the declarations of the Bible that God is Love," that His mercy endures forever, that He is His loving father, that He is the God of All Grace, the Father of Mercies, the length, breath, height and depth of whose loving kindness we cannot measure—only such have the assurances which enables them to offset the horrible theories of our creeds formulated in a darker past and which mold in more horrible ideas respecting our God and His treatment of mankind than our poor heathen brethren ever imagined.

THE KEY OF THE DIVINE WORD.

But now the better day is dawning. We are seeing the glorious outlines of the Divine character in the Divine Plan as never before. Our hearts first led the way and rebelled against the dictum of our fallacious reasoning. And now, as God's due time, when nature is yielding up her secrets and chemistry is making the world anew, behold, the key to the Divine Word is thrust into our hands, unlocking its mysteries and explaining its parables—symbols to our astonished faith! But alas! meantime many of the—bright est minds of the world have rejected the Bible, many of them even denying the personality of the Creator, and so far have these gone in the substitution of human wisdom for Divine Revelation that it seems impossible for them to return to the paths of faith. Nevertheless, the Bible, with all these creed idols declared eternal torment for the thousands of millions who had never heard of the Only Name. Indeed, nearly all of them claimed that the overwhelming majority of Christendom would escape eternal torture. Some of these creed-idols declare that so awful a catastrophe as the torture of twenty thousand millions was foreknown of God and predestinated by Him before the creation of Adam. Others claim the contrary, that God permitted Satan's intention to mar our race at the start, but that it's plans miscarried and would produce the same horrible results, either because of Divine unwillingness or because of lack of power. How such presentations distressed every Christian loyal at heart toward His God and sympathetic toward his fellows!

Our colleges and universities—and, alas! also our theological seminaries—are busy turning out unbelievers—infidels. Nor are these people wicked or immoral in their unbelief; they are wicked in the thought of our brain—not their way. They reject the Bible because they believe it to be the foundation of the various inconsistencies in their creeds, the false standards for lack of knowledge; they cannot believe that man's hereafter is one of centuries of suffering, or of eternal suffering.

Let us now demolish these idols which so long have misrepresented our gracious Creator and blinded us with ignorance and superstition. Let us receive the Scripture teaching only. Let us rejoice in the election of the Church to be the Kingdom class and let us rejoice in the hope of its Kingdom glory for the blessing of the non-elect. Let us rejoice that the "other sheep" shall blossom as the rose, and that the solitary place shall be glad and that "God will make His footstool a garden" during the thousand years of Christ's Kingdom. No glorious work will come into line with our real, and then shall glorify glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord, which exercise lovingkindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth."

NOW WE SEE OBSCURELY.

Saint Paul declares: "Now we see obscurely." Only by faith can we see God's work or sacrifice. The ransom was paid death for six thousand years has been but the natural result of the violation of Divine Law which our first parents transgressed. The beginning of God's work for our enlightenment dates from Pentecost, when the sending of His Son to be our Redeemer. Since then He has been gathering an elect few to be His Bride and joint-heir in His Kingdom. Soon very soon, we hope and believe, the Church will be completed and the Messianic Kingdom will manifest Divine clemency, mercy, righteousness, judgment and reasonableness in the earth.

The Bible declares that the penalty for sin is being experienced by humanity at the present time—that the penalty—and that the redemption price of Christ's death is sufficient for the sins of the whole world. It declares that on account of this redemption, ultimately every member of the dead shall take place—all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth." It promises that in the Divine intention that there shall be a resurrection of the dead that the Bible everywhere, both in the Old and New Testaments, speaks of those who have died, both good and bad, as being "asleep," and the promise is that "They that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake."

Nor will they come forth to similar conditions of sorrow that now surround us all. On the contrary, the Great Resurrection is to be conducted on the basis of the Ransom, and we are to be associated with their Redeemer as his Bride and Consort, to assist in delivering and restoring mankind. Into the mystery, to have part in these full rich, the great mass of mankind will be brought forth that they may learn the ways of righteousness, that they may learn to know God and Jesus Christ, and in due time be uplifted out of the conditions of sin and death. Then will come the world's opportunity. How joyful is the message, "There shall be no more curse, neither sorrow, nor crying, nor dying; for the former things have passed away."

Ah, how different is God's proposition of a general uplift of the worthy and their assistance back to perfection—to all that was lost in Adam! How different is this from the "doctrines of demons," which have perplexed us, which have divided the Church of Christ into numberless sects and parties, and which have almost driven us from Christ and the Bible!

Oh, these sins are the grace of God and the deep love wherewith He established and whose cure have been instituted. Thank God, however, for the gracious promise that in due time "all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped, and then "the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep," (Isaiah xxxv. 5; xl. 5; Habakkuk ii. 14.) Then all will respond to the Divine clemency and become children of God, children of the Messiah, and heirs of everlasting, earthly life and joy and every thing that is named, as Messiah's Bride and Consort.

A WORK TO OUR FRIENDS.

We want more subscribers for the Tribune. There is not one of our subscribers but who could add from one to ten to our already large list. We are not complaining of the way new subscribers are coming in, for we know there are thousands who would delight in having the Tribune for a year if they were only asked to subscribe. Will you not do this, friends, show the paper to some Truth friend and ask him or her to send in their subscription, or you send it in for them? We are publishing the best Truth paper and the cheapest, and hope our friends will appreciate our efforts by getting others to share in the good things and the good work. In Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box, Bible Studies and Appreciations, besides other interesting matter. Get busy, friends, and show that "faith without work availeth nothing." Who will be the first.—Editor N. L. T.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Alabama, Feb. 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I met a bro her on the train recently who told me of the National Labor Tribune and I took the paper from him right away. I am greatly pleased with the paper, especially on account of Brother Russell's sermons appearing in larger print than in any other paper I have seen. I am glad on account of the Bible Questions and Answers, and so many fine testimonies coming to the world of the grand truths now due to be understood by the Church at large, and also in the "greater work" of making perfect the last members of the Body of Christ, His Bride and Joint-heir. Trusting the Lord will find it vellest in His service and will "give it the increase" that it may "accomplish that thing where unto it is sent," with His continued blessing upon the present owners and managers.

Your brother in Christ,
J. T. BARCLAY

Ohio, Feb. 13.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I should like to express to you my appreciation of the "Pastor Russell's Sermon" feature in the Tribune. The logic of his arguments are convincing, the illustrations are so full and the lessons is satisfying. I am glad you have made room, too, for the Sunday School Lessons and Bible Question Box.

I appreciate the large type and also the way in which these helps are gotten up.

With congratulations to you for your success in this regard, and also for myself, for having but fully decided to subscribe for your paper, I am,

Respectfully yours,
MRS. H. C. SWAN.

Kansas, Feb. 13.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Surely your zeal for the truth is increasing and your service of it a willing service, as you are devoting more space for it all the time. Not only the nice way in which you are printing Pastor Russell's sermons, but the Sunday School Lessons and Bible Questions and Answers have been added, now the beautiful poems and the various features that I feel I could not be without keep my reading table. The primary feature with me is Pastor Russell's weekly sermons which I appreciate highly, but I also greatly appreciate the Question Box, and the clean, gentleman'y manner in which you treat other views, etc. May God bless you and speed you in delivering the message in meekness and love through the medium of the columns of the Labor Tribune.

The Master said "that whosoever would give to one of his little ones a cup of cold water would in no wise lose his reward."

Surely, many of God's children have drunk the refreshing water (Truth) of present truth, given through Pastor Russell's clear rendering of the Scriptures.

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM G. HOUGH.

Pennsylvania, Feb. 15.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have caused an expression of appreciation of the sermons you print as Pastor Russell's Sermons. I am greatly interested in reading them, it is one of my chief pleasures to do so. I have had several papers loaned to me, but am satisfied with High and I wish to subscribe for your paper. Enclosed find remittance for the same.

One of Pastor Russell's friends,
MRS MARY HERBERT.

Maine, Feb. 14.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Pastor Russell's Sermon and the Question Box for Everybody, both features of your paper are the best I have ever seen. How I wish every one in the country could have the privilege of reading your paper as it appears to me as nearly an ideal issue of a paper. The Pastor's sermon was one of the best and that is saying considerable. May the Lord continue to bless you, till the end for your good cause in publishing the Truth. I never see an issue of your paper but a mental picture of thanksgiving is effected in my heart. Sincerely Yours for your loyalty.

Yours in the service of the King of kings.

W. S. MARSHALL.

California, Feb. 15.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to take this opportunity to express my heartfelt appreciation of the way you are assisting in the spread of the Truth. Pastor Russell is found in no clear Brother Russell's sermons. May the Lord's blessing be upon you.

H. C. ROGERS.

Georgia, Feb. 29.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Your paper reaches us regularly each week and we enjoy it very much, especially the Pastor Russell sermons, which get better each week and must be a great comfort to those who are among the heathen as well as in this country.

One thing we especially like in these sermons is that they show that our great desire is for God's glory, justice, love and mercy, then vindicating His character in a way that appeals to reason, and not as a ground for faith in all His precious promises.

With best wishes and trusting that you will keep the good work on.

Yours truly,
R. R. MONTAGUE.

Minnesota, Feb. 29.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to offer my thanks to you for the publishing of Pastor Russell's Sermons, which are such good clear print, also Question Box and Bible Study. The only improvement I see that could be made is this: The Sunday School and Popular Mechanics, Bible Study and Question Box on the same leaf as the Sermon, so that we could file it away for future reference. I also enjoy the labor news, children's page, the stories and look for the coming National Labor Tribune.

Yours truly,
A. H. FURLEY.

Indiana, Feb. 18.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am now an old veteran, but not an agitator of labor, capital or politics, but a substantial advocate of justice to all. Subscribed for you when at Lake Park, Md., a solicitation to subscribe for your paper, is title did not attract my attention at the first until seeing of the Bible studies recommended it very highly for its excellent print and so sold stand it took in C. T. Russell's Sermons and Sunday School Lessons and the Bible Questions Box. I am very glad I succeeded in filing my order for the paper. I left Mt. Lake Park. I am also glad that more than 1,500 papers publish these sermons. I have read Pastor Russell's on your style to beat on account of the large, clear type and the liberal space you allot to apply your terrible readers. As a free reader of the propheses and the result of its teachings along the line of the labor and capital problem I would cite all its readers to the first verse of James fifth chapter. Enough to consider these political problems will not be achieved by political or financial strife as to be entitled to its sole credit. Labor and capital will be prominent factors in bringing about the Pastor's grand and glorious results. Hoping you best results for your liberal and unbiasing the Truth and honest efforts toward justice to all, I am encouraged that in the end you will receive a great reward.

Yours truly,

Ohio, Feb. 19.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

As a subscriber of your valuable paper I desire to express my appreciation and thanks to you for the part which you taking in presenting through the columns, the true Gospel, for herewith, which revealed so much be unto all people. I greatly enjoy reading your paper especially Pastor Russell's sermons, which are grand and refreshing. It was through them that I learned to love our Heavenly Father and His dear Son, the world's Redeemer, as I never did before and I will ever praise the Lord for the light. I have received through Pastor Russell, which revealed so much of God's grand and glorious character to me. Now I understand why the angels sang on that glad night of our dear Redeemer's birth.

The Question Box and Sunday School Lessons are a so very appreciated to me. I think your paper is getting more interesting every issue and I am very desirous that all Bible students and earnest Christians should have the opportunity of reading such expositions of Bible truths as your valuable paper sends forth. May God bless your efforts and may you still continue to publish the truth in my wish.

Yours in Truth,
MRS. EFFIE B. THOMAS.

Pennsylvania, Feb. 16.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

With this same mail, I am sending to the Bible Banner the request of your valuable paper for the year 1912. I consider the shining pair of the Tribune and Watch Tower the best combination of periodicals obtainable in furnishing to the public the latest news of the world, and to the household of faith the best in the search to find them on their homeward journey. Wishing you the continued prosperity in the future.

I am very respectfully,

Pastor Russell to Speak

Pastor Russell on his return from his tour around the world, which will be somewhere in March, Providence permitting, will preach at the following places and will not doubt tell what Christianity is doing for the heathen:

New York, March 31.
Brooklyn, N. Y., April 7.
Baltimore, Md., April 14.
Atlanta, Ga., April 28.
Washington, D. C., May 12.
Boston, Mass., May 19.

PROVOCATIVES.

In the daily contact how many indeed are the provocatives to let slip the bitter word, cutting and wounding the tender feeling therewith and set on fire the lower passions of evildoers and the whole wheel of the faldoers and the whole wheel of the falsehood tongue. On the other hand how wise is the Master's counsel to return good for evil as a pacifier of strife, since the soft answer is the coal of fire thus placed upon the head of such burns sore. If the case is an invitation of love to cease of action is in accord, to wit, depart from such when the lip of knowledge is not perceivable and save the pearls for appreciators.

Yours with the Soft Whisper,
JOSEPH GREIG.

NOVEL DIGGING DEVICE.

Derrick Operated Scoop Shovel For Excavation Work.

An ordinary revolving steam derrick equipped with a shovel attachment for excavating work is shown in the accompanying illustration. The shovel is attached to an arm which is engaged with the boom through a steel carriage having four rollers, between the two side plates of the carriage and below the rollers is a cross channel, from which is suspended by bolts two plates, one above and one below the excavating wire cable, which is attached to the boom at the heel and peak. On these plates are cast iron grips for the purpose of holding the carriage stationary on the boom while the shovel is being forced into the material to be excavated. The weight of the boom is allowed to rest on the shovel arm, and the shovel is cutting into its load, then the boom is raised slightly, the grip plates pressing against the boom and are released, thus freeing the carriage from its stationary contact with the boom, and the carriage is drawn to the top of the boom, where the shovel is automatically dumped into a waiting wagon.

The illustration shows the derrick working in a gravel pit, where it is claimed, it takes the place of a steam shovel and crew and two teams. Only one man is required to operate the shovel.

BORING FOR WATER.

Combination of Dug and Drilled Wells Dangerous.

Almost any community in which wells have been drilled can boast of a number of combination dug and drilled wells. The owners congratulate themselves on their wisdom in utilizing an old dug well fifteen, twenty or thirty feet in depth and drilling through the bottom of this to a good flow of water. The cost of drilling that twenty or thirty feet has been saved, certainly an economy worth considering. As a matter of fact, this combined dug and drilled well is a particularly dangerous type. It may readily form a material favorable when typhoid fever, which is more prevalent in the country than even in the sewer crowded cities, is spilled on the exposed pure water supply of nearly all farming sections. Such a well is all the more dangerous because it is fancied to be safe. Although the water encountered at the deep well may be perfectly safe at the start, circumstances may take place almost immediately by the entrance, especially after rains, of surface water into the old dug well and thence into the casing of the drilled well. The remedies are obvious. Either the casing should be carried to the surface of the outside ground, or at least above the highest level ever reached by the water, or the open well should be converted into a water tight system by applying a thick coating of cement over both sides and bottom.—United States Geological Survey.

Teaching Cattle to Avoid Poison.

The experiences of Walter Larden on the pampas of Argentina indicate that the avoidance of poisonous herbs is not, as has sometimes been thought, an instinct born in animals. There is a poisonous weed on the pampas called romerillo, which the native born cattle and sheep have learned to avoid, but imported cattle and horses have to be taught not to eat it. That is done by tying them fast and then burning a heap of the weed to the windward of them. The smell of the smoke breeds in them so great a dislike that they do not touch the green weed afterward.

Cuba as an Iron Producer.

The shipments of Cuban iron ores, according to statistics collected by the United States geological survey, show the record breaking output for 1910 of 1,417,014 long tons as against 930,446 tons for 1909, the greatest previous production. In 1900 the production was 446,872 tons. The ores are obtained from deposits near Santiago, which is now the fifth largest producer of iron ore in the world, being exceeded only by the United States, Germany, the United Kingdom and France.

To Prevent Weed Rot.

Instead of treating wood to preserve it from rot, an inventor at Budapest arrives at the same result by a reversal of this operation, for he treats the earth to surround the posts in such a manner as to destroy all germs and insect life. This process serves as a substitute where it is difficult to secure the treated lumber. It is called "part sterilization."

BEETLE MONOPLANE.

Successful Flying Machine Equipped With Folding Wings.

With wings that fold back over the body like those of a grasshopper beetle, a curious, insect-like appearance is presented by the new French aeroplane invented by Henri Bequet, Jean Pucher, mechanics. Moreover, differentiating it from the host of freak folding contrivances that have preceded it, the present machine, the de Marcay-Bequet monoplane, is the first with folding wings that has actually flown.

As is shown in the illustration, the principle of construction is simplicity itself, and wing being pivoted at its point of attachment to the body, to a vertical pillar that, besides constituting a hinge, also serves as a brace or strut, from which the bracing wires to the wings are strung.

A wheel attached to the driver's seat controls the wing positions, and by revolving this wheel the change is effected from wings fully spread to the closed position over the body. In both positions there is provision for securely locking the wings in place—a point of particular importance in the flight position.

No attempt is made to allow for swinging the wings during flight, the novel design having for its sole purpose the more compact stowing of wings, while the machine is on the ground, to facilitate storage, and also to allow the vehicle to be run along narrow roads or across other than clear fields, in search of suitable ascending areas. This last point can be accomplished either by towing, as with a horse or automobile, or by the thrust of the aeroplane propeller, the latter ordinarily permitting it to proceed under its own power, in the manner of the not altogether uncommon "wind wagon." Steering on the ground is effected by the wheels of the alighting gear, which are easily movable, and connected up to a steering gear, with this particular purpose in view.

Elasticity of the Human Skull.

Fortunately the human skull, although composed of bones, is not much more so than one would think. The average male adult skull, in fact, is so elastic that it will compress laterally in diameter by a blow of pressure applied at the center of area at right angles to the surface at the rate of only one and one-half centimeters, or about six-tenths of an inch, recovering its original diameter and form without breaking. The material of which our bones are made is so highly resistant that a cylindrical piece having a cross section of only 0.00125 square inch in area—that is, only 1.128 millimeters or 0.044 inch in diameter, has a tensile strength of fifteen kilograms, or thirty-three pounds avoirdupois, figuring out at about 21,200 pounds per square inch. A similar sample of hardwood tested in the same manner held only ten kilograms—that is, bone has 50 per cent more tensile strength than wood. A single bone fiber is shown in the following elevation. Therefore, supporting a weight of five kilograms, or eleven pounds avoirdupois.

Model Botanic Garden.

The forest of Arden, brought to the notice of the Botanical society of Washington by H. C. Skeels, is a 300 acre tract of forest and meadow just east of Joliet, Ill. In the heart of the 2,000 acre estate of H. N. Higinbotham of Chicago and has been arranged as a model botanic garden, which already has 2,000 species and has room for as many more. The plants are arranged according to the five miles of paths in the accepted sequence of plant families, from the ferns to the compositæ. Each species has a number and the number of the squares containing each species.

The Seat of Hunger.

Whether the hunger sense has its seat in the stomach and thirst in the throat has been a subject of much scientific controversy. The Italian physician Valenti now puts the seat of both these emotions in the gullet. He found that a cocaine injection in the esophagus (the channel from the mouth to the stomach) resulted in immediate suppression of the feeling of both hunger and thirst. Serums have long known that the chewing of cocoa leaves renders the gullet insensitive and destroys any desire for food or drink.

NEW AUTO HEADLIGHT.

Spherical Electric Lamp That Produces Powerful Light.

A new headlight for the use of motorists has recently been shown at Bradford, England. It is named the "Alva," from its similarity to a lobster's breastbone, and its use is to be extended to apply to signaling searchlights for the navy and army. Dynamo laws have been granted in England, France, Germany and the United States. The headlight is spherical in shape, divided into two halves vertically. The front half has a double convex lens in the center. The back half has four similar lenses, at the top, bottom and on either side. The interior is nickel plated, and for illuminating purposes electricity is used. A bulb is placed in the exact center of the sphere, which, on being illuminated, becomes a ball of light. The rays from the four back lenses are directed on to four circular mirrors focused so as to obtain the maximum of light at an angle to throw the beams forward in a straight line parallel with that of the front lens or otherwise, as desired. The lamp is held in position by a special hinged gate or frame in front of the radiator.

The special advantages claimed are that five times more light can be obtained from any given illuminant; there is no glare as a driver approaches and draws to one side to pass, economy of space, and there is room for only one single electric bulb of small power, and the penetrative power of the light is specially suited for driving through fog.—Consular Report.

Mosquito Pest in the Klondike.

The mosquito is more numerous in the arctic zone than in the tropics, though there is no land animal so little bothered by its subtraction, and the only place where it is not found is in localities where only a few feet of soil moisture. There is no country where the mosquitoes are so large and so numerous as they are in the Klondike, and it is impossible to destroy them, as they propagate in the heavy moss that covers there which contains moisture almost equal to swamp lands.

Ancients Re-enforced Concrete.

Although concrete has been used for many centuries, it is usually understood that its use is confined to the modern invention. This, however, has been discovered by the finding of bronze reenforcing bars in the concrete core of an ancient Roman tomb and in the discovery of re-enforced concrete in the construction of one of the walls of the old palace of the Louvre, Paris. The re-enforced concrete in the latter dates back only 2000 or 3000 years, but created much comment because the walls were thought to consist entirely of ashlar and quarry stone. The discovery that the stone casing concealed a core composed in part of re-enforced concrete was made while workmen were piercing the wall for an elevator installation.

United States Oil Wells.

There are now 148,440 oil wells in operation in the United States. They average about four barrels a day, but in Pennsylvania and New York old wells in some districts yield a mere pint on an output of less than one-fifth of a barrel a day. The original Drake well in the 1859 would produce 25 bbl. If it were cleaned, be capable of yielding one-third of a barrel a day. Another well close to the Drake well is nearly five years old and is still being pumped.

New Cloth Printing Process.

A Yorkshire (England) paper calls attention to the invention of a new process for printing textile fabrics and wall papers. The design is photographically reproduced with the aid of a special screen on a piece of transparent celluloid. The inventor has, it is stated, succeeded in reproducing photographs on textile fabrics almost as much like ordinary photographic prints.

"THE RETURN OF THE SPIES."

(Written for the Tribune.)

When the Foreign Mission Committee of the I. B. S. A. comes sailing home again.
Hooray! Hooray!
There'll be something a stirring then!
Hooray! Hooray!
Open hearts will flock to hear,
The committee's report true and fair;
The errors of Carisbadism all laid bare.
When the F. M. C. of the I. B. S. A. comes sailing home again!

When the Foreign Mission Committee of the I. B. S. A. comes sailing home again.
Hooray! Hooray!
True confidence in brotherhood will be made plain!
Hooray! Hooray!
The sword of truth will slay the sham,
Error wear a withered wreath,
Sectarian wail and gnash their teeth,
When the F. M. C. of the I. B. S. A. comes sailing home again!

When the Foreign Mission Committee of the I. B. S. A. comes sailing home again.
Hooray! Hooray!
Oh, yes, we'll have "a shower of rain."
Hooray! Hooray!
Lightning, thunder, hail and rain will pour,
When Pastor Russell begins to roar:
The Brooklyn Eagle will weep some more!
When the F. M. C. of the I. B. S. A. comes sailing home again!

When the Foreign Mission Committee of the I. B. S. A. comes sailing home again.
Hooray! Hooray!
Oh, yes, we'll have "a shower of rain."

Hooray! Hooray!
We'll sadly listen to their "explain."
Hooray! Hooray!
Above Restitution blessings for the healthy sinners,
And the reign of Messiah from sea to sea!
How "the ground me creation" will then go free!
Hallelujah! Hooray! Won't we all rejoice when the "dear friends" come sailing home again!

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have been a subscriber to your most excellent paper for only a short while. However, I wish to acknowledge my sincere appreciation of the privilege of having its weekly visits. I am highly pleased with the plain yet conservative way you deal with the great problems of the hour, especially that of the labor question, but my highest appreciation is for the nice way you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons and Everybody Question Box. (I was that particular feature of the paper that made me a subscriber) and I wish to remark that it is not the first time I continues or I live on "this side." I was a missionary Baptist preacher for twenty years, held pastorates in three states, did extensive evangelistic work in four, have been a close Bible student for thirty-nine years, but must confess that "Scripture Studies" by Pastor Russell has enabled me more toward a correct and harmonious interpretation of the "One Book" than all else that it has been my privilege to study, with the advantage of a partial course at the seminary besides. They are index fingers pointing to chapter and verse where we can see it in the Bible itself the beauty and harmony of its sacred teachings, and not to the traditions of the dark ages. The sermons, Sunday school lessons, questions and answers are but a continuing of the most fruitful and glorious year's work. I am grateful for its weekly visits with pleasure and anticipation for it brings food to my soul.

May the good Lord wonderfully bless you for your part in this great work of disseminating his most wonderful yet precious harvest message, and reward you in due time.

Yours for the spreading of the truths.

SAVIOR'S KINGDOM AGE RESTITUTION

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

DRIVEN INTO THE WILDERNESS

Mark i. 9-11; Matthew iv. 1-11—Feb. 25.

"For in that He Himself hath suffered, being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted."—Hebrews ii. 18.

OUR STUDY for today is a most interesting one. It points to the time when Jesus reached the age of thirty and was permitted to offer Himself without spot to God as the world's Sin-offering.

There the Redeemer became the antitypical Passover Lamb and a half years of perfect love—that degree of love that would not only prompt one to love God with all his heart, and mind and soul, and to love his neighbor as himself, but also to even love his enemies. That was the standard of character development which the Lord Jesus established, and which was exemplified in His life. The "prize" in the "crown of life"—immortality—with its accompanying glory and honor. It signifies royalty as well, for with it can be associated that those who overcome the evil tendencies of this present evil world, and make their "high calling" and election sure—that these shall be seated with Him on His throne at the right hand of the Father. (Rev. iii. 21.) They shall be Kings and Priests.—Revelation xx. 6; v. 10.

"Baptism of John in the Jordan."

Q.—"Will you please explain the second king mentioned between Genesis xiii. 10, and Ezekiel xxi. 26-27" (C. S.)

Answer.—The "scepter" is the symbol of the right to rule. It is the emblem of authority. The "crown" is the symbol of reigning authority. It signifies that the one wearing the crown is ruling, or reigning; not merely that he has the right to rule, but that he is exercising that right and is reigning. The fact that several centuries elapsed after the scepter had been given to Judah before any member of his family was crowned, proves that this distinction should be made. The Kingdom of Israel was a typical kingdom, and represented in its many aspects the Kingdom of Heaven that is to be established in the earth at the second coming of Christ. Therefore, the "crown," referred to in Ezekiel, was a typical crown, and in no way affected the right, or scepter vested in Judah. This "scepter," or right to rule, passed to Shiloh, the "Lion of the Tribe of Judah," the Lord Jesus, when He, in obedience to the Divine will, laid down His life to redeem the world. He purchases the race and the earthly dominion, the Kingdom, by the ransom price which He gave. (Ephesians i. 14.) The "scepter," therefore, is His; and He will assume it "even as" all His second coming, and will reign for a thousand years.

Q.—Please explain John xi. 26. (N. H. R.)

Answer.—To understand the Master's words in this verse we should consider them in connection with the words of the preceding three verses, which are as follows, as given in Revised Version (Ephesians i. 14.) The "scepter," therefore, is His; and He will assume it "even as" all His second coming, and will reign for a thousand years.

Q.—Please explain John xi,

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

John Mitchell to Prepare a Statement, at Judge Wright's Suggestion, on Manner in Which Labor Should Regard Injunctions--Contempt Hearing Still On--Illiteracy Test for Immigrants Means a Big Fight--A Sweatshop Exhibit.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. -- John Mitchell, vice president of the American Federation of Labor will comply with the suggestion of Justice Wright that he make clear his view and attitude on his duty and his conception of the duty of his followers in the American Federation of Labor to obey the injunctions of courts. It will be remembered that Mr. Mitchell, when testifying before the court, made very plain his attitude in reference to injunctions, but Justice Wright offered the suggestion as noted above, and Mr. Mitchell will make known his views again, which will be incorporated in the testimony.

The trial now in progress of President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison for contempt of court, reveals no change in the attitude of the Federation officials. They have contended persistently that their rights under the constitution shall be maintained. The defendants insist that they did nothing in furtherance of the boycott after the injunction was made operative by the court, although it was admitted by them that they did exercise their right to discuss the case upon the platform and in the official publication of the American Federation of Labor, the Federationist. The case has been in the courts over four years, and the position of the Federation officials is the same today as it was when the proceedings were commenced, and there will be no wavering in their attitude toward the fundamental question involved in this contest. The question involved is of such vital character as to make it imperative to employ every legal means to protect the inherent rights of not only the members of organized labor, but of every citizen.

Congressman Sulzer has been asked to call before Justice Wright in the contempt case. It will be remembered that Mr. Sulzer read into the Congressional Record about the time the Bucks Stove and Range case was a burning issue, an editorial from the American's Federationist, written by President Gompers. This speech was printed in pamphlet form and was scattered broadcast throughout the country. Following the editorial referred to was what is known in printing parlance as "a filler," or short editorial paragraph which stated in substance "that no court could compel any one to buy a Bucks stove or range, nor even a Lowry hat." Attorneys for Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison are expected that the congressman will testify before the close of the hearing that the court may be advised as to the reasons prompting him to have the editorial read into the Congressional Record.

Undoubtedly there will be a stubborn fight in the Senate over the illiteracy test provision to be placed in the general immigration law. The Dillingham bill is based on the recommendation of the immigration commission and aims to revise generally the immigration laws. The bill has been lined up for committee amendments on the motion of Senator Lodge, chairman of the senate committee on immigration, and many changes were adopted. When the clause calling for the illiteracy test was introduced a fight was precipitated and the matter was laid over for future consideration. Senator Overman has submitted an amendment increasing the head tax from $4 to $10, and proposes say that any surplus in the immigration fund collected from incoming foreigners shall be given to the states and territories for the support of farm-life schools in which boys and girls shall receive instructions to prepare them for agricultural pursuits. Other amendments are in preparation and no doubt discussion will be prolonged.

As a part of a campaign to better the working conditions of women and children in Washington, as well as the women and children employed in factories, in stores, and in their homes throughout the country, the Consumers' league of the District of Columbia has just held an exhibit in the parish hall of Epiphany church. The desire of the Consumers' league is to do away with sweatshop and tenement labor, not only by aid the work ers by compelling manufacturers to have their work done in sanitary factories at living wages, but also to safeguard the consumers from the danger of disease. Babies which are clothed in the finely made caps and dresses, made in sweatshops, are in danger of being afflicted with consumption and other diseases. The consumers' league has adopted a label for goods manufactured under sanitary conditions at fair wages, and sixty-five factories have adopted this label, after satisfying the league that the conditions under which the employes are employed were proper. The establishment of minimum wage boards and the enactment of laws curtailing the hours of labor for women and children are on the program. Especial interest in this city is being taken in the welfare of women and girls employed in stores, and soon a "white list" of

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION UP TO CONGRESS.

THE employes' liability and workman's compensation report which President Taft transmitted in Congress last Thursday with a favorable recommendation ought by all means to be enacted into law at this session. With the full text of the measure the public is not yet acquainted, but its general principles are such as to merit hearty commendation. The bill applies only to the employes of railroads, and only such railroads as are engaged in interstate commerce, but this is the vast majority of all railroad employes throughout the country, and while Congress has not the power, under present interpretations of the constitution, to regulate labor of all kinds, its establishment of a protective law in the transportation labor will be of immense moral influence in compelling the enactement of laws by state legislatures to protect workingmen in general.

The principle feature of the measure transmitted to Congress yesterday is its requirement that in personal injuries the workers shall not be cheated out of damage award by the doctrine of "contributory negligence," or the "fe low-servant" rule. For all injuries received at his employment he shall be compensated on a scale provided by the act, and the only thing that shall bar him from recovery is proof that he deliberately attempted himself to be injured for the sake of recovering damages.

The general average of compensation provided by the act in case of injury is one-half of wages. In case of death, monthly payment of one-half wages are to be made to the widow and children or other dependants for eight years. Nor will it be necessary to go to court to enforce the claim. The claimant can force the case before a commission which the act provides, the awards of which will be much more prompt than the judgments of the courts can be. The act has the approval of labor, and Congress cannot very well avoid accepting it in view of the strong public sentiment in its favor.

ANOTHER RIOT IN LAWRENCE.

RENEWAL of rioting, undoubtedly due solely to the outrageous conduct of the police, at Lawrence Monday morning, makes it absolutely necessary that the federal authorities take charge of the matter, if the state of Massachusetts will not perform her duty and protect her citizens in their constitutional rights and liberties. Soon it becomes the immediate duty of the United States government to give them that protection, for they are citizens of the United States before they are citizens of Massachusetts.

As this is being written, the advices indicate that several lives were lost in this morning's disorder. This is the natural sequel of the vicious and lawless assault that the police made upon the strikers and their little children on Saturday, when without the slightest shadow of authority in law the strikers were prevented from sending their children to Philadelphia and other cities to be properly cared for.

When Anarchists wearing blue coats and brass buttons undertake to tell American citizens that they shall not send their children away to be cared for, it is inevitable that there should be violent opposition to such tyranny. If the police authorities of Lawrence are not compelled by some higher authority to obey the law, it is idle to expect the workers to obey it. Not only will they resist, but they have a right to resist.

Congress should take a hand in the affair without delay, and it should ask the President of the United States why he should not employ the federal military arm to protect American citizens in the liberties of which corporation tyranny and police usurpation, leagued together in Lawrence, are depriving them.

NEW JUDGE AGAINST UNIONS.

ACCORDING to reports, Judge Pitney, now elevated to the United States Supreme bench by Taft, once proclaimed from the bench: "Any person who works for another is a servant in the eyes of the law. Now, the relation of master and servant being shown to exist, the law is quite clear that no person has the right to entice away another's servant. The right of the master to have his servant continue in his employ without molestation or enticement by any third party is a property right, so recognized by the law."

As the courts are going to be an important issue in the presidential campaign the record of the latest appointee to the highest court in the land will be carefully studied. The Pitney conception of the relation of employer and employe as being a relation of master and servant shows a bent of mind rather toward the dark ages than toward twentieth-century enlightenment for Pitney thinks that the survival of the phrase means the survival of the relation.

There was a time when pretty much all human being were either masters or servants. The master even flogged his servants and despoiled his family. Labor was dishonor and degradation. The reward of labor was fixed by law, and the action by classes was enforced. That time has passed, but such were its tyranny, its oppression, its outrages that the the stench of it all still clings to the terms "master" and "servant" which Pitney uses to enforce a conclusion that one workingman has no right to persuade another to seek a new employer. Pitney thus adheres literally to the antiquated doctrine of property in human beings. That conception, as before remarked, was long ago banished from the minds of enlightened and progressive men, but it apparently survives in the dark and narrow soul of Pitney. It is a relic of paganism in the midst of Christian civilization.

Does President Taft also regard the employer literally as the master and owner and the workingman as the servant and chattel? If not, why did he appoint Pitney? Surely he does not elevate a man to the Supreme Court of the United States without knowing his character and the tendency of his judicial opinions.

"Master and servant," forsooth! Wouldn't owner and slave be still better?

Offers Amendment To Anti-Trust Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.--Senator Rayner of Maryland, has introduced a resolution in the Senate calling on the Judiciary committee to suggest changes in or amendments to the Sherman anti trust law. It is declared in the resolution that recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court holding generally that the circumstances of each case determine whether or not a combination is in violation of the anti-trust law, have raised a feeling of doubt and uncertainty, and the resolution aims to remedy this defect.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS

The bureau of immigration and naturalization has just issued its report covering the month of October, 1911. During that month there was admitted to this country 69,418 immigrants. The largest number from any one country came from Germany, being 7,432, with the following large numbers from other countries: Southern Italy 7,216, Slav 5,138, Polish 5,106, Irish 3,237, Hebrew 4,776, Scandanavian 1,944. The balance of the immigrants came from some 25 or 30 other countries.

Wages of factory employes and of common laborers, including domestic servants, are today 75 per cent higher at Leghorn, Italy, than in the spring of 1909.

During December, 1911, the Switchmen's Union of North America paid out $16,000 in death and disability benefits.

JOHN P. WHITE, PRESIDENT OF UNITED MINE WORKERS.

THE head of the United Mine Workers of America, re-elected this year, is John P. White, who has lived all his life in the mining regions. His father and other brothers were miners, and at the age of thirteen he, too, entered the coal mines of Iowa as a trapper boy. He utilized his scanty opportunities for education, attending night school after he was grown up and married, and early showed his talent for leadership among his fellows. He has built up his home district, No. 13, of the international union until it is perhaps the strongest in that strong organization. His position makes him, this year particularly, a figure of great importance in the world of labor. For the first time in many years the contracts between the miners' union and the anthracite and bituminous operators expire on the same day, March 31, and unless an agreement is reached before that time coal mining may be temporarily suspended throughout the country.

LONDON, February 22.--The British Parliamentary Labor Party met on February 13 for the election of officers and consideration of work to be done in the ensuing session. Ramsay MacDonald was re-elected chairman; James Parker, vice chairman; George H. Roberts, Chief Whip, and J. Pointer, Junior Whip.

It was decided to ballot for the following bills in the order named: (1)--Trade Unions Amendment bill, (2)--Right to Work bill, (3)--Education (Administrative Provision) bill, (4)--Eight Hour Day bill, (5)--Railway Nationalization bill, (6) Compulsory Weighing bill, (7)--Eviction of Workmen During Trade Disputes bill, (8) Blind Aid bill, (9)--Local Authorities (Enabling) bill.

A list of motions was discussed, from which selection was made for ballot, and the following three were chosen in the order given: (1) A general Thirty Shillings "Minimum" Wage, (2) Nationalization of Fair Wages Clause in Government Contracts, (3) Railway and Canal Nationalization.

A demonstration in support of adult suffrage was held on the night of February 15 at the Albert Hall, which was filled with 10,000 labor men under the auspices of the Labor party. Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., who presided, said the Labor party would leave no stone unturned to give women the vote on precisely the same terms as men.

Arthur Henderson, M. P., moved the following resolution: "That this meeting of men and women, believing that the widest and simplest suffrage, affording to every person legal means for redress of grievances is the safest base for a democratic state, insists that a drastic reform of the franchise, to include the complete removal of all the complications and absurdities of the present methods of registration, is long overdue, and that the time has come for the grant to every adult, man or woman, of the right to vote for all parliamentary and municipal elections." It assures the government that no measure of manhood suffrage will satisfy the organized forces of Labor throughout the kingdom, and demands a genuine measure of adult suffrage, conferring full rights of citizenship on all men and women." He said no vote of his would be given for any bill introduced by the government which was not going to assist in securing votes for women as well as men. All the influence of the Labor party would be put behind this question, and they would win in spite of the opposition of some members of the Government. The resolution was carried unanimously.

After a brief sitting on February 13 the Miners' Federation of Great Britain confirmed their resolution of February 7 when, at the national conference of masters and men, they determined that there can't be "no settlement of the present dispute" unless the principle of a minimum wage is agreed to. Thus another week has passed by, and only a little over a fortnight remains before the strike notices take effect.

The failure of the national conference of February 7 means that the process of giving notices to terminate contracts authorized by the Birmingham conference will not now be interrupted. The South Wales miners lodged their notices on February 1; in the West of Scotland a day's notice will be given on February 16. In all the other districts a fortnight's notice was tendered on February 13. Unless some agreement is arrived at in the meantime the miners employed in the 3,200 coal pits of Great Britain will be thrown on February 27.

If a strike takes place throughout the British coalfields, more than a million men and boys will be immediately thrown out of work. In 1910, the last year for which official figures are available, the actual number of workers in and about the coal mines was 1,049,407. Of these 448,581 were employed underground. Those who may strike on March 1 may be reckoned therefore at about 450,000 and the first result of their action would be to put a stop to the employment of about 300,000 other colliery workmen. Nearly one-fourth of the total number of miners and colliery workmen are found in the South Wales district.

It is estimated that of the 830,000 men and boys are employed in the pits 700,000 are members of the various miners' organizations. Some of the unions, however, have, therefore, as non-unionists would receive no assistance from the unions in the event of a strike. The total federation of Great Britain, with which all the miners' associations are for the present affiliated, claims a membership of only 600,000, but this means a considerable underestimate of the strength of the unions is always a little larger than that which these members register.

PRESIDENT WALKER DEFIES A SUPREME COURT.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 22.--John H. Walker, president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, has dared the Supreme Court of Illinois to jail him because of his excoriation of the members of that tribunal.

Perhaps no bitterer words were ever used in denouncing any court in this land than were those chosen by President Walker in denouncing the Supreme court judges of this state because of their attitude in holding the law known as the "Tanner act" unconstitutional, at the behest of the "big business" interests of the state.

"This coterie of judicial jackals betrayed the common people of our commonwealth," proclaimed themselves and the high offices they hold and paid them, the money intervals, their thirty pieces of silver for the job they gave them by rendering this infamous judgment," declares Walker.

The "Tanner act" was intended to prevent unscrupulous employers of labor from shipping scab labor into the state under false pretenses during times of strikes. The fact that the state Supreme Court had held the law unconstitutional was brought to the attention of the convention here by President Walker in his annual report to the miners.

"I wish that you delegates would pay especial attention to this," said Walker, as he reached the end of his report. "I am told that I am likely to go to jail for this report. I guess that better men than I have gone to jail. "I am told that I am to be fellow of the truth; I guess there are many of us ready and willing to go to jail."

There are many miners who have gone to jail to build up their organization. President Walker says he has never been in jail. He says he does not wish to go to jail, but claims that he is ready to build up their organization, telling what he thinks about the courts.

The New York Theatrical Stage Employes have decided that they are entitled to eight-hour and nine-half cents an hour. The new regulation also limits the regular working hours of a day, and after that period has passed the stage hands all receive double wage, or in most cases $1.25 an hour.

REPORT OF EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY COMMISSION.

The most drastic employers' liability legislation in many years is proposed in the employers' liability and workmen's compensation report, which was transmitted to Congress by President Taft last Thursday. Headed by Senator Sutherland of Utah, the commission consists of Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, Representative Moon of Pennsylvania, Representative Brantley of Georgia and W. D. L. Cates, editor of a railroad man's magazine. the report is accompanied by the draft of a bill in which the commission eliminates the common law doctrine of negligence with what it characterizes as the unjust offenses of assumption of risk, fe low servants' fault and contributory negligence.

Compensation with a general basis of an equivalent to one half wages is to be paid in every case except where the injury or death is caused by the wilful intention of the employe to injure himself or another or in case of intoxication on duty. The combined railroad companies of the country are paying to their employes for accidents in settlements and judgments approximately $10,086,000 and the proposed law, as nearly as the commission can estimate, will raise this by 15 per cent. Figuring on the periodical payments extending over a term of ten years capitalized at 5 per cent, the commission points out that the total received by the beneficiaries would reach an aggregate of $15,800,000 annually. It points out that for every dollar the railroad companies are compel'ed to pay under existing law they will under the proposed law pay $1.25, and that for every dollar the employes and their dependents now receive they would receive a sum very much in excess of $1.35. It says that during 1908, 1909 and 1910 the railroads paid $14,500,000 in settlements and judgments alone on account of death of nearly 12,000 workers and $21,253,000 approximately for permanent or temporary disabling injuries, as well as sustaining an economic loss of 161,654,000 days.

The proposed bill declares that it is the policy of Congress to consider the burden of payments for personal injuries as an element of the cost of transportation and directs the interstate commerce commission to recognize and give effect to this policy.

HEIGHTS AND DEPTHS DIVINE.

Pastor Russell on All-Pervading Love of God—Bids Farewell to Bombay. Preacher Sees Hopeful Signs That the Religious Sentiment of India Will Be Illumined With the True Light—Divine Power Will Be Exercised to Awaken the People to an Understanding of the Glory of God.

BOMBAY, India, Feb. 25.—The Committee of the International Bible Students Association for the investigation of Foreign Missions have spent three weeks in India and travelled over three thousand miles. The seven members divided the work amongst themselves at the various stopping points and will colabor in the report. We give the discourse in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium by Pastor Russell, the Chairman of the Committee, as follows:—

I had a great interest in your land and its people before coming to your shores, but my interest has been greatly increased by what I have witnessed during the past three weeks in India—not only in your largest cities, but also in your towns, villages and agricultural districts. As there are no other extremes in the world so great as between the caste of your Himalaya mountains and the wash of your coral strands, 20,000 feet below them, so likewise there can be found no greater contrast socially and financially than between your wealthy princes and your poverty stricken lower castes. Although such contrasts are deplorable we have no remedy to suggest, except the Divine one—the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

SYMPATHY MISAPPLIED.

Meantime, if poverty be favorable to sainthip, there should be excellent material in abundance here. Indeed, one of the things which has impressed me is the religious sentiment of India. The religious fervor of the thousands who bathe in the Ganges, and the numerous temples and shrines in every city, remind me of Saint Paul's words respecting some of his day: "feeling after God, if haply they might find Him." The two thousand temples and shrines of the one city of Benares speak volumes for the religious sentiment of the people and, although I have remarked of your hundreds of millions of homeless poor, I have not overlooked the fact that some of your wealthy have shown that they are not without generous instinct. Many of your influential princes have evidently given largely to the charitable institutions, notably in Bombay; and I would not overlook the fact that in one of your great cities large animal hospitals have been provided for disrepit chickens, donkeys, horses, etc. However we may consider such sympathy misapplied, in view of human need and suffering, we cannot overlook the fact that sympathy is there only waiting for the proper direction which Messiah's Kingdom will shortly give.

In your own grand Bombay I noted with astonishment the Towers of Silence, where the Parsee element of your population gives the flesh of its dead to feed the vultures. Alas! my soul cries out, in such acts humanity worthy of a better cause—would not these Parsees make wonderfully faithful Christians, if they but had the blessings of the true Light! How rejoice in the Divine promise that the true Light of the world shall yet lighten every man that cometh into the world! (John 1, 9.) How glad I am that now I see the Divine provision for the hundreds of millions of India and of the whole world to come to a knowledge of the glory of God, under the uplifting of the Kingdom of Messiah! And how I rejoice to believe it is near, even at the doors—just behind a terrible time of trouble and anarchy, which India will not escape.)

HEIGHTS AND DEPTHS DIVINE.

But I must not dwell too much on the dark side of India's picture; you know it too well already. I will allow the wonderful heights of the Himalayas from your sea, shore to draw our attention to the Apostle's words respecting "the heights and depths, the lengths and breadths of the Love of God, which passeth all understanding." That is the text of my parting words to India. In the past our forefathers studied God's Word with the light of a tallow candle, or of a pine knot, or of a smoking lamp; now we may search the Scriptures in the clear, steady light of the electric lamp, which brings us almost noon day brightness.

Correspondingly, we find beauties in the Divine Word and Plan which our forefathers of the day of the tallow dip could not discern. Once we believed with our forefathers that God's love was merely for the "elect," saintly few, and that the non-elect, to His fore-knowledge, he had doomed to eternal suffering. Now we see the same blessings for the non-elect, the world —earthly blessings of restitution to human perfection and to an earthly Eden, world-wide.

Our forefathers saw the height of God's love for the holy angels and its condescension to the saintly of men, but they did not see its depth. They did not see that the Redemption accomplished by Jesus is ultimately to reach down to and embrace the very humblest and most degraded of humankind. Now the promises and figures which tell of Jesus as the Saviour of the world, as well as of the Church, escaped our notice, who can explain? Has surely God are we that now we can see clearly that the Redeemer is a Propitiation for our sins, the Church's sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

This fuller appreciation of the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of love Divine is coming to Christian people as a benediction from heaven, just at the time when they are Higher-Critically repudiating the Bible and its God as unworthy of belief. The true view of God's Word we have intimated, namely, that all the families of the earth are to be blessed by Messiah's Kingdom, and that the Church, in process of election for the past eighteen centuries, is to be sharer with her Lord in that Kingdom.

Is it any wonder that this glorious view of our Creator and His plan for human salvation is inspiring—sanctifying to the hearts of all who have the hearing ear to receive it? Is it not in fully accord with the earliest statement of the Gospel, "Through thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed?" Is it not the claim of the Church and of the Bible that the saintly believers of the Gospel Age constitute the spiritual Seed of Abraham, the Bride of Messiah, "the Body of Christ which is the Church?" And have we not also the assurance, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise"?—Galatians iii, 18, 29.

FROM THE HORRIBLE PIT.

Another view of the heights and depths of God's love is that which recognizes us as a race fallen from human perfection into the mire of sin whose quicksands are swallowing up mankind at the rate of 90,000 every day. The Divine Program shows two solutions for the promising problem. The first of these is the most wonderful; it is now in progress, and we urge all who have the hearing ear to lay aside every weight and every besetting sin that they may attain this special salvation offered to the Church. By faith, through the medium of accepting great and precious promises, God is now lifting the obedient "elect" from the original pit of sin and death, from the mental degradation in which we all were as Adam's race; and to some extent they are being lifted also physically from this degradation.

The transforming work begins with each believer in Jesus who presents himself a living sacrifice to walk in the Master's footsteps, from which these may not generally be of the wealthy and educated and higher social classes, the power of the Holy Spirit operating through the Divine promises gradually beautifies not only the characters but to some extent the features of those who rejoice to take up their cross and follow the Savior.

However through and rude or coarse or strange they may have been before, the transforming influence of the Holy Spirit develops in them the fruits of the spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness, love; and these things continuing in them and abounding more and more, and attesting their faithfulness unto death, make these neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of God and in the character-likeness of Jesus; and hence the Resurrection change will usher them into the everlasting Kingdom of their Saviour—to be sharers in His glory, honor and immortality—far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named. So we see here see wonderful depths from which these are rescued and wonderful heights, to which they are yet to be lifted by Divine grace and the arrangements on their behalf! Surely all mankind who see this glorious arrangement of our God can glorify Him on this account.

GOD'S ORIGINAL DESIGN TO BE CARRIED OUT.

For the world a somewhat similar and yet very different blessing is outlined in the Divine Plan of the Ages. God's poor race, the fallen members of world, fallen from the image of God almost to the level of the brute, sadly needs the uplifting, restricting, restitutionary influences which Messiah's glorious Kingdom will bring to them. To what heights will man be raised? Oh, not so high as the Church, the elect Bride of the Lamb—not so high as cherubim did not see its depth. They did not see that the Redemption accomplished by Jesus is ultimately to reach down to and embrace the very humblest and most degraded of humankind. Now the promises and figures which tell of Jesus as the Saviour of the world, as well as of the Church, escaped our notice, who can explain? But surely glad are we that now we can see clearly that the Redeemer is a Propitiation for our sins, the Church's sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

How our hearts glow with gratitude toward God as we perceive that His original design for His human creatures is yet to be carried out to the letter! "His Word that is gone forth out of His mouth shall not return unto Him void, but it shall prosper in the thing whereunto He sent it." (Isaiah lv, 11.) He said, "Let Us make man in Our image," and when he was made the Divine judgment expressed was that he was "very good," only "a little lower than the angels." (Hebrewes ii, 7.) Moreover, he was crowned with glory and with honor in a sense that the angels were not crowned, for man was made the king, the ruler, the Divine representative of all the lower creatures of the earth. So we read, "Thou did set him over the works of Thy hands * * * all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beast of the field, the fowl of the air and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas."—Psalm viii, 6-8.

This Godlikeness in the flesh and this Divine authority associated with it has been marred and much of it has been lost. This sad condition of the reign of sin and death have not changed the Divine intention. On the contrary, the human family has been redeemed, and has been given valuable lessons on the exceeding sinfulness of sin; it has learned to know evil first. Next it must be brought to a knowledge of good and to an appreciation of God's mercy. This will come to mankind during the thousand years of Messiah's reign, in which not only the living will be blessed in their privileges and with recovery from the power of death, but gradually all that have gone down to the tomb shall come forth, that they may be raised up, up again to the perfection of life, and fully five again at the end of the thousand years.—Revelation xx, 5.

IN THE AGES TO COME.

Nor will the lengths and the breadths of Divine love toward the salvation for the promising restitution. The first of these is the most wonderful; it is now in progress, and we urge all who have the hearing ear to lay aside every weight and every besetting sin that they may attain this special salvation offered to the Church. By faith, through the medium of accepting great and precious promises, God is now lifting the obedient "elect" from the original pit of sin and death, from the mental degradation in which we all were as Adam's race; and to some extent they are being lifted also physically from this degradation.

POPULAR MECHANICS

WATERPROOF CONCRETE.

Addition of Oil Renders Material Moisture Proof.

Recent tests have developed the fact that concrete mixed with 10 per cent of oil is waterproof under pressures as high as forty pounds per square inch; and the practical result of exact experiments carried on to determine the effect of oil when used in concrete mixtures has led the experimenter to point out his process for admixing oil and assign the patent to the public at large.

Tests were carried on for the purpose of determining the strength, bond, etc., as well as the resistance to water, and it was found that the toughness or resistance to impact of such concrete was affected but little by the admixture of oil and that no permanent deformation occurs. But in the bond tests, it was discovered that it is inadvisable to use plain bar reinforcement with the process.

In order to determine the waterproofing qualities of the oil mixture as compared with the plain mixture, says Popular Mechanics, several cylinders six inches in diameter and six inches high were made and dried in the open air after being cured fifteen days in the open air. The cylinders were then immersed in water and weighed every day until they attained a constant weight. These tests showed that a cylinder containing 10 per cent of oil absorbed but 1.7 per cent of water, based on the dry weight, while 0.25-per cent of water was absorbed by the cylinder containing no oil. It was also found that there was a difference of but 0.5 per cent in the absorption of cylinders containing 10 per cent and 20 per cent of oil, respectively, in favor of the latter, so that the 10 per cent mixture is practically as effective as the 20 per cent mixture, so far as waterproofing is concerned.

COB CABIN BUILDING.

Proper Method of Cutting and Locking the Corners.

The essential part in making a log cabin is locking or building the corners, says the American Inventor and Builder. The first thing to do is to square off the sills on four sides. Trenches for corners and lap joints for the wall, then square off two pieces on three sides and cut the saddles as shown. The saddle should be at each corner to cut the saddles so that they will be plumb, and other men should be stationed at the middle of the sheers to hold the logs in place while the corner men cut the saddles. Enough help should be on hand to make the work easy.

After the walls are built cut openings for the windows and doors, allowing room to admit a two inch plank on each side, spiked or pinned to the ends of the logs. Then slip in the frames. The plates should be squared, and the end ties and rafters should be framed into the plates. At each corner bore a two inch hole about eighteen inches deep, into which drive a good hardwood pin.

In selecting timbers to be fattened get as near one side as possible and remove all of the bark. Care should be taken to keep the waist level by selecting logs for the purpose. Hewing the ends on each layer will keep the wall true and level. After the building is finished it should be hewed, logs with wood and fill in with mortar. About all the tools required are a good chopping ax, a broadax, a square and a crosscut saw.

Wastes on Railways.

A somewhat amusing but instructive method of drawing its employees' attention to the effect of small waste is adopted by the Pere Marquette railway. A table has been drawn up by the company showing that for every postage stamp needlessly used the railway has to haul one ton of freight a distance of 100 miles to recoup for the waste. For a load pencil the haul is 2 miles; a track spike, 2 miles; one pound waste, 10¼ miles; a lamp chimney, 10¼ miles; a station broom, 35 miles; a lantern, 100 miles; track shovel, 80 miles; one pounds of nails, 100 miles; one gallon engine oil, 50 miles; one gallon signal oil, 60 miles; air hose, 220 miles; drinker knuckle, 300 miles.

Production of Iron Ore.

Preliminary estimates of iron ore sold in 1911 were sent to the geological survey by twenty-six of the largest iron mining companies in the United States at the close of the year. The combined output of these companies represents more than 90 per cent of the total production of the United States. From these returns it is estimated by Dr. Burchard of the survey that the total quantity of iron ore marketed in the United States in 1911, not including stocks left at the mines, was between 43,000,000 and 46,000,000 long tons. This quantity represents a decrease of 22 to 26 per cent of the sales for 1910, which aggregated 56,989,784 long tons. The output for 1910 was the largest quantity of iron ore ever marketed in a single year in the United States.

TO MEASURE A RIVER.

Method For Determining the Volume of Any Stream.

To ascertain the velocity of the stream choose a place where the channel is straight for 100 to 200 feet and has a nearly constant width and depth; lay off on the bank a line fifty or 100 feet in length, marking each end; then allow small chips to float down the stream. By one of the methods described below, noting the time required for these to traverse the distance laid off on the bank. The surface velocity in feet per second is obtained by dividing the distance in feet passed over by the float by the time in seconds it takes the float to travel this distance. The average of several such determinations will give the mean surface velocity of the stream. This result, multiplied by the coefficient 0.90 gives very nearly the mean velocity of the stream.

To obtain the area of the cross section of the stream, stretch a tape from shore to shore and take the depth of the stream at intervals of one to two feet. The average of these depths may be assumed as the mean depth of the stream. This average multiplied by the total width will give the area of the cross section of the stream in square feet.

The discharge is found by multiplying this cross section area by the mean velocity, as obtained by the float measurements, the result giving the discharge in second feet, or, in other words, the number of cubic feet flowing past the point of measurement each second.

In determining the velocity for small streams and when only approximate results are desired the float is placed in the center of the stream. For more large streams and when greater accuracy is desired a rope is stretched across the stream and the distance between the ropes is divided into a number of equal spaces or sections. Floats are then allowed to drift down the stream as near as possible in the center of each of these spaces, the same number of floats being used for each section. When this simple velocity is then resumed to be the mean of the surface velocities obtained for the several sections. For each float the distance of its starting point from the right bank is recorded as indicated.—United States Geological Survey.

PEAT FOR FUEL USES.

New Swedish Method of Utilizing Material in Furnaces.

Different methods of employing peat for fuel or power are now used at present, one of these being to fire the furnace with dried peat briquettes, and another is to distill the peat in order to draw away as for coal so as to produce gas. The gas is then used directly in gas engines of suitable construction.

According to a new Swedish method, the dried peat is first brought to a fine powder and is then blown into the furnace by an air fan. The furnace has been previously heated, and waste heat can be utilized here. The firing is then kept up by the peat delivered in this way. It is claimed that fifteen parts of peat give the same heat as one parts of coal. During the firing it is easy to regulate the heat to the right amount by adjusting the air feed as well as the powder supply. Inasmuch as no more fuel is burned than is needed and the regulation can be made very quickly, good economy is secured.—Scientific American.

Torpedo Boats as Targets.

The British admiralty is planning to use a number of old sixty feet torpedo boats as targets for night practice. The work of converting these boats into targets consists of erecting cages and wooden structures above the decks to represent funnels and deckhouses and filling the holds, which are thoroughly cleaned of inflammable and furnishings, with cork, etc., to render them unsinkable. Towed at varying speeds and angles of bearing, these targets will be made to simulate the conditions presented by the approach of high speed destroyers, torpedo boats or light cruisers and will enable the gun crew to acquire proficiency of aim in repelling such attacks.

Stirring Rods For Foundrymen.

Many foundrymen, states the American Machinist, use an iron rod for stirring say kind of brass or bronze alloy, but where this is done more or less of the brass will be absorbed, rendering the metal harder. If it is intended to be prepared for making brass or bronze castings, graphite stirring rods should be provided. When melting say brass or bronze alloy the metal in the pot should be covered with powdered charcoal. Some foundrymen use a flexible flat on top of the metal, as broken tiles, bora or a mixture of rods and sand.

Fire Engine and Street Cleaner.

The newest type of municipal motor driven machine acquired by Vienna is described in part: It can serve as a fire engine, street sweeper, street sprinkler and as a simple air tug truck. The machine is driven from gasoline motor into fire engine requires but the starting of a separate motor, which is independent of the motive power, and the attachment of a fire hose to the universal screw pump on the plug. When the sweepers are to be used a simple movement drops them into position, and when the water reservoir is diminished the city has an ordinary air tug truck at its disposal.

MENTALITY OF APES.

Psychologist Believes Chimpanzees Capable of Thought.

Dr. William Furness, a famous psychologist of Washington, D. C., after two years' work, has succeeded in educating two African chimpanzees to such a low point that they can talk and have most remarkable reasoning powers. To further his investigations Dr. Furness is breeding two chimpanzees, having brought a mate from Borneo for the purpose. He proposes to ascertain if the offspring will retain the intelligence to any degree of the female of the species upon which he has worked so carefully.

The chimpanzees have been on the estate of Dr. H. H. Furness, father of the psychologist, for two years and have been daily under personal instruction until the animals have attained a degree of intelligence surpassing a large percentage of delinquent children. The experiments have proved that the monkey and chimpanzee have a brain capable of logically discriminating objects and that the lower animals when properly trained utilize the functions of the brain and really think.

The chimpanzees owned by Dr. Furness are kept in light, airy cages, are well fed and enjoy extended privileges of the home. Since their early days they have been vegetarians in compassionship with human beings and thus removed from copying the attributes of their ferocious relatives. They have been constantly linked to, petted and practically been members of the family. Each day a new lesson is started to a rigid "course of study" under the direct supervision of Dr. Furness.

The lessons are not long, so stimulate and intensify the power of thought, and now they recognize a hundred words, each word corresponding them with the corresponding objects. They also repeat short words. Either of the two can pick out a pile of dozens of colors the one designated by name.

The deeper psychological experiments are kept a strict secret until the publication of a work on the subject written by Dr. Furness.—Los Angeles Times.

Rainfall of New Zealand.

A map has just been issued by the New Zealand weather bureau which shows the relative amount of mean annual rainfall throughout New Zealand, areas being indicated with an average of under twenty inches and over two hundred inches. The heaviest rainfall is on a strip of land on the west coast of the south island, running from a little below Westport right to the bottom of the island west of the Alps. It is virtually the only region with more than a hundred inches a year, but there is a very small area near East Cape and another near Mount Egmont similarly affected.

Tunneling the Lagoon of Venice.

It is proposed to unite the city of Venice with the island of the Lido by a railway tunnel passing under the lagoon. The tunnel is to start near the great Piazza of St. Mark's, at a depth of about twenty-six feet below sea level, and is to terminate at the Four Fountains on the Lido. The tunnel, which will be about two miles and a half in length, will run between the islands of the Giudecca and San Georgio. The trains will be driven by electricity, and the journey from the Piazza San Marco to the Lido will be five minutes.—American.

A Rust Preventive.

To keep iron goods of any kind and especially those parts of machines which are made of steel or iron from rusting take half an ounce of powdered camphor and melt it before the fire in a pint of good lard. To give it a dark color add as much fine black lead as is necessary to produce the desired shade. Clean the iron work and smear it over with this preparation. After this it should be allowed to remain undisturbed for twenty-four hours, when the grease should be removed by wiping the ironwork with a soft cloth.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It is not with a view to discredit other good features of your paper that I admit the chief attraction to me is the religious reading. The highest intellects be best loved, when it is soon. As said the Master, I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto Me. John 12: 32.

Meanwhile Pastor Russel's rise reason is evident in present opportunities to preach "present truth," and we who recognize the source, Jehovah himself, may well rejoice with him. Ps. 36: 9.

I was thinking in reply, or prose, as you please, about the work of this Gospel age from Bethlehem to the Throne, how different from the path of glory and honor as we see things from a worldly standpoint.

THE PLEASURE OF JEHOVAH SHALL PROSPER—Isa. 53: 10.

"The Little Lord Jesus" came down to the earth,
The angels proclaiming this wonderful birth:
Born to be Savior and born to be King—
The wise men their worship and gifts to Him bring.
The Son of the Highest of wonderful grace—
What need to prepare Him so lowly a place?

Behold Him, your Bridegroom, your Keeper and King!
O, nation prepared a true tribune to bring!
Adore and receive Him! He comes to His own,
His sufferings foretold and His glories foreknown!
Anointed, approved and beloved of God,
O, why should He bow to affliction's stern rod?

We love Him, we serve Him, His praise we shall sing,
Our jesus, our present and glorified King!
The pattern He left me, to follow we seek,
Like Him to be loyal, like Him to be meek—
Redeemed by His merit and kept by His grace.
Can it be we shall see Him, our Lord, face to face

O, shun not the pathway of suffering and loss,
The way to the crown is the way of the cross.
The blessings will follow as day the foll lows night.
"The redeemed of the Lord" will rejoice in the light.
The Kingdom the Lords! Our Shep herd! Our Bridd!
And the joy of the earth that pure city of gold!

With best wishes for the success of "the best paper."

Pastor Russell to Speak

Pastor Russell on his return from his tour around the world, which will be sometime in March, Providence permitting, will preach as the following places and will not doubt tell what Christianity is doing for the heathen:

New York City, March 31.
Brooklyn, N. Y., April 7.
Baltimore, Md., April 14.
Atlanta, Ga., April 28.
Washington, D. C., May 12.
Boston, Mass., May 19.

OUR HEAVENLY FATHER GIVETH EVERY GOOD GIFT—James 1: 17.

"Back of the loaf is the snowy flour
And back of the flour the mill;
And back of the mill is the wheat and the shower,
And the sun and the Fathers will."

The lockout in the British cotton trade is the result or application of the employers for a 5 per cent advance in wages. The workers affected by the lockout include 120,000 women.

The total number of organizers at present holding commissions issued by the American Federation of Labor is 1,294, an increase over last year of 122.

LABORERS IN THE HARVEST.

Mark 1, 14-28—March 8.

"The Harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the Harvest that He will send forth laborers into His Harvest."—Matthew 9: 37, 38.

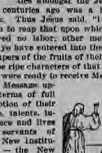
EVERYWHERE the New Testament teaches that the work done by Jesus and His Apostles amongst the Jews eighteen centuries ago was a harvesting work. The Jesus said, "I was sent forth to reap that upon which you bestowed no labor; other men labored and ye have entered into their labors"—reapers of the fruits of their labors.

The ripe characters of that Dispensation were ready to receive Messiah and His Message upon terms of full devotion of their time, talents, influence and lives as members of the New Institution — the New Covenant—which God proposes to inaugurate with Israel in due time, and under which New Covenant all the families of the earth will be blessed.



"Forward thou rain and thou reaper, forward him!"

The leaders of Jesus and the Apostles found about five hundred brethren worthy of the garnering during the three years' ministry, at Pentecost and after, several thousand more Jews were harvested. But of these many were but a sufficient number to complete the Divine forecrystallization; hence, the Jewish people were thrust aside from favor for a time, and God's Message of Grace was sent to the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for His Name. Then Israel will with the Jews as members of the Mediator of the New Covenant, under the leadership of the Christ.

"To Become Fishers of Men."

The Wisdom of God is foolishness with men, and the wisdom of men is foolishness with God—say the Scriptures. This is exemplified in our Lord's choice of the twelve Apostles, the majority four of whom He failed in this study: Simon, Andrew, James and John. However able they were as men, they lacked the polish of education which people were accustomed to expect in religious teachers. The Bible record of them is, "People perceived that they were unlearned men."

This reminds us that the Apostle Paul, after four of whom He called to God to joint-heirship with Jesus influenced merely the poor of this world, also in this matter, that the "elect" will be found "not many wise, not many mighty, not many noble." (I Corinthians 1, 26, 27). Success in life is no more or less of self-confidence, self-esteem, self-will, whereas the Gospel message appeals to those who feel their own weakness and imperfection and unworthiness, and who correspondingly with great earnestness lay hold upon the Divine promise—the Divine aid. The words of Jesus, "Woe unto you rich—all who trust in money, learning, in nobility of character—must not be understood to mean that the great, noble, wise and rich are in nearly all condemned to eternal torment, or to any punishment, on account of their riches of intellectuality, etc.

Rather, we must remember the standpoint of the Great Teacher's Massage. You are speaking to "the Kingdom—a class who are likely to gain this wonderful "high calling" (Heb. 3, 1) than if you were in humbler circumstances. You have your consecration now, and your correspondingly have less interest in the glorious things of God's Message. You are so well satisfied with the things of this present life that it will be the more difficult for you to sacrifice all these for the prospect of a share in Messiah's Kingdom.

Even Demons Obey Him.

While Jesus was teaching in the Capernaum synagogue a young man obsessed by a demon, "an unclean spirit," cried out. The demon recognized Jesus and His teaching and used the young man as his mouthpiece. His confidum, saying, "Art Thou come to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou are, the Holy One of God."

The demons cast out of human beings by our Lord and the Apostles the Bible tells us were only body snatch. They fell from Divine favor through their sinful relationship to humanity in the days of Noah. (Genesis vi, 1-3). These fallen angelic beings still distinguish relationship, and are styled "unclean spirits," because, however they may appear by personating themselves as angels of light, they, later, reveal their true characters by unchaste, and unrighteous deeds.

As St. Paul refused to allow a young woman medium to proclaim him and Silas servants of God's Most High, so Jesus refused to allow this demon to give testimony respecting Himself—even though it was complimentary. He commanded the demon to come out of the man.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

Your Bible Questions answered here will be answered in this column. Address all mail to the Editor of the Bible Question Box.

Q.—What do you think of the statement that there have always been differences of opinion in the Church of Christ, ever since it was founded, and that the Epistles were written because of these differences of interpretation, and, therefore, that these differences must always exist, and unity of belief can never be expected?

Answer.—In examination of the writings of the Apostles as set forth in the New Testament will disclose the fact that these letters were not written merely for the purpose of settling controversies amongst the Lord's people; but mainly for the purpose of encouraging the followers of the Master in continuance in well-doing, in the development of character along the lines of Christlikeness. Their instructions to righteousness cover every point and phase of the Christian's experience. The true Church of Christ, composed of those who possess the holy spirit of love and fellowship, and of "a sound mind," have always preserved the unity, or oneness of the spirit in the bonds of peace. (Ephesians iv, 3). They are of one mind, and see eye to eye the wonders and beauties of the sacred truths revealed in the Scriptures. Of course, sometimes the members of the Church have different views; but these differences are not of a character to set one other; they are merely views of the same things from different angles of mental vision. The schisms and differences that have existed amongst the Lord's people have invariably originated from personal differences and not from doctrinal difficulties. As long as the heart is right, the head will come out all right; but if the heart is wrong the head is sure to go wrong. We must have the knowledge of the truth in our heads and the spirit of the truth in our hearts. The Master prayed that His followers might be one, and that prayer has certainly been fulfilled—He did not pray that they might have no differences to have developed, they were only the inevitable conditions that some were failing away from membership with the Church—members of His Body—the Church.

Q.—When was the Church of Christ set up; and in what sense was Peter the door-keeper; and when will he see the keys of the kingdom of heaven? Matthew xvi, 13. (L. W. W.)

Answer.—The Church of Christ was established or set up on the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit descended upon those who had been gathered together in Jerusalem. It has been in process of development throughout the Christian age, and will be completed when the last member has finished the course and entered beyond the vail. The Lord knows the Founder or Head of the Church who rule its external affairs, but the Bible record upon the Divine promise—the Divine aid. The words of Jesus, "Woe unto you rich—all who trust in money, learning, in nobility of character—must not be understood to mean that the great, noble, wise and rich are in nearly all condemned to eternal torment, or to any punishment, on account of their riches of intellectuality, etc.

Rather, we must remember the standpoint of the Great Teacher's Mas-

Peter was the door-keeper of the Church in the sense that he was the first to open the door of opportunity to the Jews at Pentecost and to the Gentiles at the house of Cornelius. The Bible record is that the Lord's people were all Jews for a time, and God's Message of Grace was sent to the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for His Name. Then Israel will with the Jews as members of the Mediator of the New Covenant, under the leadership of the Christ.

Q.—When was the Church of Christ set up; and in what sense was Peter the door-keeper; and when will he see the keys of the kingdom of heaven? Matthew xvi, 13. (L. W. W.)

Answer.—The Church of Christ was established or set up on the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit descended upon those who had been gathered together in Jerusalem. It has been in process of development throughout the Christian age, and will be completed when the last member has finished the course and entered beyond the vail. The Lord knows the Founder or Head of the Church who rule its external affairs, but the Bible record upon the Divine promise—the Divine aid. The words of Jesus, "Woe unto you rich—all who trust in money, learning, in nobility of character—must not be understood to mean that the great, noble, wise and rich are in nearly all condemned to eternal torment, or to any punishment, on account of their riches of intellectuality, etc.

Peter was the door-keeper of the Church in the sense that he was the first to open the door of opportunity to the Jews at Pentecost and to the Gentiles at the house of Cornelius. Then Israel will with the Jews as members of the Mediator of the New Covenant, under the leadership of the Christ.

Q.—What is signified by the "New Jerusalem," as described in the book of Revelation, the 21st and 22d chapters? (R. R.)

Answer.—This was a vision which the Lord granted to St. John on the Isle of Patmos. It was a gorgeous picture representing the Church, the Bride of Christ. In the glorified heavenly conditions. Verses 6 and 10. It would be impossible for the mind of man to conceive of a more glorious spectacle than that presented to the Apostle. Imagine a city that is 1500 miles in length, and breadth, and height, and all formed of gold and many and precious stones, placed upon a high mountain, with a street of gold running through it; and thou forth from the city a beautiful river of water clear as crystal, flows down the mountain; and along the sides of the river are growing wonderful fruit trees, bearing all manner of life-giving fruits! This picture this city with all of its gates and precious stones, glittering in the rays of a marvelous light that glows from within. Glorious is this scene was to the Revelator, it but faintly portrays the exaltation and glory that is to be conferred upon the Bride, the Lamb's Wife.—"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." I Corinthians ii. 9.

Q.—When God's work on earth is completed, will the earth be destroyed?

Answer.—The Scriptures declare that the work is God's wonderful (Isaiah xxvi, 1) and that He is to make the place of His feet glorious (Isaiah lx. 13). In describing this work of beautifying the earth, the Prophets wax eloquent and picture to glowing terms the conditions of the regenerated earth as they will be when the Lord shall have finished His gracious work of preparing the earth for the everlasting habitation for the restored world of mankind. The desert is to bloom and blossom as the rose; springs shall burst forth in the solitary places, and the earth shall be glad for them (the happy race of mankind). The land shall yield her increase, producing flowers and fruits where now the thorns and briers grow. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. There is nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's Kingdom; the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Isaiah xi. 9-6). In short, Paradise is to be restored! How strange if then the Lord should teach such a lesson to the earth and have it upset the earth and have it upset to: "the earth is to abide forever."—Ecclesiastes i. 4.

Q.—From whom did Jesus purchase the race? (M. K. S.)

Answer.—Adam, by his disobedience to the Law of the Creator, sold himself and family into sin. The race, therefore, is in bondage to sin. (Romans vi. 16). Jesus redeems the race from its bondage to sin and death, it was necessary that some one having the ransom price should give that price before any of Adam's posterity could be delivered, or released from bondage. To this end Jesus came that would effect the deliverance of the race must be a "ransom (corresponding price for the life of a perfect man had been forfeited through disobedience, it would require the exact equivalent, the life of another perfect man, laid down in obedience to the Divine will, to effect the purchase of the race. We read that Jesus "bought" the race (I Corinthians vii, 23). Out He purchased it with His own precious blood (1 Pete xi. 18, 19). To whom was the price (the merits of Christ's sacrifice) presented? To Divine Justice. It was Justice that condemned Adam to death. It is to Justice, therefore, that the ransom price must be paid.

Q.—Can it be proven, aside from the Scriptures, that Adam was the first man? (C. L. M.)

Answer.—All scientists and philosophers are practically agreed that the human race sprang from one pair; and that it would be contrary to the rules of science and analysis to suppose that several pairs of human beings came into existence simultaneously. The Bible is in harmony with reason and common sense in declaring that God created the first man, and then formed of the first woman to be a helpmeet for him. And from this one pair the human race had its origin. How could we have still a suffix from the Scriptures! We may as well ask—how could we disprove it? It is a notorious fact that all new theories and hypotheses that have been advanced, aside from the Scriptures, to account for the origin of the race have been found to be absolutely devoid of proof or reason. The evolution theory, which supposes that man evolved from a microbe or a mosquito, is so ridiculous and so lacking in proof that the world's foremost scientists are now repudiating it as extremely absurd. In reply to the question, we would say that we know of nothing outside of the Scriptures that would prove, or disprove that Adam was the first man.

Congressman Sulzer Gives Important Evidence for Defense in the Contempt Case--Report of the Investigation of Cotton Mill Conditions--A Bill to Protect the Labels of Labor Organizations Introduced--Industrial Commission Projected.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The contempt proceedings against President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison are again in progress. The last witness for the Federation officials was Congressman Sulzer. It will be remembered that after the injunction was issued against the American Federation of Labor in the now famous case, Congressman Sulzer made a speech in the House of Representatives in which he incorporated an editorial from the American Federationist, containing a discussion of the controversy. Thirty thousands of these speeches were mailed to all sections of the country. The congressman in his testimony before Justice Wright admitted that he knew the boycott was on and also that a large number of copies of his speeches were franked. He was pressed for an explanation as to why he had made the speech on March 17, 1908, the day after the meeting of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and the day before the protest conference of the labor officials. In answer Mr. Sulzer said, "I make speeches when the spirit moves me and I can get recognition from the speaker. This matter of the injunction I deemed to be of sufficient public moment to demand wide publicity. The Congressional Record being one of the cheapest agencies for publicity, I sought that as the means of placing the subject before the citizens at large." In answer to questions from the attorneys as to Congressman Sulzer replied: "I Congressman Sulzer replied: 'I don't know for sure, but I only regret that there were not more sent out." The attorneys endeavored to bring out that the congressman had been asked by some official of the Federation of make the speech incorporating the editorial, but the congressman stated that he had been receiving the American Federationist regularly for many years and that he inserted the editorial in his speech on his own initiative. With the testimony of Congressman Sulzer the Federation case is closed, and after rebuttal by the prosecuting committee, arguments will be had before the full court.

Pursuant to an act approved January 20, 1907, the secretary of commerce and labor was authorized to report upon the industrial, social, moral, educational and physical condition of women and child workers in the United States. A little over three years later a partial report was submitted and ordered to be printed, together with any additions which might be made. During 1911 the first volume of this report was gotten out and the remaining volumes are appearing at stated intervals, volume 16 just having been delivered by the public printer. The last volume mentioned contains a comparison of the diet of the diet of twenty-eight mill families as against the price of the diet in the Atlanta, Ga., prison. Only nine of these tests show that the food expenditures reach the standard, or exceed that of the prison dietary, while eleven were lower. As this report is a stinging indictment against conditions prevailing in the Southern cotton mills, Senator Overman of North Carolina became exercised and severely criticised the Bureau of Labor's report. He took emphatic issue in the matter of compilation of the bills of fare of the mill men of North Carolina and Georgia with the menus of the prisoners in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. It can be said, however, that the Bureau of Labor, in making this investigation has fortified itself with abundant facts to substantiate its public report. An effort was to be attempted to have a senate committee make an investigation with the probable end in view of discrediting the Bureau of Labor's report. However, the officials of the Bureau of Labor state that they are ready to substantiate every statement made in the report and welcome a thorough and honest investigation of the report and stoutly maintain that every statement given publicity will be backed by positive proof. This report will be of inestimable value in bringing to the attention of the public the terrible conditions which exist in the cotton mills, not only in the South, but in the New England States. Aside from the low wages paid by these mills, it is shown that abnormally long hours are worked even by children of tender ages.

The creation of a commission on industrial relations is contemplated in a joint resolution offered in the House of Representatives by Congressman Wilson of Illinois. The purpose of the proposed commission is to investigate and report to congress within two years, concerning hygiene and sanitation in factories, wages in force in various parts of the country, the effect of long hours upon male, female and child labor; investi-

A JUDICIAL "TIP" ON LABOR LAW.

NOT only the legislature of other states, but the legislature of our own state, may find a hint in the attitude of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court toward laws regulating the hours of labor. Such laws are now being agitated in all parts of the country, and there is even pending in Congress a proposition to amend the federal constitution to permit Congress to legislate on the matter for the whole country.

In some of the states agitation has been barren of result because of declarations by the courts that the acts regulating the hours of labor were class legislation. In 1897 the legislature at Harrisburg passed an act "to regulate the hours of mechanics, workingmen and laborers in the employ of the state, or municipal corporations, or others else engaged in public works." This law was contested in the courts and was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. One of the concluding sentences of the latter court's decision is important, and is as follows: - "If this were an attempt by general law to regulate the hours of labor throughout the state, there are arguments in support of the act based on legislative exercise of police power would call for consideration, but as the case stands, discussion of this larger question would be wholly irrelevant." It will be seen that the court states substantially that if a law were passed covering all labor, an argument based on the legislative exercise of police power would call for consideration by the courts.

Inasmuch as the Pennsylvania Supreme Court is not recklessly progressive, there is much significance in its suggestion that an act applying to all labor instead of merely certain crafts would make a serious appeal to the court's judgment. It will not be surprising if the next legislature should be urged to take the court at its word.

LABOR EXCHANGES FOR UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM.

HIS controversy in Chicago over the number of unemployed men in that city whose settlement may take at 125,000) calls attention to the system of labor exchanges established in England by act of Parliament. It has been in operation just two years; but it has already achieved a success which makes it seem advisability that a like institution be tried in the United States. There are now 361 exchanges in England as compared with the 87 with which the experiment was begun.

During 1910 notifications of 483,942 vacancies was given by employers, of which 372,313 were filled by the exchanges, and during 1911 these figures rose to 757,109 and 598,570 respectively. In 1911 casual employment was provided through the exchanges for 113,492 men and 12,812 women. Last year 64,991 vacancies were filled by the transfer of applicants to districts other than those in which they were registered. To facilitate this movement of labor from one part of the country to another, an obstacle to which in the case of women workers is the lack of suitable lodgings, it is now proposed to establish women's hotels in connection with the exchanges.

A report on the English exchanges says that during 1911 the demand for operatives exceeded the supply in the cotton, woolen and worsted trades, and in the case of women in the clothing trades and in laundry work. One favorable outcome of the experiment is the growing confidence shown by both employers and workmen in the system and the prospect of friendly co-operation in extending its scope. There are one or two states in this country (Massachusetts, we believe, and Illinois) which have labor exchanges, but nothing upon the elaborate system established in Great Britain has ever been attempted among us.

WOMEN AND THE MINIMUM WAGE LAW.

MINIMUM-WAGE law which has been under consideration in Massachusetts (where it has been favorably recommended by an official state commission and where a bill to carry the recommendation into effect is now pending) has attracted so much attention elsewhere that the National Labor Tribune has been asked to explain its provisions. As described by a member of the Massachusetts minimum-wage commission, it is an Australian device to prevent "sweating." Recently introduced into England, the call for these wage boards is now being heard in various sections of our own country.

In Australia the state appoints a board composed of an equal number of manufacturers and employes, and an outside chairman is chosen. For convenience we will say that the industry is overalls. This board of "insiders"—unless it is not the state but a board of insiders, knowing the industry—this board decides what shall be the lowest wage paid for making a pair of overalls. The wage must be one that the industry can carry and is apt to be the low wage of the more decent manufacturer. This wage becomes law, and is posted in sweat shop and tenement somewhat thus: "Women, take notice! The smallest price that you can be paid for making a pair of overalls is so and so."

As the minimum-wage law aims to prevent "sweating," women are its principal beneficiaries. Mrs. Elisabeth Tilton, one of the women who are most active in the minimum-wage movement, declares that the notion that women work in factories to get "pin money" is nonsense. They work to earn bread for themselves and for others dependent on them. And according to Mrs. Tilton, one woman out of every five today is earning her living. There are 20,000 shirtwaist makers in New York alone; over 10,000 sweated women, others, widows and so on in the homes of the Eastside making the clothes we shall wear this summer. Father Ryan of St. Paul, an expert on wages, says that 50 per cent of the women working in the United States are earning less than $6 a week. The wage board commission of Massachusetts found that in the four prominent industries mention, laundries still among the candy—38 per cent are earning less than $6.

GREAT ENGLISH STRIKE ON

SINCE the last number of the National Labor Tribune appeared the great English coal strike has actually come to pass. More than a million men are out, and as this is being written the news comes from London that hundreds of factories are being closed down by the fuel famine, increasing the number of unemployed to still vaster proportions. In fact, England is in a distressing situation, and the highest officials in the land leave little doubt in their public utterances that if a settlement is not reached very speedily they will put a minimum-wage law through Parliament and it need be take possession of the mines and operate them.

One of the things emphasizing American interest in the strike is the fact that a wage settlement affecting the anthracite as well as the bituminous coal industry of the United States is pending, and the English strike is likely to have a strong bearing on the agreement between our own operators and miners. There is a disposition in some quarters to doubt the extent of the English strike, but there is only one way to offset the sweeping statements by other trades will follow, causing England into the most dangerous industrial crisis of decades.

The miners are asking for a minimum wage of from $6.50 to $11 a week. The wages in the British mines are not, on the average, much more than one-half as high as the wages of miners in the United States. The claim is that this fact has led to the need of a strong protective tariff in the United States is too plain to require argument. If the British strike is of more than one or two weeks' duration it will create an unprecedentedly big demand for American coal for shipment to the British market. This strengthening of the American market can hardly help hasten in a friendly settlement of the wage differences between the miners and operators.

GOV. MARSHALL, DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY.

"A PROGRESSIVE with the brakes set" is the characterization by some of his intimate friends of Governor Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, who is among the most discussed available for Democratic presidential timber. His political hobby is that the three departments of government must be kept separate and distinct. Like Governor Wilson, he may be termed a scholar in politics. He has been prominent in educational affairs, and he has acquired a certain literary fame from the style of his public documents. He is a trustee of Wabash college, Indiana, and has degrees from Wabash, Notre Dame university, the University of Alabama and the University of Pennsylvania. He is unequivocally opposed to the recall of judges and would employ the initiative and the referendum only as a last resort in remedying the known evils of representative government.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Coal Strike Position--British Government Intervenes but Coal Miners Determined to Stand Out for Minimum Wage--Big Labor Dispute Threatened in Sheffield Engineering Industries. Poor Wages of English Railway Workers.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, March 1.—The time for the expiry of the notices handed in by the coal miners in this country expired with the end of February and there are still no signs that anything will happen to prevent the greatest strike in the history of this country. Despite this, however, the hope is expressed that the strike will not take place and that the coal owners, pressed by the Government, will see their way clear to grant the very moderate demands made by the coal miners. As readers of this journal will be aware, British coal miners ask a guaranteed minimum day's wage for their day's work in the coal pits. At present they have only guaranteed a minimum tonnage rate so that if they strike a bad patch in the mine and the amount of coal they get out therefore is below the average, so likely their money is below the average and this may fall as low as fifty cents, despite eight hours' hard work.

The newspapers of the country have interested themselves heavily in this dispute and the coming coal strike has been the topic of the leading articles day after day ever since the matter got acute. Repeated appeals have been made by the papers to the Government to intervene with a view to bringing the miners and owners together for a peaceful settlement. Eventually the Government had a letter sent to the representatives of the coal masters and coal workmen calling them to special conferences in London with the Government officials concerned. The conference took place on February 22, Prime Minister Asquith and Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George being present at both meetings. The four miners' representatives were Enoch Edwards, Robert Smillie, W. Abraham (Mabon) and Thomas Ashton, secretary of the Miners' Federation. The coal owners' meeting numbered four. The one or three with the Prime Minister in the morning and evening and the coal owners met him in the afternoon. The miners explained that a national convention had been convened on the coal strike question to meet in London on February 27 and matters were therefore left over until after that meeting.

Considerable interest has been aroused in connection with the strike amongst Continental miners. A meeting of the International Miners' Federation took place in London on February 21. Nothing has transpired especially with regard to any agreement.

Despite the interference of the Government, the British miners have made it quite clear that they will not surrender the principles for which they are fighting so that it is up to Mr. Asquith and his Parliamentary colleagues to compel the coal owners to take more rational and humane view of the minimum wage question. The price of coal has increased throughout the country by quite fifty per cent and every large mine has laid in special supplies in view of the coming coal famine.

Whilst the public have been discussing as to how many weeks of strike pay can be provided from the miners' funds, the miners themselves have quietly been getting into the contents of their war chest. It may be stated upon unquestionable authority that as far back as November last, when it had become clear that a strike was an increasingly possible contingency, the miners National Executive at a meeting held at the Westminster Palace hotel decided that in 1912 the ordinary levies for "Federation purposes" should be raised from 2 cents per month to six cents per member. This decision remained an Executive secret until January, when the representatives of the district miners' associations were informed by Mr. Ashton that their Federation dues were to be trebled.

A further consideration affecting the possible length of a struggle is that few of the associations, if any, will begin strike pay until the end of the first fortnight so that even those districts where the men pay as high as $12.50 per member could easily stand a seven or eight weeks' stoppage without calling on outside help in the shape of a subsidy from the Federation funds. The officials of the Derbyshire Miners' Association announce that they have enough cash in hand to pay over the whole strike pay before commencing to draw upon their levied funds.

Asked if they would not send some of their funds to help unions without means, Mr. Ashton said: "No, that is what the funds had been provided by their own members, and at a time like this they would expect the money to be used for their benefit. "No," added

CALL FOR FIFTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

To Officers and Members of Local Unions of District No. 5, U. M. W. of A.

Greeting:

In accordance with Article V, pages 13, 14 and 15, of the Constitution we hereby issue the call for the District Annual Convention, which will convene in Labor Temple, Pittsburgh, Pa., Tuesday, March 19, 1912. Enclosed you will find a copy of the District Constitution, and the local secretary shall read Article V, and note the necessary instructions to the local unions in the election of delegates.

Original and duplicate credentials accompany this call. These should be filled out in accordance with Section 1 of the delegate, the original credential to be given to the delegate and the duplicate credential forwarded to the District Secretary-Treasurer, S. H. Laverick, 506 Ferguson building, Pittsburgh, Pa., not later than March 16, 1912.

All resolutions and constitutional amendments to be acted upon by the convention should be forwarded to the district secretary-treasurer prior to the convening of the convention.

As you are aware, our present agreement with the coal companies expires March 31, 1912, and up to the present time all efforts to secure a new contract to take effect April 1, 1912, have failed, and, while arrangements have been made to continue negotiations with the operators, it is clearly, and for the spirit of unity and co-operation govern the action of our delegates in the convention, that we will be successful in getting a settlement on our wage scale in view of this our membership should select their best men to represent them in the coming District annual convention, and we trust that every member will take an active interest in the affairs of our organization and realize the responsibility that rests upon them at the present time. The future success of our organization and the welfare of the miners generally, their wives and families, depends upon the intelligent action of the membership of our union and those who are to represent you as delegates to the convention, which will decide the future action and policy of our district.

Let us be hopeful that a satisfactory wage scale will be negotiated and peace maintained in the mining industry, and we desire to remind you that in the history of our union, so that the Mine Workers of Western Pennsylvania can secure the improved conditions of employment which are so necessary for the future prosperity and happiness of the mine workers and their families in District No. 5, U. M. W. of A.

Issued by order of the Executive Board of District No. 5.

Fraternally yours,
FRANCIS FEEHAN,
President.

VAN BITTNER,
Vice President.

STEPHEN H. LAVERICK,
Secretary-Treasurer.

THE GREAT STRIKE IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, March 4.—Mills and factories throughout the United Kingdom continued to shut down today became of the shortage of fuel caused by the miners' strike. It was estimated that 500,000 workers in South Wales alone had been thrown out of work. There are all told 1,100,000 miners now out.

Food prices continued to increase today and there was much suffering among the poor. Fishermen were unable to get enough coal to use on their trawlers and it was expected that the price of fish would soon become almost prohibitive.

Today hundreds of ponies were brought up from the mines, some of them getting their first glimpse of daylight in 15 years. Many of the animals had become blinded while others seemed terrified by the light of the outside world.

Wholesale houses have been hard hit by the strike. Many of them called in all of their traveling salesmen because the merchants refused to buy goods pending a settlement of the strike.

It was officially announced today that 2,500 trains have been discontinued by the several railway systems in the United Kingdom. Every freight train that could be spared was taken off and in addition every local passenger train. The trains still running have been standardized so that there are no duplications by the various lines and interchangable cars have been issued to travelers.

Many of the suburban railway stations have been closed, thus saving the coal needed to heat them. The railway boards are cooperating to save coal and cut down expenses. But with the most rigorous precautions traffic will soon be at a standstill through lack of fuel to move trains, as few of the roads have maintained any great reserve supply because of lack of storage room.

WOMEN SACRIFICE FOR UNIONS

CHICAGO, March 4.—Ten thousand women and girls members of the Women's Trade Union league, have designated this as self-denial week. Their purpose is to raise a campaign fund to assist other working girls to organize unions and enforce union conditions.

More than 100 girls agreed last night that they will walk to work and others said they will give the amount they usually daybait in the savings bank each week. There are about 115,000 working women in Chicago who are not members of the league.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

GREAT PYRAMID GOD'S WITNESS.

Symbolic Teachings Corroborate the Bible—Pastor Russell in Egypt. Scientific Lesson Taught By Stone Monument on the Nile Refute Evolution and Higher Criticism—Indicates Length of the Year, Weight of the Earth, the High Calling of the Church and the Hope of the World.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 3.—The Committee appointed by the International Bible Students Association to report on Foreign Missions is homeward bound instead of visiting the missions of eastern and southern Africa. They will reconsider another commission for Africa and Australasia, etc. They spent more time in India than was first expected. They decline to give any intimation respecting their report until their return to New York.

To make their work as comprehensive as possible the Committee members div de their attention, each one specializing except Pastor Russell, who generalizes, and joins in the comparison of notes. We report Pastor Russell's discourse of today, from the text which he said referred directly to the Great Pyramid located near this city: "In that day there shall be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt . . . for a sign and for a witness." (Isaiah xix. 19, 20.) Not only did God mention prophetically the great pyramid in Isaiah, but also in Jeremiah xxxii. 20, where he read that "God set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day."

It is intensely interesting to visit this land of the Pharaohs, at the time we intimately associated with God's "chosen people"—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and his brethren. It is interesting to imagine ourselves back at the period of the Exodus of the Israelites, to note the place where the Israelites probably crossed the tongue of the Red Sea upon the sand bar made bare by a strong wind which was interesting to visit what the Arabs still designate the "Wells of Moses," and to note that they are still brackish or bitter springs, "Waters of Marah."

But to me the most interesting thing in this ancient land is the Great Pyramid referred to in our text. Its location is remarkable, and its size commonly marked it as one of the Seven Wonders of the world—a building covering nearly thirteen acres. Its scientific lessons brought forth during the past fifty years by astronomers and other scientists are still more wonderful, but most wonderful of all to me are its prophetic teachings, first brought to our attention by Prof. Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer Royal for Scotland, and others.

The Pyramid is located on an elevation, level plain overlooking the river Nile. Practically, the delta of the N le forms a sea coast, which in shape is a true quarter circle, with the Great Pyramid marking the center of the circle. This was discovered by Mr. Mitchell, of the United States Coast Survey, in 1864. He observed the regularity of the curvatures around the whole of Egypt's northern coast, and, reaching the explanation, found that the certain line delta started from the Pyramid; and he exclaimed, "That alone witness s in a more important physical situation than any other building erected by man." This fits Isaiah's description, "An altar in the midst of the land of Egypt, a pillar at the border thereof."

SOME SCIENTIFIC LESSONS.

I must not attempt here a presentation of the scientific details of this great Monument which is now speaking to the world, both on scientific and religious subjects. I can only hope to arouse sufficient interest to lead you, my hearers, to read the particulars with measurements across the base, N. E. to S. W., and N. W. to S. E., give as many inches as there are years in the precessional cycle of the stars. This cycle astronomers had already concluded to be 25,827 years, and the Pyramid corroborates the conclusion. The distance to the sun is indicated by the heights and angles of the Pyramid to be 91,840,270 miles, which almost exactly corresponds with the latest figures reached by astronomers. The Pyramid also has its own way of indicating standards of weights and measures, based upon the size and weight of the earth.

The Rev. Joseph Seiss observed, "There is a yet grander thought unfolded in this wonderful structure. Of the five points there is one of special pre-eminence, in which all its sides and exterior lines terminate. It is the summit corner, which lifts its head from its fixture in the sun at midday and by its distance from the base lens the means distance to that sun from the earth. And if we go through all the data which the Pyramid gives itself, we find a far sublimer indication. Science has at last discovered that the sun is not a dead center, with planets wheeling about it, but itself stationary. It is now ascertained that the sun also is in motion, carrying with it its appointed realms of comets, planets, its satellite and theirs around some other and mostly mightier Center.

"Astronomers are not yet fully agreed as to what or where that Center is. Some, however, believe that they have found the direction of it to be The Pleiades, and particularly Alcyone, the central one of the renowned Pleiadic stars. Whether this be so, or as Science has been able to perceive, would seem to be the midnight throne in which the whole system of gravitation has its Central Seat, and from which the Almighty governs His Universe. And here is the wonderful corresponding fact, that at the date of the Great Pyramid's building . . . a . . . the Pleiades were distributed over the meridian of this Pyramid, with Alcyone precisely on the line. Here, then, is a pointing of the highest and sublimest character that mere human science has ever been able to read, as well as hint, and which would seem to breathe an unsuspected and mighty meaning into that speech of Job, when he demanded, 'Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades?'"

SIN'S DOWNWARD COURSE.

Prof. Smyth tells us that he find, astronomically, that the Pyramid was built in 2170 B. C. He tells us that at that particular time the Dragon star, the personification of sin, was in line with its Descending Passage. The inference is plain when one we perceive that the Pyramid pictures the history of the world. The Downward Passage represents the downward course of sin and death of the human race under "the Prince of the power of the air," under "the god of this world."

History in general corroborates this. The lower part of the passage ceases to be downward, and becomes horizontal to the large chamber in which it ends. The Ascending, wide and high, but understood to represent the time in which we are living—the time in which the downwardness of our race has been unmercifully arrested, and when mankind are comparatively freed from the superstition which bowed down our forefathers; but the uneven floor indicates a time of trouble," into which we believe we have already entered. Theological, social, political and financial troubles are in the pathway of humanity, and will increase such anarchy as has been threatening in China and other Eastern lands, and which the Scriptures clearly declare will overwhelm Christendom.

BRIGHTER AND BETTER THINGS.

Centuries ago an Arabian Caliph, Al Mamoun, be lieving the Pyramid to contain great wealth, spent a fortune in digging into the interior, not knowing of its Entrance Passage, which at that time may have been covered with the casing stones. He finally reached the Downward Passageway, but behold, the strenuous labors of his workmen dislodged a stone in the roof of the Downward Passage, and showed an Upward Passage, left concealed when building the Pyramid.

Al Mamoun's men found that Upward Passage blocked with a large stone but knowing they were unable to dislodge; and it is still there. Eager for treasure, they worked their way around it and found above it an Ascending Passage of about the same height as the Descending Passage, which ends in what is known as the Grand Gallery. It has the same steep grade as the Ascending Passage. It is narrow at the base, but wider at the top, and seven times as lofty as the Ascending Passage.

The interior of the walls of these passages is of creamy marble of limestone, and the Grand Gallery has seven overlappings on each of its side walls, and both the lower and and walls overhang. At its upper end is a low Passage into what is known as the Ante-Chamber. Through another low Passage we enter what is known as the King's Chamber. At the Juncture of the low Ascending Passage with the Grand Gallery is a level Passage which leads off to what is known as the Queen's Chamber, directly under the King's Chamber.

Thus the low Ascending Passage, the low Horizontal Passage and the floor of the Grand Gallery, all come together at one point, and there we find what is known as the Well, an irregular hole which we have carefully explored and connects with the Downward Passage toward its lower end. This Well and the Passage leading to the Queen's Chamber apparently were secreted by the builders; but itself stationary. It is now ascertained that the sun also is in motion, carrying with it its appointed realms of comets, planets, its satellite and theirs around some other and mostly mightier Center.

"Astronomers are not yet fully agreed as to what or where that Center is. Some, however, believe that they have found the direction of it to be The Pleiades, and particularly Alcyone, the central one of the renowned Pleiadic stars. Whether this be so, or as Science has been able to perceive, would seem to be the midnight throne in which the whole system of gravitation has its Central Seat, and from which the Almighty governs His Universe. And here is the wonderful corresponding fact, that at the date of the Great Pyramid's building . . . a . . . the Pleiades were distributed over the meridian of this Pyramid, with Alcyone precisely on the line. Here, then, is a pointing of the highest and sublimest character that mere human science has ever been able to read, as well as hint, and which would seem to breathe an unsuspected and mighty meaning into that speech of Job, when he demanded, 'Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades?'"

BRIGHTER AND BETTER THINGS.

Centuries ago an Arabian Caliph, Al Mamoun, be lieving the Pyramid to contain great wealth, spent a fortune in digging into the interior, not knowing of its Entrance Passage, which at that time may have been covered with the casing stones. He finally reached the Downward Passageway, but behold, the strenuous labors of his workmen dislodged a stone in the Ante-Chamber represents the present life of God's consecrated children. Its ponder wainscoting seems to symbolize in my say that lessons must be learned by each one who enters—in other words, its symbolizes the School of Christ, in which consecrated believers have lessons of faith, experience, patience and fortitude to prove their worthiness to pass beyond into Heaven itself, represented by the King's Chamber.

Before entering this Ante Chamber or school, the pupil must stoop low, for it is entered by a low Passage, implying humility. And no sooner has he risen than he finds himself confronted by a huge granite obstruct on, known as the Granite Leaf, and he can make no further progress except by bowing low to pass under it. Granite seems to be used in the Pyramid in much the same way that Gold was used in Israel's Tabernacle—to symbolize things divine. This Granite obstruction threatens to block our way, and requires us to bow low before it. Symbolically, it says, it is not sufficient that you have a desire for Godliness, and faith in Jesus, and a desire to be taught of Him; you cannot go further unless you make a full surrender to God unless you bow to the Divine will absolutely, in consecration to God of your all.

And here another lesson is taught, for the moment the pupil bows under the Granite obstruction he begins to tread on the same Granite floor which constitutes the floor of the King's Chamber. The lesson seems to be that from the moment of full consecration the disciple of Christ is begotten of the Holy Spirit to the divine nature, symbolized by the Granite. His new standing thus declares him to be plural language a New Creature.

The passage leading from the Ante Chamber to the King's Chamber is just as low as the Granite obstruction, which seems to say that as the one represents a condition of death of the will, the other represen's actual death—only by actual death could our Savior or any of His followers pass into the heavenly state, symbolized by the King's Chamber, for as St. Paul declares, "We must all be changed," because "flesh and blood cannot enter the Kingdom of God."

HUMAN RESTITUTION PICTURED.

We understand the Horizontal Passageway leading to the Queen's Chamber to symbolically represent the trials and testings that will be experienced by the world incidental to attaining human perfection under the glorious reign of Messiah's Kingdom, when the Church as the Bride of Christ will be associated with her Lord in effecting human restitution to all the willing and obedient—Acts iii. 19-23.

If, as we believe, God has in this great mountain of stone caused to be outlined the Divine Plan of the Ages, it undoubtedly will tell its wonderful story in trumpet tones, "in that day." What we can appreciate of its lessons in harmony with the Bible we find wonderfully comforting in this day when skepticism is so rife—when the scholars of Christendom are telling us that the Bible prophecies from which Jesus and the Apostles quoted and which they applied were not written at all—that they are forgeries.

At this time, particularly, it is refreshing to Christian faith to find not only the Bible itself is opening before us, and one quotation illuminating another and all uniting in the testimony that God is Love, and that "His mercy endureth forever," but that the Messianic Kingdom so long promised is at hand, and that the Millennium

WEIGHTING OF SILK.

Methods by Which Raw Material is Loaded With Metal.

It is to be regretted that many unscrupulous manufacturers resort to weighting, or "loading," raw silk in the dyeing process in such an extent as to render it a very uncertain and treacherous fabric, with a tendency to spilt and crack even when carefully folded and laid away. In this dyeing process the natural gum of the silk worm is first removed from the silk by a method of "stripping," as it is called, in order that the raw material may properly take and hold the dye. This causes a loss of weight which dyers have always sought to restore, but instead of being content with doing this the thrown silk is dipped into a solution of bichloride of tin, nitrate of iron or some other chemical compound for the purpose of giving it more weight than that lost in the stripping process, so that a hundredweight of silk in the raw state is often made to weigh 300 or even 400 pounds when the dyeing is completed. As raw silk is bought and sold by the pound the gain to the manufacturer is obvious. The operation makes the silk more valuable, but destroys the durability of the filaments.

Stretching the threads by steaming, so that a given weight will weave a greater number of yards, and the addition of chemicals to give it an inflammable or other property, also improve profitable to manufacturers, but costly to consumers.

It is a mistaken idea with many people that the heavy silks are the best and most durable. Just the reverse is true. The lightweight, or "pure dye silks," as they are termed, are much stronger and more durable, as only enough added weight is given to the class of silks in the dyeing to replace the loss in the stripping process.

The use of inferior and destructive dyes is another method equally common and equally reprehensible by which some manufacturers impose upon the consumers in the dyeing of silk.—Scientific American.

The diamond used in drilling is the variety known as bort and is found in Bahia, Brazil, and is now worth $35 per carat. For drilling purposes bort is superior to the gem diamond, as it is harder and tougher.

TESTING STEEL CABLES.

Chains Subjected to Great Stresses to Prove Strength.

The great steel cables which are essential parts of the outfit of the great ships of today must be as nearly perfect as the art of man can make them. One weak spot in a cable may mean the loss of a great ship worth millions, so before being used every one of the great chain cables used in the navy or merchant service is carefully tested. The apparatus employed is a most ingenious one.

The cable is laid in a sort of long trough, one end being fastened to an enormously strong anchor, which is passed around a revolving drum, the other attached to a hydraulic ram.

The machinery is worked from an adjoining building, no one being allowed in the cable shed while the testing is in progress. If a chain does break under the terrific strain to which it is subjected it simply smashes everything near it and may bring the whole roof down.

The operator in the next room has before him an ordinary looking pair of scales, but the small weights which he places upon it represent as many tons as they actually weigh pounds.

While the weights go into the scales a loud creaking and groaning is heard through the thick partition as the seventy-eight foot length of cable, which is the amount tested at one time, stretches under the enormous pressure. A few cable stretches about two inch on an old one a good deal more

LABOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE

FORTIETH YEAR, NO. 18 PITTSBURG, PA., THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1912 $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Convict Labor Bill Passes the House. Express Companies Liable to $200,000,000 in Fines for Overcharging. Proposal that Government Take Them Over--A. F. of L. Active Membership Now 1,827,584.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, March 11.--The Booher convict labor bill has passed the House, the text of the bill being as follows: "That all goods, wares and merchandise manufactured, produced or mined wholly or in part by convict labor, or in any prison or reformatory, transported into any State or Territory or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale or storage, shall upon arrival and delivery in such State or Territory be subjected to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory to the same extent and in the same manner as though such goods, wares and merchandise had been manufactured, produced or mined in such State or Territory and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced in original packages or otherwise." This bill is the one that was actively championed by the American Federation of Labor.

Director Durand of the Census Bureau has refused to grant the request of 150 clerks for compensation for the 24 days leave per month which they resigned they are entitled to. The director states that the employes have no legal right to the leave, as the law reads "may be granted" instead of "shall be granted." It is possible the matter may be called to the attention of Congress and the leave provided for, there being such a deficiency in the appropriation at this time that it is claimed there is insufficient funds to pay the amount asked.

Fines aggregating $200,000,000 are the possible outcome of the prosecutions against the express companies for overcharging. The interstate commerce commission is deeply interested in the eleven indictments brought against the Adams Express Company in Cincinnati, and agents of the commission are being dispatched to all parts of the country, carrying evidence on which additional indictments are to be brought. Commissioner Lane states that there are on file with the commission 10,000 complaints against express charges. Mr. Gardner has introduced a bill in the Senate for the purchase of the express companies by the government. He states their value at $39,009,000.

The House Committee on rules has before it for consideration two resolutions on the Lawrence, Mass., strike, one of which calls for a special committee of investigation, while the other authorizes the committee on labor to make the investigation. A number of men and women, boys and girls, participants in the strike, have testified before the rules committee, giving their story as to the conduct of the police and state militia during the strike. Some of the instances related are almost unbelievable, and yet apparently the strikers have been treated shamefully. President Gompers, Congressman Wilson and Berger appeared before the committee in advocacy of the resolutions of investigation. The two former urged in favor of an investigation by the labor committee. The Lawrence situation as the reports appear to be to-day is quo, although police officials have ceased their hostility toward the strikers. Some of the mills have announced an increase in the rate of wages, but from reports at hand the increase offered has not been sufficient to induce many of the strikers to return to work. It is quite likely that the investigation will be ordered by the rules committee and the actual state of affairs brought to light. The bureau of labor also has its agents in Lawrence at the present time.

The membership of the unions affiliated to the American Federation of Labor in January, 1911, as per capita tax paid was 1,691,534. Incomplete reports for January, 1912, give a membership of 1,827,584, making an increased membership in January, 1912, over January, 1911, of 136,014, the number of volunteer organizers commissioned by the American Federation of Labor in 1910 was 1,462, and for 1911, 1,594. There are now 1,627 volunteer organizers commissioned by the American Federation of Labor.

URGE COREROOM INVESTIGATION

In the Massachusetts state legislature there is a bill pending, urging investigation of the coreroom of iron foundries where women are being employed. The International Pump Company, alone from other complaints, is employing women in their foundries and there is intense feeling against permitting women to be employed in this character of work.

The British Parliamentary Labor party represents 2,300,000 trade unionists, and has forty-two members in the house of commons, and now proposes to wage a vigorous campaign to obtain a larger representation. Funds will be raised to finance a daily paper,

OUTLOOK FOR MINE AGREEMENT DOUBTFUL

CHICAGO, Ill., March 8.--Suspension of coal mines throughout the bituminous fields and portions in the anthracite districts is virtually certain on April 1.

Representatives of the coal operators and miners from Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois met day before yesterday in this city and agreed to call an interstate conference in Cleveland, March 26.

Both sides agreed that the time is too short in which to make an agreement and the miners are determined not to remain at work without first a signed contract.

A Committee on Matters of Policy of the United Mine Workers will meet in Cleveland March 25, and the question of a suspension largely depends on the action of that committee. If the operators make a proposition which may be acceptable to the union representatives the Policy Committee may order it submitted to a referendum vote, but even in that case, it was said, the vote could not be taken in time to prevent a suspension.

Impossible, Says Operators.

In Illinois the miners in certain districts are demanding an increase of from 2 to 18 cents a ton over any scale which may be agreed upon by the international union for other states. The operators say they are handicapped by having to pay a higher scale than is paid in any competing state, and they will not consent in advance that would put them still further out of line with their competitors.

The Illinois operators have decided not to go into the Cleveland conference unless the miners in Illinois agree to abide by any scale fixed by the international union.

"The demands of the miners are impossible," said Harry N. Taylor, president of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association, after the conference on Thursday, "and unless they agree to a compromise it is probable that April 1 will usher in the greatest strike in the history of the United Mine Workers."

"It looks as if there would be a suspension April 1," said John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers. "The case is very short in which to iron out our differences, although much depends on the attitude of the operators when we meet again in joint conference.

"On the anthracite situation it is impossible to say what may develop. The operators have our demands and we expect their answer when we meet in New York March 12.

"There are two things in our favor; there is practically no coal stored anywhere anthracite or bituminous, and

ONE LAWRENCE LESSON.

THOUGH it would be a startling anachronism in a high protective tariff country like ours, the suggestion that there be a minimum wage law is likely to receive serious consideration as one of the results of the conditions revealed at Lawrence.

There is a sufficient feeling of sympathy among the large industrial combines controlling practically all the necessities of living so that they could comply with the letter of a minimum wage law and at the same time nullify it in effect by increasing living cost. If a minimum wage was forced upon them and it increased their cost of production, they could simply take back that increment from the public. Thus they could offset any individual advantage derived from the law.

But suppose that the minimum wage were based not so much in terms of money as in terms of living cost. Wouldn't that beat the trusts at their own game. Suppose that the law said that the minimum wage of a man in certain work should not be less than say, $9 per week and in no case less than a sum of money that would buy certain quantity of the necessities of life at a market price to be announced by the government. Wouldn't this plan establish a dramatic basis which would make sure that the value of the minimum wage should not be reduced below a living standard?

PEACE TREATIES EMASCULATED.

AS MILITARY and naval appropriations by Congress since the Civil War period have reached the enormous total of $4,000,000,000, a sum sufficient if invested in peaceful enterprises to have raised this country to the greatest level of prosperity and contentment the world has ever seen, it would delight the mass of the people to see all possibility of war among the nations destroyed. It is doubtful, however, if the peace treaties ratified by the Senate at Washington last Friday bring the peace era any nearer, or before ratifying them the Senate radically amended them.

The treaties are with France and Great Britain, and in the form originally agreed upon between those nations on one hand and our state department on the other, they would have been a substantial and lasting peace insofar at least as those nations are concerned. Nearly all conceivable disputes would have been referred under the terms to the international court of honor for arbitration.

The moral effect of such an agreement upon the peace of the world would have been tremendous. As it is today, it is stated on good authority, were ready to follow suit. With that great military power joining Great Britain, France and the United States in pledging itself to settle international disputes by arbitration instead of by war, the reign of peace would have been close at hand. For against these four powers, the mightiest in the world, no others could stand. Any peace pact to which they were signatories would at once make a war a memory, and release for purposes of education, relief of the poor and aged, and general social betterment vast sums of money now annually wasted on armies and navies.

It is doubtful if France and Great Britain will agree to the treaties in their amended form. As the amendments except a long list of possible disputes which we reserve the right to make causes of war if we see quasi-reasonably inclined, the treaties no longer mean much. France and Great Britain are not likely, indeed, if they treat the Senate's action as a refusal to enter into bona fide peace stipulations.

FOR BETTER RELATIONS.

CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD is going to carry the war on loan sharks up to the United States Supreme Court, on behalf of its employes. It seems that the Illinois laws make a fine distinction between a debt and a lien on future wages and so, when an employe goes through bankruptcy, the loan sharks go at him again. The railroad company lost a test case in the state courts, and will carry the matter to the final federal tribunal.

SENATOR SMITH OF SOUTH CAROLINA, COTTON PLANTER.

THE junior senator from South Carolina, Ellison DuRant Smith, is a planter. Before his election to represent his state in the upper house of congress he had held but one elective office, that of member of the South Carolina assembly. His chief prominence has been attained by his activity in organizing southern farmers for the benefit of the cotton growing industry. He began the movement which resulted in the formation of the farmers' protective association and was later instrumental in building up the Southern Cotton association, of which for three years he was field agent and general organizer, his territory covering the entire south. He is chairman of the committee on transportation routes to the seaboard. The South Carolina senator's home is one of four Smiths in the upper chambers. The number will be five when the new senators from Arizona take their seats.

This procedure is humane and quite a step forward from the old time railroad practice of discharging employes whose wages were garnisheed, but it must prove costly and the delay may be great. The best fight against loan sharks is made by formally organizing a loan to the deserving but needy wage earner and it might prove most satisfactory should great corporations, like the railroads, come directly to the aid of such wage-earners. Many workmen probably wouldn't want their employers to know that they were "in a pinch" but it is a question whether the employer hasn't a right to know this, and the employer must be stupid who does not appreciate the fact that the best of workmen are liable to be "pinched" some times. Anything that results in closer relations and a more confidential feeling between employer and employe surely has good in it.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM IN SUPREME COURT.

PROF. GRAHAM TAYLOR, whose eminence as a practical sociologist has led the mayor and city council of Pittsburgh to consult him on certain police problems he has helped solve for Chicago, told his audience at a University Extension lecture in the city last week that he believed in a very few years every state west of the Mississippi will have incorporated the initiative and referendum in its constitution. As to the "rest of judges, Prof. Taylor declared he had not formed a positive opinion. He entertains not the least doubt, however, that the country is headed straight toward more direct and radical democracy.

In connection with this distinguished observer's prediction as to the initiative and referendum, it is worth while to note that the opponents of this form of direct legislation are now awaiting a decision from the United States Supreme court which they hope will put an end to it. The case is one from Oregon. For many years, it is charged, the Bell Telephone corporation of Oregon has escaped its just share of public burdens. It found the legislature amendable to its "arguments." By initiative in 1906, a law was passed imposing a license tax upon telephone companies. The people enacted it by a vote of 69,635 in favor of it and 6,441 against. The company resists this law on the sole ground that the people cannot legislate directly, but that legislatures alone can pass laws, and that the people are prevented, by the federal constitution, from amending their state constitution so as to secure power to legislate directly. It is not claimed that there is any express provision of the federal constitution prohibiting the people of a state from doing so. The suit is based on strained construction and far-fetched implications.

The corporation interests of the whole country are of course deeply concerned in the outcome, and will rejoice beyond measure, as will the political reactionaries generally, if the Supreme judges sustain the telephone company's contentions. A victory for the company would give the movement for direct legislation a set back which it would be decades recovering from. Prof. Taylor is evidently among those who believe the decision will be in favor of a state's power to adopt state legislation in any mode it chooses. "The Supreme Court," he declares at the conclusion of his lecture on Monday night, "has reformed itself in its more recent decisions and is now a fairly democratic body."

Mrs. Raymond Robins, president of the National Women's Trades Union League, has announced that she will start a national campaign for a minimum wage scale for five million women workers in this country, and that the American Federation of Labor has endorsed her plan.

British Coal Strike an Achieved Fact. Greatest Labor Rising in the History of England--The Government On Its Knees--National Minimum Wage Assured if Miners Stand Firm--Strike of Municipal Workers Ends Successfully

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, March 7.--The British coal strike is now an accomplished fact. Over one million coal miners and allied workers are out on strike and the whole country has a most unpleasant feeling of paralysis in consequent. The miners have shown most praiseworthy determination in refusing to be drawn off on any side issues. They demand a minimum wage and nothing else will do for them. The intervention of the Government has resulted in the Government accepting the principle of a minimum daily wage for coal miners. Premier Asquith and the other members of the Government declare that they are satisfied that there exist reasons, outside the control of the men themselves, by which in many cases they are prevented from obtaining adequate remuneration for a day's work. They have accordingly put forward proposals designed to establish the principle for which the miners have contended and at the same time to secure the owners against its abuse. Unfortunately the principle is, so far, nothing but a blank form and this form is to be filled up by the somewhat too familiar agency of district committees representing both parties and attended by a representative of the Government. Finally, if these committees should fail of their object, the Government propose to appoint representatives of their own to decide any outstanding question. Since these outstanding questions may include everything that is in dispute apart from the bare assertion of the abstract principle, it is clear that in everything but name the proposal of the Government is to submit the whole dispute to arbitration. There exist no principles for fixing a minimum wage in coal mining. If it were a question of a subsistence minimum, calculations might be made by an impartial authority, but no one expects that a coal miners' minimum should be regulated by the requirements of bare subsistence. Coal mining is a particularly arduous industry, which requires and has long received something very different from a subsistence wage. There exist no principles, commanding any general recognition, by which the precise level can be fixed for remuneration due to work of this kind. The miners themselves have taken a modern estimate of a normal wage as the basis of their resolutions. On what basis would the representatives of the Government proceed? Who is to say? But until these questions are answered it is difficult to hope for a satisfactory settlement upon the lines laid down.

The miners themselves have laid down actual figures for a daily minimum wage in the different coal districts. These figures vary from just under two dollars in most highly paid districts to about $1.25 in the most poorly paid ones. Nothing the Government has said has however, moved the miners from their determined stand. If anyone is to give way it must be the coal owners. Quite two-thirds of these are apparently prepared to grant some kind of minimum wage. The rest obstinately refuse to meet the miners at all on this question.

All the various branches of transport workers are, of course, sympathetic towards the miners. Inquiries conducted at the railway terminal and among responsible trade unionists on February 29 elicited the information that railway men in those quarters which were most affected last August are clamoring for instructions to assist the miners. Local secretaries are being urged by the men to write to the headquarters of the four railway unions asking that orders be issued immediately that members must not work trains carrying troops. Hundreds of men have expressed their determination not to handle coal trains. C. T. Stanton, the South Wales miners' leader, was understood to express the opinion in the Westminster Palace hotel on February 29 that the railwaymen in South Wales would be "out" very shortly. There is similar feeling, it is stated, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, Sheffield, Bradford, Mexborough, and in the coal fields around Doncaster, and it is extremely probable that the responsible officials, much against their inclination, will find it necessary to call an emergency meeting of the General Executive of the railway unions this week-end or at the latest very early next week.

An important meeting has taken place of the Transport Workers' Federation. This was attended by forty-eight delegates representing transport workers in the transport industries. The Executive Council was instructed to get into touch with the Miners' Federation of Great Britain with a view to giving the miners every assistance. This means further that the transport workers will refuse to handle any coal while the strike lasts whether mined in this country or abroad.

It is recognized that the decision embraces the possibility of a sympathetic strike by the railway and kindred effect, such action would make decisive practically every industry in the district in a little over a week or thereabouts. Scarcely any amount of provision which the most astute far-seeing manufacturer could bring to his aid could overcome the catastrophe, even if the supplies of coal were good, and they are not. The movement now inaugurated might go to almost any length on the basis of "giving every assistance which may be considered necessary."

THE LATEST NEWS FROM LAWRENCE.

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 9.--The American Woolen Company's offer of an increase in wages was raised today to a 7½ per cent average at a conference of the company's representatives and a committee of striking employees in Boston. As the Strike Committee expressed dissatisfaction over the manner in which the increase is to be applied, little progress toward a settlement was apparent.

Representatives of the mill owners submitted a schedule showing how much of an increase would be conceded to the different departments of the mills. The strike committee, however, asked for a schedule of increase based on the wages earned, instead of on the department, and divided the classifications into groups of low, medium and high-priced operatives.

The mill representatives could not say definitely whether the mill owners would submit such a schedule, but left the impression that the request probably would be complied with. Another session of the conference will be held next Monday.

Guido Mascelli, Industrial Workers of the World organizer, who was arrested by the state police in Lynn yesterday on a charge of being an accessory before the fact to an assault with intent to murder Richard H. Murphy and Daniel McCloud, of the Metropolitan police, on February 26, pleaded not guilty today in the Police Court and the case was continued to March 19. The defendant was held under $10,000 bail.

Mascelis is accused of making assault Domenico Rocco and Salvatore Bruno, already held for the grand jury, to-shoot at the two officers with intent to kill them.

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 11.--Two of the three men indicted and retained by the Industrial Workers of the World were raided by the police today. The first raid resulted from someone throwing a stone through the window of a private Italian bank across the street from the "kitchen."

The police claimed the thrower took refuge in Labor Temple. The second raid followed the gathering in the building of many Italians who had planned a street parade in violation of the city ordinance.

The "endless chain" picketing was resumed by some 10,000 strikers today. There were numerous disturbances and nine were arrested, five of them women. The arrests were witnessed by Labor Commissioner Neill, who is making a personal study of the strike situation.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

PASTOR RUSSEEL ON MARS HILL.

Preaches to the Athenians and Corinthians—The Message of St. Paul. Reaffirms the Apostle's Argument. God Offered Forgiveness to All Who Would Believe in Jesus—Mankind Has Made Serious Mistakes Respecting the Divine Purpose—Reward for Those in Harmony With God.

CORINTH, Greece, March 16.—The I. B. S. A. Missions Investigation Committee is here. Pastor Russell, its Chairman, delivered an address in our largest Auditorium. Rev. Bloodyanges served as interpreter. His text was: "God hath appointed a Day in the which He will judge the world."—Acts 17: 31. He said:

Enroute to your city, I visited Athens. As I stood upon Mars Hill and made a short address my mind reverted to the account of Saint Paul's preaching there, and I have chosen some of his words on that occasion as my text. As St. Paul made no impression there it is quite improbable that I shall. Indeed, the city today might well be described in the language of eighteen centuries ago, as wholly given up to idolatry.

True, it is not today fashionable in civilized communities to worship images; and yet in another sense it is still fashionable. There is still a great worship of man throughout the civilized world, but in a different form from that of old. No longer do we bow before wooden images, but before upward images—the images of our minds, our mental aspirations—with some we talk and fawn; with others, ease and pleasure, and with still others, the great idols of our forefathers, miserable misrepresentations of the true God.

THE DAY OF JUDGMENT.

Saint Paul on Mars Hill preached Jesus and the resurrection—Jesus as the Redeemer from the death sentence, thereby possible the resurrection of the dead by satisfying the demands of Divine Law against the sinner—the resurrection as the means or agency through which the passing of the idolater's death will reach Adam and all the families of the earth. As we follow Saint Paul's thought we will surely be blessed by his view of the Gospel.

Addressing the Gentiles, the Apostle explains that for a long time God had "winked" at idolatry and image worship, "but now," he says, "God commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Let us note the meaning of these words. How did God "wink" at sin and idolatry? And does He still "wink" at it? And why did He change and when did He begin to command all men to repent?

The answer is that for four thousand years idolatry prevailed and God "winked" at or took no notice of it. He did not "wink" at the idolaters' dying in their ignorance and sin to the devils, "Take these poor creatures who know no better." Hoist them to hell eternity!" Nothing of the kind. Our forefathers merely imagined that and by false reasoning convinced themselves, and related some texts of Scripture which they did not properly understand in support of this theory; and then they handed it down to us to our perplexity and to the testing of our faith in God.

God "winked" at idolatry and sin for four thousand years in the sense of not noticing it, making no comment on it, sending no reproofs, leaving the heathen in their ignorance. The only exception to this was God's dealings with the little nation of Israel. To the Jews He gave a Law Covenant which offered eternal life on the condition of their thorough obedience to the Divine law, the measure of a perfect man's ability, which they were unable to comply with; and hence they died the same as did the heathen. All went to the Bible hell—to the tomb—to sheol, to hades, the state or condition of death—an unconscious state, a "sleep."

JESUS THE REDEEMER.

God was in no haste to send the Redeemer: 4128 years elapsed before Jesus was born, and thirty years more before He began His ministry. Had it been true, as some aver, that millions, for all those centuries were blindly stumbling into eternal torture for lack of a Divine revelation, we may be sure that our gracious God would not have left them without it. Who can think of a just and loving God as winking at the cruel deaths of millions of His creatures to eternal torture? But since they merely "fell asleep" in death, He could very well "wink" at the matter in view of His future plans, which we will consider shortly.

The fact is that no real offer from death could pass by be made until the Redemption price had been provided for the original sin under which they were condemned to death. This is the Apostle's argument, viz., that "now God commandeth all men everywhere to repent." The new implies that He did not command men previously to repent; and the reason why He did not do so is manifest, for all that repenting they could do and in the righteous living possible to them would not have saved them—they would have died away. Hence there could have been no message sent to Jesus, for if the message came it would have been, "No, because you are already under a death sentence and a sentence from God as a sinner."

Hence, God merely overlooked or "winked" at the ignorance and superstition of the period from Adam to the close of the 4161 years. But as soon as Jesus had died, "the Just for the unjust," to make reconciliation for iniquity—immediately the message went forth—God offered forgiveness and reconciliation to those who would believe in Jesus and would accept the Divine terms. Such have their sins forgiven. Such may come back to fellowship with God. And, in the next Age, such may eventually attain full human perfection in the restitution processes, up, up to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed at Calvary.

GOD'S APPOINTED DAY.

Let us note carefully what the Apostle says respecting God's appointed day for the judging of the world. He says that the command to repent now goes forth to all men everywhere, "because God hath appointed a (future) Day, in which He will judge the world." The Apostle does not refer to that Day as already begun, but as merely appointed or arranged for in advance. He means that in arranging that "Jesus, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man," God was arranging that every man might have a judgment or a trial, to determine whether or not he will be worthy of this blessing which Jesus' death provides. But no opportunity to secure. The Day was future in Saint Paul's time, and it is still future, because God has other work which He proposes shall be accomplished first, before the world's Day of Judgment or trial shall begin.

The world's trial Day or period of judgment, or testing as to worthiness or unworthiness for everlasting life, will be one of the thousand-year days mentioned by Saint Peter, who said, "A day with the Lord is as a thousand years." The same period is called sometimes the "Day of Christ," the Day or period of Messiah's glorious reign. By the righteous ruling of His Kingdom, by the suppression of Satan and sin and the entire clearing of darkness, ignorance and superstition, by the shining forth of the Sun of Righteousness with healing in its beams, that glorious Day will bring blessing to the world in general—opportunity for each individual to come into judgment or trial, the result of which will be either the reward of life everlasting or the punishment of death everlasting—everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power, &c.

This great thousand-year Day is still future; and, meantime, the Apostle's words respecting mankind are still true: "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together"—waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God." (Romans viii, 22, 19.) If the nineteen centuries' delay in the introduction of this great Day seem long, let us not forget that it is less than half as long as the period which preceded—the period prior to the coming of Jesus and His death—the "Just for the unjust." Nor is the entire period long from the Divine standpoint. For as the Prophet declares: "A thousand years in God's sight are but as yesterday," or seem shorter, "as a watch in the night." The six great Days of a thousand years each, in which sin and death have reigned, are to be followed by a great Sabbath of rest from evil—a thousand years of refreshment, reinvigoration, upbuilding, restitution—Acts iii, 19-23.

"THE MYSTERY OF GOD."

The purpose of the nineteen centuries between the time when Jesus died as sin's Redeemer and the time when He will take His Throne as the Restorer of Adam and his race is spoken as a Mystery, because the Divine plan for the blessing of the world is measurably hidden from the world. The Jews do not understand it; they expected that Messiah's Kingdom and their own national exaltation would have come long ago. They cannot tell now why they have been for eighteen centuries outcast from the Divine favor. It is a mystery to them.

The Scriptures tell us who may know or understand this Mystery and when it will be finished. They say, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His Covenant." They will tell us that in the days of the voice of the seventh Angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished," which he hath kept secret from the foundation of the world. Saint Paul refers to this mystery, saying, "As it was hidden from ages and Dispensations," and that it "is now revealed to the saints." He explains what it is, namely, that we should be fellow-heirs and of the same Body with our Redeemer.—Ephesians iii, 5.

This clearly means that the entire Church class, sometimes called "the Body of Christ," which is the Church, and sometimes styled "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife," is to be sharer with the Redeemer in the sufferings of the present life and in the glories of the future. The nearly nineteen centuries of this Age, therefore, according to the Scriptures, have been for the purpose, not of giving the world its trial for everlasting life or death, but for the trying, testing, the electing or selecting of the Church, and her perfecting with her Lord as sharers in His resurrection, "out from the dead, resurrection."—Philippians iii, 10; Revelations xx, 6.

We have in the past made two serious mistakes respecting the Divine purposes. One was that we assumed (without Scriptural authority that the whole world is now on trial for eternal life, failing to see that it is merely the Church, the consecrated class. The other mistake is that we reasoned as though the Church were part of the world and, therefore, that the trial of the Church meant the trial of the world. But heaken to the Scriptures respecting the Church: "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world;" "I have chosen you out of the world;" and again, "Let your light so shine before men that they, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father which is in heaven," "in the day of their visitation."—Peter ii, 12.

TWO DIFFERENT REWARDS.

We should notice also the wide difference between the reward promised the Church and that proffered the world. In both cases the reward will be everlasting life. In both cases this will mean full harmony with God, because "All the wicked will God destroy." And again we read that "Whosoever hath the Son hath life, and whosoever hath not the Son shall not see life." So then, the attainment of everlasting life, either by the Church class or by the world, will mean coming into full harmony with the heavenly Father and with the Lord Jesus, by the merit of Christ's sacrifice. It will mean a full turning away from sin and a full devotion to God and to righteousness.

The difference will be as to nature. The reward for the world will be earthly nature, human nature, with everlasting life in an earthly Paradise or Eden—wordly. Mankind never loss, a spiritual or heavenly condition through Adam's disobedience, nor in any other manner. He never had such a condition or nature, or a right to it, that he could lose it. He was made man, "a little lower than the angels." His crown of glory and honor was an earthly crown. His dominion was over the birds of the air, over cattle and over the fish of the sea. This which he lost Jesus paid the redemption price for at Calvary, and these things lost are the very things which Jesus and His elect Bride will restore to mankind during the thousand years of the Messianic Kingdom. Thus we read: "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost."

PARTAKERS OF THE DIVINE NATURE.

The reward of the Church, eternal life, perfection and harmony with God, will be on the spirit plane—wholly different from the human. Man in perfection will again be a little lower than the angels; but the Church, as the Body of Christ, will share with her Lord in its exaltation, "far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named"—the divine nature. This reward comes to the Church under a special covenant of sacrifice, which the Bible specifies.

This Church class, like her Lord, must sacrifice the earthly nature, earthly interests, hopes and aims, and must be begotten of the Spirit to a heavenly, spiritual nature, in order to be a sharer in the First Resurrection, and she must enter into her reward before the Messianic Kingdom can be established for the blessing of mankind in general—the saving of the world from sin and from death.

Thus the Apostle says that the groaning creation "waits for the manifestation of the sons of God." (Romans viii, 19.) "Now are we the sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be (their glorious, new great), but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him."

Our resurrection change will make us like the Savior; as he writes, "We shall all be changed, in a moment, in a twinkling," because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of heaven."

"COMMANDETH ALL TO REPENT."

Come back again to Saint Paul's words. He does not say that God commanded the Church to sacrifice, for if sacrifices were a command it would be cruel to be a sacrifice. No, where are their bodies living sacrifices, nor so walk in the footsteps of Jesus, nor to take up the cross and follow Him. To the saintly those sacrificing features are set forth as a privilege—as an opportunity. If they do these things the Divine arrangement is that through the imputation of Christ's merit their sacrifice will be holy and acceptable unto God, and they will be granted a share with the Redeemer in His high exaltation—the reward of sacrifice, of self-denial, of loving, voluntary service to God, the truth and the brethren.

But to the world in general the Lord issues a command, viz., Repent; turn from your sins; come back to Me; seek My face; seek to know and do My will. The basis of his command is the Divine declaration that God's grace has provided redemption in the blood of Jesus, a reconciliation through His blood, and that by and by the whole world will be on trial for life or death everlasting, in a Great day of trial, which God has ordained and over which Christ and the Church will preside, as Judges.

Whoever comes to a knowledge of this great Divine arrangement through Christ has an incentive to live righteously, soberly and godly in this present time. Whoever hears and heeds this command is laying up for himself a good treasure of character and preparation for his life or death trial in the great Millennial Day of the Messianic Kingdom. Whoever ignores this knowledge and "sows to the flesh" will find himself reaping of the flesh further experience, further degradation and severer stripes or punishments in that great thousand-year Judgment Day.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Canada, Feb. 25.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I admire the fair manner in which you handle all labor questions and also the prominence given to Pastor Russell's Sermons and as long as you continue to publish them you may count on my subscription.

Wishing your paper every success, I remain,

Yours truly,
A. H. BOSTOCK.

Indiana, Feb. 29.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Will say I'm very much pleased with all features of your paper and will send you two new subscriptions for one year each. I'm also pleased to know we have an editor who is fearless enough to give almost a whole page to a weekly sermon of the best and then to give another page to appreciations, Sunday School Lessons and Bible Questions. Such editors are few in these perilous times.

Yours in Christ,
C. L. McDANIEL.

Ohio, March 9.

I am glad to express to you again Senior National Labor Tribune my ever increasing appreciation of your paper, the National Labor Tribune.

I note with interest the growing clash between capital and labor and the vain endeavor of men of intellect and power to stem the tide, and I appreciate the fact that while devoting your paper's space to labor's just subjects, space is reserved for a religious department which sets forth, as well proven by Scripture, the reason for and solution of these great problems.

I have experienced that "no work is more noble and ennobling than a reverent study of the Word of God," and also that the Scriptures are a perfect guide in everyday life, and trust that you may find a blessing in having your paper a medium to encourage and spread an ever increasing interest in God's Word.

Yours respectfully,
EDWARD HAZLETT.

Texas, March 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Of all the newspapers I know anything about, I think of it! This paper deals boldly and courageously with every matter of importance of the day, and yet it is conservative and unbiased. I appreciate all this, but of course my chief interest is in the courageous stand you take when you publish the eternal truth of our God as it reaches you through the Watch Tower and Herald. The Lord's blessings attend you is my prayer.

D. A. MACKEY.

Pennsylvania, March 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Surely blessings have already come to your heart for your zeal in presenting the Truth in so fearless a manner in your excellent paper. I appreciate it very much on account of the nice way you print our Pastor Russell's sermons, the Question Box, Sunday School Lessons and Letters of Appreciation. Your paper is becoming quite a friend and we are anxious every week for its regular visits. We hope you may receive many more blessings for your loyalty to the Truth. I am also sending you a new subscription.

Yours truly,
P. H. BRODE.

Texas, March 9.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

We greatly appreciate the Tribune on account of dear Brother Russell's Sermons and the Question Box, for the print is so good. That's do with me might what our hands find to do, for the night cometh when no man can work.'

Yours in Christian love,

Enclose please find check and address for one new subscriber. I have been taking your valuable paper for three months and very much delight in it with its clean labor news and especially the style of print and Pastor Russell's Sermons and Sunday School Lessons. Hoping the Dear Lord will bless you for your labor of love.

Yours respectfully,
WM. SPEED.

Ohio, March 9.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. I have taken the Labor Tribune for four years and hope to take it as long as you continue to publish Pastor Russell's Sermons; am also interested in the Questing Box and Sunday School Lessons and the many interesting letters from the dear friends and the labor news of the world.

Wishing you a prosperous year and praying the Lord's blessing on you, I remain your friends and fellow servant.

"INSTEAD."

Instead of the thorn there shall come up the fir tree,
Instead of the brier the myrtle shall spring,
Back to the primeval freshness and beauty,
God will creation triumphantly bring.
Streams in the desert shall heal the parched places,
The rose in the wilderness fragrance shall shed,
The mountains and hills shall break forth in praises—
Wonderful word of Jehovah—"Instead."

How sweet the assurance to hearts that are weary!
What hope it awakens, what strength doth convey!
Sunshine shall follow the days that are dreary,
Sorrow and sighing shall vanish away;
Symbol and type and the Gospel's glad story
Say to the fainting one "Lift up your head,
Soon shall this sad earth be filled with God's glory:
He, for the curse, will give blessing instead."

Behold, on the altar a victim is lying,
Upraised is the knife in the Patriarch's hand;
The child of the covenant promise is dying,
An offering made at Jehovah's command:
When lo! At the word of the angel from Heaven
The son is restored as "alive from the dead."
The Lord of Hosea Himself hath a sacrifice given,
The ram in the thicket is offered instead.

Alone in the garden, while others are sleeping,
The sinless Redeemer a suppliant stands
His earnest entreaty, His blood-drops, His weeping
To life in the heart of the Father His anguish reveals.
Though bitter the cup that Sure-ty has taken,
Through heavy the stroke that must bruise His head,
He goes to the Cross to be cursed and forsaken,
To give us the cup of salvation instead.

Now saved on the ground of His infinite merit,
His people rejoice in the soul-cleansing blood,
Transformed by the might of His indwelling Spirit,
They bear day by day precious fruit unto God:
All glory and honor and majesty give ye
To Him who redeemed them, their glorious Head,
They count it their joy evermore to be living,
No longer "to self," but "to Jesus instead."

Believer, rejoice! for the glad day is nearing
For which all creation still travails in pain,
When Christ our Redeemer, in glory appearing,
Shall bring to Himself His great power and reign;
When Satan the will serpent expelling,
To earth's farthest limits His Kingdom shall spread,
And peace and prosperity sweetly be telling
That Jesus Emmanuel ruleth instead.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Some time ago at the solicitation of a friend I subscribed for the Tribune. I find it all that is claimed for it as a labor paper, but I find it contains something else that is of more interest to me than even the labor question, that is, its religious department.

I had for many years realized that we were living in a most wonderful time, that a transition of some kind was taking place. I felt that the Bible should throw some light on the subject if we only knew how to find it, as the Lord has always foretold his people, of great changes that have taken place and promises in His word that we should never be left in darkness.

I find the sermons and Scripture studies just what I needed, and I am sure many others are being helped as I have been. Will send more subscriptions soon.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I beg to inform you that we esteem your paper more and more as being one of the best mediums for spreading the Truth and will at every opportunity seek to show my appreciation by telling others of the good things I have found in the Tribune.

Respectfully yours,
W. HUNTER.

Connecticut, March 8.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Have just renewed my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. This affords me another opportunity of expressing to you my appreciation of your publishing the articles from the pen of Pastor Russell. Next to the sermon, I am specially interested in the Bible Question Box.

I have been watching with keen interest the progress of the Foreign Missions Investigations Committee of which Pastor Russell is the head. I trust you will continue to give us all the information possible in regard to this interesting tour of Pastor Russell and his associates, and what he will have to report on his return home. Thanks for all past favors.

I am yours for the Truth,
C. W. THOMSON.

Ohio, March 9.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am send ng you three subscriptions to your valuable paper to show you how much I appreciate your labor of love on behalf of the laboring public as well as on behalf of the Glad Tidings of Great Joy that is to come to all peop e in due time as faithfully and lovingly set forth by our dear Pastor Russell and so faithfully and loyally printed by you. Regardless of the threats made against it by Satan and Babylon's great ones. God bless you.

GEO. W. FAULK.

Georgia, March 5.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I recently subscribed for the Tribune and am getting issue, O. K. Would like to say I am very much pleased with it, especia ly the Religious Department, the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons. Also Pastor Russe l's Sermons, which are so logical.

I am growing more interested in them each week, as they have got me to thinking.

Hoping you continued success, I am, yours respectfully,
JESSE P. CAMP.

Pennsylvania, March 6.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Have been a reader of your valuable paper for several years and I look forward to its weekly visits with much pleasure. I like the way you print Pastor Russell's Sermons, especially like the Question Box for it has answered some Scriptures which I had not understood before. May our Heavenly Father's riches blessings rest on you in helping to spread the truth.

Yours in the Master's service,
MRS. MARY A. DUNCAN.

POPULAR MECHANICS

AUTOMOBILE TIRE PUMP.

New Inflator Worked by Connection With the Engine.

There never was any danger of over inflating an automobile tire with the old bicycle type foot pump, but with power pumps coming into common use there is such a possibility. Under inflation is still far more likely than over inflation, however. To prevent both and thereby prolong the life of tires several makers of tire pressure gauges are offered to the motorist.

One of these new inflators presenting some features of special interest is shown in vertical cross section in the accompanying cut. The shell is threaded externally at the lower end to be screwed in place of a spark plug in the head of one of the cylinders. When the motor is run on the remaining cylinders the compression in the first cylinder drives the double ended piston upward until it is checked by a cushion of air under the wrist pin extending through the central casting. During this movement air contained in the upper chamber of the inner shell is compressed and forced out of the valve through a small valve on the right into a metal tube wound spirally between the inner and outer shells and finally communicating through the central casting with the rubber hose.

The hose has a valve connection and is long enough to reach to either of the rear wheels. During the suction stroke of the motor piston the inflator piston draws in a new charge and draws a charge of fresh air into the outer shell through a group of holes at the top. Some air also enters the inner chamber through a valve at the left, and the rest passes on down through a gun metal valve in the lower end of the plunger and thence enters the motor cylinder. The single acting or primary compressor to operate the pump, the charging of the motor cylinder being necessary because the three firing cylinders are operated with the throttle nearly closed, reducing the power of the primary compressor in proportion to the air admitted to it. Only pure air is forced into the tire, being cooled before it leaves the pump by the air taken in at the top on each suction stroke as it circulates around the spiral outlet tube.

The Eskimos of Victoria Land.

Isolated communities of human beings are so few in this day of steam and electricity that a special interest attaches to the letters received from time to time at the American Museum of Natural History from Mr. V. Jacobsen, who, accompanied by Dr. Anderson, is visiting the Eskimo settlements about Coronation Gulf and Victoria Land, in the north coast of British North America. The two Eskimo villages were discovered in the middle of Coronation Gulf, such containing about eighty inhabitants. With the exception of one man who had visited Dismal Lake, a person in the villages had ever seen a white man. The grandfathers of two of the natives had seen white men on Icebass at one time on the lower Copermine river. Incidentally this expedition has gleaned a great deal of geographical information. Thus it was found that there are at least three or four times as many Islands in Coronation gulf as shown on the charts.

Man More Liquid Than Solid.

Every thee and every cell that enters into the formation of a living body is bathed in moisture, by which means alone these ultimate elements are kept alive and are enabled to carry out their duties. Even the bones, which appear to be the most solid of all, owe more than half their weight to the presence of fluid. That our bodies contain a large amount of fluid is proved in a striking manner by the blisters which rise after the infliction of a burn. Water, in fact, plays a very important part in the human anatomy, for it is through its agency that the vital processes of digestion, absorption and the excretion of waste products are carried out. To reduce the whole matter to figures and taking 154 pounds to be the total weight of an average full grown man, it is said that water alone accounts for 106 pounds of the whole.

To Remove Ink Spots.

Excellent results are said by Reuken to be obtained with a mixture of alum two parts, tart dep (purified tartar) one part. The spots are wetted, sprinkled with powder and brushed. Fresh spots disappear at once. In the case of old ones two to three applications are necessary. The originator has always accomplished his object, and the colors have been unfaded.

Facts About Falling Leaves.

The fall of leaves in autumn is a remarkably variable process, the foliage of oaks and beeches being slowly dropped during a period of weeks and months. While some trees and shrubs become suddenly bare in a few days, an autumn report in made of a horse chestnut and a maple in the botanical garden at Halle, Germany. Both trees were in full leaf when a frost of 23 degrees F. came one October night, and when the sun rose at 8 o'clock a veritable shower began from each tree, the leaves dropping in a great stream. The fall stopped suddenly at the end of an hour from the horse chestnut and in about half an hour from the maple. In the hour the horse chestnut had 87,342 leaves, weighing 125 pounds, and the half hour fall from the maple was sixty-one pounds, or 16,518 leaves, at the average of 0.32 per ounce. The last leaf fell from the horse chestnut on Nov. 10, the total fall from it from Oct. 27 having been 276,500 leaves, weighing 445 pounds.

Site of Ancient Jerusalem.

Since 1900 archaeologists have been busy in excavating the eastern slope of Mount Olivet, in Jerusalem. The explorers, who have been in search of the tombs of David and Solomon, have cleaned out and carefully investigated the so called Virgin's well and the tunnel that runs from it to the pool of Siloam. One of the most interesting discoveries was an Israelitish lamp found near the bottom of the Virgin's well. The lamp, which is in excellent condition, is believed to date from the eleventh century B. C.—that is to say, from the time of King David. The excavators have decisively ascertained the site of David's Jerusalem and of the Jebusite city that preceded it and have obtained evidence of Jebusite occupation for 2,000 years before David's conquest.

Tungsten Production.

There was a sharp falling off in the production of tungsten ores in 1911 owing to the decrease in the market for tool steels, in which the bulk of the tungsten is used. According to preliminary figures collected by Frank L. Hess of the United States geological survey, about 1,125 short tons of concentrates carrying 60 per cent tungstic trioxide were produced and shipped during the year, which is less than two-thirds of the output for 1910, when 1,621 tons were marketed.

Utilization of Grape Pips.

The utilization of byproducts is one of the most striking characteristics of modern industry. A recent example is found in Italy, where a means has been discovered to turn to account the hitherto worthless pips of the grapes used in wine making. Oil is now extracted from these on a commercial scale by a process of direct heating with tetrachloride of carbon. The latter is not obtained in absolute purity in the preparation of electrolytic soda.

Output of Gold and Silver.

Preliminary figures of the director of the mint indicate a total domestic gold production of $96,235,228 in 1911 against $93,389,100 in 1910. The total domestic production of silver in 1911 was 57,704,117 fine ounces, as compared with 57,387,800. The production in 1910 was 57,127,000 the ounces, of a commercial value of $30,854,500. The average price of silver in 1911 was 52 cents per fine ounce, a decrease of 1 cent from that of 1910.

Tar as a Source of Cancer.

The belief that the tar and pitch fumes of coke ovens are the cause of the spread of cancer among workmen has been recommended to the British parliament. The home secretary stated that blast furnace pitch is less liable to give rise to cancer, and had been specifically exempted from some other regulations for patent fuel made with pitch. One view is that cancer results from anthracene, a gas which constituent not found in furnace pitch.

Aluminium Pulleys.

An American manufacturing company has recently adopted aluminium pulleys for its large planers and for a number of other machines, the aluminium diminishes the weight of the pulleys, which when made of cast iron may be practically heavy enough retarding the action of reversing the motion. It is also claimed that the lighter aluminium pulleys are more economical, reducing the friction and prolonging the life of the belts.

Flight of Birds.

The wild duck in migration flies at an average height of 2,000 feet and its speed during more than twenty observations forty-seven miles an hour. The sea gull's flight, proved by two observations, was only twenty-six miles an hour and its height above the water was 1,000 feet, except when circling near the surface for food.

A Deadly War Weapon.

The Krupps, who supply guns to the German empire and to half of the world besides, have now invented a terrible weapon known as the bomb gun. It fires a huge, 100 pounds bomb containing 100 pounds of chemicals. As it bursts it fills the air with poisonous gas by which no human being can live. The gases from one bomb will kill every one within a radius of 500 yards. This weapon apparently will make it impossible for soldiers to remain in the open trenches. In experiments on animals with the bombs it was found that the fumes turned them green.

Reclamation of Rubber.

When digesting out from the respective rubber crop a very considerable factor is the amount of rubber now in use which may be reclaimed and made use of for almost all purposes. Taking the matter of inner tubes alone and figuring on eight tubes per year per car, the annual crop is 3,000,000, assuming there to be 400,000 cars in the country. These tubes weigh on an average two pounds each, and this will give 7,200,000 pounds, of which 6,000,000 pounds can be reclaimed and will be its place to 50 per cent of the goods manufactured today. The recovery of the pure rubber from these tubes represents one of the most satisfactory operations of the rubber trade, for the reason that the material entering into the tubes is pure and the tire contains no fabric or metal, which makes the task very easy and necessitates no acid treatment.

Tablets of Oxygen.

The so called "oxygen stone" of M. Georges Jouhett is stated to contain specially compressed peroxide of calcium or magnesium, with a permanganate, a hypochlorite and some salt or copper or nickel. When placed in water it is decomposed without heat, giving off chemically pure oxygen. This discovery supplies us with oxygen tablets, of which a pound will yield twenty or thirty gallons of oxygen and which can be used in a submarine boat or other close space as needed to keep the free oxygen in the atmosphere at its normal proportion of 21 per cent.

Time Signals by Wireless.

Since May 25, 1910, the observatory of Paris has sanctioned the daily transmission on the Eiffel tower for sending a daily time signal at midnight. As there has now elapsed sufficient time, it is probable that the hour of this signal will be changed from midnight to 11:30 p. m. in order to avoid confusion with the signal sent at midnight, Greenwich time, by the wireless station at Nordeich, in Germany. The latter is communicated by the German naval observatory at Wilhelmshaven. Since Nov. 1, 1911, a second time signal has been sent from the Eiffel tower daily, except Sundays and holidays, at 9:31 a. m., more convenient hour for many purposes than midnight. Lastly, the observatory of Rio de Janeiro is interested in co-operating to avoid confusion with the signal sent at midnight, Greenwich time, by the wireless station at Nordeich

MINERS' STRIKE NOW APPEARS PROBABLE

Anthracite Operators Reject Miners' Demands, and President White Announces that Men Will All Come Out April 1--Negotiations to Continue Duridg the Suspension--Bituminous Industry May Be Tied Up Also.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., March 16.—Officials of the anthracite mine workers here, following the action of the operators in refusing all their demands, and ending, of negotiations yesterday, are arranging, it is understood, for a suspension of work for at least six weeks, following April 1, when the existing agreement ends.

They believe that the union's chances of getting some concessions from the operators will be greatly enhanced when they can show the operators that the union has the power to maintain a suspension of work at all the collieries in the region, without formally ordering a strike.

This suspension will be ordered, it is understood, by President White, of the Mine Workers' Union, and his associates of the miners' policy, with the declaration that during the period of the suspension a further effort will be held by the union officials to obtain some concessions from the operators. They believe that the operators will be impressed with the power of the union in closing the mines, and after a period of a few weeks of stagnation will be glad to renew conferences with the mine workers and ultimately to grant them some concessions.

One of the union leaders said today: "We have not the least doubt that virtually every mine worker in the region will obey the request of the union to suspend work while the union officials continue their efforts to procure concessions from the operators.

"I look that the suspension will be so complete that not a ton of coal will be mined, and that there will be no effort to work at any of the collieries. The union does not aim at the destruction of any property, and the engineers and firemen will likely remain at work to keep the mines free from water and gas.

"The union is well prepared for a suspension, and a strike if necessary, but it is certain that there will not be a strike until all other methods of gaining concessions have failed."

Mine workers today, whether they belong to the union or not, admitted that they would obey a request from the union leaders for a suspension of work.

The operators' reply deals seriatim and in detail with the demands. The finding of the Anthracite Coal Commission, appointed by President Roosevelt in 1902, is quoted against recognition of the union and the adoption of the one-year agreement. The reply disposes of the demand that the operators collect union dues of their employes with the declaration that the laws of Pennsylvania forbid their doing so. The Conciliation Board, the reply states, is always ready to deal justly with the grievances of employes and adjust them.

The operators' reply of 1906 refusing the demand that the system whereby a contract miner has more than one working place and employs more than two laborers be abolished is repeated in the present reply. Grievances concerning interference with check-weighmen and check docking bosses, the operators declare, can readily be settled by the Conciliation Board. The demand for an 8-hour day is rejected on the grounds that conditions have not changed since the Anthracite Coal Commission recommended a 9-hour day and that further to reduce the work day would seriously curtail production.

"It is out of the question to advance wages," reads the reply, "unless we can in some manner realize from the sale of coal produced a sum equal to the increase in wages." This increase, it is stated, would aggregate $2,000,000 a year, and the whole advance, which would average about 67 cents per ton, would be borne by the domestic sizes of coal.

The increase in the cost of producing anthracite coal in recent years has reduced the margin of profit to a point beyond which further reduction is impossible, the reply declares.

After urging the adoption of the Scranton proposition, the reply concludes with the statement that "We feel that we cannot be parties to the termination of an arrangement which has made the anthracite region, for all interests involved, one of the most prosperous industrial districts in the country. We trust that your demands will be withdrawn. The responsibility for a change in the present satisfactory condition of affairs must rest with you."

Bill to Arbitrate Miners' Demands

WASHINGTON, March 16. — To avert a strike of miners in the anthracite fields, Representative Robert E. Lee, of Pottsville, Pa., Democrat, today introduced a bill to extend the provisions of the Erdmann arbitration act to owners of coal mines and their employes.

"I have been putting off introduction of the bill," said Representative Lee today, "until it seemed certain that that a strike of coal miners could not be avoided."

AN AMAZING DECISION.

THE tremendous bent of courts towards property rights in preference to human rights is illustrated by a 4 to 3 decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Patent Monopoly case. And the prevailing opinion against the people was rendered by Taft's intimate friend and appointee Lurton.

The patentee of a rotary mimeograph claimed the right to compel all users of his machines to use only his ink. Think of it! That is, when Uncle Sam gives a patentee a monopoly in his invention, the court now says that he also enjoys the right to monopolize all other businesses connected with his invention.

This decision practically puts an end to government prosecutions against the Shoe Machinery Trust, the Watch Trust and nobody can tell how many other trusts. It is likely to become the universal charter of privilege to steal from us common folks. Because, it will be a poor trust that won't own at least one patented article and under its protection it may charge whatsoever it pleases according to Lurton, McKenna, Holmes and Vandervanter.

This three was too strong for Chief Justice White and Justices Hughes and Lamar. They said that under this decision "the patentee of a cousing utensil can require that all the food cooked in it be purchased from him, or the patentee of a window frame might assert that all the material in the house in which the frame was to be used must be procured from him." Notwithstanding the "untold evils" which the decision entails and the vigorous protests of the dissenting judges, sacred property rights won the day. Thus do those who oppose recall of Judges become the chief promoters of the reform. There is only one way to modernize the fossilized Judges as Lurton and that is to recall them.

LAWRENCE STRIKERS WIN

STRIKING workers in the textile factories at Lawrence, Mass., have won a signal victory. The wage concessions granted by the American Woolens Company, otherwise known as the woolen trust range from 5 to 25 per cent, and in addition to that the company agrees to pay time-and-a-quarter for all overtime, and all other pledges are made which determined the strikers' committee last evening to accept the settlement. The men on Monday accordingly went back to work, having gained substantially everything that they asked, although when the strike was declared their demands were denounced by the managers of the mills as preposterous. Besides police authorities of Lawrence treated the strikers as if they were so many thugs.

The settlement carries more than one lesson. It teaches, for one thing, that whichever side to a labor dispute resorts to lawlessness and violence in its efforts to win is almost sure thereby to incur defeat. The mill owners were the lawbreakers in this instance. With the aid of the police officials of Lawrence and the State of Massachusetts they proceeded to intimidation in its most outrageous form, trampling on the civil rights of the workers in a fashion better suited to Russia than to the United States.

Had it not been for this amazing blunder, the mill owners might eventually have succeeded in starving their dissatisfied employes into submission. But the police outrages attracted the attention of the whole country, resulting in a movement in Congress to investigate the trust and strike a blow at it by means of tariff legislation.

It was really this popular uprising —the manifestation of a great tidal wave of public indignation—that subdued the operators and compelled them to offer terms of peace. The public won the strikers' fight for them. And it will win fights for other workingmen, too, providing they have a just cause, and uphold it without resorting to violent and unlawful methods.

LABOR NOT NEEDED IN SAN FRANCISCO.

ONE cannot help wondering if the railroads, chambers of commerce and various other institutions of California will take as much trouble to spread broadcast through the east the resolution adopted by the board of supervisors warning the world-loyed away from San Francisco, as they recently took to circulate a postcard invitation for them to come.

The railroad postcard depicting a prosperous condition of affairs in California and conveying the impression that exposition work had been started, proved no doubt an excellent thing to separate a great many eastern people from their money for fares to California. But these boomers for personal revenue would play the game a whole lot more fairly if they would state the truth. California undoubtedly presents wonderful opportunities to the investor, but not at the present time to the laborer who arrives, expecting to find a job ready for him to fill, when there is not enough work to keep those already in the state employed.

It is seldom that the railroad booster and "big business" spread broadcast this latter sort of information. It would mean less revenue in railroad fares for one, and fewer poverty stricken people for the other to hold as a club over the working class.

MYRON T. HERRICK, NAMED AS AMBASSADOR TO FRANCE.

THE ambassadorship to France, which be has just accepted, is the third which has been offered to ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick. President McKinley and President Roosevelt wished him to represent this country at Rome, but he declined both appointments on the ground that his business interests demanded that he remain at home. He is a banker of Cleveland, chairman of the board of directors of the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad and an officer or director of many other important business enterprises. He has long been a close friend of President Taft and has been consulted upon to make a strong fight in his native state for the president's renomination.

Confirm Pitney After Hard Fight

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Mahlon Pitney, chancellor of the State of New Jersey, President Taft's nominee to succeed the late Justice Harlan on the Supreme Court bench, was finally confirmed today by the Senate, by a vote of 40 to 32. Justice Pitney will come to Washington on Monday.

These Republican Senators voted against Mr. Pitney's confirmation: Bourne, Bristow, Kenyon, Cummins and Poindexter. These Democrats voted against him: Bacon, Bryan, Chamberlain, Curtis, Gardner, Gore, Hitchcock, Johnson, Kern, Lea, Myers, Newlands, O'Gorman, Pomerene, Rayner, Reed, Shively, Smith of Georgia, Smith of South Carolina, Taylor and Williams.

The Senate's consideration of Justice Pitney today, was in the fourth executive session it has had on his nomination, and the vigorous fight against him because of his decision in a glass blowers' strike case did not abate until the last moment. The session lasted two hours.

POLITICS VS. STRIKE

LONDON, March 18.—Settlement of the strike of the British miners depends now on the fate of the minimum wage scale to be introduced by Lloyd-George in the House of Commons tomorrow.

The Tories will take a neutral attitude on the measure and the government will be forced to unite its forces to get it through. The laborites are in a quandary. They fear if they vote for the bill it will be the entering wedge of compulsory arbitration which they oppose.

The result will be spirited debate, although Premier Asquith hopes to have the bill passed by the end of the week.

The International Typographical Union celebrates its sixtieth anniversary this year.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS

The Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization has just issued its November (1911) immigration bulletin. During that month there were admitted 61,756 aliens. The largest number came from Southern Italy, 10,925; Hebrews, 7,317; Germans, 5,410; Polish, 4,590; English, 3,868; Northern Italians, 2,618; the balance coming from 20 or 30 other countries. During the last five months there have been admitted into this country 295,629 aliens, there having been only 8,254 deberred and returned to their home countries.

The Carpenters' organization of Bakersfield, Cal., has collected nearly $23,000, which is to be used for the erection of a labor temple.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

British Coal Miners Stand Firm--Nearly Half a Million Other Workers Idle. Railway Workers Give Unofficial Help to Miners--Will British Banks Refuse to Lend Strikers Money on Good Securities?--Should Soldiers Fire on Strikers.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, March 14.—The British coal strike is now one week old and that one week of its history has been crowded. The position of affairs at the time of writing is that there are 1,100,000 mine workers on strike and close upon half a million other workers rendered idle because of the failure of coal supplies. The miners stand four-square to all the winds that blow and their determination and unity is remarkable and exhilarating. All over the country before the Strike they discussed and discussed again the minimum wage question in all its bearings and they came to the slow but settled conclusion that a minimum wage they must have. Further than this, they carefully considered each coal district in turn and raised what should be the minimum wage for each special district, the figure being as low as $1.25 in some parts and not as high as $2 anywhere. These final figures were the result of much deliberation and were a reduction on the figures originally fixed.

It can scarcely be wondered at, therefore, that the British coal miners have emphatically refused to admit either the principle of the minimum wage or the amount they have fixed for the district minimums to be matters for further discussion or arbitration. Premier Asquith, representing the Liberal Government, was quite the "kind friend" of the coal miners when he thought they could be induced by his hypocritical affection of fair dealing to submit the above mentioned question of conciliation boards. He was staggered when he ran up against an adamant unyielding body of miners' delegates. These delegates are in London pledged up to the hilt to go for the various minimum wage rates fixed by their members and if they wanted to yield they couldn't. Then Premier Asquith returned from the negotiations leaving a loophole through which he might return, and the newspapers of the country took up the parable. They have since been preaching morning and evening that the miners' one desire is to carry out their own needs through the private ballot and the country is ruined. The miners are portrayed hour after hour as spending their idle time in sport and the pleasures of the table and the drinking saloon, attending horse races, playing billiards, etc., whilst all the workers of the country sink to a morass of starvation, misery and blank ruin. The Government is being begged to try all kinds of impossible coercive measures which it dare not do and—the miners stand a fine chance of winning their demands within an exceedingly short period.

The Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants has so far made no pronouncement upon the question of allowing its members to work, using carrying troops to the coal districts or coal worked by blacklegs should either of these things happen. A number of the union's biggest branches have repeatedly during the past week asked for instructions from headquarters upon the general question of ceasing to work coal trains at all, but the union executive have made no definite sign. Firstly the fifteen London branches have called a mass meeting for March 19 in Trafalgar Square, London, at which it will be sought to give railway men the lead in the matter of the coal strike which is apparently denied them by their executive. The railway men have not forgotten that when they themselves voted in an overwhelming majority for a second railway strike last Autumn their executive refused to announce the figures or act upon them. It appears, therefore, that the higher officials of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants have reason for these actions which are at present unknown to their members, the rest I will be, of course, that members of it on either union in this country will follow the miners' plan of reserving all executive power to themselves and tying up their officials very tightly. That is certainly the note anyhow of modern trade union development is Great Britain.

An important conference between the committee of the Shipbuilding employers' Federation and the Shipyard Trades Standing Committee will be held at Edinburgh. The primary object of the conference is to discuss a proposed for a reduction in the normal hours of the working week. The trade unions signatory to the nations agreement are actually for the 48 hours to be reduced to forty-eight weekly.

The members of the Municipal Employes association in Manchester, including several hundred who have threatened to strike are asking commended that a minimum of $6.60 At the meeting held on March 6 of the Manchester City Council it was recommended that a minimum of $6.60 be granted, the Lord Mayor explaining that a $6.60 minimum would cost £20,440 whereas a $6.25 minimum £19,450. The men's representatives stated on March 8 that the council's terms would not be accepted and that the men would strike on March 11 unless the $6.72 were granted.

The text was issued on March 8 of the proposed new parliamentary measure called the Trade Union and Trade Disputes Bill, which is introduced by Lord Chief Hamilton, a typical conservative and reactionary member of the House of Commons, to "explain and amend" the law relating to

DEATH OF JAMES JONES.

James Jones, aged 76, organizer of the Pittsburgh-Buffalo Company, and chairman of its board of directors, one of the oldest coal operators in this district, died suddenly Sunday afternoon at his home in Hazelwood of apoplexy.

Mr. Jones was born in Wales and came to the United States in 1852, going to Mt. Savage, Md. He remained there but a short time and decided to come to Pittsburgh. He walked the 80 miles from Mt. Savage to Uniontown, Pa., where he expended all the money he possessed for a ticket to this city. Arriving here he secured employment as a blacksmith and worked in a shop opposite the site of the present Union station. Some time later he went to Elizabeth, Pa., where he received his first instruction in coal mining.

He served through the Civil War and on his return to Pittsburgh married Miss Ann Agnes Ivill, of Elizabeth, who bore him five sons and three daughters. She died in 1895. Five years later Mr. Jones married Margaret Thompson, of near McKeesport, who survives.

In 1896 he took his five sons into partnership and formed the company known as James Jones & Sons. This company bought the local river business, the flats, coal boats and steamers of the T. M. Jenkins Company, making the Jones interests at that time the largest shippers of coal in the Pittsburgh district. At the formation of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal & Coke Company, in 1899, a flattering offer was made for the Jones interests and it was eventually accepted. A special provision was placed in the contract at the suggestion of Mr. Jones that Jones and his sons were entitled to enter the shipping of coal by rail. Mr. Jones and his sons then formed the Pittsburgh-Buffalo Company and Mr. Jones became chairman of the board of directors. John H. Jones, the eldest son, became president; Thomas J. Jones, vice president; David G. Jones, secretary and general manager, and Isaac D. Jones, superintendent of the mines. Operations in Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

After selling his mining interests the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal & Coke Company Mr. Jones purchased a large tract of land in Hazelwood and diverted a portion of his time from his mining interests to building homes for working people, and at his death was one of the principal small-house owners in Pittsburgh.

Mr. Jones was a member of the First Baptist church of Hazelwood and was a liberal contributor to all the church activities. In addition to his widow and four sons he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. W. J. Holsing, Miss Rachel Jones and Mrs. J. H. Wicherstein. One son, W. H., died five years ago.

TEXTILE STRIKERS WIN STRIKE.

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 15.—The great textile strike practically came to an end at 11:30 o'clock yesterday when the sub-committee of the strikers accepted a modicum of the increased wages, offered by William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company. The strikers announced that they had gained virtually every concession asked when the strike was declared, nine weeks ago. he detailed figures contained in the offer made by the American Woolen Company to the strikers through the sub-committee of the Industrial Workers of the World, were also made public.

In some instances the mill owners have offered increases of 20 per cent. in actual salary the increases offered, which are those under consideration by the strikers committee of the whole, run from $1.08 per week down to 54 cents per week for highest paid skilled operatives.

The notice of increase is as follows: "All employes formerly receiving 9½ cents and less per hour will be given an increase of two cents per hour.

"Employes formerly receiving 10 to 10 cents per hour will receive increases of 1¾ cents per hour.

"Employes formerly receiving 10 to 11 cents per hour will receive increases of 11 cents per hour.

"Employes formerly receiving 11 to 12 cents per hour will receive increases of 1¼ cents per hour.

"Employes formerly receiving 12 to 20 cents per hour will receive increases of 1 cent per hour. The same increases will be given all those who formerly received over 20 cents an hour.

"All job workers will get an increase of 5 per cent. All overtime work will be paid for at time and a quarter."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 16.—The federated shop trades on the southern railway and allied lines have concluded to make an effort to establish the eight-hour day upon the expiration of the present agreement on April 1. The sentiment among the shop is practically unanimous in favor of the shorter work day.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

CONSANGUINITY OF HUMANITY.

Bible and Science in Accord on This Point—All Nations of One Blood. Pastor Russell Shows the Futility of Trying to Prove a Human Evolution in Conflict With the Declaration of Scripture — God Created Man in His Own Image and the Present Diversities of Degredation Are All Results of Adam's Fall from Divine Favor.

LONDON, England, March 31.—London Tabernacle was crowded to-day to hear Pastor Russell. He occupied the pulpit and behind him on the platform were the six other members of the Foreign Missions Investigation Committee, viz., Gen. W. R. Hall, United States Army; Prof. F. H. Robinson, Dr. L. W. Jones, Mr. J. T. D. Pyles, Mr. E. W. V. Kuehn and Mr. G. B. Maxwell, all of the United States.

Pastor Russell opened his address by remarking that although the International Bible Students Association, which appointed the Committee of which he was Chairman, held a British Charter and might be supposed by some to make a full or partial report in London of its findings, he expected that they would be disappointed. The Committee felt that it about it make but one report, and advice received indicated that considerable preparation had been made for the Committee's reception in New York City on Sunday, March 31.

However, said Pastor Russell, things are marvelous, today, and with the wonderful facilities for communications, Brethren as well as the people of the United States and Canada, will receive the report of practically the same time—through hundreds of their prominent newspapers.

VERY SIGNIFICANT TEXT.

His text was this: "God hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell upon the face of the earth; and hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitations, that they should seek the Lord, if hap y they might feel after Him and find Him." (Acts xvii. 26, 27.) Hap ened—

Our text is taken from Saint Paul's address to the Athenians, whom he found so religiously inclined that they had erected an idol to every known deity and then one bearing the inscription, "To the unknown God." The words of my text have been repeatedly borne in upon my mind in my sojournings of the past four months. I realized that I perceived the thoroughness of the division of the human family as a result of the confusion of human language. True and again the Apostle's statement that God had "determined the bounds of their habitations" impressed me.

Our text explains the matter: It was of God; and we will endeavor yet see more particularly than now how it worked some good for all—staying the downward tendency of sin.

OF ONE BLOOD ALL NATIONS.

My wider contact with humanity impressed the Apostle's declaration that our various nationalities are all of one blood—or are of one original parentage. And in this scientists, usually wholly out of accord with the Bible, agree. They do not claim that our race evoluted from many monkeys, but merely from one pair. It seems strange indeed to me that some of these learned gentlemen so persistently bend their efforts to antagonize the Bible—endeavoring to prove a human evolution in conflict with the Bible declaration that God created man in His own image—likeness—and that the present diversities of degradation are all results of Adam's fall from Divine favor, through disobedience, under the sentence of death.

Even if some division of our race do bear a stronger resemblance than others to the ape, this is surely not scientific proof that they evoluted from the ape. Just as reasonable might we argue the reverse, that they are a more depraved section of humanity. But we do not so rule it. On the contrary, the most savage people seem to have a mental organism capable of quite a considerable development under favorable conditions, both in a few years.

Indeed, when we consider the inferior station of women in all the heathen nations, and the thankfulness of the mother's mind and her dejection and impoverishment and the tendency of these to block her offspring, we do not wonder at the sad faces of many of these heads, both male and female. Indeed, on the contrary, we are astonished as we compare some of the lowest types of Christendom with some of the degraded types of heathendom—surprised that the difference is not greater. The explanation for it all is that we have not had the true type of Christianity. Our Christianity has been so mixed with superstition and so impregnated with heathenism, taken as a whole, in the four hundred millions of Christendom, is a hybrid thing—a slander upon the name Christian and upon the teachings of Christ.

And, by the way, I remind you of Saint Paul's explanation of the degradation of the heathen as set forth in the first chapter of his Epistle to the Romans. He tells us most distinctly, as the Old Testament does, that man originally knew His Creator and was in fellowship with Him, but that he gradually slipped away from this into greater and greater depths of degradation, mental, moral and physical. Let me read Saint Paul's words: "When they knew God, they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds and fourfooted beasts and creeping things." (Contrary to Divine instructions they image not that the recognition of God in all these various creatures would increase their reverence for Him and them better and more thoughtful of the lower creatures. But herein they were foolish.) Wherefore, God also gave them up to uncleanness, through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonor their own bodies between themselves. " " " And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not proper."—Rom. 1, 21-28.

"FEEL AFTER GOD AND FIND HIM."

But the feature of our text which most particularly impresses me is Saint Paul's declaration that God determined and appointed in advance the times of these nations—when they should be brought in contact with the light of Divine Truth, to the intent that the reverential quality, shorn of all in the race, might exercise itself and feel after the true God and haply find Him.

We see that in Divine providence the force on the Gospel first typified in Palestine spread westward and northward, through Europe, and still westward to America. It, indeed, has been the torch of civilization. No other power in the world possesses the dynamic force of the Gospel Message, in proportion as it is received in its purity it breaks the fetters of ignorance and superstition. It sets men free. It declares, as does our text, the oneness of the human family—that the entire human family are by nature brothers. It tells that God is no respecter of persons and that the same laws of right and wrong apply to kings and princes, bishops and clergy, that apply to the humblest members of the race, and that all must give an account to the great Creator sooner or later.

This feature of the Gospel Message has been the igniting spark for all our civilization. But, alas, the combination of this civilization with the innate selfishness of the unregenerate produces a human type which is dangerous, because of its higher intelligence and unrestrained sweep of ambition and imagination combined with a fallen nature born in sin and shapen in iniquity and continually tending toward selfishness. In other words, a man wholly ruled by selfishness is dangerous to his fellows in proportion to his education and enlightenment. He knows, better than his heathen neighbor, how to take advantage of the circumstances and conditions of life, for he is lifted mentally to a higher plane.

CONDITIONS NOW CHANGING.

Saint Paul in our text declares that God has predetermined "times" associated with His dealings with the nations and in bringing to them the Gospel. We have already remarked the Divine order and time in connection with the call of the "elect" Church—a "little flock"—called out of every nation, people, kindred and tongue, to be the Redeemer's associates in the Messianic Kingdom which is to bless Israel and all the nations. We believe that this election of the Church's class is about complete and that soon thereafter God's Kingdom, the reign of righteousness, the world's Judgment Day, will begin.

It should not surprise us, therefore, to find great changes imminent amongst the peoples of the whole world. The bounds of human habitations and the barriers of language are rapidly yielding because of the other times of Divine appointment which have been reached, viz., the period mentioned in Daniel's prophecy as the "Time of the End." (Dan. xii. 4.) And here we must remind you afresh that the "time of the End does not mean the end of time. It merely signifies the time for the ending of the Gentile order of things, that a new order of things, the Messianic Kingdom, may be substituted. Twenty-five centuries ago God determined the time and appointed it, and gave us four very important proofs by which to identify it. Let us examine these.

(1) The first sign of the Time of the End was to be "many shall run to and fro." How wonderfully this prophecy is fulfilled before our eyes today! Its fulfilment has been in progress especially for fifty years. And it is less than eighty years since the first locomotive was built. The nations, first separated by diverse languages, kept well within the bounds of their habitations for many centuries until now; and now suddenly we have a running to and fro in fulfilment of this prophecy which is startling. Not various nations and languages are being scattered all over the earth.

(2) The next step in the prophecy marking the Time of the End of this age is, "Many shall be overthrown, and." This general increase of education amongst all classes is a logical result of the commingling of humanity and the lessons of comparison and competition being learned. Suddenly, as though in obedience to the Divine command, nation after nation has made schooling free; and not content with this, has made it compulsory; and this spirit is spreading to Oriental lands. The whole world is waking up! Person rights and national rights are everywhere being demanded. The schools of today are said to be turning out a million graduates in the English language every year. The Chinese also are introducing English schools. What will be the result? Enlightenment? Yes! Godliness? No! Contentment? No! Dissatisfaction, war, strife, anarchy, are coming to the world by leaps and bounds as a result of general education, and of the breath of Liberty, because not backed by reverence for God and a knowledge of and submission to His will. Japan, China and India are but merely waiting for a spark to start a conflagration—anarchy.

DESTRUCTIVENESS OF HIGHER CRITICISM.

And as far Europe and America, the conditions there are the same, for what faith the masses did have in God and in the Bible is being rapidly undermined by the theories of Higher Criticism and Evolution which are advanced from the colleges and seminaries and pulpits, and are leading clergy, that apply to the humblest members of the race, and that all must give an account to the great Creator sooner or later.

(3) The third item indicative of the Time of the End of this Age is that "The wise shall understand;" not the worldly wise, but those wise toward God. And so we find it today. While the great and the learned and the masses are rapidly drifting into heathenish darkness, away from the Bible, God's saintly few, of every nation and of every denomination, are gradually seeing more and more clearly by the teachings of the Scriptures and rightly themselves more and more of the creeds of men which for centuries have helped to blind and to stumble and to make the Divine character and the Divine Word appear inconsistent and unreasonable, and to separate God's children into six hundred different sects and shreds. These creeds are now being seen in their true light by the saints and are being discarded—smashed.

(4) As a result of the fulfilments of Nos. 1 and 2, we see prophecy progressively. No. 4: "There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." That time of trouble, as already intimated, is now coming up on the horizon, of every nation. It comes in the wake of an unsanctified knowledge. It would mean the utter wreck of all of our civilization were it not for the deposition of the Kingdom of God's dear Son, for which we have long waited and prayed. "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Our Lord, speaking of this trouble, declared: "Unless those days were shortened there should be no flesh saved." But for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened"—because of the "elect" and the Kingdom which they will establish, that great "time of trouble" will be cut short—will not be allowed to work out the terror at first apprehended.

THE HOPE OF THE WORLD.

I am returning from heathendom fully convinced that the hope of the world is exactly what God's Word declares, namely, that Messiah's Kingdom. Unless that Kingdom comes, and comes soon, the world will be in the most terrible plight it has ever known. But my confidence in the Word of God and in the promise of the Kingdom "under the whole heaven" grows stronger every day. The Bible, once a sealed Book, once apparently contradictory, once assumed to be in harmony with the creeds, and their very foundation, I now see to be the most wonderful Book in the whole world. It merely needed the light now due to God's people to shine upon its pages, to scatter on night and mark as to truly sing, "Wonderful things in the Bible I see!"

The three wonderful things of the Bible which I would wish to impress upon you at this time are: The Justice of God, in permitting a death penalty to come upon our race as a punishment for sin; (2) The Mercy of God, like the wideness of the sea, which is making provision for Adam and every member of his race to return to Divine favor and everlasting life, if they will—otherwise, to be remanded into Death—"everlasting destruction."

(3) If there could be a more wonderful thing than the general provision for humanity, restitution to human perfection and an earthly floor and all that was lost by Adam and provided for in the redemption at Calvary—that still more wonderful thing is "the exceeding riches of God's grace in His kindness toward us in Christ Jesus." Ah, what wondrous love God is manifesting toward this specially called class, to whom He is selecting the Bride of Christ. Truly, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things God hath in reservation for those who love Him." But God hath revealed them unto us by His spirit; for the spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

This wonderful provision for the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, is glory, honor, immortality—joint heirship with her Lord in His glorious Station and association with Him in His glorious works of blessing, first, the nation of Israel, and secondarily, through them, all the nations of the earth, according to the Divine promise. For such a hope, surely, "no trials can daunt us." For such a glory surely we may well, if necessary, "sail through bloody seas!" For such a crown surely we may well consent to earthly advantages and good things, privileges and opportunities and honors, but as loss and dross, "that we may win Christ and be found in Him."

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Georgia, March 16.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

The Tribune is still appreciated by me as the greatest labor paper published.

It shows the solution to all labor difficulties, as well as all other difficulties which beset the human race, and it is certainly cause for great rejoicing to know that the time is so near when the remedy will be applied, as Pastor Russell's sermons so clearly point out. God bless Pastor Russell as he heralds the Glad Tidings of Great Joy around the world and God bless the Tribune for putting the sermons in attractive form, and in print that all of the poor down-trodden of the people down here are so drunk with the wine of mystic Babylon" (Rev. 17: 2, 5, 6) that they are too sorry to hear that their relations which died outside of Christ are not roasting in fire and brimstone, but there are some of us who have a little tender spot in our hearts and we are greatly relieved to know that even the heathen are in the time" to hear of "The Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world." And by the way last Sunday I was told in some of these ever noticed that John did not say—Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the Church, but the sins of the world.

Perhaps some dear people who like to think of most of their relations being tormented throughout eternity may think we are "Christian bashful," but anyway we thank God that Pastor Russell has brought this comforting message to our ears, and has cleared the character of our loving Heavenly Father from the stain our creeds by well-meaning ancestors placed against it. Therefore we greatly enjoy the Tribune with its clear cases and its pure message from the fountain of all Truth. I should be glad indeed if I might do more to increase its circulation, but while I may be seeking in few ways opportunity to do so, like you to know I am always ready to speak a good word for the Tribune, and perhaps I am fortunate enough to file for more subscribers than would appear from your list.

Very respectfully yours,
E. S. MASON.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Inclosed find check for renewal of another year's subscription for your paper. I wish to express to you my admiration of the general tone of your paper. One of few which I permit house room for my children to read, and especially indorse the policy you pursue in featuring religious matter as you do in your columns. You have certainly a fine taste or discrimination of sermons which or by far the best I have ever heard from public or press. It seems to me that when such marvelous light is thrown on the Bible that exhumes from the Bible. And it shows that this man Russell, whoever he is, must be a man high favored of God, a man with a clean heart and head. And I also believe that those God-sent messages of his present word in your welcome paper are doing very much for the lifting of the veil of unbelief and superstition in this present evil day. I am sure very many more will search who have long ago lost the true way of interpreting the Bible in a accurate way as the truth is set forth in an inte' lligent way; also loving way in that paper of yours. I notice particularly that it is man Russell speaks about all of the good things and rejoices the unscriptural church methods and practices without gloves on. It seems to me every man who is not in thinking brain who is in the habit of using reason and justice, also comparing with God's Word, must speak at once see in the reading of these wonderful sermons in your paper the beautiful harmony in God's word from cover to cover. Oh, I am so glad I ever subscribed for your paper. Some more I read those sermons the more I like man Russell's opinion—to me as one of God's holy prophets and teachers, and a God-fearing man at that, not trying to rob God of any of His rors as is the habit of so many of our day. I also enjoy the Question Box methods in your paper. I have learned very much through those questions and answers and have been specially interested just as present in regard to the Foreign Missions investigation. I am glad to enjoy the Question Box, it bringing out thoughts that are very helpful.

I am forwarding today through the Watch Tower three new subscriptions and my own. Wishing you continued success, I am cordially yours.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It may be interesting to the Tribune readers to know what one honest preacher has to say about Pastor Russell and his work and works. I therefore inclose herewith a copy of an clipping from the Paxton, (Ill.) Daily Record and leave it to your good judgment as to whether your time and mine is in conformity on this matter. I have often wondered why Pastor Russell's opponents and enemies do not meet the arguments with scripture texts instead of mere ridicule. It is because they have the facts after inability to cope with him on his authority? It seems so. Ridicule is the weapon of the coward or the defeated one.

Faithfully yours,
J. A. HOHNET.

A WORD FOR ELDER RUSSELL.

J.W. S. Garlouch, Pastor Christian Church, Bloomington, Ill.:

I have read a number of articles in the Christian Standard during the past few months concerning Millenial Matters as taught by Elder Russell. We have all heard the criticism of the Pilgrim Fathers, how having left their own country and endured all sorts of hardships for the sake of religious freedom, they themselves became the worst of bigots and persecutors of those who later disagreed with them. The treatment accorded Elder Russell by the disciples of Christ is very similar to the action of those early fathers. Since reading Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures," the first and fifth volumes more than once, I have read all the articles and books against his teachings I could find. In not a single instance does the writer reply in the same Christian spirit which characterizes Russell's writings. In some instances the writer resorted to the only weapon left to the man without an argument—ridicule. Others either willfully misrepresent his teachings or do not know what he does teach. Any rule they do not touch upon the real subject matter of his "Studies" but attack some minor subject that does not matter if would not have a matter of faith but as being of a more or less speculative character.

For my mind, Elder Russell presents the most Scriptural, clear and soul-satisfying conception of the person of Jesus I have ever found or read. The same is true of man, his creation, his depravity, his fall, his ransom, his due redemption, the gospel of Jesus Christ, and many more dieties. Now if any good brother feels that Elder Russell's books are doing the Church of Christ harm, let him read his books (ex six studies) carefully, prayerfully, once or a dozen times if he feel so, until he knows he has the authors thought, challenging every doctrine thought until it is proven by the open Book, then just as carefully, prayerfully, and with the Christian spirit that characterizes Elder Russell, let him take up his task. And, in a logical, Christian way, step by step, show his brethren that the teaching of Elder Russell is incorrect. Then will he have something worth while. But so long as Elder Russell is attacked in the present manner, no one who has had the "Studies" will be convinced of the error therein if error there be. I am willing to call all that I have in this world that Christian people include, and all will be necessary, to solicit money from him for the Lord's work—it will be forthcoming without solicitation. It would seem that you sit some brother able to present the gospel and defend the truth as he knows that does this work as well as Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures" is worth a million. Look for the beam, not outward for the mote and let the "Studies" continue to do the work they were prepared for, they are not able to accomplish. Give us a Scriptural square foot.—Paxton Ill. Daily Record.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We continue to receive your paper with pleasure, finding it a strong word of Truth and comfort, especially as given in the sermon column by Pastor Russell.

As we see the great drama of life and God's dealings in the world and among the nations, longing for they know not what—how glad we are to see the new and clear light of the Kingdom of Messiah just ahead, which will bring blessings to the who're waiting creation. In view of all this, I feel to wish "God speed" to all earnestly participating in heralding the good news for all people.

May you continue to help the good work on in your publication.

Sincere y yours,
F. W. CHANDLER.

WILLIAM H. JEFFERY, PEN ARGYLE, PA.

Your paper through the Watch Tower and wish to say that I greatly appreciate the manner in which you are publishing the sermons of Pastor Russell, the large clear type making the reading much easier than in any of the papers I have seen which publish the sermons.

Yours truly,
S. E. CLARK.

Ohio, March 15.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I appreciate your valuable paper very much, especially on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons, and expect to be a subscriber to your grand paper as long as they are continued.

Yours very respectfully,
BAIN MATTHEWS.

Germany, March 2.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

As a reader of your paper I must express my opinion of the grand way of dealing out the holy good. It brings grand results in the Sunday schools, looking over the questions with answers and especially the hearty and heartfelt outspoken words of our Brother Russell. We Germans have no newspaper explaining so thoroughly although we have the true words of our Brother Russell and his sacred books, and we are glad to see the progress he is acknowledgment of the healing plans of the present times.

Wishing you success in your labors to further the work of our Lord and divine Jesus Christ.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Some time ago we began to receive the Tribune, which was subscribed by sent to us by a friend. We are more than pleased with it and sure we will never want to be without it as long as it contains Pastor Russell's Sermons in such clear, large type. We take several papers which contain the sermons but none of them have so many qualities to recommend them to us as does the Tribune. We are especially pleased with the Question Box department and in fact we are pleased with the whole paper.

Yours for truth,

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have been receiving your paper for past year through the kindness of friends, and now that I see the Tribune has nearly expired I am renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society of Brooklyn, N. Y. I like the Tribune very much especially the sermons by Pastor Russell and the other religious reading which recognize as the Truth. After I read it I send it to a dear sister who has weak eyes, as the type is so clear and readable that she enjoys it much. How glad we are that the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ is so near at hand.

Sincerely yours,
E. D. HAYES.

I therefore inclose herewith a copy of an clipping from the Paxton, (Ill.) Daily Record and leave it to your good judgment as to whether your time and mine is in conformity on this matter. I have often wondered why Pastor Russell's opponents and enemies do not meet the arguments with scripture texts instead of mere ridicule. It is because they have the facts after inability to cope with him on his authority? It seems so. Ridicule is the weapon of the coward or the defeated one.

Faithfully yours,
J. A. HOHNET.

A WORD FOR ELDER RUSSELL.

J.W. S. Garlouch, Pastor Christian Church, Bloomington, Ill.:

I have read a number of articles in the Christian Standard during the past few months concerning Millenial Matters as taught by Elder Russell. We have all heard the criticism of the Pilgrim Fathers, how having left their own country and endured all sorts of hardships for the sake of religious freedom, they themselves became the worst of bigots and persecutors of those who later disagreed with them. The treatment accorded Elder Russell by the disciples of Christ is very similar to the action of those early fathers. Since reading Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures," the first and fifth volumes more than once, I have read all the articles and books against his teachings I could find. In not a single instance does the writer reply in the same Christian spirit which characterizes Russell's writings. In some instances the writer resorted to the only weapon left to the man without an argument—ridicule. Others either willfully misrepresent his teachings or do not know what he does teach. Any rule they do not touch upon the real subject matter of his "Studies" but attack some minor subject that does not matter if would not have a matter of faith but as being of a more or less speculative character.

For my mind, Elder Russell presents the most Scriptural, clear and soul-satisfying conception of the person of Jesus I have ever found or read. The same is true of man, his creation, his depravity, his fall, his ransom, his due redemption, the gospel of Jesus Christ, and many more dieties. Now if any good brother feels that Elder Russell's books are doing the Church of Christ harm, let him read his books (ex six studies) carefully, prayerfully, once or a dozen times if he feel so, until he knows he has the authors thought, challenging every doctrine thought until it is proven by the open Book, then just as carefully, prayerfully, and with the Christian spirit that characterizes Elder Russell, let him take up his task. And, in a logical, Christian way, step by step, show his brethren that the teaching of Elder Russell is incorrect. Then will he have something worth while. But so long as Elder Russell is attacked in the present manner, no one who has had the "Studies" will be convinced of the error therein if error there be. I am willing to call all that I have in this world that Christian people include, and all will be necessary, to solicit money from him for the Lord's work—it will be forthcoming without solicitation. It would seem that you sit some brother able to present the gospel and defend the truth as he knows that does this work as well as Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures" is worth a million. Look for the beam, not outward for the mote and let the "Studies" continue to do the work they were prepared for, they are not able to accomplish. Give us a Scriptural square foot.—Paxton Ill. Editor National Labor Tribune:

We continue to receive your paper with pleasure, finding it a strong word of Truth and comfort, especially as given in the sermon column by Pastor Russell.

As we see the great drama of life and God's dealings in the world and among the nations, longing for they know not what—how glad we are to see the new and clear light of the Kingdom of Messiah just ahead, which will bring blessings to the who're waiting creation. In view of all this, I feel to wish "God speed" to all earnestly participating in heralding the good news for all people.

May you continue to help the good work on in your publication.

Sincere y yours,
F. W. CHANDLER.

POPULAR MECHANICS

MEASURES PULSE BEATS.

Ingenious Device That Records Inward Pressure of the Blood.

This little apparatus, recently placed on the market by a maker of scientific instruments, serves to measure both the pulse beats and the internal pressure of the blood. The instrument comprises a small tube provided with a slender spring carrying a small disk at its upper end. When the lower end of the spring is applied to the pulse the small disk oscillates in accordance with the number of beats.

In using the instrument to measure blood pressure as well as pulse beats, a second tube and its spiral spring are slipped over the first tube, as shown in the illustration. At the top of this second tube is a graduated quadrant, the hand of which points to zero when the spring tube carries the tip to its actual position. After finding the position of the pulse and applying the bottom of the second spring to it the outside tube is gradually pushed downward over the inner one, the spring carried by the former bending more and more compressed, until the disk showing the pulse beats ceases to oscillate. At the instant the oscillation of the disk ceases the pressure applied in pushing the outer tube down over the inner equals the internal pressure of the blood, which is indicated by the hand on the quadrant.

MACHINE MEASURES BLOOD PRESSURE.

USEFUL FLOOR POLISHER.

Homemade Contrivance That Is Cheap and Easily Made.

An efficient and cheap floor polisher may be readily constructed in the following manner: Make a block about 4 by 6 by 12 inches, or the exact size may be determined by holding it around the household mittens, as these are used to give weight and pressure. The handle, which is attached to a bar across the middle of the back, should be at least two and one-half inches wide for the blocked end and should be sandpapered where it is grasped by the hands. A half strap-hinge is preferable, with the strap pair fastened to the handle. The bottom of the pol-ish is covered with a piece of brussels carpet.

In use it is well to set the polisher on a soft piece of cotton or flannel cloth, which may be readily renewed when least soiled.

A more sightly polisher may be made by filling the box with pieces of old iron or lead, tightly packed with paper to prevent rattling, and attaching a cover over the top. The handle may be hinged directly to this cover by means of a full strap hinge.

Silk Cotton Tree Fiber.

All the fiber plants of Java and many from the Philippines, Siam, etc., including sisal, agli, pineapple fiber, bananas fiber, cocoanut fiber, jute, cotton, kapok and others, were exhibited recently. One exhibit showed the uses of java vegetable jute, kok and cotton from the very first stage of preparing the fiber to the finishing of the woven cloth. Kapok is the silky fiber surrounding the seeds of the silk cotton tree, one of the noblest trees of the tropics. It is extensively used in stuffing mattresses and also in filling life preservers, for which latter use it is especially valuable, as it will support a greater weight in water than any other substance used for this purpose. A piece of pressed kapok will support thirty-six or thirty-seven times its weight.

Lighting Panama Canal.

The Panama canal engineers are trying to harness the sun for the job of lamplighter. In the erection of warning lighthouses along the banks of the canal will be installed copper cylinders exposed to the sun. When the sun rises in the morning and the rays fall upon these cylinders the latter will expand and close valves that admit fuel gas to the burners. As night approaches and the sun's rays diminish in power the cylinders will contract and again turn on the gas, which will be ignited by small pilot jets. Thus a considerable economy will be realized in the hire of light tenders and in the consumption of gas.

Eyesight of Mice.

How much does a mouse see? To look at a mouse one would think that it might consist for a great deal in its life, but experiments go to show that this is only true within certain limits. Mice are good at distinguishing different degrees of illumination and different colors (preferring red and yellow to blue and green), and they are quick to detect movements, but they have little sense of form and little binocular vision. Altogether study shows that the rodus has no "rods" and no "fovea."

Saturn's Rings.

A Norwegian scientist has advanced the theory that Saturn's rings are electrical phenomena, produced by the radiation of luminous particles from the planet, which constantly renews itself.

WORLD'S HIGHEST DAM.

Immense Lake to Be Formed For Irrigation Purposes in Idaho.

Building the highest dam in the world, owning and operating a railroad and creating the largest reservoir in existence are three of the present activities of Uncle Sam, says Popular Mechanics. The railroad was constructed by the reclamation service. It is of standard gauge, twenty-two miles long and runs between Arrowrock and Boise City, Ida.

The necessity for it was the same that has caused Uncle Sam to do many unprecedented things in connection with the big irrigation projects in the west. Many of these are located in the desert, and it is necessary for the government to build roads, telegraph and telephone lines, run hotels and department stores and, in this last instance, to build a railroad to get men and material to the scene of work.

The big dam that is being put in on the Arrowrock project in Idaho will be 351 feet high and will cover an acre of ground. It is in a narrow section of the Boise canyon, about seventy miles above Boise City. The site was selected only after long search. There were several drillings and pit diggings before bedrock was struck, ninety feet below the surface of the river.

Four or five years will be consumed in construction. The top will be 25 feet wide and 1,000 feet long, with a roadway which will be surrounded by a parapet on each side. The dam itself will back up a lake of water that will contain 250,000 acre-feet, and the reservoir is full the water will be drawn off through gates near the top, as the level of the water in the lower gates will be opened, so that these outlets never will operate under an excessive head of water.

The one place where there will be a maximum head will be the penstock line will be put in to run the turbines at the foot of the dam. There will be need for much electric light and power in connection with the work itself and a generating electric plant will be constructed so that it can be enlarged as the needs for power develop. The manufacture of electric power for sale. This is a feature that produces a steady income for several of the big irrigation works.

Formation of Bog Iron.

The organisms commonly denoted as bacteria are a remarkable class not only as regards the intensity of the actions which they are capable of exercising despite their small size, but also as regards their astonishing variety and versatility. Thus, for instance, bacteria played a very important role in the deoxygenation that led to the production of the coal measures of our earth. A peculiar group of bacteria is also actually "iron bacteria." These live in highly ferruginous water and have peculiar power of extracting the iron from the water, iron is contained in water in the form of ferrous carbonate, and it is this which is consumed by the bacteria, which convert it into ferric hydroxide. When these bacteria die they sink to the bottom of the water and accumulate there in a reddish brown layer. It is now considered established that the formation of bog iron is due to these bacteria, and it is from them we trouble at times in municipal water mains, sometimes even causing their complete obstruction.

Power From the Tide.

According to the Electrical Engineer, an engineer named Prin has erected a plant for generating power for Schemnitz, Hollebeck by means of the ebb and flow of the tide. About three years ago he began operations between Hastings and the suburb of Saint Leonard, strand, in the North sea. At present the island is being connected with the mainland by two dikes, between which a high water reservoir with an area of 1,500 acres and a low water reservoir half as big again. The flow of water from these reservoirs will drive the turbines, and there will always be a head of water in one or other above the level of the sea at the time. The sludge from the reservoirs will be used as manure. The turbines will drive continuous current dynamos. The electrical works proper will be begun in the spring of the present year.

Canadium, the New Metal.

The new metal, which has been quite properly named canadium, was first found in an igneous dike occurring in the Granite Poorman gold mine near Nelson, B. C., and has since been found in many other dikes of the same character throughout a zone of some fifteen miles in width. These dikes extend several miles without a break and in many cases show very fair assays, running from one to two pennyweights to the ton of ore. Three of the dikes canadium is of greater proportions, but not always, although it is generally present with the platinum.

The Price of Platinum.

The high price of platinum, which has risen from about $100 a pound to nearly $730 per pound at the present time, is not altogether due to its scarcity, but also to the fact that almost the whole world's supply comes from the deposits in the Ural mountains and that this supply is completely controlled by two men. These men are Prince Demidoff and Count Schuwaloff, who fix the price to suit themselves.

PORTABLE FARM MOTOR.

Easily Moved Electrical Machine For General Agricultural Work.

The extreme convenience of electricity as a motive power for the many small machines used in agricultural work has not as yet been fully recognized. The cost of installing and maintaining numerous small motors, each of which is in use only occasionally, is one of the chief hindrances, but one which would soon disappear if the question of supplying a single portable motor for all the miscellaneous work of the farm became more general.

A motor suitable for such work has been recently brought out by a foreign firm. The motor, which is of the semi-inclosed type of from two to six horsepower, according to the work to be done, is mounted on a light angle iron frame supported on two wheels. Two pulley handles are provided at one end of the two wheel truck to aid the operator in moving it. The breadth between wheel centers is only about seventeen inches, so that it can be drawn along the narrowest paths or passages. The motor, as constructed, weighs only about fifty pounds fall on the handles. The motor is provided with ample pulleys and gearings, enabling belt speeds ranging from 1/2 to 1,800 feet per minute.

A portable machine of this type is obviously readily applicable to work of the most varied kinds, including the driving of threshing machines, chaff cutters, winnowing machines, crushers, sewage pumps, whisperesses, mills, hoists, hand saws, circular saws and the like, practically any of the machines met with on a farm.

UNIQUE MOTOR SLEIGH.

Machine Propelled by Revolving Winged Cylinders.

A type of motor sleigh herewith illustrated employs a very unique form of propulsion. The body of the sleigh, which is an ordinary sleigh in its standard design, is supported on runners fore and aft, the forward runners being movable to steer the vehicle. Between the rear runners are a pair of cylinders formed with helical flanges of opposite pitch.

These two worms are revolved in opposite directions by the motor to which they are geared by a two to one gear. As they rewire the worm thread digs into the snow and drives the vehicle forward. The worms are more pressed into the snow by means of a pair of springs, as shown in one of four illustrations. These springs serve to take up any inequality in the roadway and also compensate for variations in the hardness of the material over which the vehicle is traveling. To allow for the flexible mounting of the worms they are connected by means of Cardan joints to the motor. The brake of this vehicle consists of a pair of forked levers, which span each of the rear runners and are provided with spikes adapted to dig into the snow when the levers are operated by the brake pedal. A speed of thirty-one miles per hour has been obtained by this curious motor sleigh.

Glass Mirrors Ancient.

That the ancients did not exclusively use mirrors of polished metal, as generally believed, has just been proved by the finding of fragments of the glass mirrors in a graveyard at Latbach, Austria. They are said to date from the second or third century.

We feel the loss if we lose one of those valuable sermons of Pastor Russell. The question Box is also very interesting, also the Sunday School Lesson. It is for these that we take the Tribune. Indeed, we enjoy its labor news, its literature on all subjects treated and its nice clean print. The Lord wil bless such honest efforts.

Yours truly,

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am just in receipt of notice of sending in to the W. T. office another subscription to your paper, given because of the many excellent articles therein found in your paper. The longer we take your paper the more we admire the many true gems in the Question Box, the Sunday School Lessons and best of all Pastor Russell's Sermons.

It has certainly been very interesting to follow his trip around the world and imagine the effect his gospel of Glad Tidings must have produced among those who have been told that Christ taught the God-denying doctrine of eternal torment.

How glad we were that these people sitting in darkness have heard at last of the true light which shall lighten in the near future every man that cometh into the world.

But while every footstep follower of Jesus must have been interested and glad, the other day when we perused that she was a very solemn trip. Those who have not yet learned or thought have realized that there was nothing of the "Hooray, hooray" type about it, that it did not resemble the "you bet" variety that Pastor Russell had not thought of "roaring" and that it was not best described in a metre biting the jingle "When Johnny Comes Marching Home."

The Lord has given Pastor Russell a great privilege and it behooves every true Christian to follow in his pray that he may be given strength to bear the suffering that goes with that privilege.

Praying that God may bless you, Mr. Editor, for your share in publishing the Glad Tidings, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
E. WARD.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

THE GOSPEL ONLY FOR SINNERS.

Luke i. 31-32—March 24.

"I came not to call the righteous, but sinners."—Verse 31.

THE term "Publican" in Jesus' day was applied to Jews who served the Romish Government as tax collectors in Palestine. The name was a reproach because the Jews held to the Abrahamic promise that the whole world should be blessed by them as God's peculiar people. They held that this meant that they should not only be free from all other governments, but that they should be the masters of the world.

The term "sinner" was applied to all Jews who were careless in respect to the orthodoxy of their day, for the orthodox Jew of that time as well as today took great pride in his religion and boasted of his knowledge. As, for instance, the word "Pharisee" signifies "one set apart by person"—one scrupulously careful in observing the smallest de-Cail of Matthew. tails of the Law. There was not a single breach between these zealous followers of Moses' Law and the mass of the nation who were altogether careless in respect to personal not up to the orthodox standard of carefulness or form, ceremonies, etc.

Our Lord's parables were mostly all gathered from this lower or less orthodox and less educated class of Jews. Because of our Lord's choosing the Publicans and sinners for His parables the Jesus would have been glad to have Him as one of their number, provided that He would have left with them and hold them in their more or less hypocritical pretensions of perfection and holiness. All Jews denounced the claims of the Pharisees as hypocritical, and read the common people pointing out that there was "none righteous, no not one"—that all needed Divine mercy, and that the humble and contrite would be much more acceptable to God than the proud, the self-conceited.

The Disciples Fast Not."

About the first time a fast day was observed by the Pharisees, and also by those who had accepted the teachings of John the Baptist, but Jesus had said nothing to His disciples about fasting. Now the question arose, Why was this? The Savior's explanation was that the time for them to fast would be only in case of the "one man"—Christ—in order that their reproach might be taken away. Fasting days, which in reality are worldly organizations, as they are filled with a worldly spirit, and supported by worldly individuals, are being remembered more and more because of their worldliness, and recognized as they are attempting to be claiming to be "Christian Churches." The "seven women" are taking hold of the "one man." He does not recognize them, as He has but the one Bride, the true Church.

Q.—Who was the serpent? What was its form? In what way did he induce our first parents to disobey the Lord? (W. H. M.)

Answer.—The Genesis account of the seduction of our first parents by Satan is very brief. There is just a sufficient amount of detail given to show how the enlightened the world and death by sin. The Bible is the only book in all the world that goes back to the beginning and intelligently and consistently sets forth the origin of sin and death. After resolutely stating the facts, it does not trouble it about the mode employed by Satan, and the oil of joy for * * * the spirit of heaviness."

The Church a New Creation.

It was during the Jewish age bearers to get a proper focus upon His teachings. They could understand John the Baptist's preaching of repentance and reformation; but when Jesus declared, "The Law and the Prophets were until John; since that time the Kingdom of Heaven is preached," this was so radical a proposition as to be difficult for the masses to grasp. What could be higher than the Law and the Prophets?

Symbolically we must concede that it was difficult for the Jews to understand that before the blessing could come to mankind a new, higher, spiritual kernel, must be selected. By way of emphasizing this thought, our Lord gave a parable, illustrations, saying, No man sews a piece of unshrunken cloth upon an old garment, because the piece that filled the new cloth would pull away the old and increase the difficulty. Likewise, no one would think of putting new wine which had not yet finished its fermentation into old wineskins, whose elasticity had been destroyed. The old wineskins would be burst by the fermentation of the new wine.

So the Apostle Paul drew over a patch upon the Jewish Law, but is a new proposition. And the new wine of the Gospel Dispensation must be put into new wineskins that will be able to stand the stress of the fermentation sure to come. Thus our Lord did not attempt to engraft His teachings upon the Jews, but called out of Judaism a special class, whom the Scriptures denote as "New Creatures in Christ." It is to these that the new wine of the Gospel Message is committed, and these are to experience the fermentation incidental to the preparation for the Kingdom—disciplines and testings.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THE NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE.

Q.—The Scriptures state that God created the earth not in vain. He formed it to be inhabited. (Isaiah xlv. 18.) And also, that the earth abideth forever. (Ecclesiastes i. 4.) This seems to imply that the earth will be populated forever. If this be true, where will they get their supplies from, such as coal, minerals, timber, etc., when the present sources are exhausted? (E. M.)

Answer.—The earth is composed of different elements. These elements, while they may change their forms and disappear from mortal vision, always remain the same elements. No instance has even been known of where one element changed into another. But there is constant change taking place throughout all the realms of nature. Yet, nothing is gained, and nothing is lost. Water changes from a solid form into vapor (steam) and then into invisible vapor (air). Or, the reverse action is reversed. The gases change to vapor the vapor to liquids, and the liquids to solids. We may reason from this that when the coal, minerals, timber, etc., have all been used in their present forms, having been transformed into some other state, they will be utilized in that state or condition. The creative process could no doubt start sternly without exhausting in the slightest degree the original elements. The process of change is always in a circle, and all that mankind will need to do will be to follow the circle around to the starting point and then repeat the process throughout all the years of eternity.

Q.—"And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man." (Isaiah iv. 1.) What is the meaning of this Scripture? (Interested.)

Answer.—In the symbolisms of the Scriptures a woman represents a church. Just as the Church of Christ is said to be the "Bride, the Lamb's Wife," they are symbolized as women. Certain religious systems are symbolized as wicked women. (Revelation xvii. 5.) The number seven is generally symbolical of fullness, or completion, in the expressions of the Bible. Therefore, we have the picture before our minds of a time when the full number, or all of the churches in the case the false churches would be seeking to be united by the name of the "one man"—Christ—in order that their reproach might be taken away. Denominations, which in reality are worldly organizations, as they are filled with a worldly spirit, and supported by worldly individuals, are being remembered more and more because of their worldliness, and recognized as they are attempting to be claiming to be "Christian Churches." The "seven women" are taking hold of the "one man." He does not recognize them, as He has but the one Bride, the true Church.

Q.—Does the religious wave over the country indicate anything, or is it a "flash in the pan?" (Reader.)

Answer.—We believe that it is indicative of much that is important in the welfare of the entire race of mankind. Not that we anticipate that it will result in converting the race to Christianity, or "save the world for Jesus," but that it indicates that mankind in general are longing after the higher and holier things. All honor to the noble men and women who are striving to better human conditions, and who are sacrificing much in their efforts. Their work is really as their Lord, the Bible, has pointed out a more excellent way than all of the religious and reformation movements combined in the first place, the Scriptures foretell that the world will never be converted to Christianity until after the Lord Jesus' second coming. (See the following Scripture.) Secondly, we look for relief to the "last days," or "the time of the end." Matthew xxiv. 37-39; 2 Timothy iii. 1-5; James v. 1-3, 7, 8.) From these statements of the Sacred Writers, we see that the world will not be fully converted to God or Christ at His coming, and will have very little regard for the teachings of the Master when He is here. This is in accord with the Scripture prophecies. In spite of all the missionary efforts put forth, there are fully as many living on the face of heathen in the world to-day than there were a century ago, according to the latest compiled statistics available. What are the conditions in Christendom so-called? There are far more Modernists, Higher Critics and Infidels in all the heathen lands combined. Christians may well pray, "Thy kingdom come," for that is the only hope for the world.

Q.—Please explain 1) Peter iii. 18—"Being put to death in the flesh, but quickened in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own destruction."

Answer.—From the reading of this chapter, it is evident that "these things," referred to by the Apostle are the things pertaining to the three worlds and the three destinies of which he was writing. In II Corinthians xii. 1-4, the Apostle Paul relates how that special visions and revelations had been given him by the Lord, and among them was a view of the "third heaven," and of "paradise." The was a glimpse of "the new heavens and the new earth" mentioned in the 13th verse of this chapter. St. Paul was not permitted to give the details of what he had received to him. Nevertheless these revelations influenced all of his writings and enabled him to give such expressions as were hard to be understood, but which, in the light of subsequent events, are now clearly revealed to the sincere and earnest student of the Scriptures. It is now seen that the details of what he had received have wrested many of the Apostle's statements from their true connection and have caused

80 MORE MINERS KILLED AT WORK

Miners Caught in Death-trap at Jed, W. Va.--One of the Worst Explosions in the History of the State-An Explosion of Gas Given as the Cause--Some Heartrending Scenes.

WELCH, W. Va., March 26.—Eighty-three men are entombed in the mine of the United States Coal & Coke Company, at Jed, three miles from here.

An explosion of gas occurred in the mine at 7:30 this morning. Eighty-six men were then at work. Only three of the number were able to reach the outside.

Following the explosion, afterdamp pervaded the entire workings and it was impossible for any immediate rescue work to be begun.

Deputy State Mine Inspector Arthur Mitchell arrived from Bluefield an hour after the explosion. Miners who had worked during the night and were in their homes were brought to the mine and organized into rescue parties.

Because of the deadly afterdamp, in which no human being can live for an instant, it was impossible for the would be rescuers to get farther than a few hundred feet from the opening.

An appeal for help to the United State bureau of mines is to be sent. It is expected that Chief Holmes of the bureau of mines, will be rushed here with the government rescue crew, which is equipped with an apparatus to enable men to enter all parts of the workings.

Whether any of the 83 men are alive is problematical.

Experienced miners say that there is a chance that some may have escaped the explosion and reached a part of the mine not penetrated by the afterdamp. If this is the case, brattices may have been thrown up by them to prevent the gases from betoming the air. Under these conditions the men could live for several hours and perhaps for days.

It is recalled that at Briceville, Tenn., entombed miners in this way fought the approach of the afterdamp and were rescued more than 48 hours after the explosion occurred.

The entire output of the Jed mine is taken by the United States Steel Corporation. Most of the coal is shipped over the Norfolk & Western railroad to Marion, Ind.

The Jed mine worked day and night shifts, employing in all about 150 men, both white and negroes. It is a small mine and has been operated on a non-union basis. The 150 employes with their families comprised practically the entire population of the town of Jed.

U. S. STEEL EARNED $104,305,465.

While the United States Steel Corporation, in common with all the steel producers, suffered greatly from the depression in the industry for the greater part of 1911, it had a surplus net income for the year of $4,605,434, and its total undivided surplus, according the profit earned by the subsidiary companies, is now $133,681,196.

Its total net earnings for 1911 were $104,305,465as compared with $141,564,780 in 1910. After allowances for depreciation and sinking fund the company had remaining $84,466,267.

In 1910 there was appropriated for additional property, new plants and construction $15,000,000, there was specifically set aside for construction expenditure at Gary, Ind., $10,000,000, and $1,000,000 was held as a reserve fund to cover advance mining and royalties. There were no appropriations of this kind during 1911.

The report makes a summary of the net profit from April 1, 1901, to December 1, 1911. During this period the aggregate net profits were $789,539,751. The company paid out in dividends on the preferred stock $294,634,305, or 7.51 per cent. It has paid out in dividends on the common stock $149,927,382, or 3.9+ per cent.

This leaves a surplus from net earnings of $344,188,215, after deducting $36,092,344 for reserves against mining royalties and other purposes. If this amount there has been appropriated for payment of capital expenditures and special charges $210,434,125.

Chairman Gary, in his report to stockholders, calls attention to the fact that during the year there was appropriated to ordinary repairs and maintenance and extraordinary replacements $14,960,265, while the total appropriation for wear and tear, exhaustion of mineres and obsolescence amounted to $64,134,706.

The decline in the steel industry during the year was reflected in the volume of business, which aggregated $415,148,539, as compared with $793,-961,121 in the preceding year. During 1911 the total number of employes on the payrolls was 196,945, drawing salaries and wages of $163,419,651, as compared with 218,435 in 1910, drawing salaries and wages of $174,955,339.

Subscriptions were received during the year from 30,946 employes for an aggregate of 39,619 shares of preferred and 33,735 shares of common stock. The plan to pay over part of compensation of bonus to be paid subscribers who retain their stock were met with $7.50 per month in addition and $2.50 per share annually for the common stock.

During the year the aggregate tonnage of rolled steel and other finished products shipped by both domestic and export trade amounted to 9,460,163 tons, as compared with 10,727,753 tons in 1910.

After describing the slackening in the domestic demands for the products of the subsidiary companies early in 1911, Chairman Gary says:

"In November, 1911, the substantial buying movement developed, the subsidiary companies' unfilled orders on hand stood at a total of 5,084,763 tons at December 31, 1911. This improvement in business has maintained fairly well since the first of the year and to the date of writing this report. At February 29, 1912, the unfilled order tonnage equalled 5,454,300 tons."

LOOKS LIKE MINE SUSPENSION.

CLEVELAND, O., March 26.—Inability to agree today again marked the attempts of the bituminous coal miners and operators to fix a two-year wage and working agreement to take effect April 1 in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

When the conference adjourned until tomorrow each side stood where it was a week ago, the miners declaring that unless they secured a 10 per cent increase in pay and shorter working hours they would not work after next Sunday midnight, when their present scale expires, and the operators asserting they would not grant the demands.

"We told the men it was useless to keep on repeating the demands, for we do not intend to grant them," said H. M. Taylor, representing the Illinois operators. "It would be better for us to shut down than to grant them."

"We are simply drifting to a suspension of business, if not a strike," said Thomas L. Lewis, former president of the United Mine Workers of America. "No progress has been made."

RAILROADS ASK FOR TIME

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers met recently with the representatives of the Eastern Railroads to discuss the demands for increased wages. After a conference it was decided to adjourn until 25, at the request of the railroads. The question of increased wages was not gone into to any extent, the railroads announcing that they desired further time to consider the matter before making a definite reply.

THE LAND WHERE LABOR RULES.

WHILE she has only between four and five millions of population, Australia is bigger, physically than our country, and is dominated by the Labor party. This party is be not composed exclusively of artisans and day laborers but contains what we in our country would designate as "the middle classes," as well as the wage-earners, in other words, "the masses" run Australia. The recently promulgated platform of the Labor party is interesting, and here are its important features:

Maintainance of a "White Australia." No Japs, Chinese, negroes, or even some of the "shaded" races of Southern Europe are admitted.

Maintainance of land tax. This has had a year's trial. It has not cheapened land to any material extent but it has stimulated the subdivision of large country holdings.

Nationalization of monopolies. No anti Sherman act, no "reasonable" decisions by supreme courts, no indictments, but when you organize a monopoly and begin to squeeze the folks, government takes your monopoly away from you.

Federation by inclusion of the referendum proposals in the Constitution. This means stronger emphasis on national interests and rights as against state rights.

Government insurance. This aims to have the government engage in the fire, life and accident insurance business.

Establishment of sugar refineries, which means the breaking of both eyes of the refinery combination.

And, behold! they propose to have the newspapers quit lying during political campaigns. During Federal and state elections newspaper comment on the issues, every report by a reporter must bear the writer's signature, and every publisher must make public report of all moneys received for publishing matter of a political nature, be the same advertisement, news notices, or editorial comments.

Who are the Labor party of Australia? Oh! they're people from pretty much the same stock from which we ourselves came, and they have a century-old object lesson of our way of doing things. Also they have Labor party is looked upon as the wall between plutocracy that would mercilessly bog everything and socialism that would arbitrarily confiscate and divide everything.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE IS A SMALL MAN, BUT A FIGHTER.

IT may surprise some people who have never seen Senator Robert Marion La Follette to learn that he is not a tall man, as one might suppose him to be from his photographs. In fact, he is about five feet six, stocky and solidly built. His success as a public speaker is not due to his finished oratory any more than to his inches. It is his earnestness and aggressiveness that have enabled him to carry so many audiences with him, and, conjoined with his ability to impress a crowd, his genius for hard work and organization have made him the autocrat of his party in Wisconsin. His friends like to tell a characteristic story of him. Some one once took the pains to repeat to him some of the epithets which his political opponents had showered upon him—poser, actor, crank, fanatic, etc. La Follette grinned during the recital; then he asked, "They never called me a quitter, did they?" This story may have a moral applicable to the Chicago convention, and it may not.

MINERS' EXAMPLE IN BROTHERHOOD.

SOME day, a great poem will be written on the subject of the humble men and women who go on strike, strike, at peril of hardship and even of starvation, for the benefit of their less fortunate brothers and sisters. Take for examp'e the battle for the minimum wage fought by the British coal miners. In addressing the strikers, Premier Asquith said:

"It is a result which you are trying to achieve, not for the purpose of raising the wages of coal miners as a whole, because the great bulk of the miners already get more than the minimum wage you are trying to achieve, but in the interest of those who cannot effectively care for themselves or stand their own reasonable ambition. In that sense, it is an unselfish demand on the part of the great bulk of the miners."

And when the mine owners promptly conceded the demand in several districts, the strikers refused to accept unless the same benefits were conceded to their brothers in all other districts. That is true brotherhood. The men who crawled out of the grimy pits of England in protest against the treatment of those least favored by fortune have their third old Walt Whitman: "I will have nothing that all cannot have the counterpart of on the same terms." When men who are well enough off themselves are ready to suffer and sacrifice in order to pull other men up to a decent standard of living, there's hope of a better civilization. All honor to the high-hearted, true-hearted coal miners of England, Scotland and Wales and to the workers everywhere who sacrifice self for a noble cause.

The entire police force of Somlye, Hungary, has gone on a strike for more pay. At present its members receive $10 a month.

LIVING EXPENSES COMPARED

WASHINGTON, March 27.—In a cable dispatch from London it is stated that G. H. Knibbs, statistician of the Australian government, has prepared an article dealing with the cost of living in Australia and other countries. While it is difficult to secure accurate data on this subject in a world-wide investigation, yet it is claimed that the facts secured are approximately correct. The summary is favorable to Australia, in that it shows that the cost of living in that country is cheaper than in most parts of Europe. In a comparison with Germany, the United States and Australia it is shown that in the average Australian household, when housing, fuel, food, lighting and clothing are provided for, 40.83 per cent of the family income is available for other expenditure, as against 30.76 per cent in Germany and 25.41 per cent in the United States. This margin is designated as "the margin of comfort."

Congressmen Don't Like Report

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Since the issuance of the report on women and child labor in the cotton mills, the North Carolinian delegation in Congress has been severely criticising the department of commerce and labor. It will be remembered that when the report first came out Senator Overman made an effort looking toward another investigation, but for some reason abandoned the idea. The commissioner of the Bureau of Labor maintains that he can produce conclusive evidence that the statements contained in the report are in strict accord with the conditions prevailing in the cotton mills in the territory covered by the investigation. The report is a severe indictment and the members from North Carolina evidently feel keenly in the matter.

W. G. Richards Again On Tribune

William G. Richards, former president of the United Mine Workers of the State of Ohio, and one of the most popular and influential members of that organization in the country, is representing the National Labor Tribune as an advertising solicitor. Mr. Richards was connected with the Tribune several years ago, but resigned to move to Columbus, where he became associated with T. L. Lewis (lately) national president of the miners), in the publication of the Industrial Index. His many friends welcome his return to Pittsburgh, where he will continue his active interest in the affairs of the miners' organization.

CONTEMPT CASE CLOSED AT LAST

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The testimony in the contempt case is all in and the arguments have been concluded. The arraignment of President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, by the attorneys for the court was bitter and vindictive. It is anticipated although there is no means of learning definitely, that the decision will be handed down within thirty days.

At the end of 1910 there were 669 registered trade unions in the United Kingdom, with an aggregate membership of more than 2,000,000. These totals compare with a membership of 211,931 in 155 unions in 1880.

Changes in weekly hours of labor taking effect in Great Britain in 1911 affected 105,537 working people. Of these 4,317 had their hours increased by 12,903 a week, and 101,220 had reductions amounting to 574,140 hours a week.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

British Coal Strike No Nearer Its End. Miners Withstand All Pressure from the Government and the Press--A Clear Statement of Their Demands. What They Will Arbitrate On and What They Will Not--Strike Movement Spreading to Other Countries.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, March 22.—No progress towards a settlement of the great British coal strike is to be reported as yet. To the million miners who have inaugurated, in the French phase, the "war with folded arms," are now to be added quite 750,000 other workers who have been rendered idle in consequence of the diminishing supplies of fuel. Another 200,000 workers are also on three-quarter or half time so that it can be stated that there are at the time of writing 2,000,000 working men and women directly affected by this greatest of all strikes. During the present week the miners, the owners, and the government have been meeting in endless conferences and the most tremendous influence has been brought to bear upon the miners to induce them to modify their attitude.

The whole press of the country with the exception, of course, of that fur its small minority, the labor press, has united to preach to the public morning, noon and night the story of the wickedness of the coal getters who are alleged to stand idly by while the United Kingdom races down the road to industrial ruin and national catastrophe. There is of course no need to exaggerate the gradual creeping paralysis which is spreading over the Nation and the moral effect of this exhibition of industrial strength by one section of the workers of the country must have an enormous and a beneficent influence upon the labor movement in the coming years. The previously outstanding illustration of this kind was the transport and railway workers' strikes last summer which proved that whenever any great section of workers in a great industrial world retires temporarily from active service everything else tends to be put out of gear. Therefore, if the miners' strike is the second great illustration of this and the country's dependence upon the workers has never been more strongly proved.

Everything that can possibly be done to weaken the determination of the coal workers is being thrust forward. Papers of a strongly capitalistic tendency point out to the miners with fatherly affection that their action tends to bring disaster upon all the other unions by throwing so large a number of other workers on the out-of-work benefit funds of their societies. "How can you be so unkind to your fellow unionists as to impose this enormous strain upon their funds," is in effect the deceitful wail. Then the miners are bidden to view the suffering imposed upon the poorest sections of the population owing to the high price of coal which has reached [illegible]. The picture papers print pathetic photographs of working class homes where the [illegible] is [illegible] where there is no money to buy coal [illegible] to buy food. The malicious here is that it has been proved that most of these photographs have been posed specially for the press photographers.

Last there is sounding no one of course would deny, but on just the same upon the working miners whose demands are consciously reasonable and moderate is what would naturally be expected to be the correct first course. The country is now watching with the [illegible] and signs on the miners weakening but an astonishing lack of material to prove it is the only result. The Government has spoken every kind of pacific pressure both upon the labor party in Parliament and upon the miners' delegates assembled in London. The result is nil.

The miners stand firm age-old as ever, with every kind of pressure and their position was expressed in the memorandum addressed to Prem-er Asquith on March 14 in the following terms:

In the event of an agreement being arrived at with respect to the matters dea't with in resolutions 1, 2 and 3 of the Miners' Federation Conference of February 2, would the men be prepared to resume work, leaving the matter referred to in 2 and 4 to be adjusted subsequently.

In order that the real meaning of this memorandum may be understood, it is desirable to indicate the character of the proposals set out by the miners under the numerals mentioned. Resolution 1 applies to the scheduled rates of daily pay fixed for colliers in each of the organization districts of the Federation. It also provides "that no terms can be arranged unless they include the established rates for each district for as laid down in resolution 2." Resolution 2 deals with the provision that no underground workmen shall receive a less wage than five shillings a day except in the Somerset, Bristol and Forest Dean coal fields, while Proposal 3 embodies the workmen's demand for a minimum wage of at least two shillings per day for boys. Proposals 3 and 4 in the workmen's demands state that, in view of the fact that the rates paid for underground workers a ready employed on day work are more complex and difficult to be dealt with generally, the more practical method of dealing with those rates is to leave the matter to districts, with instructions that they shall endeavor to arrange the minimum wage rates locally, and that an

NEARLY 100 KILLED IN MINE.

McCURTAIN, Okla., March 22.—An explosion which it was at first thought had killed 100 men occurred yesterday morning in Mine No. 2 of the Sans Bois Coal Company.

The explosion occurred shortly after nine o'clock. Those on the surface heard a faint rumble and an earthquake shock. When those next to the mouth of the mine reached the opening a cloud of dust and smoke belched forth.

Then came tense moments of waiting for those in the mine. Among them Frank Fields, a miner, was the first to stagger out. He was walking to his home and heard the explosion, he said. He jumped into a side room and the explosion passed and he made his way to the mine opening. Nine other miners escaped through a man-way.

The systematic search of the wrecked mine began early tonight under the direction of Government experts and up to nine o'clock five bodies had been recovered and thirty-five others found. At that hour the rescuers had reached the eleventh level but here their progress was retarded by a mass of coal.

Whether gas or coal dust caused the explosion has not been determined.

Eight of the men who escaped alive were at work in the main stables and made their way to the surface through the passage used for the cars. The first party of volunteers to enter the mine to search for the dead body found it filled with afterdamp. Two of these probably will die.

After their first survey of the wrecked mine Government experts expressed the opinion that all of the men imprisoned are dead and seventy-five coffins were ordered shipped to the pit-head. Mine owners, among them Jno. Bourland, of Fort Smith, has issued an appeal for aid for the families of the victims.

McCURTAIN, Okla., March 24.—Thirty-five men entombed in the Sans Bois mine where an explosion occurred, had not been accounted for up to an early hour today. Twenty-six men were rescued yesterday and 56 bodies were brought to the surface. Rescue parties still are at work harboring the faint hope that possibly more may be found alive.

Fifteen men rescued yesterday were found huddled in a room on the thirteenth level. They rushed there when they heard the explosion and kept themselves alive with an air pump.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

PASTOR RUSSELL ON THE ATLANTIC.

Discourses on Arabia, the Cradle of Mankind—Ancient Garden of Eden. Land Where Our First Parents Had Their Trial, Lost Divine Favor and Were Condemned to Suffer Penalty of Sin—Day Draws Near When the Great Deliverer Shall Lift the Curse and the World Be Blessed.

MID-OCEAN, March 24.—On the Atlantic, speeding homeward, the Foreign Missions Investigation Committee is in communication by wireless. It is understood that arrangements have been made for a public mass meeting in New York's largest auditorium. The Hippodrome, next Sunday afternoon, to hear the report of this Committee respecting its findings. A full report of the same will be given in these columns.

Pastor Russell's discourse on the route was reminiscent of Arabia as the cradle of our Race. His text was: "As all in Adam die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive; every man in his own order"—1 Cor. 15: 22, 23.

THE LAND WHERE MAN LOST LIFE.

Arabia is accredited with being the ancient Eden, eastward in which was the specially prepared Garden where in our first parents had their trial—not for a reward of heaven or a punishment of eternal torment, but for a reward of everlasting life under perfect earthly conditions or for a penalty of death. Here man crossed very good in the image of his Creator, sinned and became the subject of the penalty of sin—"The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Here also in Mount Ararat, on which the ark rested after the flood, and from which came forth the family of Noah to people the earth afresh. Thus was Arabia twice the cradle of mankind.

Here is the fertile Mesopotamia, which Father Abraham left at the Divine invitation, to sojourn in Palestine to the north, under promise to become the heir of Divine favor and the father of the faithful whose new glorified Seed, the great Messiah, has already redeemed the world and is yet to take the Throne of earth and, during the Millennial years, manage sin and death and lift up from degradation and the grave Adam and his race.

This is the same Arabia made famous by the rise of the Arabian Prophet, and where also is the tomb of Mohammed, whose followers rival in numbers the followers of Jesus and still trust in a promise made to Abraham and, like him, look still for the glorious appearing of Messiah. Like the Israelites they are blind to the fact that before Messiah could bless and heal and uplift the world, it was necessary that He redeem them with His own life, and select from amongst men a spiritual class to be His bride and joint-heir in His glorious Kingdom.

And now as the day draws near that the curse shall be lifted from the world, when "the wilderness shall blossom as the rose" and "the solitary place shall be glad," we may well be mindful of the most ancient civilization awaking. The ruins of its ancient cities, Nineveh and Babylon, are yielding to modern research the records of thirty-five hundred years ago, while modern engineers and modern capital are at work upon vast irrigation schemes costing millions of money, which they tell us will make that land fruitful and fertile as the Garden of the Lord. Are we not thus witnesses of the beginning of the long-promised times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began?—Acts 3: 19-21.

When we could more appropriately consider the Divine provision for our race than when considering this land, the Cradle of our Race, where the fall took place, where the ruin began which has filled the earth with sin, selfishness, sorrow and dying? Ah, surely we greatly err when we suppose that a greater penalty for sin was needed or intended by our Maker than the penalty we are experiencing. What more could man lose than our race as a whole has lost? Created in relationship with God as a son and heir of the appropriate blessings of the Almighty Father, Adam and his race lost that precious relationship—lost Divine favor, Divine communion, Divine care, and were plunged into God's condemnation as strangers, aliens, outcasts, tarrying in life merely to fulfill the verdict, "Dying, thou shalt die."

How sternly Divine Justice held to that verdict! How relentlessly, how pitilessly the forces of nature were allowed to play havoc with man in calamities, droughts, famines, pestilences and hereditary disease! For more than two thousand years the great Heavenly Parent showed unkind only His Justice and naught of His Love. And then the first declaration of the Gospel—the first mention of the Seed of promise, by whom all mankind might be blessed through Messiah—release from the bondage of sin and death.

Thus the Law was a pedagogue, a servant, to lead the Jews nearer to the great Teacher, and at Pentecost and subsequently several thousand of them thus led entered the School of Christ —to be His disciples, to walk in His steps, to suffer with Him and later on, in due time, to reign with Him.

Moreover, during the sixteen centuries between Moses and Jesus a saint-ly class was manifested, all of whose names are written in the book of God's remembrance. It is not theirs to be the Bride of Messiah; it is not theirs to be exalted to be members of the Body of Christ, which is the Church, for those members will follow the Head, none of them precede Him.

These Ancient Worthies were not begotten to be Holy Spirit to a new nature, to be new creatures in Christ, but "they had this testimony that they pleased God." They have this scriptural testimony, therefore, that they shall be accounted worthy of "a better resurrection" than the remainder of mankind, although their resurrection will not be with the Bride of Christ—will not be the Chief Resurrection, to spirit nature, spirit bodies, etc. Those Ancient Worthies will come forth from the tomb after the establishment of the Church, after her establishment in glory. They will come forth perfect men, of human nature, the image and likeness of God restored to such, as at first. Great will be their degree of honor as they shall be seed of Messiah as "princes in all the earth," for the blessing of Israel and all of every nation people, restored and tongue.

ABRAHAM'S SEED THE ELECT.

But Abraham was to have a still higher Seed, numerically less, for it is written, "Thy Seed shall be as the stars of heaven, and as the sands of the seashore." That superior Abrahamic Seed, "as the stars of heaven," a spiritual Seed, must be developed and glorified first, before the blessing can come to his earthly seed.

Saint Paul, explaining the situation, says that the Law Covenant was added to fill up the time between Abraham and the proper time for the spiritual Seed, The Christ. It "was added because of transgression"—because sin had abounded in the world and so degraded humanity that it was necessary to fill up a season of trial, to condemn the Law of the Ten Commandments, to take the place of the Divine Law which was originally written in Adam's character. When that was expended in the lessons and likeness of God Adam needed no Tables of Law to teach him right from wrong, even as God needs none.

Saint Paul explains further, saying, Israel could not obtain what they which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded. (Romans xi. 7.) Israel desired to be the Bride of Messiah, to receive the very choicest blessings which God had to give. And Israel got that so far as its people were prepared therefor. The "elect" obtained it—a remnant of Israel, numerically small as compared to the whole, were found upon tocst to be "Israelites indeed in whom was no guile," and these become the members of Messiah's Bride class.

GOSPEL PREACHER FIRST TO JEWS.

That every Israelite indeed might be found the Gospel Message at first was exclusively theirs, and the first Gentile convert, Cornelius, was not admitted to Divine favor in this respect until three and a half years after the cross. Yet, still later, when the Apostles preached the Gospel to every creature, to people of every country and nationality, as well as to the Jew to whom it was originally confined, they still gave the Jew the preference up to the year A. D. 70, when the Jewish polity perished. St. Paul declared this publicly to the Jews, saying, "It was necessary that the Gospel be preached first to you, but seeing ye count yourselves unworthy of the offer of God, we turn unto the Gentiles, for thus it is written in the Prophets."

We see, then, that the nucleus of the elect Church which should become the Bride of Christ at His second coming was Jewish, and that God's favor to the Gentiles was His permitting of them to come in and fill up the predestined number of the elect Church, though only after all worthy Jews had been called and accepted. And now, as Jesus foretold, the Gospel of good news of His coming Kingdom is preached in all the world "for a witness," to gather from every nation, people, kindred and tongue the saintly ones to be sharers with Christ therein, and in the great honor of becoming Messiah's Bride and joint-heir. We are to clearly distinguish between the witnessing of these matters amongst all nations, for the gathering of an elect class, and the blessing of all nations under the kingdom which will come later on. A failure to see this has caused confusion in many minds.

HEIRS OF THE PROMISE.

We must never lose sight of the Israel of this Gospel Message. The ultimate blessings of the Messianic Kingdom, through the Seed of Abraham, will be to all the families of the earth, but, previously, the Divine work is the calling of the Seed of Abraham, which is to do that work of blessing. The promise was not made to all the families of the earth but to Abraham and his Seed. Hence the heirs of the promise are not all the families of the earth, but the Seed of Abraham.

To the saints of Galatia, who had been Gentiles but had accepted Jesus and were trusting to become joint-heirs with God a dear Son in His Messianic Kingdom—the members of the Bride Elect, Saint Paul writes, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Galatians iii. 29.) How strange that we should have lost sight of this great inheritance! With our Lord, as Abraham's Seed, we shall inherit the earth; as it is written, "I will give unto thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession."

No wonder the Apostles frequently reminded the brethren of this great privilege and of the glorious reservation for the faithful. No wonder one of them writes, "All things are yours, for ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." Adam and his entire race are to be turned over to Christ Jesus the Redeemer—purchased by His precious blood. Then we, as His Bride Consort, are to share with Him that great responsibility and to cooperate with Him in bringing order out of present confusion. Satan is to be bound; all the forces of darkness are to be overthrown and restrained. The light of the knowledge of God, as a glorious Sun of Righteousness, is to arise; and its healing beams are to flood the earth, carrying with them life, peace, joy, rest—to the Jew first, and then to every nation, people, kindred and tongue.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Washington, March 19.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to your paper through the Watch Tower and bible society, and I like it. It is a clear print, in which the sermons of Pastor Russell appear. I like your paper in other respects also, but am taking it especially because of the sermons. I am praying for grace to rest upon you and your work and that you may be able to continue it until the night comes when no man can work."

Yours in the Master's service,
DOROTHY R. CLAYPOOL.

Arkansas, March 15.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I come again to thank you for the nice paper that I receive from you each week and also for the Watch Tower Tribune as long as they contain Pastor Russell's Sermon and hand your paper out to others when I get opportunity and ask them to read the sermon, the Question Box is fine and so much help to those who are interested, but have never studied much and thought still more. I also like to ask by V. C. B. was so good that I have copied it and will send it to a Texas paper to be printed. I also requested all who read and felt an interest in subject and sermon and write me, thinking perhaps I might find a grain of wheat.

Yours in the harvest work.
ETHEL TEMPLES.

New York, March 23.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I will renew my subscription for your valuable paper through the Watch Tower and Tract society in a few days. I wish to express my high appreciation of your paper on account of the Bible Truths from Pastor Russell's pen, which is "meat in due season."

Surely you are doing a good work in publishing the sermons and all the good things relating to the Bible. I am anxious to hear more and more of the Foreign Missions Investigation Committee. The Question Box is very instructive and enables us to better understand our Bible. May the Lord bless you and help you to continue the good work "until the night cometh when no man can work."

Yours in the Work of the Lord and in His service.
ANNA A. NEWKIRK.

New York, March 24.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It is with pleasure that I renew my subscription to your wonderful paper, through the Watch Tower office. Your paper is very helpful and instructing to me and others. I enjoy the Question Box and the Sunday School Lessons greatly. Hoping you'll continue to publish the same.

Very truly yours,
E. M. COOMES.

Ohio, March 20.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

Please find enclosed one year's subscription to the Labor Tribune for Ernest Wilkinson. We have been taking your paper nearly a year and are more than pleased. We like the type that is used in printing the sermons for that is the reason we subscribed. The Question Box is fine and trusting that the sermons will continue to appear regularly in your paper.

Yours truly,
W. W. WILKINSON.

Maine, March 17.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

In a few words I wish to express my appreciation of the Labor Tribune. It is such a nice clean paper. I am especially interested in the religious portion of it. I enjoy reading the sermons of our dear Pastor, C. T. Russell, very much. They are always in such a clear type.

I wish to express to you my appreciation for your kindness in continuing my paper, as I was one of the last subscribers to the Tribune at the large fire in Bangor. I will now renew my subscription for one year. Inclosed find Tower Bible and Tract society.

I also enjoy the Sunday School Lessons and the Bible Question Box; they are all so helpful to thinking Bible students.

The Lord bless thee and keep thee, What greetings shall I send you As I think of you today?
Per the wish that I would wish you Goes beyond what I can say;
Yet unspoken thoughts rise heavenward in the silence. When we pray.

I will breathe my intercession
Before God's Altar Throne,
And the best wish I can wish you
Shall be told to Him alone,
And the best thought I can send you
Is from Him, and not my own.

And your name shall be remembered In the blessed presence there
Where remembrances are sacred,
And each memory holds a prayer.
And where loving thoughts shall serve you
In a loving Father's care.

I remain, yours very truly,
MISS MARGARET M. WORDEN.

Minnesota, March 19.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We wish to acknowledge our appreciation of your paper and can assure of our continued support and good wishes at least so long as you so faithfully print Pastor Russell's Sermons.

Yours sincerely,

Editor National Labor Tribune:

The very best newspaper for two in the whole United States, or, for earth for that matter. God bless you, brother, for the immense good work you are doing. Now regarding those two subscript ons, please count them in with your list of Pastor Russell's Friends, and as both of us are paid up subscribers to the blessed Watch Tower, hence the money enclosed pays our subscription to the National Labor Tribune not one year each. And by the way, I expect to subscribe for your paper each year as long as I live, and that paper keeps up the good work of printing our beloved pastor Russell's sermons, the Bible Question Box and the other good things. But I must tell you how I ever came to learn of your grand paper. Well, Lucky I wrote a letter for the Occidental Inquirer, praising the editor for the good stride in which Pastor Russell's sermons was produced, etc., immediately after that letter came out I received a card, and also a copy of your Tribune, sent me by a sister, Vina C. Tatum, of Kearney, Neb. On the next day I received a card stating that a copy of the Labor Tribune was also mailed to me, this card was from a sister, Harriet Sands, of Wilton, Maine, and two days ago I received another copy of the Labor Tribune, sent and marked Brother W. V. Bowyer, of Grove City, O. May our Lord and glorious Master, Christ, bless and reward those fellow-workers in His blessed service for their kindness to me and their zeal for present truth, by thus calling my attention to your Labor Tribune. I would not be without that paper in my house even if it took the last dollar in my purse. Ah, that brother and those two sisters, mentioned above, cannot know half the joy they have brought me by their Christian zeal.

You can write my name with indelible ink on your subscription list as long as this good work goes on, and may the Lord grant that I persevered to the both taught and honored through His precious truth, illustrated in the columns of part of the Tribune and thereby greatly stimulated and instructed the mind and heart of your readers in the sweet and beautiful "Truth of God," and oh, that we rejoice as step by step "the marvelous light" gradual y scatters our darkness and brings to us the clear understanding of "the mystery hid in God." Ephes. 3: 3, 10. Thanks be to God, the world makes known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery, etc." Col. 1: 27.

Thank God for giving us such a Moses as we have today in the person of Pastor Russell and who like Moses in Egypt are today leading the Lord's people out of bondage and captivity from darkness into light, from error, ignorance and superstition of the Dark Ages back to the clear fountain of reason and to God's original Divine plan, purpose and glorious Truth. Friends, let us greatly rejoice in our Lord's assurance when He says "My word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Isa. 55: 11. In connection with that declaration let us place the right construction on the advice given by Paul in Romans 2: 4. "Let God be true, but every man a liar."

Yours in the "Love of God" and Christian fellowship.
RASMUS F. JOHNSON.

HEAR FROM PASTOR RUSSELL.

Communications received by mail from the Foreign Missions Investigation Committee confirm various cablegrams concerning the large attendances at the various public lectures of Pastor Russell in the great cities of the Far East, which are fully reported in time here appeared in the columns of this paper. At Tokio, Japan, 3,500 were present, the Japanese Premier addressed. Among the audience of an impressive, giving exceptional attendance. At Shanghai, China, where practically all the missionaries from the interior had congregated, Pastor Russell again presented "The Ransom of a Larger Hope," as his message was referred to by one Methodist missionary.

In the Philippine Islands, at Manilla the Opera House, a theatre of standing that one of the newspapers of the city had in error announced their non-arrival. Pastor Russell addressed an audience of 1,000 in the afternoon, and in the evening at the same place another very interesting meeting was conducted and addresses given by three other members of the Missions Investigating Committee. General Hall, of the United States Army, formerly Military Governor of the Islands, spoke on "The Bible and Christianity from a Soldier's Viewpoint;" Mr. Kuehn, of Toledo, O., on the same subject from "A Merchant's Viewpoint," and Dr. Jones, of Calcutta, on the same topic, "From a Physician's Viewpoint." From the one city of Manilla alone, over three hundred personally written requests for Pastor Russell's publications have been received by mail at the Brooklyn Tabernacle. It is reported that a full account of this Foreign Missions Investigation Committee's around-the-world trip will be given at the New York Hippodrome on Sunday afternoon, March 31.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Please find enclosed remittance for renewal of my subscription for your valuable paper. I deem it quite befitting to say a few words in praise of the type in heralding the "Truth" as found in Pastor Russell's sermons and by which the light on God's Word is carried into darkened places, dispelling the fears, dreads and anxieties caused by errors which crept into the bible by man made fancies.

By and through the light on the Truth in the Bible we have learned to love God and fear to displease Him.

Again the Question Box in your columns denotes a desire on the part of the questioners for greater light on the Scriptures these with the full, clear and unimpeachable answers are interesting and convincing and I believe appreciated by your readers.

Yours very truly,
J. K. BLAKE.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

As a token of my appreciation of your awesome paper am pleased to subscribe through the medium of the We admire a yearly subscription to the Labor Tribune. Interested in its contents, the visit news, so, especially is our interest centered in those grand truths presented in the sermons by Pastor Russell, also the Sunday School Lesson, Question Box, Letters of Appreciation.

May you indeed realize a blessing from the Lord upon your own heart and life; such a blessing as comes with a knowledge of the Divine Plan of the ages, and the combined courage and faithfulness in "letting our light shine."

Am pleased to contribute the enclosed poem "My Companion" for your columns, and hope to see it printed in columns of your paper. With Christian regards.

Very sincerely yours,
MRS. MARIAN HOSKIN.

MY COMPANION.

With me there walks a presence
Unseen in mortal view;
Hearing what my word I utter,
Looking at all I do,
Watching to see what power
Is the motive of my life imparts,
Longing to see His image
Growing within my heart.
Oh! does my conduct please Him
Can He my words approve?
Or do I daily grieve Him
By woeful lack of love?
How all my heart is yearning
To please my Lord so well;
Oh Friend of unseen presence
Help me to grow like Thee.

Before me goes my Captain
To lead my mind in thought,
Even as He proved conquerer
So must I overcome.
Self rises up against me
Fierce most the conflict be,
Power of my Captain
Satan opposes me.
My Captain commands me, saying,
Resist not evil, but resist
Gird on the Heavenly armor
The Sword of Truth wield well,
None but the overcomers
Shatesh my royal throne."
He's gone, my Mighty Captain
Ever to overcome.

Beside me stands the Master
Points to the ripening grain;
Bids me labor on in love
Reaping what yet remain.
He will accept no labor
I must bestow in vain,
I must pass on to others
Truth that was given me—
Tell of the Heavenly Kingdom
The blessings that are for all;
Pointing the Heavenly Father
Sounding the Heavenly call.
As a sentinel stations upon me
Can I rejoicing say,
'Dear Keeper, I've seen faithful
To all I have said today.'

Close by me stands my Helper
Knowing I must be tried
Even as gold in a furnace
I must be purified.
Trials alone bring patience
Hate must be cast by love
Faith is wrought in the darkness
Reaching to things above,
All would I only trust Him
His presence and power to aid,
Even mid deepest shadows
Would not be afraid.
Tho' the fear winds be loosened
And tempests around me roared;
I'd welcome the glorious privilege
Of dying with my dear Lord.
ROSEVILLE, Calif. ROBERT ASHBY.

AN ADDRESS TO REPUBLICAN VOTERS

Vote the Anti-Magee-Flinn Republican Ticket at the Primaries on Saturday, April 13, 1912, and Unfetter Yourself from the Chains that Now Hold You in Bondage.

Pittsburgh, March 28.

Mr. Voter:

There are so many important matters at stake in the present campaign in Pittsburgh and Allegheny county that it is wise to stop a minute to consider a few of them. When Flinn and Magee made their notorious political agreement of "this for you and this for me and O for the people" it was time for the alarm to be sounded and for such alarm to be at his doorstep and to fight for what he has.

Magee, a self-confessed failure at building up a powerful political machine, now deals with Flinn and the latter is furnishing the money for the fight. Magee wants the members of the legislature and that is where the voters want to be alive.

In the event that Magee, discredited as he is, should get any considerable hold in the next legislature, when convenes in January, 1913, the people of Pittsburgh would be confronted with legislation seeking to curtail the powers of the present Council or else to increase the membership of that body to where it would smile be rumsome, not business like and subject to the dictation of Magee, which the Pittsburgh public knows is not its rule now. There have been occasions rub him with an onion and let him drink nothing but water and absolutely no food altogether."

Among the medicines used by the physicians of Nineveh were sesame, spire oil, castor oil, syrup of dates, honey and salt. Fasting and massage were frequently ordered.

LAPPS AND WOLVES.

The Deer Killing Brutes Get No Mercy From the Natives.

The Swedish Lapps are said to live entirely with, by and upon their reindeer. The Lapp who owns a thousand deer is a rich man, but as taxes are assessed upon the number of deer, he is limited to indifferentiate his herd. The most dangerous enemy to the herd is the wolf, which can kill many deer in a night. A pack of wolves can make a rich Lapp poor.

When the snow is deep and soft and it is somewhat crusty the wolf tricks have been seen in the neighborhood of the deer; the swiftest runners on snowshoes prepare to kill the rascals.

The wolf may have a start of a mile or two, but the track it leaves in the deep, soft snow is as conspicuous that the hunters can follow it at their best speed. The wolf, though he may run swiftly, has but a slight chance of escaping his pursuers on their snowshoes.

Each hunter does his best to outrun the others, for the wolf belongs to the Lapp who strikes the first blow. As soon as the leading hunter is close enough to the wolf he gives it a heavy blow across the back with his strong, spiked snowshoe staff. If there are other wolves to be pursued he kills it outright; if not he disables it and waits till all the hunters have arrived before giving the death stroke.

Germany's Industrial Life.

The industrial life of Germany gives the impression of a great street, crowded with heavy traffic. This traffic is formed of mails, but all have a common purpose and destination. Ever increasing its volume, ever extending its zone of influence, the foreign trade of Germany is the marvel of the twentieth century.—James Davenport Whelpley in Century.

Famous Pens.

The collecting of pens that have been owned by or associated with famous persons appears to be a hobby that has attracted some collectors, though the pursuit is an expensive one. A well worn gold pen used by Charles Dickens brought $200 at a sale of his effects. A pen made out of wood from a box owned by George Washington and a box having been made from a desk brought to America by the Mayflower, is valued at $2,500.—Exchange.

HEALING IN NINEVEH.

Medical Science as It Existed in the Ancient City.

The patient work of the archaeologist enables people of today to form a very fair idea of medical science as it existed in Nineveh 650 years before the time of Christ, says the New York Sun. Of the 20,000 tablets taken from the library of Assurbanipal, the great king of Assyria, many contained Egyptian and Babylonia and established his subjects in the deserted cities of Samaria, hundreds deal exclusively with medicine and contain numerous prescriptions:

"If a man has colic make him stand up and pour over him a decoction of hyperteum and he will recover.

"Or make him crouch down on his heels and pour cold water over his head."

Faith healing seems to be indicated in a prescription which runs: "If he is in a weak state, make him bend down, then raise his legs and say, 'May you get quite well.' Then make him sit on the bend fourteen times with your thumb."

Many prescriptions deal with the cure of a disorder which was very common at Nineveh and which seems to have been due to overindulgence in food and drink. "If a man is sick he will

There is no reason for the Next Side to reverse its adverse stan taken on Magee last September. Th Alleghenians voted strongly in protest against Magee'ism and his crowd and on April 13 will do the same thing again. High taxes, the direst water in Pennsylvania and a dog pound are the only things he has given to that section. In the boroughs and townships the people know Magee and Flinn was the original Gold Brick. They know that, for Pittsburgh and the Pittsburgh district to have a chance to prosper, this political blight must be removed. The best thing to do, wherever you live, in city or county is to

TIPPING AN ARTIST.

A Great Painter Who Was Not Above Earning an Honest Quarter.

Winslow Homer was a great painter who had the unusual good fortune to have his merit appreciated early in life. But no one ever possessed less of a wide reputation. Affectation was a weakness from which his sense of humor saved him.

In his biography by Mr. W. H. Downs is printed the story of a New York gentleman of wealth and artistic taste who made the journey to Scarboro, Me., where Homer had his studio, to make the artist's acquaintance.

On his arrival he found the studio door locked; the owner was nowhere to be seen. He wandered about the cliffs for awhile and he met a man in a rough old suit of clothes, rubber boots and a battered felt hat, who carried a fishpole. He accosted the fisherman thus:

"Say, my man, if you can tell me where I can find Winslow Homer I have a quarter for you."

"Where's your quarter?" said the fisherman.

He handed it over and was astounded to hear the quizzical Yankee fisherman say, "I'm Winslow Homer."

The sequel of this unusual introduction was that Homer took his new acquaintance back to the studio, entertained him, and before he left sold him a picture.

WILD ELEPHANTS.

When Angry They Can Land a Five Ton Bath Dealing Kick.

E. Alexander Powell in the Outing magazine throws some light on the theory that an elephant is clumsy. When annoyed a wild elephant has a unique method of dealing with the overpersistent ayll. Mr. Powell says:

"Provided the mosses are working harmoniously, however, and given reliable and well trained decoys, the hooting of a wild elephant is in itself a sight worth traveling half around the world to see.

"The animal to be roped having been again selected, the decoys closed in on either side of him until he was practically helpless. A noose, lithe and active as an eel, slid down the pad rope of his driver and, while all the attention of the captive had been momentarily distracted, slipped a thick noose of rawhide round the hind ankle of his prize.

"It is during this operation that the accidents usually occur, for should the captive suspect an enemy in his rear he can lunge out a five ton kick to a distance of a dozen feet, and that setting the mooser's relatives assemble for the funeral."

Things look dim to old folks. They need have some young eyes about 'em to let 'em know the world's the same as it used to be.

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, March 21.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed please find check for a renewal of my subscription together with six others, which I send to show you my continued appreciation of the good work your paper is doing, especially the Question Box, in which I have had questions answered the very next week that I have had a controversy over, and hope you will continue till all the blind eyes are open and all the deaf ears unstopped.

J. E. BAINES.

New York, March 23.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed please find renewal of my subscription. I cannot afford to be without your valuable journal. Brother Russell's Sermons, the Question Box, the Letters of Commendation and the subscription lists are the principle features which commend the journal to me, but the labor news and all other matters treated are admirable and very interesting. It is a clean paper and deserves the support of all who love the true Gospel and clean literature.

Very sincerely yours,
R. S. GANOUNG.

Minnesota, March 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society I have recently renewed my subscription to your very excellent paper for another year. I greatly appreciate the good work you are doing in publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons.

Wishing you continued success,
Yours respectfully,
ELIZABETH C. ORTON.

Indiana, March 23.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Am renewing my subscription to your much appreciated paper. Will just say that not for a minute do I begrudge the money I pay it for. I value the religious teaching of Brother Russell very much in your paper, and believe it is of all the righteous truth and makes us feel assured with all of our Heavenly Father's plans and desire to nearer by Him. I also enjoy reading the Tribune all through and feel thankful to her for standing by the right. You can print this if you like.

HERBERT S. MORRIS.

New York, March 22.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am very grateful to for the Pastor Russell Sermons. Hope you will be able to secure his Letters to the Freemen Mission Investigation.

I feel sure that all are interesting and should secure many new subscribers, for an investigation of foreign affairs should be the duty of every citizenry and just what people want to know something about.

Your in the Master's regards,
R. A. BROWN.

Oklahoma, March 22.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have renewed my subscription to your valuable paper for Volumes V, VI, VII and T. S. Your paper is valuable to me because the good work it is doing in Pastor Russell's Sermons. One sermon is often worth the price of the paper. With much love for the truth and wishing you much success, I am yours in the service of the truth.

ADA N. GOINS.

Canada, March 21.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I enclose renewal subscription on which I regret to say, is through no overnight, a few days overdue. While my interest in your publication is daily increasing, my ability to pay is retarded to what we understand to be the "harvest message" of the Age as represented in Pastor Russell's expositions of Truth, I feel like congratulating you on your long and successful conducted service in the interests of same. To us it seems fitting that your columns, so long devoted to the erons sentiments, should at the present time be so widely used in expressing God's benevolent purposes for mankind.

Very truly yours,
W. W. BYACK.

West Virginia, March 24.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I desire to express my appreciation of your valuable paper. Just received the third copy and wish to say of all the newspapers I know any thing about the Tribune is the best.

I especially enjoy the religious department.

I take pleasure in recommending your paper and shall continue to be a subscriber as long as you continue to publish the religious department.

With best wishes and trusting you will continue in the good work.

Yours truly,
M. M. BARTHLOW.

New York, March 18.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed please find money for renewal of my paper, the Tribune. I read so many letters by friends and appreciation of your paper, that I feel I must add my quota also. I appreciate your good work and only for its help in spreading the truth, but through it many friends are brought to our notice, that otherwise we would not know or see. It is indeed a privilege to serve God in what ever capacity. May God continue to bless the work is my prayer.

MRS. S. BRONNER.

Virginia, March 24.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I think your paper gives the labor news of the world in a nicely condensed form. I especially enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons and the Question Box. We have the promise of God's word I Cor. 15:58, that our labor for the Lord is not done in vain.

Very soon now our dear Lord the "Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams" for the whole world of mankind, when his kingdom comes and his will is done on earth even as it is in heaven.

May the Lord bless you in your good work.

Yours for the Lord's service.

"THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD."

Quarterly Review—March 31.

"The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up."—Matthew iv., 1.

In the Bible symbols light stands as the representative of God, of Christ, of the Church, of Truth, which by and by as "the Sun of Righteousness" shall arise with healing in its beams" for the cure of all the masses of the earth. It will scatter the darkness of sin, ignorance and superstition—the works of the Prince of Darkness, who will then "be bound for a thousand years that he may deceive the nations no more until the thousand years are finished." Of the heavenly Father we read, "God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all."

Jesus said, "I am the light of the world." Of the Church in her present condition we read, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." "Hide not your light under a bushel, but set it on a candlestick that it may give light unto all that are in the house." Revelation tells us, "The darkness passeth the true light, and the darkness comfort to the light," and "the whole world lieth in the Wicked One"—in darkness.

"The word is a light to my path."

The thought pervades the Scriptures from first to last, namely, that for six thousand years, from the time of the creation of Adam to the second coming of Jesus, the world will be subject to a reign of sin and death—under a pall of darkness, ignorance and superstition. The only ones who will see the path of righteousness distinctly will be those guided by the "lamp of God's Word. They are represented as saying, "Thy word is a lamp to my feet and a lantern to my pathway."

Our text tells of a better day sure to come. But never might we hope for the establishment of righteousness in the way in which God has foretold it—through the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom—except the shining forth of the Sun of Righteousness—the Church in glory.—Matthew xiii, 43.

"Which Lighteth Every Man."

The Apostle declares that Jesus is the "True light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, (John 1, 9). The expression, "true light," implies that there are false or unsatisfying lights, and of these we know that there are many—lights of heathendom and lights of Christendom. The only true light, however, is that which shone forth in our Savior's teachings and example. It was true for enlightened only a few, a "little flock." These are urged to let their light shine before men that they may take knowledge that they have been with Jesus.

After eighteen centuries of the light shining with the darkness, the darkness being almost quenched thereby, we might well ask, what hope is there that this prophecy will yet be fulfilled—that Jesus, as the Light of the world, will enlighten every man born into the world? The Bible answers that God will hasten this very thing in due time; but before the world can be enlightened, a saintly class, the Church, the Bride of Christ, must be enlightened, and be completed.

Then, and not until then, will the Savior and His Church in glory be the great Sun of Righteousness which will shine over the earth, and shine forth for the healing of the people, for the scattering of the darkness of sin, and for the bringing in of the blessings of peace, joy and blessing to all who will accept the favor in harmony with the Divine requirements, but to utterly destroy the Night, and those who will still love darkness.

A Better Day Coming.

For a thousand years the glorious Sun of Righteousness (Christ and the Church, His Bride), will shine out, and the world will be brought to completion. Adam and his every child will be fully brought to a knowledge of the truth and will enjoy the blessed opportunity of coming back into harmony with God, by the restitution processes.—Acts iii, 19-26.

Then our text will have most ample fulfillment—all mankind shall see the great Light which God has provided; even those in the shadow of death must come forth, that all may be enlightened by this "True Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." O, the happy day that is coming to our poor, sin-cursed earth! There will be no more crime, says our God! Instead of the curse shall be the Divine blessing; "and every creature which is in heaven and on earth and under the earth shall be heard saying, 'Praise and glory and honor and dominion be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever'."

Quite So.

"Weren't you shy when the Judge asked you your age in court?"

"Yes, I was about ten years shy, my dear."—Life.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS. DON'T BE SHY. WRITE TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE.

Q.—Why should we believe that the Bible is the Word of God? What are some of the reasons for so believing? W. H. H.

Answer.—The Creator, having formed an intelligent being capable of reasoning upon matters that would come under his observation, and with reflective powers of mind that would induce him to reason from cause to effect, and knowing that these mental endowments would create a desire to understand the conditions of the past, the present, and the future, would also, prompted by the attributes of wisdom, love and justice, formulate a Revelation to satisfy these reasonable desires. There is but one book under heaven that even claims to be such a revelation. Is there any other book that gives the entire history of the race from creation to the present, and prophecies of the future? The Bible is the oldest book in existence; it has outlived the storms of thirty centuries. Men have endeavored by every means possible to banish it from the face of the earth; they have ridiculed it, made it a crime punishable with death to have it in possession, and the most bitter and relentless persecutions have been waged against those who have faith in it; but still the book lives. Evidently the great Being who was its Author is also its Preserver, because it has survived the shock of so many centuries, and as it is the only complete revelation known, we are reasonably forced to accept it as of Divine origin.

Q.—Why do so many Christian ministers eulogize Abraham Lincoln, who never belonged to a church, and set him forth as an example for Christian people to follow? Must not all Christians belong to a church? (S. M.)

Answer.—Perhaps the reason why some ministers eulogize Mr. Lincoln is because of his noble character and self-sacrificing disposition. His honesty and general uprightness should be set forth as shining examples to church members, as well as to all others. We know of no commandment in the Scriptures, however, in existence that one must "join a church" in order to be a Christian. As there are several hundred churches, or religious denominations, and the number is constantly increasing, it would be an unreasonable commandment to issue, as one would be perplexed as to which was the right one. Nor: there is no command from the Lord to join the "A— Church, the B— Church, the C— Church, the D— Church, etc., etc. However, the Bible does mention the fact that there is but one true Church, the members of which have their names written in Heaven, in the Lamb's book of life, and not necessarily upon any earthly church book. See the following Scriptures:—Revelation xiii, 8; Hebrews xii, 23; Ephesians v, 24-28.

Q.—Kindly print the verse in the Bible that begins and ends with the same letter, and also any other special items that would be of general interest in a Bible reader. (Mrs. C. Keefer.)

Answer.—After the Bishops' translation of 1568-1589, nothing further in the line was accomplished until 1610-1610, when the Roman Catholics brought out the Douai Bible, so-called because it was printed at a place of that name. A year later, 1611, the English press issued the King James version of the Bible or Author 10 Testament, containing 39 books, 929 chapters, 23,214 verses, 592,439 words, and 2,738,100 letters. The New Testament has 27 books, 260 chapters, 7,957 verses, 182,253 words, 838,380 letters. The shortest verse in the Old Testament is 1 Chronicles i, 25. The shortest in the New Testament is John xi, 35. The only verse of the eighth chapter of Esther is the longest verse in the entire Bible. Five words—Ps. 8th, 1st, 2nd, 8th, 9th—Ps. 8th, 1st, 2nd, and 21st—are exactly alike, and the 37th chapter of Isaiah and the 19th chapter of 2 Kings are alike. The second verse of the 33d Psalm begins and ends with the same word—"God." The third verse begins and ends with the same letter—R.

Q.—An able minister recently remarked that scientific research in regard to the formation of the earth, is leading more and more into agreement with the Genesis account of creation. How can this be when scientists declare it required thousands of years, while the Bible says that it was all accomplished in six days? (F. S.)

Answer.—The term "day" is used in the Scriptures, in a number of instances, for the signification of any epoch of time, and not necessarily a twenty-four-hour day; just as in the expression we say "In Washington's day," or "in the day when Greece was supreme." In Genesis ii, 4, it is stated that all the work of creation was executed in one "day," meaning, of course, that in the time or epoch of six thousand years the work was accomplished. The Scriptures declare that God rested on the seventh day, and the evidence is clear and strong that this day of rest is seven thousand years in length. This would imply, therefore, that each of the creative days was likewise 7,000 years, or 42,000 years for the entire period of creation. Science is in thorough agreement with this, the reasonable Scriptural teaching. Those not of harmony with it are enscientific-

Q.—Why is the first day of the week, (Sunday) like day usually observed as a day of rest, when the Third Commandment of the Law, given to the Jews by the Lord through Moses, is to the effect that the Seventh Day (Saturday) is the Sabbath Day: Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy? (W. E. J.)

Answer.—Christians have observed Sunday as a special day of worship because it was the day of the week on which the Lord Jesus was raised from the dead, and for no other reason, as there is no commandment for Him to keep any day as a holy day. We know of no place in the Scriptures where it is stated that the Seventh Day was changed to the First Day. We understand that the Sabbath Day arrangement was still binding upon the Jews, as that Law, which was given to the Israelites, has never been disannulled. The Apostle points out that there are two houses of Israel. One is a house of "servants" and the other is a house of "sons." (Heb. iii, 5, 6.) The servants (the Jews) were placed under the Law and commanded to do this and that; among other things to keep the Sabbath Day holy. Not so with the sons; they are not ordered about like servants. We are not under the Law, the Apostle explains, but under Grace. The children of the Lord are not ordered to keep any day holy; they are delighted to keep every day holy unto the Lord, not in the sense of being idle, but in living holy, consecrated lives unto the Lord. The blood of Jesus cleanses with any as to the observance of one day above another. If any person one day more than another, he does it with an eye to the observance of one day above another. If any person one day more than another, he does it with an eye to the observance of one day above another. If any person one day more than another, he does it with an eye to be in accordance with the Lord; we are not to judge in the matter.—See Colossians ii, 16, 17.

Q.—The Lord Jesus said (Matthew xxiii, 8), "But not ye be called Rabbi (Doctor or Master) for one is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." Are we to understand from these words that the Lord never authorized the formation of a Church? (C. D.)

Answer.—From these words of the Master it should be apparent at once to every free and non-prejudiced mind, that a clergy class was never authorized by the Lord Himself. No body of men has ever had our right or authority to lord it over God's heritage. The Master Himself never attempted to dominate His followers and He never authorized any one to do so. All are to be "brethren," and the greatest of these is "Christ," who is the one to humble himself the most and render the most service. The Lord Jesus, in harmony with His teachings, set the example of humility and service by washing the feet of His disciples! (John xiii, 13-15.) The Apostles also, although endowed with special authority to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom, never presumed to Divine titles and predicaments of position or office; but, on the contrary, went about as plain Peter, Paul and John, laboring with their own hands to provide for their own necessities, and to assist others. They did not consider themselves the Lord's sheep and expecting to be fed also; but they went about feeding the sheep, and, in many instances, were glad to feed the flock.—1 Pet. xv, 33-35.) How different the time-serving, hireling ministry of the present, many of whom are comfortably pleading for money, and expecting to be well-clothed and well-fed by their congregations!

Q.—In Luke'i, 10, the angels declared in announcing the message of the birth of the Saviour—"Behold we bring you good tidings of GREAT JOY which shall be unto all the PEOPLE." If the majority of the race are going into the second advent to be destroyed, how could this proclamation be said to be "good tidings of great joy to ALL people"? (Interested.)

Answer.—It would be sad tidings of great misery to the majority of the race and other good tidings to the remainder of mankind if the mistaken view were correct. Also the angels spoke a little too optimistic and greatly over-estimated the measure of joy contained in their message, if the larger portion of mankind is going to be eternally unable miserable. If only the few saints are to be saved and all the remainder of the race are to be eternally made wretched, then how those good angels must have blushed when they delivered their message to the shepherds on the plains of Judea! However, it happens that the Scriptures do not teach the eternal torture for any of God's creatures, not even for Satan himself, for we read that he is to be destroyed.—Hebrews ii, 14). The angelic proclamation is to be fulfilled when all have heard the glad tidings of salvation through Christ, for the Apostle says, "God will have all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth." (1 Timothy ii, 3, 4). Consequently he will not be satisfied till all are saved and when they shall come to the knowledge of the truth—"For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." Christ died for all, therefore all are to receive the knowledge of the truth—the Church of Christ in the present dispensation and the world in the coming age, when Christ and His Church will be reigning over the world as Kings and Priests unto God.—See Revelation ii, 26, 27; iii, 21; xx, 6.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE

FORTIETH YEAR, NO 18 | PITTSBURG, PA., THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1912 | $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

SOFT COAL MINERS WIN AN ADVANCE

Operators Made Sudden Shift and Concede Five Cents a Ton Higher Wages to Men in Bituminous Mines, Who Will Undoubtedly Vote Favorably in the Referendum--Mining Stops Pending Announcement of Result--170,000 Anthracite Miners Go On Strike.

It was the greatest achievement of the United Mine Workers since 1898," is the way Francis Feehan, president of the Pittsburgh district miners, summed up on his arrival home, yesterday, the settlement reached at Cleveland of the differences between operators and miners in the bituminous coal fields throughout the country. Feehan took steps immediately upon reaching here to have the miners in Pennsylvania resume operations as soon as possible. There will be only a week's idleness in this field.

The annual convention of District No. 5 of the mine workers will reconvene this morning in Labor Temple. The convention will be asked to authorize a resumption of operations throughout the district pending ratification of the Cleveland settlement. The entire membership of the United Mine Workers will vote on this question, and although ballots for the referendum vote will be sent out immediately from Indianapolis, 10 days or two weeks will elapse before the result is tabulated.

Monday, however, work was suspended throughout Western Pennsylvania coal fields. Approximately 50,000 miners are idle. President Feehan said:

"The advance in wages means $1 a ton for mining coal in the Pittsburgh district. Drivers and other skilled workers get an increase from $2.70 to $3 a day. Corresponding increases are granted all other classes of labor. Such a settlement was a great surprise to us. We thought the best that could be hoped for was a reaffirmation of the present wage scale.

"The question whether the miners remain at work pending ratification of the agreement has been left to the several districts. In the bituminous fields. With the consent of the international officials I will submit it to the delegates immediately after the convention of District No. 5 reconvenes Wednesday. A week's time or less is practically unavoidable. The men appear to want it in many instances. But I hope to see production resumed in its entirety the following week. The referendum vote promises to be a mere formality—the new agreement will be approved by the membership almost unanimously."

It was announced unofficially, Monday, from an authoritative source, that Feehan has been re-elected district president over Michael Haluska; that Van Bittner has been re-elected vice president, and that Robert Wood of Hydedale has been elected secretary-treasurer, defeating "Tim" Donovan of Hazzard, Pa.

The story of the victory won by the miners at the Cleveland conference follows:

CLEVELAND, March 30.—A brief suspension of the coal mining industry of the United States for at least two weeks, beginning next Monday will result from a wage scale compromise offered early today by the bituminous following by eight hours a suspension order closing all the anthracite mines.

Almost 670,000 miners in the hard and soft coal fields will become idle next Monday, April 1, pending the taking of a referendum vote on the question of strikes in both the hard and soft coal fields.

Approval of the sub-scale committee's compromise, giving the miners an increase of five cents a ton on screened lump and three cents a ton on mine run coal, was almost assured this morning when the joint committee of the whole reassembled for final action in the bituminous controversy.

With the sanction of joint conference, the miners' policy committee will immediately submit the compromise to a referendum vote, pending the outcome of which work will remain suspended.

An early renewal of wage scale negotiations between President John P. White, of the mine workers, and President George F. Baer, of the operators association, in behalf of the anthracite miners and operators, is believed today, may result in an adjustment of differences averting a strike. However, a suspension, ordered yesterday by White, will be effective at midnight, March 31, when all existing miners' wage contracts expire.

President White expected to announce today a date for the reopening of negotiations affecting 168,000 anthracite miners which failed of an agreement in New York, after a change of messages between White and Baer last night developed a willingness on the part of both to renew conference of their respective committees immediately in a final effort to save submitted to the anthracite referendum a compromise instead of a strike order.

The compromise agreement to be approved or rejected by the miners of bituminous mines contains the following demands.

An increase in pay of five cents a ton for screened coal, three cents a ton on the run of the same coal, and 5.26 per cent on day labor in the mines.

All dead work shall be paid for.

Uniform work day and wage scale for an outside and inside day labor.

Proper readjustment of machine differentials at basing points in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

Uniform day of seven hours shall be basis for all scales. (Waived.)

Only five-hour day on Saturday with full pay. (Waived.)

Pay shall be made weekly.

No limit to the amount of reduction made through company's offices for miners' organizations.

That no discrimination be shown in the employment of miner workers in regard to creed, nationality, color or activity in the union.

That all local differences be settled in the district affected.

That this contract be in effect for two years, beginning April 1, 1912.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Anthracite operators believe that the suspension of work in the hard coal region, which went into effect today, will not continue long and that the coming meeting of the operators' committee and representatives of the miners on April 10 in Philadelphia will result in a basis of settlement. This belief is strengthened, the operators say, by the fact that there have been no traces of bitterness shown on either side and that this makes a satisfactory adjustment of differences much easier.

Just what proposition the miners will submit to the operators at the coming Philadelphia conference as a basis of discussion has not been learned, but the operators think the two points of chief issue will be the questions of increased wages and recognition of the union. Most of the operators are in favor of granting an increase in wages, while one railroad company is said to oppose an increase, claiming that it would wipe out its margin of profit.

It is reported here today that several independent companies had made special arrangements with their men to continue mining and that this output would be sold to consumers at an increased cost.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 1.—"It's all over but signing the new wage contracts. As a matter of course the increased wages won by the soft coal miners will be followed by the granting of an increase to the anthracite miners without a struggle." This was the statement of John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, when he returned today after the conference with the mine owners at Cleveland. That the soft coal miners will vote almost unanimously in favor of the new wage proposition April 10 was White's prediction.

Except for a few pumpers and men employed to keep the property in shape the bituminous coal mines of Indiana, are deserted today, and they will remain idle until the 20,000 miners receive notice that the wage contract, agreed to in Cleveland, has been ratified at a referendum vote.

WAGE ADVANCE FOR 140,000 WORKERS.

RIGHT on the heels of the settlement of the wage scale in the bituminous coal mines come the announcement by the biggest coke concerns not only in the Pittsburgh district but the country that beginning today they will pay their employes an advance in wages of 7½ per cent. The new mine scale concedes an advance of five cents a ton to the workers, putting the rate for pick mining up to $1 a ton, the highest price on record. Along with the increase of 7½ per cent in coke workers' wages, it will mean the distribution of a largely increased sum of money all over the district every week. There are probably not less than 40,000 coal miners actively employed in the mines of the Pittsburgh district. The wage advance announced this morning by the H. C. Frick Coke Company, on the other hand, affects not less than 30,000 men. The independent coke companies, which have promptly followed suit, are said to employ altogether some 80,000 men. Here are 140,000 wage workers in Pittsburgh and vicinity who find themselves in receipt of larger earnings.

It hardly needs to be argued that every variety of trade will feel the stimulus of this enlargement of the wage fund. To the extent that the wage increases are balanced by the higher prices of coal and coke, outside communities will be forced to bear a large part of this contribution to our prosperity. The price of coal, in particular, has been advanced very sharply. As our operators are heavy shippers, this involves a large increase of the revenue that will flow to Pittsburgh from its sales of coal in lake and eastern markets. The same thing is true of coke. No mean proportion of the output of the ovens is shipped to points outside of the Pittsburgh district. Every rise in the rise of coal and coke prices is Pittsburgh's gain.

In calling attention to the manner in which the prosperity of the community as a whole will be advanced by the wage increases, the National Labor Tribune does not lose sight of the fact that while the stimulation of business is an excellent result, it is nevertheless only an incidental advantage. The chief cause for congratulation in connection with the good fortune of the coal miners and coke workers is the effect it has directly on them. Theirs is hard labor. They fatten on nobody else's toil, but give honest value for every dollar they expend. Even with only the increased wages, they will have no money to waste. Every cent in the wage envelope is needed to meet the high cost of living to which we cling. The wage-raises are therefore no more than a simple act of justice to an army of faithful and deserving workers.

The best part of it all is, perhaps, that the advances are granted so willingly. The advance to the coke workers was not only entirely voluntary but unexpected, and as for the advance secured by the Francis President Feehan, of the miners' organization of the Pittsburgh district, is quoted as declaring that while the miners had demanded an advance they did so in the belief that the best they could hope for was the reaffirmation of the present wage scale. Gratified as they are by the advance, there is no doubt that the referendum now in progress will result in the approval of the agreement by an overwhelming majority. Within a week or so, accordingly, work will be in full swing again in the mines in all parts of the Pittsburgh district.

THE SYNDICATE STRIKE.

THE news reports tell us that there are more than 1,000,000 people on strike in Great Britain. This is a large number and this strike has some peculiar features that are worth noting.

This strike is a Syndicalist strike—part of the great labor movement that is gradually sweeping over Europe and seeping into this country. We are liable to learn more and more about Syndicalism in the near future. It is a word that has only recently come into general notice.

The labor people of Europe are becoming tired of slowly starving to death while they are compelled to wait apparently limitless time for the red tape of governments, courts and political action looking to a betterment of their economic conditions. They have asked themselves: "What can we do about it?"

The Syndicalists have given them an answer. They are putting it to the test of practical experiment. The answer is this: "We working people have a common cause. Our interests are one. We must forget that we are carpenters, bricklayers, miners and other sorts of craftsmen and learn that, no matter what particular trade we work at, we are simply workmen. When we want anything that we think we ought to have, we will simply resort to "Direct Action" of the general strike. We will not wait for the politicians to decide, or the judges of the courts to trifle for years with petty technicalities; but we will have a first class revolution right now." This is practically what they say.

But their revolution is a bit different from the old fashioned kind. They used to be one of blood, daggers, bombs, guns, powder and killing. In their kind they say: "We will not take up arms, but lay down tools. The world will have to stop and take notice. It will not be able to go ahead till we say so. We will say so when we get what we want." This seems simple. They are doing it.

Last year they tried it with their railroad strike. They got what they asked for. They also learned their power. They are trying it again. This time they are asking for a "Minimum Wage." They will probably get it. When they get that—what will they want next? Where will they stop?

There is no doubt but the workers are learning their power. The principle of solidarity is fast supplanting that of craft-consciousness. The footlessness of one trade striking when all the others are working leaves nothing but the filling of the striking craftsmen's places by the unemployed to knock the strikers out. This is being learned. The workers of the world are the masters of the world, just as soon as they learn the value of unity.

But what will that mean to the rest of the world if equity does not guide? Where will this end when they learn their power?

ENGINEERS TAKE STRIKE VOTE

NEW YORK, April 1.—Fifty representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, headed by Warren S. Stone, voted here last Thursday to submit to a strike vote the question of increase and standardization of wages as refused by the eastern railroads. It will require several days to distribute the ballots among the employees, and April 10 has been set as the date for making public in the city the result.

Grand Chief Stone would not predict even a personal opinion as to the outcome of the strike vote. A representative of the railroad committee said it is favors strike the Goodfellows will be applied at once and mediation asked for.

Chief Stone was told that it had been reported that if the railroads could show that they could not financially meet the demands for increased wages, that both sides would join in an attempt to increase freight rates.

It was learned today that the members of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers, representing the locomotive firemen, are now engaged in taking a vote at the headquarters of the different divisions of fifty-five western railroads, on the question of submitting demands on those roads for higher wages and changes in working conditions for the locomotive firemen. The poll, it was stated, is not completed, but the evidence is that the vote will be, by a large majority, in favor of submitting the demands to the fifty-five roads.

CHAMP CLARK, KENTUCKY FARMER'S BOY AND TEACHER.

LIKE many another man who has achieved fame in political life, Champ Clark began life on a farm and had the robust training of a farmer's boy. He spent his early years in Kentucky and after leaving the farm taught school in the intervals of his college course. He was too young to take part in the civil war, but it is on record that when a boy of eleven or twelve he declaimed from a country picnic platform from which older speakers had called for Union volunteers the words of Webster, "When my eyes shall be turned for the last time to behold the sun in heaven may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of a once glorious Union." When he was graduated from Bethany college he was chosen president of Marshall college and was the youngest head of such an institution in the country. Admitted to the bar in 1875, he went to Missouri and soon gained a standing in his profession which paved the way for his success in law and politics.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

U. S. Geological Survey States That There is Nothing in the Alleged Sensational Iron Ore Discoveries in Pennsylvania--Ore is Low Grade and its Existence Has Been Known for 100 Years--Magnificent Result of Printers' Organization.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 1.—Recently newspapers announced "The Most Startling Discovery Since the Discovery of Gold in 1848;" "The World's Best Ore Bed;" "An Immense Deposit of High Grade Iron Ore, Conservatively Estimated at More Than a Billion Tons Has Been Found in the Heart of Pennsylvania." The finder is quoted as saying: "It is not a disseminated bed of ore, but it is an immense mass of iron with the dross burned out, hundreds of millions of tons not exceeded by any ore mined in the United States today in high percentage of metallic iron and in purity a true Bessemer ore."

In order to learn whether these reports were based on the finding of new beds of ore the director of the United States Geological Survey sent Geologist George H. Ashley into Pottsville county to investigate the matter. He was unable to substantiate the claims of a new ore find. His report in part follows:

"The ores were described in the newspaper accounts as showing average percentages of metallic iron ranging from 57 to 63 per cent, and as being hematites, limonites, and the carbonates of iron. They were said to occur on Dickey's Mountain, Lowrie's Knob and the Meadow Ground in Ayr township of Fulton county, Pennsylvania. The three hills mentioned are well known and in fact have been known as iron-bearing for about a century.

"It is hardly necessary to comment on the analyses of the ores when it is recalled that no ores are known chemically pure has less than 69 per cent of metallic iron and the carbonate of iron which chemically pure has less than 49 per cent of iron, and ordinarily runs much below that. Hematite when pure has practically 70 per cent of metallic iron. The only hematite and limonite region in the Clinton formation, has only to be tested by the hand to realize the difference in weight between it and a high-grade hematite ore."

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A resolution proposing the creation of a special committee of five members of the House to investigate an alleged combination of coal dealers and coal mine operators at the head of Lake Superior in Minnesota and Wisconsin has been introduced by Congressman Steenerson of Minnesota. The resolution provides for an inquiry into charges of combination of dealers and operators, operating in violation of the anti-trust law, declining to supply coal to any municipality attempting to deal in coal for accommodation of the public and refusing to supply coal except to regular retail dealers, and declining to supply to any consumer either in carload lots or otherwise.

It is stated by members of the railroad organizations that a circular letter has been authorized and sent out by the Southern Associates of the Order of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors proposing to the membership of these two organizations a referendum vote on a demand for a 15 per cent increase in wages on the thirteen railroads south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi river. It is understood that this vote is to be taken during the early part of April, the vote to be canvassed by the first week of May. Prior to the increase, the demand will be pressed immediately.

The deportation of aliens who have been admitted into America and who conspire for the overthrow of any government recognized by the United States is proposed in an amendment which Senator Root of New York has offered to the immigration bill, now pending in the Senate. The amendment is aimed chiefly at the heads of the Mexican juntas that are said to be plotting the Mexican revolution in San Antonio and El Paso, Texas.

Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays of the International Typographical union has just forwarded to headquarters a document showing the tremendous benefits conferred upon the members of that organization by the international union. The per capita membership of the unions reporting in the tables of wages as the basis of the calculation it reveals that during the past year the wages of affected members have increased $6,263,154 per week, or $2,601,714.48 for the year. Owing to the fact that the collection of the international dues is made per capita assessment is based upon the percentage system, the International union is in possession of the exact earnings of each of its members. During 1911, the earnings per member reached the high total of $967.20 for the year. This is probably by the highest average maintained by any labor organization in the world whose members are employed in any mechanical industry.

VOTING AGAINST WORK BUT WORK ANYHOW

LONDON, April 2.—The coal ballot at 2 o'clock this morning gives a small majority against the resumption of work.

The totals are: For resumption, 88,628; against, 109,180. This is an exceedingly small vote.

One explanation of the unexpected result is that large numbers of willing workers are not taking the trouble to record their votes. In the meantime it is announced that between 20,000 and 30,000 miners descended into the pits yesterday and 300,000 more will follow in the next few days. The passage of the minimum wage bill, which practically ended the strike in spite of the vote recorded above.

100,000 COKE WORKERS GET RAISE.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 1.—Following the example set by the H. C. Frick Coke Company in giving its 20,000 employes a wage increase of 7½ per cent commencing today, all the independent coke companies of the Connellsville coke region have posted notices announcing that they are granting a similar increase to take effect today. The increase affects 80,000 additional men.

Several companies who made contracts with buyers of coke when the price was lower than at present, have announced that they will be unable to produce the coke at a profit at the increased wage and therefore have shut down their plants. As in the case of the Frick Company's employes, the notice of the increase came as a surprise.

Twenty thousand workmen in Fayette, Westmoreland and Washington counties went to their work at the mines this morning for the H. C. Frick Coke Company today and learned for the first time that between 80,000 and 90,000 miners descended into the pits yesterday and 300,000 more will follow in the next few days. The passage of the minimum wage bill, which practically ended the strike in spite of the vote recorded above.

The cause for this sudden change of front on the part of the operators is not definitely known, but it is generally believed that the sentiment of the public throughout the country is overwhelmingly in favor of the miners and that the operators realized that they could not withstand the pressure brought to bear upon them to grant the miners' demands. Another reason is that the operators realized that the miners were in a position to stand a long siege and that they were willing to do so.

The miners' representatives at the conference were: President John P. White, Secretary-Treasurer William Green, Vice President Van Bittner, President Francis Feehan of District No. 5, Pittsburgh; President Robert Wood of District No. 6, Hydedale, and President Thomas Kennedy of District No. 7, Hazleton, Pa.

DAMAGING REPORT ABOUT MISSIONS.

Teaching of Missionaries is Morals—Not Christ—Religion Now Avoided—The I. S. S. A. Foreign Missions Investigation Committee, After Round the World Tour, Report in New York Hippodrome Mass Meeting That a Thousand Times $30,000,000 Would Not Be Sufficient to Convert the World—Nothing Short of Chr ist's Kingdom Will Do It.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The International Bible Students' Association secured the Hippodrome in which to hear the Report of its Committee on Foreign Missions Investigation. The spacious auditorium was crowded. Prof. H. H. Robinson, as Secretary of the Committee, announced that the Report as a whole had been submitted to the Association and was in the printer's hands, to appear in pamphlet form illustrated. It will shortly be procurable at the small price of five cents per copy, postpaid to any address—free to the poor. The conclusion of the Report is in the nature of a Summary, which he read. We note some of its more salient points, as follows:—

SUMMARY OF REPORT.

Oriental Christians are about as sincere, intelligent and earnest as the average of church attendants in Europe and America—few saintly.

Christianizing endeavors seem pretty generally to have ceased! Present missionary endeavors are a most exclusively along the line of secular education and medical aid.

There is no need of Academic and Collegiate education, such as the missionaries forward, then for Common Schooling. The general Common School education could best be furnished by the government and along unsectarian lines, after the method followed under the United States supervision in the Philippine Islands. The tendency of the times in the Orient, as in the Occident, is toward unbelief in any religion.

The Orientals are remarkably tolerant of all religions, and are often peep'ered at the Missionary competition and opposition between Christian denominations. They would accept Christianity if it could demonstrate its superiority.

Orientals are not heathen-savages, but their educated classes include splendid specimens of noble manhood, the moral and intellectual peers of Europeans and Americans. The masses of these people are less vicious, less rude, more kind and considerate than are the masses of Europe and America. Drunkenness and outward immodesty are almost unknown.

Many of the churches are self-sustaining and the Orients's prefer to have them so, as they desire native preachers, and to manage their own affairs.

The very suggestion of the world's conversion is ridiculous to the peoples of the East—including the Missionaries. " " " The interest on $30,000,000, or the principal, multiplied a thousand times, would accumulish little except along the lines of secular education—nothing as respects the world's conversion. Nothing short of "The Kingdom of God's dear Son" can meet the issue.

Pastor Russell's discourse follows:

PASTOR RUSSELL'S HIPPODROME ADDRESS.

"Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession."—Psalm ii. 8

The prophetic words, addressed by Jehovah to His Son, the Messiah, continually recurred to my mind as I mingled with and observed the peoples of India, China, Japan and the Philippines during our recent World Tour. Then certain questions came before my mind, which with their answers I will place before you.

The first question was, Why do we call these people heathen? They are not barbarous, not savages, not lawless people. Indeed, long centuries ago, when our forefathers were barbarians, these had much of the civilization which they still retain. But, I said, we call them heathen because the Bible refers to them. Let us see how and why the Bible uses this term and what is its significance. In Bible usage the word rendered "heathen" is the same as is sometimes rendered nations and Gentiles. For centuries it applied to all peoples outside the little nation of Israel, because that one nation had entered into Covenant-relationship with God, and had become His people, His dominion.

All the other nations, not thus related to God by Covenant, were styled heathen; all the outside nations were aliens, strangers and foreigners from the Covenants and promises made to Israel. And this same term continued to be applicable after the coming of Jesus. Even though the Gospel favor, which was originally offered to the Jews, was later thrown open to Cornelius and all Gentiles, or heathens, only those who accepted its terms, and came in to Covenant-relationship with God through the begetting of the Holy Spirit—only these, Israelites indeed, are properly reckoned as members of spiritual Israel, of whom St. Peter tells us, "Ye are a Royal Priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people." Consequently all others than Jews and Spiritual Israelites are heathens, whether they live in the Orient or the Occident.

TWO CIVILIZATIONS CONTRASTED.

Our second question was, On the whole, to what extent is our Western civilization which is often called Christian civilization, superior to that of the East?

Considerable could be said in favor of each. We who have been accustomed from childhood to Western methods, customs, dress, etc., prefer our own, but the Eastern Peoples evidently prefer their own, and are loth to change to ours. They are, however, now passively admiring the superiority of ours in that they are gradually adopting our schooling system, military system, naval system and voting system.

But in our contrasting the two civilizations, are we not apt to forget that the very features of our civilization, which are now being accepted as superior in the East, are comparatively new to ourselves. Where were our public schools and compulsory education a century ago? It is only twenty years since that Great Britain adopted the present method. Where were our railroads, which they are now adopting? Let us remember that there was a time in the world, nor a locomotive, nor a car, a hundred years ago.

The East is rapidly introducing telegraphy, the telephone, the wireless system, the electric railways; but how long have we had these in the West? Less than a century—some of them for only ten years. Viewing the matter from this standpoint should help to keep us of the West quite humble when we think of and speak of the awakening in the East—in China, Japan, etc.

TO WHAT EXTENT HAS "CIVILIZATION" BLESSED THE WORLD.

That Christ's teachings have brought great blessings wherever they have been received is, we hold, beyond dispute. Individuals have been blessed by the precious truth of Christianity—rich and poor, of every station, kindred and tongue. To these the Gospel Message has brought peace with God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and the salvation provided through Him. To these the instruction of the Bible and the guidance of the Holy Spirit have brought the fruitage of the Spirit. To these it has brought "the peace of God, for which passeth all understanding," ruling in their hearts at all times, and under all conditions—whether "in sickness or health, in poverty's vale, or abounding in wealth."

But our question does not relate to these saintly followers of the teachings of Jesus, who walk in His footsteps. Our question is in respect to the civilization which identifies itself with Christianity, without accepting the terms or discipleship. Has this civilization brought to the masses of Europe and America great blessing, and, if it be extended to the far East, will it prove a blessing to the hundreds of millions there?

If larger houses, better streets and sewers, better water supplies, better clothing, better schools, etc., are bringing to the people of Europe and America more joy, more peace, more happiness, more contentment, more kindness, more usefulness in the present life and more preparation of the life to come, then our Western civilization is a blessing to us, and we'd think it's prove a blessing to the far East.

But has it brought these blessings? Alas, no! As far as our observations in China and Japan go, we are led to believe that their people are far harder, far more contented, than the people of Europe and America. We are not blaming this upon Christianity, because we know it not, yet said why it is so. We are merely noting facts, which must be manifest to everyone who has seen the two in contrast.

A REASON FOR THIS.

Our fourth question was, Why is it so? What peculiarities are connected with Christian civilization or the Christian teachings which produce such diverse results—bringing one class the saintly followers of Jesus, into the utmost peace and joy, and bringing others, the masses who are merely nominal Christians, into this most unsatisfactory and unhappy condition of any people in the world, even when they are enjoying greater blessings and luxuries than the majority?

There is but one answer to this question: It is because the teachings of Christ carry with them a broadening of mind, an emancipation from superstition, a spirit of liberty. True, there were Dark Ages, during which many so-called Christian superstitions prospered. But such superstitions were not the teachings of Jesus and His Apostles, but the misrepresentations of their teachings. Those superstitions did indeed for a time make the people of Europe drowsy, and for a time custom and such religious teachers to restrain human thought and to fetter and bedoud the intellects over which they had influence.

We are not discussing the merits of creeds, but merely the general influence of the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles and the Prophets of old. The discontent which we are noting began to come to Europe at the very time when the Bible was brought out from obscurity. It is the teachings of the Bible that have had the enlightening effect upon all those nations which have been in contact with them. It is the Bible teachings that have brought the special rest to some hearts, and the special discontent to other hearts.

This is the answer. The Bible alone, of all religious books, sets forth prominently the equality of all men before the Almighty God. This doctrine has spread and breaks all fetters of the mind. But all are not prepared for such liberty—some evidently would enjoy great peace and would be more quiet, more reverential and more submissive if they continued bound with a measure of superstition, than if the truth should make them free.

The only persons who can rightly appreciate and properly enjoy full liberty are those who have made a full consecration of themselves to the Lord—those who have given over all earthly ambitions and favors to the one great ambition of the Gospel of Christ—to become heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord. Those only can be fully entrusted with liberty who have realized the imperfection of all human judgment, and who have accepted instead of their own the Divine will as the rule of the class of whom St. Paul spoke, saying, "We have the mind of Christ," and this he declares is the only "spirit of a sound mind" in the world at the present time.

Nevertheless, some of the saintly people are discontented by many of the worldly-minded who are moving heaven and earth at home and abroad to amass wealth, power and fame for themselves, their families, their friends, their names, none of whom are content, none of whom are satisfied, none of whom are at peace, neither with God or with themselves. Who can doubt that the carrying of our western civilization to the peoples of the east will carry to them similar discontent, unrest, unhappiness, anger, malice, envy, hatred and strife which is peculiar to the Occident? Most most likely the effect of the Western civilization of the Chinese will be to wake up her hundreds of millions to discontent and strife, and possibly bring anarchy to her doors sooner than it will come to Europe and America.

"ASK AND I WILL GIVE THE HEATHEN."

But our text declares that if Messiah will ask of the Father, He will be given the heathen for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for His possession. Will He ask for them? Why has He not already asked for them, and what would He do with them, and would not His dealing with them have much the same influence that the Gospel Message now produces—to make them dissatisfied?

Our Lord intimates most distinctly His reason for not asking for the heathen at the first advent. In His prayer the same night in which He was betrayed to death He said, "I pray not for the world (the heathen), but for those whom thou hast given Me"—the household of faith, His footstep followers, "the Church of the Firstborn, whose names are written in heaven."

The Redeemer knew the Father's will and prayed only in harmony therewith. He knew that the first work of the Divine Plan was to be the calling and testing of an elect "little flock," to be His associates in the Kingdom, His Bride, to share with Him His glory, honor and immortality. He asked no less of the world, knowing that the Father's time had not then come. Hence we read that He ascended up on high and sat down at the right hand of the Divine Majesty, therefore awaiting for the time when His enemies would be made His footstool, and the Gentiles be given to Him for an inheritance; and He knew that this time would not come until first His Church had been developed.

At and shortly after Pentecost all who faithful of the nation of Israel, Israelites indeed, were begotten of the Holy Spirit that they might become members of spiritual Israel, the Bride class. As there was not a sufficiency of such Jews, the Divine Plan, as previously arranged, proceeded to call and test such of the heathen as were feeling after God and seeking after His righteousness. The calling work has required the best testing time, and now at the close of the six great days of human labor and sweat of face and sorrow and dying, the great seventh thousand-year day is about to be ushered in. It is the period already appointed of the Father of Messiah's reign of righteousness, in which the Bride of Christ will reign with Him.

THE END OF THE MATTER.

My next question was, What will be the end of this long reign of ignorance, superstition, sin and death?

The Bible's answer came quickly to my mind: The Divine promise is that Messiah's Kingdom will be successful, that it will bring in an abundance of peace, that "to Him every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess." Moreover, we are assured that this will be a blessing of sincere loyalty and obedience, because the context says that it shall be to the glory of God, and no other-kind of glory will be acceptable to Jehovah God. Then came the further assurance of the Bible to my mind: St. Peter's declaration, that "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things, which the Lord has spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets."—Acts iii. 19-21.

I also remembered the promise that the Redeemer would yet see the fruition of the travail of His soul and be satisfied. I remembered that assurance which He also gave, saying, Every creature in heaven and in earth and in the sea, and all things in them, I heard saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might to Him that sitteth on the Throne, and to the Lamb, forever." I remembered also His final testimony that eventually, There shall be no more sighing, no more crying, no more dying, because all "the former things" of sin and death will have passed away.

We have been requested by many of our readers to republish the following:

A WORD FOR ELDER RUSSELL.

(W. S. Garlough, Pastor Christian Church, Bloomington, Ill.)

I have read a number of articles in the Christian Standard during the past few months concerning Millenial Dawnism as taught by Elder Russell. We have all heard the criticism of the Pilgrim Fathers, how, having left their own country and endured all sorts of hardships for the sake of religious freedom, they themselves became the worst of bigots and persecutors of those who later disagreed with them. The treatment accorded Elder Russell by the disciples of Christ is very similar to the actions of those early fathers. Since reading Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures," the first and fifth volumes more than once, I have read all the articles and tracts against his teachings I could find. In not a single instance does the writer reply in the same Christian spirit which characterizes Russell's writings. In some instances the writer resorted to the only weapon left to the man without an argument.—Ridicule. Others either willingly misrepresent his teachings or do not know what he does teach. As a rule they do not touch upon the real subject matter of his "Studies" but attack some minor subject that Russell himself would not hold as a matter of faith but as being of a more or less speculative character.

To my mind, Elder Russell presents the most Scriptural, clear and satisfying conception of the person of Jesus I have ever heard or read. The same is true of man, his creation, his experience with sin, God's plan for his redemption, the gospel of Jesus Christ, and man's future destiny. Now if any good brother feels that Elder Russell's books are doing the church of Christ harm, let him read his books (all six studies) carefully, prayerfully, once or a dozen times if need be, until he knows he has the same strength, shallowness every doctrine though until it is proven by the open Book, then just as carefully, prayerfully, as we with any Christian spirit shown by Elder Russell let him take up his task, and, in a logical, Christian way, show by what he has in his brethren that the teaching of Elder Russell is unscriptural. Then will he have something worth while. But so long as Elder Russell is attacked in the present manner, no one who has read his "Studies" will be convinced that he error therein is ever there to be. Let no brother deceive himself into thinking that he can successfully refute the teaching of the six volumes of "Scriptural Studies" in a few articles in the Christian Standard or even in a tract such as Haldeman's and those others.

One thing Elder Russell's books will do if carefully read by an earnest, thoughtful Christian he will read and study his Bible more and more, he will lose his interest in worldly things. It will not be necessary to preach to him that he could not go to the theater, play cards or dance, for he will have no desire to do those things, as well as many other things in which most Christian people indulge. It will not be necessary to solicit money from him for the Lord's work—it will be forthcoming without solicitation. It would seem that, until some brother is able to present the gospel and provide "meet in due season" that does this work as well as Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures," it might be well to look inward for the beam, not outward for the mote and let the "Studies" continue to do that which most preachers admit they are not able to accomplish. Give Elder Russell a square deal.—Paston Hls. Daily Record.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Being a traveling representative of the I. B. S. A. I have taken numerous subscriptions to your valuable paper in clubbing with the Watch Tower. Many prefer your paper because of the cleanness of its sentiments, the large type and of course, chiefly because of Pastor Russell's wonderful sermons and other religious features such as the Question Box, Sunday School Lessons, etc. These friends of yours who thus desire to support you send your paper all over the world to their relatives and friends and the privilege I have of being with them enables me to hear many favorable comments on not only your paper, but they express quite warmly their appreciation of your nobility of character in loaning the sacred influence which strives to hinder the Truth by threatening editors with boycotts and other things to keep Pastor Russell's Sermons from the public's ears. These precious messages of present saving provision for mankind is swiftly changing the theology of this world for the better, and I do not wonder at the pressure brought to bear to cover up such Truth. I thought it might give you some pleasure to know that you have many good friends who are daily recommending your paper to others and who appreciate you personally.

Very truly yours,
F. A. HALL.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Again I am impressed to write you for the continued interest in various features of your good paper, particularly of the religious department. Since the dear present Lord is using it as a medium for widely extending the harvest truth, and this important closing days of the Harvest work.

The enclosed lines have been helpful to myself therefore with pleasure I pass them along.

Sincerely yours in the interest of the Truth.

"OUR FATHER KNOWS."

"Our Father knows what things we need,
Each step along the way;
His eye of love doth never sleep
He watches night and day.
He knows sometimes like ripening grain
We need the sunshine bright.
Again He sends the peace that comes
With shadows of the night.

"Sometimes our pride would fain us fur!
Ambition's flaunting sail.
Ah! then He knows we need to wait
Humiliation's vale.
Sometimes He takes our eager hands
And folds them on our breast
He gently lays our work aside
He knows we need to rest.

"Sometimes we need companionship,
Sometimes the wilderness.
How swift to feel His'll know and Give the state that will meet bless.
Then let us leave it all with Him
Assured, that some what may
Our Father knows just what we need Upon our Pilgrim way."

—Selected.

"The steps of a good man are order of the Lord.
If to the right or to left I stray
That check, O Lord, reprove
And let Thy goodness chase away
All hindrance to thy love."

"When the way is rough and thorny,
Dangers lurking in the path—
When the foe is ever planning
How to crush these in His wrath—
Have faith in God
His loving care shall keep thee safe
From every snare."

We esteem it a pleasure to drop a line to express our appreciation of your good paper, and we like the way your paper is arranged. We especially like the Lesson Helps. Brother R. S. Mason said the Lord was good for old sixes. We can say such type is good for keen young eyes from getting old. We certainly think you are doing a great deal of Christian work in the columns of your paper. We have only been taking the Tribune one month and like it better each time we get it. Such a paper won't be a great blessing to every home.

Very respectfully yours for truth and righteousness.

Have been a subscriber to your paper but a few months and it certainly a fine paper and it is the best I have ever published by Pastor Russell's Sermons. Then the Sunday School Lesson and the Question Box and other items which are of so much interest to those who are trying to live up to the teachings of Studies in the Scriptures. Was interested in the letter in your March 21 issue by Mrs. S. Cornish, Pastor Christian Church, Bloomington, Ill.

May the Lord bless you for the part you have in the spread of the Gospel message.

Sincere y yours,
JOSIE WHITE.

MR. TROUBLE ABNAG.

Mr. Trouble came a-visiting
As big as he could be
And smote Hope's airy castle
Like a vessel smack at sea.

'Taint no use for you to argue 'Cause I got the blues
And a poor forsaken mortal
Hain't no chance to wiggle free.

Just then the Lion of Judah
Hit he full with sword so black
Mr. Trouble charged compassion
While the scare run up his back.

Then recovering his composure
but enough to cowardice,
Scooted off in quick retreation
Ere he raise this Advocate.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Kansas, March 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am sending a list of subscriptions for your valuable paper through the Watch Tower and Bible Tract society at Brooklyn. I also want to thank you for publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons in such nice form, also for the other religious features, Question Box, Sunday School Lessons, etc. Surely this is the best method of spreading the gospel messages in the harvest. May the Lord bless you abundantly for your service and trusting that you will continue this good work, I am,

Yours respectfully,
MRS. A. B. ADDELL.

Washington, March 29.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am a subscriber to your paper and wish to notify you of my change of address.

I have renewed my subscription through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. My subscription runs out in May. I am renewing for my subscription now, so as to be sure I do not miss a paper. I take your paper wholly on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and Lesson, and I like no other paper so well. I have subscribed for your paper for three of my friends, and always recommend it to others.

Yours truly,
C. W. SMITH.

Virginia, March 29.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It is useless for me to undertake to express in a few words my appreciation of your valuable paper for I have never subscribed to any newspaper that was more welcome to my family. I regard it as the best in many respects that I have ever seen. The third or religious page is much enjoyed, surpassing anything that I have ever seen in a secular or news paper.

Your friend,
M. L. STAPLES.

Iowa, March 29.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to your valuable paper for another year. Have been taking it a year and a short time ago sent you a new subscriber. I enjoy each feature of your well printed paper, especially the Sermons of Pastor Russell, which you print in so complete a manner, the Question Box and Brooklyn Bible Studies columns are very valuable additions also, and I wish you continued success in every way.

Yours truly,
MRS. FRED DAVIDSON.

Pennsylvania, March 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Enclosed please find our subscription for another year to your valuable paper. We certainly appreciate the way you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons, also the Question Box is very helpful. We look forward to its weekly visits. We rejoice to know that there is one paper that is not afraid to publish the truth that is so precious to us and which is for all the families of the earth. May the Lord bless you richly is our prayer.

Sincerely yours,
MR. AND MRS. C. B. FALL.

Pennsylvania, March 28.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to state that I consider this issue of March 21 an exceptionally good one of an exceptionally good paper. The latest sermon is interesting, but to me the Sermon, Bible Question Box, etc., are even more so, and the Letters of Appreciation are like a testimony meeting.

Very truly yours,
JOHN F. DAY.

Texas, March 23.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to National Labor Tribune through Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. I have been reading your most valuable paper for two years. I subscribed wholly for the good messages it contains from Pastor Russell. To me it is meat in due season. I look forward each week to its visits, which is most desired of all the papers that I take. If I miss a copy, or it fails to come on due time, one can hardly imagine how disappointed I feel. The Question Box is very much enjoyed by me. It reveals a world of thought to any thinking mind. In fact, it is the paper for one and all other people.

Let the good work go on until the glad tidings have filled the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep.

With Christian Love to the dear editor and all its readers, I remain,
As ever,
M. M. SAUNDERS.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

North Carolina, March 29.

An amateur is liable to make mistakes. God forbid that I should ever say or write one thing that would bring reproach upon Brother Russell, or the grand and glorious message he is promulgating, and I trust that when the friends see my mistakes, they will write me personally and not use the press. This in answer to Brother L. S. Ward's rebuke in last issue of your paper.

With kindest regards and love for all, Brother Russell included,

Yours in the service of the Saviour,
JAMES WALKER HEATHERLY.

New York, March 26.

I have renewed my subscription to your grand paper through the Watch Tower office. Your paper has been coming to our house for eight years. I take it on account of the Sermons of Pastor Russell and do not wish to miss one of them as they are getting better every week. You can have my subscription to your paper as long as you print those grand sermons and thank you for the way you print them.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. JANE HELWIG.

Florida, March 29.

I write to thank you for sending back numbers of your paper. We had missed so many in moving. We were unsettled so long and we enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons so much. Also the Question Box and Sunday School Lesson. We appreciate your paper and the efforts you are putting forth. May God bless you in your good work. I shall endeavor to widen the interest in our little place.

Your appreciative and interesting reader.
MRS. R. B. HARBER.

Georgia, March 25.

Enclosed find check for three subscriptions as by memorandum. We are taking your paper on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and the Sunday School Lessons. We consider these a great help but any one who will read them, and especially so to all who profess to believe in Christ, the Redeemer ultimately from death of every member of Adam's race, and sure the dear Father of all and giver of every good and perfect gift will reward you liberally in due time for presenting these wonderful truths in such a clear full way and that they are very highly appreciated by all your dear subscribers who appreciate truth and righteousness from all standpoints. May our Father's richest blessings attend your every effort to serve him now and to the end of this age be afforded his wonderful gift of everlasting life through the agre to come wherever shall desert righteousness supreme.

Your friend ever,
C. R. PITNER.

Pennsylvania, March 29.

I appreciate the Tribune more and more. The Sermons, Questions and Letters of Appreciation are certainly doing much to encourage and help in this narrow way. I have investigated various other religious teachings, but have failed to receive that satisfaction that I have received from Pastor Russell's writings. May the Lord bless him and you for publishing Pastor Russell's writings, etc.

Respectfully yours,
CLINTON FOX.

Oklahoma, March 23.

Through the kindness of Mrs. L. A. Cross of Canada, I became acquainted with your excellent paper and am sending in my subscription Pastor Russell's sermon and the Through the Tabernacle Bible Studies are the features I especially appreciate. I will try and get more subscribers.

Yours in His name,
MRS. H. C. CHARLTON.

New Hampshire, March 29.

I cannot express in words how much I enjoy the religious instruction. I never had anything like it before, although I was a church member for over forty years, and a teacher in the Sunday school for the lower part of that time, though I am ashamed to say it, for I knew absolutely nothing of the real teaching of the Bible.

Personally or unfortunately we were not required to teach the Bible, but only the International Sunday school lessons which were specially prepared by the higher authorities of the denomination, who gave them the proper twist to harmonize with the creed (which in my case was the Universalist.) Any one of my pupils could have taught the lessons just as well (so far as true Bible knowledge went), if they had the "fix-ups" specially prepared for the teachers, but without any self-conceit I think I can say that by travelling was up to the average.

How empty and hollow it all seems to me now since I have escaped from the sectarian pen, and gone directly to Jesus and His Apostles whom He specially authorized to "feed His lambs reasons" to be taught His followers. But in this connection it is only right that I should say that Pastor Russell is the one who has shown me how to study the Bible to find its depths of riches, though of course, I had to be a willing student, anxious to know the truth whatever that might be.

I was glad to note the clipping from the Illinois paper, showing there was one Christian minister who was honest and fair-minded enough to speak out as Rev. Mr. Garlough did concerning Mr. Russell and his works.

One thing I have always observed concerning Mr. Russell's writings: He always hides his own personality behind the message he gives you. You do not see Mr. Russell at all; you only see and hear Jesus and the Apostles. It is not his (Mr. R.'s) words and message, but the word and message of the Lord that he preaches, and it is not a new message either (though it hasn't been preached for so long that it is not surprising that people regard it as one of the new "isms" or religious fads of the day.)

He is and has been preaching "the gospel of the Kingdom," and that is what Jesus Himself preached and what He commanded His disciples to preach.

For my part I rejoice to believe that that Kingdom is so near, judging from present indications the whole world will soon be in the throes of war of anarchy, and unless the Lord does come soon in the power and authority of His Kingdom, there won't be people enough left on the earth, surviving even that final conflict, to start a small town much less, to start a new dispensation.

Whether we believe the gospel of the Kingdom or not, let us all pray earnestly that it may come and that speedily.

In grateful appreciation of the help I am receiving through the Tribune, and with best wishes for your continued success.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. C. H. BURKE.

Connecticut, March 29.

I wish to tell you how much I appreciate your good paper. We watch for it weekly as one would for a letter from home. While interested in all the different features of your paper, I am more so in the sermons by Pastor Russell and also the Question Box, as there are so many question in same one desires to have answered. Indeed very much interested in that letter of last week by W. S. Ironmonger, pastor Christian church of Bloomington, Ill.

God bless him and may his banner continue for more spiritual food.

As he stated there is no one who, having carefully read Pastor Russell's six volume of Scripture Studies, can go back upon them by an attempt to prove they generally take some method by misrepresenting my teachings or attacking him personally, as the Scribes and Pharisees did in our Lord's day, they hated him without a cause. (Matt. 10: 22-23.

Very recently I had a similar experience with the minister of the South Green M. E. church, this city, who could not agree with all of the teachings of Pastor Russell. I remarked that he was the biggest man on earth and ought to be President.

The gentleman was not very well acquainted with the laws of our country or he would not have made such a statement as one being bound for a lie?

How it shows their spirit against the Lord and his servant. Matt. 7: 10-12. May God abundantly bless you, dear editor. In your efforts to spread the truth through the printed page, and at last you shall rejoice with exceeding great joy.

Yours in the annointed,
HARRY MARTIN MANNING.

England, March 15.

In the interest of Religious Freedom I feel constrained to thank you for your bold enterprise in publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons. Surely there is something remarkable in the message emanating from one pen to have the astounding influence that it has. Practically every country under the sun has some adherent to these wonderful truths and although so widely separated there is one and only one inkling each believer, viz.: intense adoration for God and His Dear Son—self-sacrificing love on behalf of one another and a tender sympathetic love for the groaning world of mankind.

I say so, it is a miracle! It is the evidence of the Almighty's Spirit operating in the hearts of his true and faithful people. (Rom. 8: 9.)

We can only conclude by saying that surely it is a fulfilment of Scripture (Rev. 1: 18; Luke 24: 37; 1 John 4: 6, 11; 5: 1-3.

Where by one other matter I would like to mention, that is, that I would like the Watch Tower from 1881 to 1916, for the benefit of a few of Bible Students' meeting here. So if any of your dear readers can supply same I will they please let me know where issues of any of these years, complete or otherwise, they could spare and I will pay for them at current rate or as they will. Perhaps the best way would be to forward them to your office and I can remit through you if you will do this for me.

Thanking you again and still again for your valuable journal and the fine style in which you serve the Bible topics.

I am, dear sir,
Yours faithfully,
J. CHARLES LARDENT.

Colorado, March 26.

I am renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. We appreciate the Tribune for the wonderful message that it sends out each week and the good news that is soon due to the training convention and we say, may God's blessing be upon you for the space that you give to your valuable paper for the Sermons, also Question Box and Sunday School Lesson.

You have a good clean paper, also large type. Count me as a subscriber as long as you publish our dear pastor's sermons.

Yours truly,
F. A. COLE.

North Carolina, March 28.

I am renewing my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower office, and attest my appreciation of its religious features by sending a new subscriber, who like myself, has become very much interested in Pastor Russell's Sermons, The Questions Box and Sunday School Lesson are also much appreciated. Wishing you much success, I am,

Very truly yours,
E. M. BULLARD.

Georgia, March 26.

Will you allow me a little space in your valuable paper. I wish to thank you for the work you are doing in aiding the spread of the truth. We watch with eagerness on Friday for the Tribune, for in it we know, we will find messages of glad tidings that is sure to keep our hearts in loving submission to the Father's will. As the truth is now dawning, fading and the light we receive on the Bible through the Sermons and Question Box is very precious to me. I cannot accept supplication at the throne of grace in your behalf for your earnest labor in the work you are doing, and we will continue to pray that soon many blind eyes will be opened and deaf ears unstopped that they might receive the truth and rejoice with us in the blessed hope. I am glad that we are taught to pray that our light may so shine before men, that in that day, that we may be among the Kingdom or Jewel Class which the Lord will make up, and may we be always in our Master's service.

M. J. Tanner.

Indiana, March 25.

As a subscriber to your paper I wish to say I appreciate it very highly.

I am glad to see how you treat the labor question, and I am also interested in the Bible Students' meetings. You may depend on me as a subscriber as long as you print such reading as Pastor Russell's sermons.

Will you please send me three extra copies of March 21 and oblige. Yours truly and fraternally,
A. D. ESHLEMAN.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

A few weeks ago I read a long article in a Cincinnati paper from the pen of the late Reverend William Carder, D. D., of New York. Mr. Carter spent a deal of words trying to prove that the Bible teaches that this earth is not living and dying, but to be literally burned up. Mr. Carter is mistaken.

Mr. Editor, I am not a big "D. D." but I know that this old earth is not going to be burned up. How surprising it is to read after the late Rev. Mr. Carter, and also wonder the people have the wool pulled over their eyes, when they allow the late Reverend Gentleman to speak out in Theological Seminaries, to do the pulling by quoting a verse of Scripture, for instance, 2 Peter 3: 10, "The thinking "Fire," in the Bible is literal. Now, Mr. Editor, I am not going to do it. No wonder the people are leaving the Bible because they think it teaches the incredible and unreasonable. Many times promulgated by men who are supposed to know what it really teaches.

Mr. Editor, I am a farmer, as I minded a nice looking old man a Congregation "Tract" from the pen of Pastor C. T. Russell. I asked him if he had ever seen anything like it before. He replied, "I read his writings, as his writings give me more light on the Bible than all the Sermons I ever heard." Mr. Editor, I talk with many people and you may rest assured of that the Lord is opening up the truth as Pastor Russell gives it. Back to Mr. Carter. The following is the Scripture Mr. Carter quotes to prove that our earth is to soon be literally "burned up."

"The heavens shall pass away with a great noise the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works therein shall be burned up." 2 Pet. 3: 10. Now strange that language should be used if we read the writings, as his writings give more light on the Bible than all the Sermons we ever heard. Mr. Editor, I talk with many people and you may rest assured of that the Lord is opening up the truth as Pastor Russel gives it. Back to Mr. Carter. The following is the Scripture Mr. Carter quotes to prove that our earth is to soon be literally "burned up."

"The heavens shall pass away with a great noise the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works therein shall be burned up." 2 Pet. 3: 10. Now strange that language should be used if we read it literally up! Now let's examine this Scriptures and see what it real mean.

First—It says "the heavens shall pass away;" and if it means exactly what it says, it proves too much. It proves that heaven itself is to "pass away," so would leave God Christ, angels and all the saints out of a home.

Second—The "elements shall melt, which if literal the elements will become hot hell.

Third—"The earth and works be burned up," which if literal the Bible is contradicted in Ps. 104: 5, where it plainly reads, "the earth abideth forever."

Why didn't Mr. Carter read on in the same chapter and quote 2 Pet. 3: 13, which reads, "Nevertheless we according to his promise look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness," which shows very plainly that passage 10 does not mean a "ecclesiastical," "elements," the wicked "elements of nominal Christendom" will melt in the bosom of sin and death. In 2 Pet. 3: 13 it reads "new heavens and new earth will be established," wherein dwelleth righteousness," right here on this earth, of course, for God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness." Acts 17: 31. I am glad we are not the U. S. A. will be right here to be judged. In Zep. 3: 8-9, we read that the earth is to be "devoured with the fire of God's jealousy," which of course is not literal fire, but in the next verse says that after the "Fire," God will turn to the people a pure language that all may call upon the Lord to serve Him with one consent. Now, did the foundation of the earth that it should not be removed forever." Psa. 104: 5.

Why should the earth to be inhabited." Isa. 45: 18. "The heavens are the Lords, but the earth he hath given to the children of men." Psa. 115: 16.

Well, Mr. Editor, I must quit before I worry you. Tell Mr. Carter if you see him to read "Scripture Studies."

Yours sincerely,
J. W. HEATHERLY.

Canada, March 22.

It is with much pleasure that I renew herewith my subscription to the Tribune for another year. I have been greatly pleased with the way you are publishing the sermons of Pastor C. T. Russell every week since I first took the paper, and especially so when the Sunday School Lesson and Question Box features were added, as well as the meeting with others I have known through the medium of the letters of appreciation. These features all combine to make the Tribune the paper to me. How truly is the prediction fulfilled daily: "Knowledge shall be increased. Dan. 12: 4. Not only is general knowledge increasing, but the true knowledge, which the poet describes as "A Ray of Purest Light."

Beaming through the depths of night
For threescore and ten thousand years
Of the endless, dreadful years,
Whence eternal blessings flow
As an antidote for human woe.

Is certainly being increased today at a rate never before equalled, even in this present harvest period.

"All things are swiftly moving, let the heavens time begin.
The old is swiftly passing and the new is coming in!"
And today it is true as never before that,

Upon the Gospel's sacred page,
Truth's glorious beacon rays shine
For, as it hastens, every age, fulfil's its prophecies divine.

I am glad that your paper is having the honor of being the agency used for the general diffusion of this particular kind of knowledge, along with other kinds of knowledge, and trust that it may continue to spread the "science of divine revelation" to the very ends of the earth before the last. With best wishes, dear Editor, I am,

Yours in the service of the Truth,
F. G. HAMMES.

Pennsylvania, March 23.

Have been thinking ever since receiving the Tribune, I would write you of my appreciation of your most valuable paper and the far-reaching space you give and the nice large type in which you print Pastor Russell's Sermons, Bible Questions, Bible Studies and Everybody's Question Box which are all so interesting. Also enjoy reading the many letters from the friends. I do not want to miss a copy of the Tribune. May you continue to have the glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people" flowing from it. Do not lose your reward. Wishing your paper much success, I am

Yours respectfully,
MISS ANNA CROSBIE.

HIS MEMORY CLEAR.

The Witness Proved to the Lawyer That He Could Remember.

A story is told of an ominous lawyer receiving a severe reprimand from a witness whom he was trying to browbeat. It was in a Scottish court, and in order to save his cause from defeat it was necessary that the lawyer should discredit the witness. He therefore proceed to do it on the ground of age in the following manner:

"How old are you?" asked the lawyer.

"Seventy-two years," replied the witness.

"Your memory, of course, is not so brilliant and vivid as it was twenty years ago, is it?" asked the lawyer.

"I do not know how it is," answered the witness.

"State some circumstance which occurred, say, twenty years ago," said the lawyer, "and we shall be able to see how well you can remember."

After some hesitation, said the witness, "if I am to be interrogated in this manner, it is useless!"

"You had better answer the question," replied the judge.

"Yes, sir; state it," said the lawyer.

"Well, sir, I remember a year before I will. About twelve years ago you studied in Judge ——'s office, did you not?"

"Yes," answered the lawyer.

"Well, sir, I remember your father coming into the office and saying to me, 'Mr. D., my son is to be examined tomorrow, and I wish you would lend me $15 to buy him a suit of clothes.' I remember also, sir, that from that day to this he has never paid me that $15. Now, sir, I remember as though it were yesterday."

A PROBLEM IN FIGURES.

It Scared the Mathematician, but the Woman Solved It.

One day a young mathematics went shopping with his wife. He tagged along aimlessly from counter to counter until they came to the dress trimmings department and there he found something in his line. Said his wife to the saleswoman:

"How wide is that gold spangled black cring?"

"Three-eighths of a yard," said the girl.

"How much is it a yard?"

"Three dollars."

Counting the professor's wife, "how much of three-eighths wide material will it take to put four six-inch strips around a two and three-quarter yard skirt that is seven inches narrower at the knees than it is at the bottom, and how much will it cost?"

At the first mention of those figures the professor's head began to reel, and after still more had been said his wife and the girl got out pencils and paper and began to do their sum. Presently his wife said:

"Here, dear; you know all about mathematics. Help us solve this problem, won't you?"

But the professor said: "Excuse me, I feel faint; I must get a little fresh air," and ignominously fled.

His wife came home with exactly the amount of material required, and the professor rose her very high in that she didn't pay a cent too much.—Philadelphia Ledger.

JESUS' SOUL RESURRECTED.

1 Corinthians xv, 1-11—April 7.

Text: "He saved others; himself he cannot save; he is the King of Israel; let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him."—Matt. 27: 42.

TODAY, appropriate to the Easter season, we are to consider our Lord's resurrection. At the very outset we are confronted with certain errors which have gradually crystallized around the central truths of God's Word. One of these errors is the supposition that the resurrection of the dead which the Scriptures hold forth as the hope of the Church and of the world, is to be a resurrection of the bodies which go down into death.

This mistake has given ground for infidelity to sneer at this precious doctrine of the Bible.

We are asked,
How could the dust which once constituted bodies of thousands of millions of humanity ever be recollected and rearranged so that we could say that those matter were resurrected. The infidel avers that many of humanity have been eaten by fishes and animals, and that their corpses have been absorbed by vegetation, which in turn has been eaten time and again by man and transformed into the many organisms. The proposition is manifestly unanswerable, yet it does not overthrow the Bible teaching of the resurrection, but merely our crooked misapprehensions of the Bible teaching. What the Scriptures teach is that the real man is the soul, the being, and that he persists while gradually the body disintegrates, decomposing and slaughing off. Scientists estimate that the human body undergoes a complete change every seven years. According to the Bible the process of rejuvenation would have continued everlastingly had man continued by obedience to the Divine favor and in enjoyment of the everlasting life promised. It was sin that brought the penalty of sentence, death of the soul. It was Adam's soul that sinned, it was Adam's soul that died—"In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

"He is risen."

Christ's Death and Resurrection Makes Restitution Possible.

The result of this Divine sentence upon man would have been extinction—he would have been on the same plane as the brute element of God should exist death for every man." The death which Jesus experienced on Calvary was the sacrificial offering which destroyed Adam—the soul of Jesus died as the ransom-price for the soul of Adam and his children as a penalty. Thus we read of Jesus: "He poured out His soul unto death: He made His soul an offering for sin."

It is by virtue of this corresponding price which Jesus paid that ultimately there shall be a release from the dead soul of man, will be granted a release" from the death penalty—a resurrection of the soul, a new being, not in the body but of the dead souls. In the resurrection God will give to each soul a body as it has pleased Him—1 Corinthians xv, 38.

The few during this Age who have become joint-heirs with Christ by reception of the Holy Spirit will be granted spirit bodies like to the Savior's. The remainder of mankind, not having been begotten of the Holy Spirit, will in the resurrection be granted human bodies, the same as they previously had, and their relation or will before them exactly as to all the perfection of the dear Adam, unless they refuse the grace of God, in which event they will die the Second Death, from which there is to be no resurrection.

Jesus' Soul Resurrected.

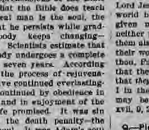
St. Peter, on the day of Pentecost, laid stress upon the fact of Christ's resurrection, and he reminds us that this was foretold. The Prophet David declared, "Thou will not leave My soul in sheol, nor suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption"—Acts ii, 27.

The soul is Saviour word's were a prophecy of the resurrection of Jesus—that His soul was not left in death, the redemptive price for Adam's soul and for the race, was not left in death, He shall, he hadse, but was raised from the dead.

St. Paul tells us that "He was put to death in flesh, but quickened in spirit." He declared that Jesus in His resurrection was evolved to a higher than human nature—far above angels and principalities and powers"—the divine nature.

As angels exhibit materialize and appear in the flesh and disappear, and had done so in the past, so did Jesus. In order that His disciples might not misunderstand He appeared in the different forms—on two of the occasions in forms representing the Crucified One. On the other six occasions, in various forms, as the gardener, the sojourner, etc.



Q.—Is the oneness between Jesus Christ and God, the Heavenly Father, Biblical or metaphysical? (R. A. L.)

Answer.—In the early history of the Church, after the Apostles had fallen asleep, many bitter controversies were engaged in over this very question. But now in these latter days when knowledge is increasing along all lines, and particularly so as regards the knowledge and understanding of the Scriptures, the solution of the matter is clearly seen. There is not a single passage of Scripture to be found in which it is set forth that the Lord Jesus and the Father are one in the metaphysical sense. Two texts are usually relied upon to support the metaphysical view, but it has been found that one of these texts has been wrongly translated and the other is spurious as it is not contained in any of the old Greek manuscripts. The first of these, John 1: 1, should read: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with the God, and the Word was (those) a God. The same was in the beginning with the God (the God)." The logos was a God (mighty one) and was with the God the Almighty One. The spurious passage is found in 1 John v, 7, and consists of the words, "In heaven the Father, the Word and the holy Spirit, and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth." As showing that the oneness of the Father and the Son is in the ethical sense we need only to quote a portion of the Lord Jesus' prayer—"I pray not for the world but for them which thou hast given me, for they are thine * * * and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are." In this text that Jesus is not the Father, that they may be one as we are * * * that they may be one, even as we are one"—1 in that text Jesus is not the Father, they may be made perfect in one."—John xvii, 9, 20-23.

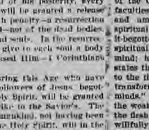
Q.—Please explain this Scripture found in 1 John iii, 9—"Whosoever is born of God does not sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin because he is born of God."

Answer.—A better translation from the original Greek manuscripts renders the passage thus—"No one who has been begotten by God practices sin; because His Seed abides in him; and he cannot sin, because he has been begotten by God." This begetting takes place at the time of the receiving of the Holy Spirit. In other words it is the beginning of the new spiritual life; the living of the Christlike life. This new creature—2 Corinthians v, 17—is a living, active creature which while in the flesh and will be born of the spirit in the resurrection. The spirit of the Lord God is the source of life and existence upon the minds and hearts of those who have surrendered to Him and are obedient to the Divine will. This holy power of the Lord gradually transforms the mind of the begotten one, changing the mental faculties so that earthly hopes, desires and ambitions die, while heavenly things come to be developed. The newly-begotten New Creature becomes spiritually minded: develops a new mind in which is developed what pertains the Apostle—"He not conformed to the things of this world but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds." (Romans xii, 2.) Because of the weakness and the imperfections of the flesh we sin at times constantly, or willfully, the new mind, the mind of Christ cannot sin. All who are honest with themselves will acknowledge that there are imperfect and cannot do the things that they would: perfectly.—See 1 John i, 8; ii, 1. The embryotic New Creature, the mind of Christ, dominated by the holy spirit cannot sin (willfully as long as "His seed (the spirit) remaineth in him."

Q.—Have we any reason for anticipating the world's conversion to Christianity before long?

Answer.—We have every reason to expect the world's conversion to Christ not many years hence, but perhaps this work will be brought about in an orderly different way and manner than is usually supposed. The Scriptures clearly foretold that the world would be free from being in harmony with the Lord and his righteous laws at the close of this present age or evil world dispensation—Isa. xi, 11; 18; II Timothy i, 5; Matthew xxiv, 37-39). And that it would not be until after our Lord's second coming that the world would be brought to a knowledge of the truth, the way of salvation, and then only gradually and by means of love and kindness. Meantime an election is taking place which when completed will result in the formation of a special class of the Lord's earnest devoted followers who when glorified and united with their Lord in the spirit nature—will receive a higher than human nature—far above angels and principalities and powers"—the divine nature.

As angels exhibit materialize and appear in the flesh and disappear, and had done so in the past, so did Jesus. In order that His disciples might not misunderstand He appeared in the different forms—on two of the occasions in forms representing the Crucified One. On the other six occasions, in various forms, as the gardener, the sojourner, etc.



Q.—What is meant by the Scriptures which declare that in the last days there will be a fearful time of trouble (Daniel xii, 1; Matthew xxiv, 21, 22)? Has this any reference to the industrial and social crisis that is now developing throughout the world?

Answer.—There have been seasons of severe trouble and destruction at various times in the history of the race, such as the destruction of the city of Jerusalem, when about a million and a quarter of Jews were slain, and the French Revolution, when vast numbers were slaughtered by the mobs and by the troops—a reign of terror indeed—but the "time of trouble" in the end of the age one not of the kind the world for "the earth shideth forever"—Ecclesiastes 1: 4 is represented as being a more dreadful time in any previous experience, in the sense that it will be world-wide and not a local distribution as were the previous seasons of destruction. (See Revelation xvi, 14; Luke xxi, 25; Zephaniah iii, 8.) The Scriptures clearly indicate that when way the trouble will be developed, after the nations, kingdoms and governments have become associated together, forming a general community of interests, such as we see existing now, when all are brought together by financial, political, and social ties, treaties and alliances. It will be an industrial and social conflict that will involve all classes and be terrible when the climax is reached. The battle lines are already sharply drawn. Organized capital on the one hand and organized labor on the other are the two forces arrayed against each other in deadly conflict. The Apostle James writes almost like a Socialist in describing some of the phases of the impending struggle—James v, 1-5. Even the "friendly" is ever conditions will be established on a new basis, and an era of peace and prosperity be ushered in.—Haggai ii, 7.

Q.—What is man? Is he half spiritual and half fleshly, or is he entirely a human or earthly being?

Answer.—There is not a single expression to be found in the Scriptures to which it is stated that man was created in any sense a spirit being. On the contrary the Bible distinctly asserts that man is of the earth earthy," that he was formed of the dust of the ground and that the breath of life was breathed into the nostrils and he became a living soul. 1 Corinthians xv, 45-47; Genesis ii, 7. The Scriptural expression "and the spirit returns to God who gave it" has reference to the life principle or spark of life which the Lord bestowed in the beginning and was created from the dust of the ground. This breath of life is the active principle that makes the living human and when removed from the body it returns to the Creator who is the source or fountain of all life. Nowhere in the Scriptures is man created a little lower than the angels, the lowest of the spirit beings. Man is the highest of the animals or earthly beings, and in the divine arrangements was to be the ruler or the monarch over the earthly realm. He was to dominate over the beast of the field and the fish of the sea and the fowls of the air. In view of this the high estimate of the Bible on this matter we can understand the words of our Lord and His Apostles when they refer to man as having no holy spirit in order to have a spiritual existence in any sense. The Lord Jesus when the first one to be developed as a spiritual new creature, from the fleshly or earthly condition. Although He was a perfect man He was not fully or even made perfect through sufferings (Hebrews ii, 10) as a spiritual "new creature." Nevertheless He was a perfect man in flesh, but being made alive in spirit."—1 Peter iii, 18. Diaglott.

Q.—Does not Luke xvi, 20-31, teach the conscious existence of the soul after death?

Answer.—In view of the clear and plain statements of the Bible regarding the unconscious condition of the soul (Ezekiel xviii, 4; Acts iii, 23) and that nowhere in the Bible is it declared that the soul is immortal, but that God only hath immortality; we are forced to the conclusion that the parable of Lazarus and the Rich Poor Man" is a parable and not a literal statement of facts. In a parable the thing used is never the thing meant. As in the parable of the "Sheep and Goats" no one would be so senseless as to say that literal sheep and goats were meant. So in this parable; would any one say that "Abraham's bosom" was literal? That Abraham's bosom is not literal then the "hell of torment" is not actual. If we take the whole parable as a unit then no one when we are compelled to believe that all of the poor people in the world will be tormented in a literal burning, or dogs will go straight to Abraham's bosom at death. And all of the rich in a hell of torment. Nothing is said about Lazarus being a good man or the rich man being a wicked man. How we must all slumber when we are dead. The lines are fare sumptuously," and how we must envy those who are poor and have sores and can let the dogs lick them! No, this parable rightly understood, does not teach the conscious existence of the soul after death. A card request to the "Question Box Editor" will bring free of charge a full and reasonable interpretation of this parable.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

British Coal Strike Enters Fourth Week. Government's Minimum Wage Bill Pleases Neither Coal Owners Nor Miners--Arrest of Tom Mann Under an Act of Parliament 115 Years Old. Latest British Trade Union Statistics.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, March 28.—The twenty-third day of the national British coal strike has arrived and there are no signs of a settlement. The condition of the country is very serious. Between the miners on strike and the people rendered idle compulsorily owing to want of coal for the factories, etc, there are now over two million operatives not working. Strike pay and out of work pay is being received by the majority of these, the figure varying from $1.25 per week to $3 a week. On the whole it may be safely said that today two million dollars are being paid out by the trade unions directly or indirectly affected by the coal strike. The miners still show a strong as possible determination although there are perhaps some amongst their leaders who lean towards a more conciliatory attitude. These, however, do not in any way represent the feeling of the overwhelming majority of their members.

The minimum wage bill introduced this week into the House of Commons as a government measure has already passed the second of its necessary three readings. The labor party in the House of Commons voted for the second reading along with the Irish members and the Liberals. The Conservatives were dead against it but were heavily outvalled. Along with the labor party in supporting the bill are, of course, to be included the direct parliamentary representatives of the miners. This however, must not be taken to mean that the miner members any more than the labor party as a whole agree with Mr. Asquith's proposed act of Parliament which really appears to please nobody. The real fight will come in the House when the third reading is moved. The Miner's Federation of Great Britain has directed its members in the House and other members of the labor party to reaffirm the schedules of February 2 along with the minimum of $1.25 a day for underground workers other than coal hewers and fifty cents for boys of whom quite 50,000 are at work underground in British coal mines, some as young as thirteen years of age. Attempts will be made by the Government to secure the passing of the third reading of the measure on a compromise. Politicians are always great on compromise. An endeavor will be made to get the miners to accept the bill by including the $1.20 and fifty cents minimum, leaving the schedules that the miners demand for coal hewers' minimum daily wages to be settled by arbitration after the passing of the bill and after work is resumed.

It is an open secret that many of the miners of Parliament and other members of the labor party will be willing to support this compromise but even they will have to reckon with the indomitable spirit of the coal miners themselves. The miners' leaders in London have been warned by their members that unless the next complete minimum schedule laid down by the miners' convention on February 5 and ballot of February 12 ers for or against the bill will show a majority heavily against the Government measure. The advanced element although apparently in the minority on the executive of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain certainly appear to have the support of the majority of the federation members. The older and more moderate miners' leaders continue to hold their positions mainly on personal grounds, such as long service.

Keir Hardie, one of the most popular labor leaders of the country and himself an ex-coal miner, says that the bill will not do. He declares that if it became law, would be fatal to the freedom of the working collier. It has been framed to suit the owners, and cannot in its present form be accepted by the men. He looks forward with the greatest apprehension to a condition of things in which the collier is to be tied up by legal restrictions, is to be certificated, scheduled, and subjected to conditions which, far from attaining, will, by their tyranny, increase the hardship of the condition under which he works and lead to further unrest.

As I anticipated last week Tom Mann, the well-known labor leader, was arrested on March 19 on the familiar charge of inciting soldiers to traitorous practices. This means that he accepts responsibility for the article published in a certain labor journal and on leaflets urging soldiers not to shoot down strikers when called upon to do so. The last of the statutes under which he is to be charged has been dug up especially for the present occasion and dates from 1797.

Tom Mann, who is 56 years of age, has for many years taken a leading part in many of the labor troubles both in this country and in Australia. He first came into prominence in the great London dock strike of 1889, having previously joined the Social Democratic Federation. After the dock strike he organized the lock industry, and was the first secretary of the London Reform Union. A Liberal Government appointed him a member of the Royal Commission on Labor in 1892.

A few years later his activity in labor agitation decreased and he took over a public house in the neighborhood of Bow street, but in the late nineties he emigrated to Australia. In February, 1908, the arrest of the Australian miners of Broken Hill on the Barrier broke out against the reduction of wages. The strikers took him up, and for a short time he was a popular leader. A riot broke out, and Mann was arrested on a charge of taking part in it. He was committed for trial but the same day was released on an understanding that he would take no further part in labor agitation in New South Wales.

After the Broken Hill troubles were over he went to New Zealand, and thence returned to England. Last year he again emerged from his retirement during the great transport strike, and next took a prominent part in the formation of the Industrial Syndicalist Education League.

The members of the General Railway Workers' Union, the United Pointsmen and Signalmen, and the executive conference to vote in favor of uniform salaries for pastors. It is proposed to have all the congregations contribute to a central fund, from which each pastor will be paid the same salary. It will be noted that labor organizations are not the only societies engaged in endeavoring to gain and maintain a living wage.

TWO TALES THAT DON'T AGREE.

THE railroads of the United States, through their committee of managers which is meeting the engineers in conference to discuss the demand of the latter for an increase in wages, have issued a circular letter in which they set forth to the public their reasons for refusing any wage advance. The circular says:

"The ability of the railroads to meet the recurring demands for increased wages is measured by the net results of their operation and the sum of the obligations which they must meet to maintain their solvency. The reduction of the net revenues by the constantly increasing expenses of operation have so narrowed the margin which is essential to the solvent existence of many of the roads that further increases in operating costs are viewed with grave concern."

The refusal to advance wages is thus based squarely on the alleged decrease of net earnings due to the high prices of labor, materials, etc. And yet not a day passes that there do not come from the offices of the railroads for the information of the stock traders in Wall street, and the financial community generally, statements showing that the net earnings as well as gross earnings of the roads are increasing. Not only are they increasing, but they are increasing in a remarkable manner. Take the statements issued, for example, last Friday (which happens to be also the date of the circular.) They cover important and representative systems, to wit:

For February the Burlington reports it had a gross increase of $612,502, or 10 per cent and added $123,13 to net.

The Great Northern had the largest gross for the month in its history, being $750,000, or over 20 per cent ahead of last year, and $450,000, or 12 per cent above the previous high point of 1910. Its net increase over 190 per cent or $587,000.

Norfolk & Western increased freight revenues $593,189, or nearly 25 per cent and added $423,13 to net.

Chesapeake & Ohio gained $257,000 gross, or over 10 per cent, its February also being the best on record, and showing $129,000 more net than a year ago.

Denver & Rio Grande increased gross $176,810, or 11 per cent, while net was about $28,000 larger than a year ago.

Jersey Central increased gross $378,000, or nearly 20 per cent, and net $287,000, or about 45 per cent.

Here are increases in net earnings, published in the face of the decline in stocks in Wall street, ranging from 25 to 100 per cent, yet when the workmen in overalls come into the general offices, cap in hand, and ask for an increase in wages, the presidents of these selfsame roads exclaim in a shocked voice: "What are you trying to do—throw us into the hands of receivers? Don't you know that our net earnings have already almost reached the vanishing point and that if we raise your wages we will go headlong to financial disaster?"

What the public would like to know, what the engineers would like to know, and what Wall street would like to know, is which story of the railroad presidents is correct.

TRIUMPHS FOR WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

UPON BEING asked why they cheered wildly the other day when the women's suffrage bill was beaten in the House of Commons by a vote of 222 to 208, the suffragists were not slow to answer. They pointed out that an adverse majority of 167 on the same proposition in 1911 has been cut to 14 in 1912. In other words, the suffragists have gained (relatively) 153 votes in Parliament in a single year, which is equivalent to say that large a gain in the present year, woman's suffrage will be actually established in Great Britain by this time in 1913. The suffragists therefore had good reason for their enthusiasm.

In the United States the suffragists point out that while they are not "arriving" as rapidly as in England they are making note-worthy progress. Their latest accomplishment, referred to in these columns recently, was the insertion of an equal suffrage amendment in the new state constitution in Ohio. There is little doubt that the constitution will be ratified by the voters of Ohio at the November election. A joint resolution has just been passed by both branches of the Michigan Legislature for a referendum in that state in November on a suffrage amendment to its constitution. "I am glad to say," declares senator La Follette, "that the Legislature of Wisconsin has passed a suffrage law which will be submitted to a vote of the people in the fall. I shall make a campaign in favor of it." There is a probability that the states here named will, in 1912, join Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Colorado, Washington and California in abolishing sex discrimination at the ballot box.

MINISTERS AFTER MINIMUM WAGE.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Lay delegates of the New Jersey Methodist Episcopal conference, in session at Asbury Park, N. J., took what is considered the most radical action in the history of the church, when they instructed their delegates to the general conference to vote in favor of uniform salaries for pastors. It is proposed to have all the congregations contribute to a central fund, from which each pastor will be paid the same salary. It will be noted that labor organizations are not the only societies engaged in endeavoring to gain and maintain a living wage.

MOVEMENT IN BETTER SHAPE

WASHINGTON, April 8.—It is reported to headquarters by the local organizer at Lead, S. D., that the movement in that city, which has been torn asunder by the difficulties existing between the miners and the operators, is on the up-grade. It is stated that the building trades who have been favoring the unfair mining companies are beginning to realize that their interests are being seriously affected by their attitude toward union men, and it is predicted that a revival of union interest is at hand.

Journeymen tailors recently formed a union at Phoenix, Ariz.

DR. G. STANLEY HALL'S VIEWS ON SLANG AND FLIRTING.

THE foremost American authority on the psychology of childhood and youth is Dr. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark university, Worcester, Mass. He has the faculty of popularizing a subject which to many readers is likely to seem abstruse and uninteresting, and he has propounded various theories which have attracted much attention and given rise to voluminous newspaper discussion. Among these is his proposition that slang is a natural form of expression for the adolescent period and should not be altogether discouraged since it aids boys and girls in their teens to acquire fluency at a time when their perceptive faculties outrun their gifts of language. Dr. Hall has also declared his belief that flirting is the most general recreation of girls and is not to be condemned if not carried to excess.

FEEHAN CONTROLS MINERS' CONVENTION

BULLETIN—By a vote of 162 to 86 the Pittsburgh miners' district convention on Tuesday morning settled the whole controversy about the tellers' report (declaring President Feehan re-elected) by referring the whole matter to the national executive board. There is not the slightest doubt among Mr. Feehan's friends that his election will be sustained by the national board. The resolution which affected this settlement of the matter was offered by the delegate from the Catasauqua mines, E. S. McCullough, former national vice president.

Intense excitement was caused in the convention last Thursday when Michael Halapy, the defeated for president, made the charge, on the floor, that either 3,000 votes had been counted illegally for Francis Feehan, his successful opponent, or that number of votes, which had been cast for Halapy, were thrown out.

Vice President Bittner's retort to his charge caused even more excitement. He said the non-union coal interests had financed the campaign against Feehan in a bold attempt to disrupt the union.

The fight over the tellers' report came in an abrupt close for that day when E. S. McCullough of Monongahela, reminded the delegates that the district convention wasn't empowered to act in any way on the referendum election.

President Feehan announced the following committees for the convention: Constitution, George Danner, Siranu; William Tears, Avon Clay; William Hall, Fayette City; Ralph Taylor, Burgettstown; John A. Duncan, Hazel Kirk; officers' reports, Duncan Douglas, Smithton; John Quigley, Dolger; James Rudolph, Primrose; Elmer Dowler, California; Patrick Garvin, Greensburg; grievances, Robert Gaitens, Cuddy; James Oates, Charleroi, Gorley Stokes, Courtney; Thomas Harley, Willcock; Michael Eichler, Blythedale.

The announcement of the result of the election of district officers was the signal for loud protests from the Halapy faction, which was determined to make trouble.

The figures were as follows:

For president—Francis Feehan, 5,211; Michael Halapy, 4,6274. Feehan's majority, 5534. For vice president—Van Bittner, incumbent, 5,384; Charles Pritchard, 3,913; Bittner's majority, 1,4111. For secretary-treasurer—Timothy Donovan, recently removed from office on charges, 5,146; Robert Wood, 3,457; Martin Gresky, 1,771; Harry Delleber, 316; Thomas Robertson, 6341; Wood's majority over Donovan, 271. International board members—George Savage, 4,867; Asa Sumar, 2,430; John Gammell, 1,295; Albert Anderson, 5331; Dagger, who holds that place at present, declared re-elected. John S. Fallis, with 2,150 votes, was declared a retired district officer. The three highest votes for district tellers were: Michael Marracini, 2,733; John Fagan, 2,676, and James Oates, 2,170. For district board members (six to elect), the six highest were given as follows: F. P. Hanewsy, 5,46; James Chatjeon, 5087; William Hargest, 4,535; John O'Leary, 3,443; Sidney Davis, 725; William Tears, 690. They are voted on separately by members of the six sub-districts. All except Tears, who is declared elected to succeed William McKay, who was not a candidate, are present members of the district executive board.

The convention last Thursday decided that work will not be resumed in the mines of the district until April 22. In the meantime the referendum vote will be taken on the wage settlement reached in the Cleveland conference. When the men return to work the suspension will have lasted three weeks.

The gathering had before it a committee report recommending that the district executive board be empowered to levy an assessment of one dollar per member to defray the expenses of the convention. This was voted down.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The Senate Passes Almost Unanimously the Children's Bureau Bill After a Favorable Report by Committee--The Brotherhood of Carmen's Union Being Intimidated by the Great Northern Railroad for Organizing.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Only recently the Senate passed the children's bureau bill. A similar bill was also introduced in the House and referred to the House Labor Committee. The House Labor Committee reported the bill favorably and it has passed by a vote of 173 to 17. The bill, as passed in the House, only differs in one particular from that passed in the Senate. The Senate bill provides $1,440 per year as the salary of messenger, while the House bill conforms to the statutory salary of $840. The provision in the House bill regarding this difference will likely be accepted by the Senate, and then the bill will go to the president for his signature. In all probability the president will sign the bill. The purpose of the bureau which is about to be created, after long years of agitation, is to investigate and report upon the question of infant mortality, orphanage, juvenile courts, accidents, disease of children, and the employment of children, and is for the further purpose of suggesting legislation affecting children. In the several states, in fact, the bureau will be empowered to make inquiries and submit reports on every phase of child life. Congressman Wilson, chairman of the House Labor Committee, had charge of the bill on the floor of the House during the discussion incident to its passage.

The House Committee on Interstate commerce has favorably reported to the House the Adamson bill providing for drastic regulation of rates of express companies and placing such companies under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The bill provides that hereafter express companies must assess rates on packages not exceeding eleven pounds by weight according to the zone system, the lower rate applying to the shorter hauls. The maximum rates are to be 11 cents per pound for packages traveling 400 miles; four cents per pound under 600 miles; five cents per pound under 800 miles; seven cents per pound under 1,200 miles; ten cents per pound under 2,000 miles and twelve cents a pound for any distance greater than 2,000 miles.

Congressman Taylor of Colorado, has introduced a bill in the House for the recall of Federal Judges whose official acts do not meet with public favor. The Taylor bill provides that Federal Judges may be recalled every four years in the event they are guilty of misconduct in office. It is provided that the recall vote is to be taken, when necessary, at the quadrennial election, and those entitled to vote for the recall of a judge are those residing in the territory which the court circuit embraces. A separate provision emits es the voters, if they wish, to suggest the name of a proper successor.

The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen has organized local unions at almost every point of the Great Northern railroad. The company, upon learning that these unions had been organized, issued a circular letter, stating to the members of the Carmen's union that they must either leave their organization or be discharged. An effort was made to secure a conference with the officials, but the representative of the Carmen was refused admittance to the conference, although the state commissioner of labor and the president of the state Federation of Minnesota were given an audience. These latter officials, however, were informed that the company would only deal with the Carmen and Trackmen as individuals. Owing to the stand of the company, complaints have been filed and warrants issued for the arrest of some of the officials of the Great Northern. These officials have been arrested under the anti-blacklisting laws and a trial of the case will shortly be had. In the meantime a number of the men have been discharged.

Congressman Sulzer of New York, has introduced a concurrent bill for the creation of a Department of Labor. The reconstructed bill is acceptable to all those interested in the creation of this new department. It is provided that the new department, when created will be headed by a cabinet officer known as the secretary of labor and will be separate from the present department known as the Department of Commerce and Labor. This bill has been referred to the Labor Committee and undoubtedly will be favorably reported to the House at an early time.

The southern conference on women and child labor will meet in Chattanooga, Tenn., April 25 next. This conference is the outgrowth of a number of persons, comprising manufacturers, workingmen and women, factory inspectors, club women, and others interested in the welfare of women and children employed in mills and factories. The primary purpose of the organization is to secure uniform and adequate laws in the Southern States for the protection of working women and children.

It has been shown through evidence produced before the Stanley House In-

EFFECTIVE ADDRESS BEFORE AMERICAN ACADEMY.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—President Gompers, in addressing the American Academy of Political and Social Science at Philadelphia, enlivened the proceedings by his strong indictment of the United States Steel Corporation. He said in part: "Today the United States Steel Corporation is practically safe from inconvenience from the organized labor movement. It has peace in its camps, but it is the sort of peace to which the Czar of Russia referred when he said, Peace reigns in Russia. You are lulling yourself into fancied security. Some day you will wake up and find that it has been either a dream or a nightmare. You have crushed out the spirit of labor organization in some of your plants. By direct methods you have opened the channel of immigration to your plants and the American workers are there no longer. They are docile—they do your bidding without evasion. You think you are safe. So did the proprietors of the textile mills of Lawrence, and so do many other employers." The academy contains in its membership the leading thinkers of the day, and President Gompers created an intense situation by his remarks.

A Bill Against Tobacco Coupons

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Congressman Mott of New York, has introduced a bill which prohibits tobacco manufacturers from packing or attaching to their product, be it snuff, cigars, or cheroot, tobacco or cigarette, any sort of coupon or label offering a gift, premium or prize. The congressman states that independent cigar dealers and manufacturers all over the country are urging the passage of the measure. "There was a time," he continued, "when a man could enter the tobacco business with the hope of some day owning a store, but the big organization which controls so much of this business now has a way of swallowing up the retailers, and the best a young man can hope for is a job managing one of the trust's retail stores."

Pastor Russell's Sermon

WHY CHRIST ROSE FROM THE DEAD.

What It Proved and What It Guarantees—The Core of the Gospel—Pastor Russell, in His Easter Sermon, Shows How the Errors of Pseudo Science Have Divided the Faith of God's People Into Many Denominations—Explains the Doctrine of Resurrection as Presented by the Bible—The Soul, Not the Body Comes Forth.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 5.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle preached in the Academy of Music to nearly twenty-five hundred hearers. His topic was "Why Christ arose from the dead." His text: "Christ, to our reason, then is our preaching vain, and we are found false witnesses of God. * * * Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (1 Cor. 15: 14, 15, 18.) He said:—

The faith once delivered to the saints by Jesus and the Apostle in respect to the resurrection of the dead has been very generally lost. Christian people profess a belief in the resurrection, because they find it stated in the Bible, yet they are continually in difficulty in their endeavor to make the Scriptural teaching on the subject square with some of the unscriptural theories received into the Church and incorporated into many of the creeds during the "Dark Ages."

St. Paul warned the Church against those human philosophies, and called them "science, falsely so called," which makes void the Word of God. These errors have been instrumental in dividing the faith of God's people into six hundred denominations, with six hundred different professions. If God's people could all come back to the simplicity of the Bible's teaching in respect to the resurrection of the dead, all of these differences would speedily disappear. God's Word would be seen to be beautiful and harmonious, satisfactory to the conscientious intellect, as none of our sectarian creeds are.

Really the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead has been repudiated by all denominations, not will ye, yet unintentionally, by perforce as it were. An opposite theory received and interwoven in the Church leaves no place for the doctrine of the resurrection as the Bible presents it. Consequently we have twisted the doctrine of the resurrection and profess to "believe in the resurrection of the body."

Yet even this perverted view of the resurrection is not satisfactory to those who hold it. Then we ask many a time that the doctrine of the resurrection were not in the Bible, so much difference does it cause. For instance, how inconsistent it seems that they should should say, "I believe in the resurrection of the body," and then say, as many do, Dying is but going home, getting rid of the mortal flesh and being freed from its limitations. If it is a blessing to die and yet free from the limitations of the body, how could it be a blessing to be resurrected in the body, and be obliged to keep it through all eternity? Such is the inconsistency of the resurrection, however, from the general view.

THE BIBLE RESURRECTION REASONABLE.

There is nothing inconsistent in the Bible presentation of the resurrection. Not from the Bible, but from men, comes the suggestion of the resurrection of the body. The Bible invariably refers to the resurrection of the soul. It is the soul that dies, says we read, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Adam was created a living soul, but his living soul came under the death sentence because he disobeyed God. It was his soul that was redeemed from death not his body. "I will redeem thy life (took up the word life to see if it is from the Hebrew word meaning soul, and if so add the word soul after the word life, in parenthesis) from destruction." Psalm cxix. 4.

To accomplish this redemption we read that Christ Jesus "poured out His soul unto death." "He made His soul an offering for sin." Moreover, we are particularly told that it was the soul of Jesus that was raised from the dead: "Thou wilt not leave My soul in sheol." St. Peter quotes this statement as prophetical of the resurrection of Jesus, that His soul was not left in hades; God raised Jesus from the dead on the third day. With what body do they come is a totally different question. Some of the dead sons, in the resurrection, will come forth with spirit bodies, and others with human bodies according to the Bible." But the important point is, that it is the soul, the being, that comes forth, that is resurrected—not the body. If the soul dies, as the Bible declares, then manifestly the soul should be resurrected.

The difficulty with us has been that we "have made void the Word of God" by our "traditions." We received from the Grecian philosophers a tradition which Socrates and Plato both advocated, namely, that when a person is dead he is not really dead, the soul, it is claimed, cannot die, but, whether or the soul gets out of the body the body dies. How strange it seems that we, at this enlightened, thoughtful beings, have accepted this heathen philosophy, without a word of Scripture for its support, and in spite hundreds of Scriptures to condemn it!

We can see how the heathen philosophers might be led to conjure up such a theory, because of their desire to believe in a future life, and because they had no revelation from God respecting a future life. They therefore tried their best to convince themselves that men really don't die—that no man can die. The Bible theory is the very reverse of this, namely, that a man is not merely a body, that he is a soul, a living sentient being. Neither is he a bodiless being, and indeed he cannot be a living at all without a body. His body may change, as science declares it does gradual y, hour by hour, until a complete change is effected in seven years.

The man, a soul, a sentient being, may in a life of fifty years have washed off gradually sufficient matter to have composed seven bodies, but the moment the sloughing off of this dying matter and the substitution of living matter ceases, we have a Caleb; and as soon as the body dies the soul dies—that the intelligent being ceases. There can be no thinking of, or about a body, or anything without lungs, no maintenance of life in any sense of the word without a body.

This would have been a total destruction of the soul had not God specially provided, the Prophet declares, that He would redeem man's life (his soul) from destruction, through the redemptive work accomplished by Jesus in giving His soul an offering for man's sin, and thus making possible man's resurrection from the dead.

It is in consequence of this Divine provision through Christ for a resurrection of humanity that the Scriptures speak of death as merely a falling asleep for a time, to be followed by a new body in the resurrection, rather than to speak of us as dying as the brute beasts. The word sleep implies that in the Divine purpose a future life is intended, and will eventually be given.

"BUT NOW IS CHRIST RISEN."

St. Paul does not leave the matter of Christ's resurrection undecided. He positively affirms that "Christ is risen from the dead" and that, therefore, "He is the First-fruits of those that slept," which implies that when He was raised the others still slept. Jesus stepped out of those three days from the time He died until the Father raised Him from the dead, from hades, from sheol, from the tomb on the third day. He as the First-fruits of the sleeping ones is an example and a guarantee of the full harvest of the Divine promise, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust."

It behooves us to take a decided stand, either with the Grecian philosophers and their theories, or with the Bible. The two are in conflict and whoever attempts to hold both is in confusion. If the dead are not dead, then no human being is dead. And if no one is dead, how could there be a resurrection of the dead?

The inconsistency of the theory held respecting the resurrection of the body has invited a very reasonable and just criticism. The skeptic asks, "How could the body be reconstructed after it has gone to dust and after the dust has been scattered to the four winds?" They tell us of a grave that was opened near an apple tree, and it was found that a root from the tree has entered the coffin and practically absorbed the corpse. From which it had produced thousands of apples, which in turn had been distributed to the various parts of the world, some of the poorer grades being fed to hogs, whose hams were cured and sent abroad and thus passed into other human beings, to become parts of still other human bodies. The question is a proper one, but it is an unanswerable one from the standpoint of any former misbelief and our poor attempt to combine human philosophy and Divine Revelation.

But such a question brings no consternation to the Bible student who follows the Scriptures alone. The Scriptures never speak of the resurrection of our bodies. They do tell us of the resurrection of the soul, and that in the resurrection God giveth it the soul a body as it pleaseth Him.

How reasonable it will be for the world to be awakened in practically the condition in which they went down into death! And these will especially be the case with those to whom a gradual resurrection or raising up is the image and likeness of Father Adam in a perfection. But none in the resurrection will receive spirit bodies as the angels and some will come into the body of Christ in His resurrection which Saul of Tarsus beheld—shining above the brightness of the sun at noonday."

The clear that is promised a resurrection in spirit bodies is the Church —the saintly few who walk in the footsteps of Jesus. The begetting of the Holy Spirit which comes to these changes their nature from earthly to spiritual. If they are faithful to their covenant their resurrection will be to glory, honor and immortality, as explained by St. Paul in the context, saying, "It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown an animal body, it is raised a spirit body."

This is a description of the resurrection which God promised to all the members of the Body of Christ, which is the Church. St. Paul declares that the members of this Body fell asleep, to awaken in the glorious morning of the New Dispensation. But he adds, "We shall not all sleep"—some will be alive and remain till the second coming of Christ, and these will not take place precedence over the sleeping ones, for, "The dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," * * * because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." As the death of Jesus was absolutely necessary, so the resurrection of Jesus was absolutely necessary, that He might not remain dead through a eternity, but might live and reign, and in due time, as a to effect the resurrection of His Church and, subsequently, the awakening and uplifting of all the families of the earth.

Nowhere is the special promise made to the Church: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the First Resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years." (Revelation xx. 6.) And again: "Behold the world's resurrection." "There shall be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust." (Acts xxiv. 15.) Again, "They that have done evil" shall come forth "unto the resurrection of condemnation." (John v. 25, 28, 29.)

"A KIND OF FIRST-FRUITS."

Every Sunday is a memorial of the resurrection of our Lord from the dead, and it a proper conception of the Master's resurrection were kept in mind we would not think of anything with the expression "Easter Sunday." But alas, this name Easter is associated with heathen philosophies and idolatries, which did so much to make the Word of God of none effect, and the fact should be noted that it is the same as a Greek goddess. The compromising spirit indirect some of the early Church to admit the heathen philosophies and to reconcile with these the teachings of the Bible; but now there is the need call to true Christians to rid themselves of science and philosophy "falsely so-called" and to return to the Biblical simplicity of the Divine Revelation.

Of this Revelation Jesus St. Peter declares, "It is able to make you wise unto salvation," and to "give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." And again, "The Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto every good work." Let us today, then, rejoice in Him who died for our sins and who rose on the third day for our justification.

It is a fit and proper thing for foolish thought that He did not really die, that He only seemed to die—that when the Roman soldiers pierced Him, He simply put out of His body, touched of them, and said, "I have not died at all; I could not die; you could not kill Me." Let us remember rather the Divine Word on the subject: "Christ died for our sins." He poured out His soul unto death." "He made His soul an offering for sin." Let us remember the assurance of the Apostle that especially He shall see the fruits of the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied." Let us rejoice also in the assurance of the Apostle that His soul was not left in hades, sheol, that the Father has raised Him from the dead on the third day.

NOTE AN ADDITIONAL PROOF.

If Christ did not die, then the death penalty upon Adam and his race has not been met. Those who claim that He did not die, that merely His body died, are illogical. They profess to believe that Jesus accomplished for us a redemptive work, that He died, "The Just for the unjust." If Christ, the Redeemer, "poured out His soul unto death, and if His resurrection meant the recovery of His soul or being out of death, wherein is the value to the declaration of some that it is not thus with the Church nor with the world? If Jesus did not go to heaven when He died—if He went into hades, into the grave into sheol, into death, who has the temerity to say that others go direct to Heaven or Hell or Purgatory. Let us be consistent. The whole of it is not Purgatory, nor a Hell of torture, in some fiery place. On the contrary, "The wages of sin is death." The Redeemer died and rose, and this is the assurance that He who is and up Jesus from the dead will raise us up also, by Jesus, through His spirit and power, and not only us, but also the world of mankind, all who were involved in the death sentence upon the first man.

Therefore, the entire world is included in the death payment made by the Great Redeemer, that "As by man came death by a man also shall come the resurrection of the dead. For as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive." says the Apostle, while every man who will come into Christ shall become a new creature who will become His at or during His presence—during the thousand years of His Kingdom reign. The opportunity of that thousand years will extend to every man the privilege of coming into fellowship with the Redeemer and Kin. Emmanuel. Wherever will accept the opportunity will receive the blessing of restitution to Messiah's finish. As the Apostle says, they will become His. Under His heavenly guidance and teaching and regenerating influence, all such may attain a return to full image and likeness of God, lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Canada, April 2.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

A Detroit friend recently mailed to my address several copies of your excellent journal, containing very interesting and educational religious matter from the pen of the world's most famous circuit rider and Bible student —Pastor Russell. As a newspaper editor (who puts his money where his mouth) permit me to compliment the Tribune on its very liberal management of the religious page. From an intimate acquaintance with the printing art I gather a fair idea of the great care and labor necessary in order to achieve the splendid results and harmony of arrangement, and altogether the best effort I have seen and certainly merits the support of every harvest worker throughout the entire English speaking world. The Tribune is to be congratulated very highly as a judge in such matters, rank next to the Watch Tower, which has a circulation of some 50,000 and I feel persuaded that as the excellent mission of the Tribune becomes more widely known to the friends that its circulation will take an upward bound for there is no newspaper in America that can give more far reaching and effective work in the cause of present Truth than the National Labor Tribune.

Owing to the concentration of wealth in the hands of the few and on the other hand the wonderful development and growth of Socialism, we are certainly on the eve of stupendous changes in the affairs of earth. We have reached a crisis in human affairs, political, religious and national—there is absolutely nothing normal. Every government save the Kingdom of Messiah is rotten at the heart, metaphorically speaking, has its hand on the sword-hilt as evidenced by the growth of armies and dreadnaughts and J. Pierpont's Men's Forward Missionary Movement. Slightly informed individuals realize these abnormal forces threaten the very existence of our nation and civilization and every year grows more alarming and it is exactly discerned by the thoughtful students of politics and history. As indicated by prophecy, the voice of the Bridegroom is heard in every land demanding an equality of conditions as the law of the land, state and recognizing a full and complete liberty from the cruel slavery and bondage of the past. Pastor Russell has the key to the solution of these great problems, through his understanding of the Scriptures, which is the only source of enlightenment, notwithstanding the growth of evolution and higher criticism so prevalent today. The Tribune certainly stands for the labor element in espousing the cause of Truth, which alone is able to deliver the whole creation from the bondage of sin and death and thus assist in the ushering in of that glorious epoch predicted by seers and sages in all ages and all lands—when every man shall sit under his own vine and fig tree, none daring to molest."

Fraternally yours

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Your good paper is many times appreciated, especially Mr. Russell's Sermons and other contributions. I could name them.

Trust to continue so long as you keep up a high class paper.
H. C. HAIR.

Ohio, April 3.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

While congratulating you on the success of your endeavor to supply your readers with a paper that will meet the demands of the times and conditions as prevailing, I wish to congratulate your readers as well, whether it be those who read the paper and give it their support because of its staunch advocacy of the cause of labor, or of those who find interest only in the religious matters contained therein, or those who like myself find much of interest in both the religious and secular features of the paper. We can all with one accord say of the National Tribune, "Well is done a good work, a grand work." And feeling this way we can also in assisting the good work to some extent at least by calling the attention of our friends and acquaintances to the good qualities of the several papers and thus obtain an increased subscription list, help to enlarge the circle of influence. Hoping that all your readers will see as I do in this matter, I am yours,

Sincerely
E. R. WEST.

Pennsylvania, April 2.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have recently subscribed to the Tribune and wish to express my appreciation of the Sermons by Pastor Russell and Orsmon Boy. The labor news is also very good.

Yours in the love of the truth,
ROY A. BESLER.

PILAT'S REPORT.

Through the courtesy of Brother J. A. Bolnat of this city, one of the leading missionaries of Truth, we are able to publish this week the first of a series of Articles on Pilate's Report to Tiberius Caesar on the trial of Jesus. The first article will only contain the letters showing the authenticity of the report, to be followed weekly by the report itself:

TO THE READER.

It was some time in the year 1850, while living in DeWitt, Missouri, that a gentleman by the name of H. C. Whydaman was taken sick and stopped at my house several days. He was a native of Germany, and one of the most learned men I ever met. I found him to be free and communicative. During his stay, he told me he had spent five years in the City of Rome, and the greater of the time in the Vatican, where he saw a library containing five hundred and sixty thousand volumes—in some of which was used the first type ever invented. He told me that he had seen and read the Records of Tiberius Caesar, and in which was called the "Acts Pilate," that is the acts of Pilate, he had seen the account of the apprehension, trial and crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth, but said it did not add much to the common teachings of Christianity. If I could get he thought a transcript could be secured. After Mr. Whydaman had gone, I remembered what he told me of those records, and thought if a transcript could be obtained, it would be very interesting even if it did not add much to the present teachings of Christianity, yet the statement would be of great satisfaction. So, after he had been gone some months, I set about tracking Mr. Whydaman, as the following correspondence will show:

DeWitt, Carrol County, Mo.
September 25, 1856

Mr. Henry C. Whydaman.
New York City.

Dear Sir:—After you left my house last spring, I was thinking of you on telling me of reading the acts of Pilate in the Vatican, while at Rome. I want you, if you please, to get me a transcript of those records, if the cost is not too much. Will you please to open a correspondence with some of your old friends in Rome that you can rely upon and ascertain if it can be obtained; and if so what will be the probable cost of getting it? I shall be much obliged, and will pay you for your trouble and expense.

Yours, in tender regards,
W. D. MAHAN.

New York, November 12, 1856.

Mr. W. D. Mahan.

Dear Sir:—Your letter as directed to H. C. Whydaman is received. I will inform you he has returned to Germany. Your letter has been forwarded.

Yours, etc.,
C. C. VANTERGERB.

———, March 2, 1857.

Rev. W. D. Mahan.

Dear Sir:—It is with the kindest regards I remember your hospitality while with you in America. Be assured, anything I can do for you will afford me great pleasure. I have written to Father Freshbussen, a monk of great learning, at Rome, who is the chief guardian of the Vatican Archives of the public. When he answers, I will write to you again. I am your most obedient servant.

H. C. WHYDAMAN.

Westphalia, Germany,
November 17, 1857.

Rev. W. D. Mahan, Ohio.

Dear Sir:—Father Freshbussen has answered my letter in regard to the transcript you want. He informs me that the writing is so fine, and bound in the Latin language, as I told you about the parchments are old and dirty, he will be obliged to use a glass to the most of it. He can only give it in the Latin, as he does not understand the English. He says he will do it for thirty-five dollars which will be in American coin sixty-two dollars and forty-four cents. If you will forward the amount I will have the document recommended by my brother-in-law, C. C. Vanbinger. He will transmit it for a trifle. I am

Yours, in tender regards,
H. C. WHYDAMAN.

Chillicothe, Mo., February 8, 1858.

Mr. H. C. Whydaman.

Dear Sir:—Thanks to you for your kindness; and be assured if I succeed I shall never feel under obligation to you for your trouble. Enclosed find check on the Foreign Exchange Bank of New York for sixty-two dollars and forty-four cents. Please have the papers sent and urge Mr. Freshbussen to have it a true copy of the original.

Send it to Mr. Vantberger and have him state it into English, and I will pay the charge. He has my address.

Yours, as ever,
W. D. MAHAN.

Westphalia, Germany,

Rev. W. D. Mahan.

Dear Sir:—I acknowledge your draft for 100.14. Will apply as you request.

I am Sir,
H. C. WHYDAMAN.

New York, April 26, 1859

Mr. W. D. Mahan.

Dear Sir:—I am in possession of a document from H. C. Whydaman with instructions to translate it into the English. My charge is ten dollars I will expect as answer.

C. C. VANTBERGER.

Mr. H. C. Whydaman.

Dear Sir:—I hereby forward to you the transcript, as it is on record in the Vatican in Tiberius Caesar's report by Pilate. Literally it is to be a true copy. Word for word as it comes therefrom.

Yours, etc.,
PETER FREDELISHUSEN

With this correspondence I received the following document and I must confess that although it is not inspiration, yet the words burned in my heart as the words of Christ in the hearts of the disciples and I am satisfied from the spirit it bears that it must be true. I am aware that things the Jews were in subjection to the Romans, yet they still held their ecclesiastical authority, and the Romans did not only submit to their decisions, but executed their decrees on their subjects. Knowing there was not such a piece of history to be found in all the world, and being so deeply interested myself, as well as hundreds of others to whom I have read it, I have concluded to give it to the public.

W. D. MAHAN

NEARING THE DAWN.

(Written for National Labor Tribune.)

I am glad 'tis almost over—
The shadow cast on life's earth
And dear to me is the promise
That tells of morning's birth.
Ah, sweet to me is the day star
Shining this sweet refrain
Soon cometh the end of sorrow
And healing for all the pain.

I'm glad that soon Truth's River
Will flow to every land,
While all shall see its beauty
And hear the chorus grand.
Angels and men together
Lift up united voice—
To Him be the power and glory
Rejoice for ever! Rejoice!

I see the coming Bridle
Foretold by our dear Lord;
'Tis coming in the night,
But in the East appeareth
A ray of heavenly light.

Take from the Word a message
Ye who say that can't know,
The "seventh Trump" is sounding,
Give an attentive ear.
"Blow ye the trump in Zion,"
The great alarm foreboded,
For the dread voice of hell's
Shake earth from end to end

Hood-blind, the fame of nations
Covers the camber pain.
Vamps up the reign of justice
And marshes a lie of "faith."
But with feet in eternal balance
Are saints and angels one whole,
And the arm that opened the wound
Shall dispossess the whole.

I'm glad it is almost over—
The cry of the world's great heart
Soon Peace and Right shall reign,
Never again to part.
Then shall God's light and glory
Embrace the living land
All earth's children and heathens
Upright and perfect stand.

—Walter Sargeant.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

New York, April 7.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

Through the Watch Tower and Tract society I am renewing my subscription for your very valuable paper.

I congratulate you upon the grand opportunity you have in helping to spread the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ. The good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.

May you continue in the good work, and you will in no wise lose your reward.

Yours in the love of God and His Son Jesus,

ELIZABETH VAN AIKEN.

Pennsylvania, April 7.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to your good paper through the Watch Tower. I am very much interested in Pastor Russell's Sermons and I know the dear Lord will bless you in the good work you are doing. I appreciate your paper on account of the nice clear print. Wishing you good success in your labor of love.

I am, yours,
MRS. J. A. HUMPHREY.

Ohio, April 6.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Constantly recommend the National Labor Tribune. Some have already sent you subscriptions. Hope by the Lord's grace to do a little more in way of increasing its circulation, etc. Too much cannot be said in its praise.

Inclosed find poem written expressly for your interest also. Sun and thundering cannon's roar.

Unbridled passions, fiercest hate
Upon the earth shall stand;
And Peace shall fall; nor satiate,
Destruction's proud demand.

'Tis the "Great Day" Jehovah sends,
For to avenge his own;
With reeking field or prison pen
To rear his lofty throne.

Yet on the ruin of the strife
Before the morning sun,
Broods on the awful waste of life—
God's mercy has begun.

As Empire, sure and steadfast,
Stands;
With gracious love to all;
With pure His goodness, suffering long,
With mankind's sin and fall.

Thus gracious truth will slay the wrong,
And sin will be no more;
Redeeming love the world's fair song
And Peace shall continue.

—John H. Coy c
Warren, O., March 30.

Missouri, April 7.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I will say to you again how we appreciate the Tribune and hope you will continue in the good work of getting before the public such Bible truths as you have been doing since we have been subscribers to your valuable paper.

Yours, truly,
A. H. COX.

Washington, April 7.

National Labor Tribune:

I will say that I am delighted with your paper. Its whiteness, its very keen (as attested to by Chas. G. Rieuffert of Minneapolis, which gentleman I know, and whose word I know to be good, on page 7 of this issue), its informativeness as the Truth information in the world with the other news items, and last but not least the zeal you have devoted to the blessing of light on God's word, makes me wonder why I am not an old subscriber instead of a new one. I will try to do better in the future.

Respectfully yours,
HANS HELGESON.

Michigan, April 5.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am glad to express to you again my ever increasing appreciation of your paper and to inform you that I am today renewing my subscription to same through the Watch Tower Bible & Tract society. I notice that my subscription runs out April 1, and I do not wish to miss one to hasten to renew.

DORA SHAW.

Wisconsin, April 2.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Now a word in regard to your good and clean paper, for which I am very much pleased and thankful for. I rejoice to read it and appreciate the amount of space you give to Pastor Russell's Sermons, Sunday School Lesson and Question Box. I will assist to get you more subscribers from Wisconsin and may the good Lord reward you for the great and good work you are doing in publishing a paper that certainly must be appreciated by every inclined Christian and those that are constantly searching for the Truth which is not behind the time, or end of time when all good things of the Bible should make progress as in other new conditions which produce man's labor and give more time to noble deeds and action.

Your grateful reader,
W. H. GRUHL.

Illinois, April 4

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Glad to note that you are giving more and more space and eminence to the blessed Truth in your valuable paper, which is such a welcome visitor in our home and which I feel we cannot do without, and it is with joy and gratitude that I again renew my subscription. May the Lord reward you in due time for the grand work you are doing.

Yours very truly,
R. N. JOHNSON.

Michigan, April 2.

We wish to express our appreciation of your valuable paper and admiration of the attractive manner you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons. The type is so large and clear one can enjoy reading it. The poems and letters of subscribers and Question Box are very interesting and helpful.

We are sending you a name of a Watch Tower reader as a new subscriber to the Labor Tribune.

Yours sincerely,
MR. AND MRS. E. E. HUNTINGTON.

Massachusetts, April 5.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Your paper is a general favorite with the Truth people and we take pleasure in commending it on every suitable occasion. We are large circulators of the Sermons and we succeed use the good work of heralding the glad tidings.

Yours in the Master's service,
ALEXANDER OGILTON

Ohio, April 6.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I am renewing my subscription to your paper through the Watch Tower and Bible society because of the large clear print in which the Sermons of Pastor Russell appear. I like your paper in other respects also, but am taking it especially because of the sermons, which is "meat in due season." Surely you are doing a good work in publishing the sermons and all the good things relating to the Bible.

Yours in the love of the Truth and in His service.

MARIE LEHMAN.

Georgia, April 7.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to thank you for the great benefit I have and am still permitted to derive from reading the God-given and soul-inspiring sermons of our very dear and much beloved Pastor Russell, the Bible Questions, etc. You may be assured that you have the benefit of all our prayers for whom we ask our Heavenly Father to bless the harvest work and all its co-laborers that surely takes part in that is not all our dear Lord said, he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad. You are gathering for precious grain to the Lord's garners and you will reap a great reward. God bless you and yours both now and in the morning of eternal joy.

Yours in the love and service of the Lord,
MRS. C. V. WOODWARD.

Massachusetts, April 7.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I do enjoy others of your readers think on paper and appear with the Tribune in the audience of Pastor Russell's incomparable sermons, and it gives me real pleasure to pass it on for a second reading. The Question Box, too, is a feature worthy of special commendation and it is as important place in the grand educational work you are so nobly helping to carry on.

Most sincerely yours,
MRS. A. L. RHOADES.

Michigan April 5

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have renewed my subscription to your paper through the Watch Tower society. I enjoy the sermons very much, also the Sunday School lessons and Question Box. No other sermons can satisfy our longing like Pastor Russell's and we shall continue to take your nice clean paper as long as you print them.

Yours truly,
MRS. JAMES BRETHEWEY.

Minnesota, April 7.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Inclosed will find a P. M. O. for a subscription of your paper on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons.

I have tried to get a few subscribers for your valuable paper, but I have met with poor success, but hope I will be able to get a few in the near future.

You are certainly doing your part in publishing so much of Pastor Russell's work, which helps to break up and scatter the ignorance and superstition yet hanging on us so heavy from the Dark Ages.

And some of the best of us too, seem to be utterly free from superstition and when the light of the Twentieth century and God's words is turned on, then first we come to realize how much we had of it, and on the other hand how little we knew of God's wonderful plan which He so plainly portrayed in the good old book how He is going to bless all the families of the earth.

Yours truly,
ANDRU MALM.

THE MARK.

"I press toward the mark." Phil. 3, 14.
(Written for the Tribune.)

The "Narrow Way," so dreary—
So forged and so dark;
At times I feel as though I'd fall—
To ever reach the mark.

The "Narrow Way," so dreary—
At times life fate a spark;
I must forbear, brother,
Or never reach the mark.

The "Narrow Way" so gloomy—
At times I loose the Ark;
Then I go over my troubles too—
Before I reach the mark.

The "Narrow way," is endless—
Ah! soon I must embark;
And I hope I'll hear my Savior say—
"You have reached the mark."

—James Walker Heatherly.
Saluda, N. C.

Indiana, April 5.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We have taken the Tribune for some time and do not intend to be without it so long as it is so desirable as we have found it.

Its news from the world of labor shows us how the Scripture is being fulfilled; the whole creation groaneth and travaileth pain together until now waiting for the manifestation of the Son of God, and Pastor Russell's forceful sermons show clearly from God's Word that He is not unfaithful of the afflictions and the struggling millions but that soon in and through the presence of the Lord Jesus, He will bring everlasting joy and peace and plenty to "all peoples."

Wishing you continued prosperity, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
O. E. WISE.

Minnesota, April 6.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

—I am pleased to be able to send in five subscribers with the one of March 31, because I believe your paper is the best paper as you give so much space to Pastor Russell's work which I appreciate so much.

Yours truly,
ANDRU MALM.

MARKETS

The Iron Trade Review says:

Important and far reaching results are expected to follow two events of the week in the iron trade, namely, in the quotations of Lake Superior ores and the ending of the rebate cases growing out of the handling of ore at lower lake docks. Lower prices on ore will be a factor tending to influence the market to recede to lower levels for deliveries after July 1, but if gasoline prosperity should come this year, it would be a far greater factor and would completely overcome the influence of low prices on ore. In the rebate cases, technically, discriminations in the ore rates caused fines to be imposed on the Hanna and Pennsylvania railroad companies.

* * * * *

Pig Iron.

The pig iron market for the past week has been steady and comparatively quiet. Nothing has noted that has shown the prices to be well established, but there remains a round lot of basic to be placed, for which inquiries have been made.

We quote the market as follows:

|---|---|
| Bessemer, valley | $15 25 |
| Bessemer, Pittsburg | 15 75 |
| Basic, valley | 13 00 |
| Basic, Pittsburg | 13 50 |
| No. 2 foundry, Pittsburgh | 14 75 |
| Gray forge, Pittsburgh | 13 60 |
| Malleable, Pittsburgh | 14 25 |

Sheets.

The withdrawal of the leading interest from the market for all business on galvanized sheets below 20gc base, has had a good effect on the general trend and it is believed that, owing to the extreme high cost of spelter, the general trend will reach the inside of quotation. In place sheets there is a generally firm tone, and 1.35c, base price, for No. 28 gage black sheets appears to be the bottom in Pittsburgh territory. At points west of Indiana, there is understood to be some lower prices being quoted, and it is claimed that as low as 1.30c, makers' mills, has been done at these points. This would be equal to about 1.35c, Pittsburgh. The amount of business in Sheet & Tin Mill Wire somewhat "apotly" regarding prices, seems to be on the upward trend and asking prices generally firm. Wire Rod Specifications are running very heavy, in fact heavier than at any time this year. Car service has improved. We quote the markets as follows:

|---|---|
| Blue annealed sheets No. 10 base, | 1.35@ 1.40c |
| Black annealed sheets, No. 28 gage, | 1.30c to 1.90c |
| galvanized sheets, No. 28 gage, | 1.50c to 2.90c |
| painted roofing sheets, $1.35 per square for 6 gage, | |
| galvanized roofing sheets, $3.45 per square for No. 28 gage, | |
| 2½ inch corrugation, | f. o. b. Pittsburgh. |

* * * * *

Tin Plate.

Better specifications are coming in for tin plate and while new business is seasonably quiet, the attitude of the manufacturers appears more settled on a firmer market, and there is less talk of shading prices. Output is now operating in full its six mill's and a modern tinning house, and has an annual capacity of 600,000 boxes. We quote the market as follows:

Coke tin plate, 100-pound basis, 14

20, $3.35 to $3.40, f. o. b. mill, Pittsburgh district.

* * * * *

Steel.

Specifications against contracts are running much heavier, and the market is much firmer than a week ago. There is even a scarcity reported in rolling billets. Some fairly active testing of the present prices has been going on during the past week, and has demonstrated that $25, Pittsburgh, for Bessemer and open hearth rod long lots at its is the bottom price prevailing, and $21 for Bessemer and $20.50 for open hearth sheet bars. While the demand for open hearth sheet bars is good, there is a continual offering of small lots by mills that at the present rate of running on finished material are unable to absorb their own production of sheet bars. This has the effect of holding down advances on this grade of sheet bars to a bottom position. The few producers of Bessemer sheet bars are holding very firm to $21, and are getting slight advances on prompt shipments. The larger producers are running on the best mill schedule of this season. The leading interest is still out of the market for both rolling billets and sheet bars and are offering any forging billets, which are quoted at $23. We quote the market as follows:

|---|---|
| Bessemer 4in billets with 0.25 carbon and less and ordinary Mn at $26, with the usual extras for size and analysis, and open hearth rolling billets, $23. Bessemer sheet bars, $21, and open hearth sheet bars are quoted at $20.50 @ $21, f. o. b. Pittsburgh, with full freight to destination added. Forging billets are quoted at $25 to $25.50, Pittsburgh. | |

Merchant Bars.

The recent action of the lead interest in placing a minimum of 1.15c on steel bars has been followed by very liberal specifying. Some extensive new business is being taken and mill's are operating more fully than for a long time. The past week has witnessed a large tonnage coming out and inquiries are favorable, while prices appear to have adjusted themselves to the new business going out @1.15c. The leading independents are also holding prices at the new minimum and report very satisfactory demand with specifications running much heavier than for some time. Iron bars are still somewhat quiet, but specifications are a little more liberal, and prices remain unchanged. We quote the market as follows.

Common iron bars, 1.30c to 1.35c Pittsburgh; Bessemer and open-hearth steel bars, 1.15c, plow and cultivator, 1.35c; shoeing, 1.40c, and horse shoes, under 3 inch, 1.25c, all f. o. b. mill. The following differentials are maintained on steel: Less than 2,000 pounds of a size, 0.35 advance. Coil iron, one extra gauge lighter, 5 per cent off in carloads and 50 and 10 per cent in less than carloads, delivered in base territory.

* * * * *

Structural Shapes.

The market for muck bar is practically stagnant. While there were rumored sales of 500 tons during the past week, they were not possible of verification. The leading producers are either not operating, or are not producing muck bar, and report no inquiries, but the market remains nominally unchanged as to price. We quote $25 to $25, Pittsburgh.

* * * * *

Wire Rods.

The demand for wire rods is slightly better, and prices are holding firm at $25.50 for prompt shipment, and $26 on coming for first half delivery. We quote $25.50 to $26 Pittsburgh, for Bessemer and open hearth wire rods.

Thousands of lives will be saved in the future in the opinion of the Secretary of mines officials, by means of an oxygen pumping apparatus by which the miner's workers during the last year restored to life more than thirty persons who had ceased breathing. By means of the long tubing and emptying machine used by the rescuers, oxygen is forced in, the poisonous gases drawn out and normal breathing is started.

WHICH DAY IS SABBATH?

Mark II. 23—III, 6—April 14.

Text: "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath."—Mark 2: 27.

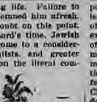
THAT the Bible teaches some important lesson respecting the Sabbath is undisputed, but what that lesson is is much disputed. The fourth commandment of the Decalogue refers to the seventh day and requires its observance as a day of rest, and no more. The Ten Commandments as a whole were the basis of the Law Covenant, communicated upon every Jew. The Jew keeping all of those commandments was promised everlasting life. Failure to keep them all condemned him afresh. There can be no doubt on this point. However, in our Lord's time, Jewish religionists had become to a considerable degree formalistic, and undue stress was laid upon the literal commandments than on their real spirit. Jesus frequently and this on several occasions.

No commandment was given by Jesus or the Apostles to the Church respecting the Sabbath day. The early Church evidently did observe the Jewish Sabbath day, for many places, and in some places the first day of the week. The Adventory observed both of these days. But their observance was not of the nature of a command, for the Apostle wrote, "Ye are not under Law, but under grace."



"The Sabbath was made for man."

The Sabbath day is today. We are glad that one day in the week is so generally observed as a day of rest, a Sabbath day. Whether it signifies one day, we are glad that the day so generally set apart is the first day of the week, because it is beautifully commemorative of the Christian's hopes, attested by our Lord's resurrection from the dead.

As the Jewish observance of the Sabbath, every day should be used as holy to the Lord, and nothing should at any time be done contrary to the Divine will or the principles of the Divine Government. Jesus' declaration that He was Lord of the Sabbath reminds us of St. Paul's declaration that that God the Father rested from His own work on the Seventh Day! He left the Seventh Day open, and that the Seventh Day of Jehovah's rest was one of the great Days of the creative Week, and the seven thousand years. Six of these great Days had passed and man's creation was in the end of Seventh.

Having established His human son in Eden as the god or ruler of the earth, God rested or ceased from His work during the Seventh Day, or seventh period of seven thousand years. His thousand years of rest was with perfect men already passed and Jehovah God has rested, ceased from His work—He has not interfered to any extent with man's affairs, all and dominion. Another thousand years of the seven remains but God will not interfere with man's affairs during then. Why not? Because it is a part of the Divine Program to leave fallen man and the creative entirely in the hands of Jesus. He is Lord of this Great Seventh Day.

Many Seventh Day.

This seventh day of seven thousand years which comprises the great Seventh Day or Sabbath with Jehovah God, is the Gospel age and the great Days of a thousand years each, in six of which he has been under a the harvest, ever, of the Jewish and polemous gases drawn out and normal breathing is started.

Q.—What may we understand the Lord's words to signify where he says "Ye blow thy words, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth."—Revelation iii, 15, 16. (A. E. D.)

Answer.—The seven churches in Asia represent the seven stages of development, or epochs in the history of the one true Church of Christ. The message to the church in Laodicea relates, therefore, to the last or present period of the Church's existence. It is during this final stage of the history of the Christian Church that we may expect the repudiation or spewing out of relationship with the Lord as his mouth-piece, and of recognition as members of His true Church, of all those who are "lukewarm" and indifferent in the service of the Lord—Christians in name only and not heartdevoted followers of the Lord. It is daily becoming more manifest to all careful observers that there is a wide distinction between real Christianity, and the great mass of professing Christendom. Together the most responsible class of people on the earth is that which is formed of those who are half-hearted and indifferent to the great and important affairs of life.

Q.—In Matthew xvii, 20, Jesus said to His disciples "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you." Could one have faith to remove a literal mountain? (A. C. D.)

Answer.—The suggestion would seem to be a preposterous one, but when we reflect upon the meaning of the term Bible that it is the expression of a blind credulity, but, as defined by the Apostle, "Faith is a basis of things hoped for—a conviction of things unseen."—(Hebrews xi. 1); we can see that our Lord's teaching here is in agreement with what He taught at another occasion (John xv. 7) where He set forth that the request must be in harmony with the Divine will. Hence since there is no basis of evidence for faith that the will of God is to remove literal mountains, it would be very blind or self-willed or ignorant commands of men to do so, a genuine faith in His willingness to do it now is an impossibility. But regarding the mountain as a symbol of difficulty and obstruction in our individual Christian course, or in the affairs of daily life, we know that "miracles" are wrought for those who exercise faith; and they going forward in the strength of the Lord, are permitted to overcome difficulties and to work righteousness otherwise impossible.

Q.—Luke xxiii, 8, "Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh shall He find faith on the earth?" Is it the measure of the kind of faith that will be lacking? Please explain. (A. C. D.)

Answer.—A word for word rendering from the Greek Great manuscripts of the quotation given above is as follows: "But the Son of the man coming, shall He find the faith that will be on the earth?" The "faith" in the text would have the meaning of system of belief or doctrine, rather than that of personal statement. "The faith once delivered to the saints." The Master's words imply that the measure of the kind of faith at the time of His second coming would be somewhat doubtful. The Church and the world are recently tried in the conditions of the present day. We see that, owing to the hundreds of conflicting creeds and doctrines which bear the many "isms," and the strong delusions and multiplied errors; so that if it were possible the very elect would be deceived; not many are holding to the true faith—only the "very elect." (Matthew xxiv, 24.) The object of the Lord's coming is to put aside all of the evil and the error, and to fill the whole earth with the true faith and knowledge of God and thus to bring about the blessing of all mankind.—Habakkuk ii. 14.

Q.—Please explain Jeremiah ii, 12, 13? What are the "channels" of the text, and what do the "broken cisterns that can hold no water" represent? (B. S. A.)

Answer.—Evidently the Prophet is using highly symbolic language to convey to us certain truths. The institution of the prophecies of the Bible is for forth in figurative expressions and in parables of dark sayings, or they were not intended of the Lord to be understood until at the time of their fulfillment. The "channels" would symbolize the spiritual ruling powers as represented in the ministry and clergy who compose the ecclesiastical or spiritual powers of the various religious systems. "Water" is frequently used in the Scriptures to symbolize the truth of God's Word. The "broken cisterns" would symbolize, as foretold by the Prophet, when the Lord's professing "people," Christians, would forsake the Lord and His Word, and would "hew" out or fashion for themselves "cisterns" or receptacles to hold the muddy waters of the traditions of men. The creeds and religious systems are in a very dissipated and broken state and wholly incapable of holding the waters of the truth. The old effete systems of the past are breaking up and are absolutely useless so far as holding the waters of the truth are concerned.

Q.—Are we to accept a literal Hades, or does Genesis vi, vii, viii, give an account of a spiritual flood? (R. E.)

Answer.—Scientific thought is coming more and more into harmony with the Scriptures. There is no basis to the occurrence of an actual flood at about the time indicated in the Genesis account. From the latest investigations and researches, the conclusion has been formed that this earth was, in times remote, a part of the sun, and that it was thrown off, or detached from the central orb to the form of gas. In course of time, this swirling mass would cool and condense, and revolve itself into solids and liquids with the central mass as a nucleus around which several centuries or rings, similar to the rings of the planet Saturn, were developed. These would condense and in turn would eventually be precipitated to the earth one by one. Science and the Bible agree that there were six of these "comings," at that time, coming to the earth in their regular order, formed the six creative "days" or epochs as named in the first chapter of Genesis; the last one, being of water, brought about the deluge, or Noah's Flood.

—Kindly explain John xiv, 30—"Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me!" (A. W. W.)

Answer.—The first part of the text relates to the time between our Lord's resurrection. Jesus had been put to death as a human being, a perfect man, and was raised a divine spirit being of the highest order, of the Divine nature. In His highly exalted spiritual state, endowed with glory, honor and immortality, He could appropriate that the Lord should manifest a greater measure of divinity, in order to improve upon the minds of His followers, the change that had taken place. He who had been the meek and lowly Nazarene, as poor that He had not where to lay His head, after His resurrection, would be no longer, but the all-powerful Divine Lord, next to the Heavenly Father in power and authority. During the forty days from the time of His resurrection to the time of His ascension into Heaven, He manifested Himself and talked very rarely with His disciples. The "prince of this world," Satan, was coming in the sense that he would triumph over the world of mankind and bring about its subjection to his own evil sway and dominion until the time for the Lord to set up his own Kingdom at the second coming—II Corinthians iv. 4.

Q.—Will you kindly explain and harmonize Romans iv. 6 and 7, chapter, 7th to 10th verses inclusive? (W. H. H.)

Answer.—In the 6th verse the Apostle says—"Even as will reckon to every man according to his deeds;"—at the time when God's judgments will be manifested as stated in the 8th verse. Coming to the seventh verse, he points out that those who patiently continue in well doing, seeking for glory, honor, and immortality shall receive eternal life, at the time indicated to the prophets by many—at the end of time, those who will persist in wrong doing, shall be punished by experiencing Divine indignation and wrath. But those who, when the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth, will comply with the principles of righteousness which are revealed in the Bible and thereby secure many valuable blessings, both Jews and Gentiles. This presentation of the matter is in full accordance with all the teachings of the Scriptures which show that the Church of Christ, now being selected from the nations of earth, shall receive "glory, honor, and immortality;" while the world of mankind—Jew and Gentile and elect—whose trial for eternal life will follow the glorification of the Church, shall receive the "glory, honor and peace" of perfect human conditions.

Q.—Who is the "Prince of this world," mentioned in the following Scripture texts—John xii, 11, and John xiii, 31? (Subscriber, Ky.)

Answer.—There are three great ages or dispensations of time outlined in the Scriptures. The first of these referred to as "the world that was," and the second as "the world that now is," and the last as "the world to come wherein dwelleth righteousness." The "world that now is," or "this present world," is the one over which Satan, is the "Prince" or ruler. The Apostle elsewhere refers to Satan as "the god of this world"—II Corinthians iv. 4,—for it is because Satan is the ruler over this present order of things, during the dispensation, that it is termed an "evil world." It will agree that evil is very much in evidence, and that the influences of the Prince of this world are manifested inclined towards sin and unrighteousness. How difficult it is to do right now! And how easy it is to do the downward way! Our Lord is not ruling over the nations now, and will not until the appointed time for Him to take unto Himself His great power and authority and establish His own Kingdom in the earth. Then, as the Scriptures declare, "the kingdoms of this world will become our Lord's and His Christ's and He shall reign for the Ages of the Ages." This agrees with the Savior's words when He said —"My Kingdom is not of this world."

British Coal Miners Ballot Adversely Against Resuming Work, but Tactics May Suggest Resumption--Transport Workers Generally Express Resentment at Arrest of Tom Mann--Sailors Propose New Campaign to Reduce Unemployment.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, April 9.—Without the complete figures of the ballot of the British coal miners being available it can still be said that to all intents and purposes the coal strike is finished and that work will be resumed within the next few days. The condition of affairs during the past week has been very complicated. It will be remembered that the miners were asked by their leaders to ballot as to whether they should resume work and leave the settlement of the minimum daily rates of wages of the district boards which are being appointed under the provisions of the Minimum Wage Act of Parliament. As the Miners Federation Executive sent out the ballot paper with no appending advice as to how their members should vote. On the whole judging from their speeches during the balloting the miners leaders appear to favor resumption of work and the real voting was along the same lines. The later figures, however, altered matters and at the moment of writing there are roughly 208,000 votes against resuming work and 180,000 for going back to the pits.

In different parts of the country naturally different feelings were shown. Wales, for example, where there is agitation for the minimum wage for miners first arose and which all through the March strikes was regarded as a storm center, voted overwhelmingly in favor of resumption of work. On the other hand Durham, Yorkshire, Lancashire and generally the coal fields north of River Trent showed a majority the other way.

One miner's leader and labor member of Parliament, Stephen Walsh, enjoyed some mixed feelings amongst coal miners owing to a speech he delivered in the House of Commons. There he declared that as the Minimum Wage Act had become law of the land he was in favor of the strike stopping as soon as possible with a view to seeing what the administration of the act would produce. He finished his speech with words to the effect that although he was a trade union labor leader he was also a law abiding citizen of England and in the ultimate he put his citizenship above his trade unionism. The labor party in the House did not feel moved to applaud at this but the other parties all largely capitalistic cheered Walsh to the echo and the day he was promptly put up for membership at the National Liberal club which is the stronghold of the supporters of the Government. Walsh is in size the smallest man in the House of Commons but he is a vigorous and determined speaker and wields great influence in his own Lancashire mining district.

Renewed trouble has broken out among the London carmen, with a prospect of a dispute spreading. Recently a firm of timber carriers gave notice to all their carmen that unless they left the London Carmen's Trade Union they would be dismissed and as a result thirty-two men came out, and are receiving 50c per day from the union. The matter has been referred to the London division of the London Transport Workers' Federation who are calling a meeting to consider the matter. The trouble is original to the employes of the Port of London Authority, some of whose men have refused to load goods on to wagons owned by the firms concerned with the result that they have been given notice.

A strike of carters which may extend, and even threatens to involve other transport workers, is in progress at Manchester. The trouble originally arose out of a boycott of interpretation of the agreement of last August. One of the firms that was a party to that agreement had occasion to discharge a man, with the result that other men in the employ of the same firm came out to secure his reinstatement. The Tramwomen's Association offered assistance to this firm by doing its work, with the result that the men's organization directed their men out on strike. Five firms were involved, and these have been trying to get their work done by a side labor, and the Carters' Union are trying to stop this work from being done. The carters' organization is affiliated with the Transport Workers' Federation.

Harry Gosling, President of the Transport Workers' Federation, denies that the third week in April had been mentioned as a suitable date for bringing the trouble among dockers and transport workers to a head. "To anticipate a transport workers' strike at this time," he says, "is threatened is absolute nonsense," he said.

From inquiries made it appears, however, that the feeling of resentment caused among all sections of the transport workers by the arrest and prosecution of Tom Mann has by no means abated, and that there are indications of trouble to come, especially in connection with the members of the Dock, Wharf, Riverside and General Laborers' Union. Letters and resolutions of protest have been received from many of the branches and it is said that in a number of cases the men are prepared to resort to the arbitrament of strike by way of emphasizing their protest.

A rumor is current in Liverpool that further trouble in the shipping trade of the United Kingdom may be expected in the early summer. The National Seamen's and Firemen's Union following upon the success of the strike last August is reported to be about to make demands upon the shipowners which provide for the employment of an additional 20,000 men by

NEW LABOR LAWS IN NEW YORK.

The following laws, recommended by the State Factory Investigation Commissioner, of which President Gompers was a member, have been passed by both Houses of the New York State Legislature: (1) An act to amend the labor law in relation to fire prevention in factories, providing for fireproof receptacles, enclosed exits and prohibiting smoking. (2) An act to amend the labor law in relation to fire drills in factories in which more than twenty-five persons are regularly employes, above the ground floor, at least one in every three months. (3) An act to amend the labor law in relation to automatic sprinklers, requiring the installation of automatic sprinklers in every factory building over seven stories in height, in which wooden floors or wooden trim is used, and where more than 200 people are regularly employed. (4) An act to amend the labor law so as to limit the occupancy of buildings or factories according to the size and number of exits. (5) The New York city administration sponsored a bill to amend the city charter providing for fire drills in factories where deemed necessary by fire commission, and conferring adequate powers on officials for the enforcement thereof. (6) An act providing for the registration of factories. (7) An act providing for the prohibition of woman labor within four weeks after childbirth. (8) An act providing for the physical examination of minors by a physician of the board of health, and prohibiting labor for working papers. These enactments are considered a substantial achievement, as the result of the unitary efforts to protect the lives of factory operatives and employes generally.

WHEELING, W. Va., April 12.—The painters of this city are on strike for an advance of from $3.46 to $4.80 per day.

Musicians at Carbondale, Pa., after three days' strike, secured increase from 10 to $15 per week.

MINERS APPROVE SETTLEMENT.

THE overwhelming vote among the bituminous coal miners in favor of the settlement between their officials and the operators is cause for general rejoicing. Although the exact figures have not yet been announced by the board which is canvassing the returns at the national offices of the United Mine Workers of America in Indianapolis, it is said that nearly 200,000 miners have voted to approve the settlement, with only 50,000 voting against.

This means that work will be resumed in the bituminous coal mines of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, and Michigan just as soon as the local scales are perfected, which will in all probability be within a few days. In the Pittsburgh district, for example, there are some local questions still pending, but the ratification of the general scale supplies a ready basis for agreement, and the incidental questions affecting working conditions in the various districts are capable of prompt adjustment.

In the Pittsburgh district, where more than 40,000 miners have been idle since April waiting for the official notification that all differences with the operators have been arranged, it is believed that the work order may be issued within the next forty-eight hours. What this means to the prosperity of the district hardly requires to be explained. The miners secure an advance of five cents a ton for pick mining by the agreement, making the new wage ($1 a ton) the highest on record. This not only increases the purchasing power of the miners, and thus stimulates general mercantile distribution, but is the means of avoiding a strike the more of more or less magnitude for several months past.

With this important labor agreement ratified, Pittsburgh businessmen will face the future with optimism. The fact that the coal operators have conceded a five-cent wage advance is itself a substantial omen of business betterment. In the meanwhile, the entire Anthracite coal industry is at a standstill in consequence of the refusal of the operators to concede the miners' demands. How long the deadlock in the Anthracite wage conference will last is wholly conjectural. But while it does last it creates an extra demand for bituminous coal, at unusually high prices, which will tax the transport workers to a head. "To anticipate a transport workers' strike at this time is what is threatened is absolute nonsense," he said.

From inquiries made it appears, however, that the feeling of resentment caused among all sections of the transport workers by the arrest and prosecution of Tom Mann has by no means abated, and that there are indications of trouble to come, especially in connection with the members of the Dock, Wharf, Riverside and General Laborers' Union. Letters and resolutions of protest have been received from many of the branches and it is said that in a number of cases the men are prepared to resort to the arbitrament of strike by way of emphasizing their protest.

ROALD AMUNDSEN, DISCOVERER OF THE SOUTH POLE.

UNTIL he announced that he had reached the south pole Roald Amundsen's fame rested chiefly upon his discovery of the Northwest passage, which he achieved in 1905 in the Gjoa, a little sloop of forty-seven tons. He began his polar explorations in 1897, when he sailed as first officer with the Belgian antarctic expedition. The Fram, in which he started on his quest for the south pole in the fall of 1910, is the strongest vessel in the world.

integrity of laws and all who share in administering them. Far better than an arbitration law which unenlightened and unscrupulous employers may mock at, is an law at all. The New York board should be compelled to report more promptly and its conclusions should be binding. Either that, or the law should be repealed. Statutes of the farce variety pay a great harm and can do no good. Pennsylvania should avoid imitating New York's example.

PITTSBURG'S BIG BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT.

AMONG recent signs that Pittsburgh is experiencing a genuine revival of its old-time prosperity is the fact that the bank clearings for last week were the largest for any week in over five years, in other words, since the week ending March 2, 1907. The iron and the coal industries are of course our basic ones. When they are active and prosperous, all others are so. And there has been marked improvement in both the iron and the coal market in the last few weeks.

The rapid advance in the price for coal is partly due to the three weeks' shutdown, which was preceded by general fears of a nation-wide coal strike. The compromise between the miners and operators has averted a strike in the bituminous fields, and only in the anthracite region do strike conditions prevail. Pittsburgh profits from the anthracite shutdown in common with all other bituminous markets. But even if there had been no coal strike, the demand for our coal output would have been a large one, owing to the improvement in the iron industry. There are, as always, conflicting opinions in regard to the probable duration of the improved iron market, but the best opinion appears to be that the revival will be permanent rather than a mere passing spurt.

It is certain, at all events, that the general feeling in business circles is one of unusual confidence. The impending Presidential election is having less deterrent influence than ever before for the reason that it comes not in a period of extravagant speculation but after a prolonged season of liquidation and universal caution. Conservative judges point out that its effects have apparently been liberally discounted. The Pittsburgh outlook is especially encouraging. It is of unquestionable significance that the bank clearing last week were $24,819,525. For the year to date they have aggregated $175,650,279, as against $737,948,588 for the same period last year and only $628,990,000 four years ago.

Impending Trouble In N. Y. Sub-Way

NEW YORK, April 16.—Organizers of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen are organizing the motor engineers of the Interboro Rapid Transit Company. The officials of this company are opposed to having their employes affiliated with any organization, but efforts at organization are continuing. It is stated that it is not improbable that serious difficulties may ensue by a complete tie-up of the sub-way and elevated system if opposition continues.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Credit for Passage of Children's Bureau Bill Belongs to American Federation of Labor--Senate Committee Approves Workmen's Compesation Bill. Administration Takes Water On the Gag Rule in the Civil Service.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, April 15. — President Taft has signed the bill creating a Children's Bureau in the Department of Commerce and Labor. The bill provides that the bureau shall be under the direction of a chief, to be appointed by the president and its duties prescribed are to investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life among all the classes. The provisions of the bill are to go into operation at once. As is usually the case, the credit for the passage of this bill has been given to those who only acted in a subsidiary capacity to the American Federation of Labor. The American Federation of Labor has advocated this measure for a number of years, and were finally successful in securing the introduction of the bill in both House of Congress, and the Legislative Committee of the Federation has been constantly engaged in furthering the measure. The credit for the passing of this bill belongs almost entirely to the American Federation of Labor, although it has received assistance from numerous other quarters, for which the Federation has been duly considerate and thankful.

The Southerland bill for employers' liability and workmen's compensation has been approved by the Senate Committee on Judiciary. The bill was drafted by the joint commission appointed by Congress a few years ago to investigate this subject, and it specifies the financial compensation to be paid to injured employes by railroads engaged in interstate commerce. The compensation rates are fixed in accordance with the amount of the physical disability resulting from the accident, but in case of fatal accident, according to the size of the dependent family. The bill also provides for the bringing of suits for adjustment of compensation before arbitrators, these arbitrators to be appointed by the United States District Courts and to receive salaries of from $1,500 to $3,000 per annum.

President Taft has issued an executive order which changes some immaterial aspects, the "gag rule," which has been previously in effect in reference to the activity of civil service employes. While the order does not entirely relieve the situation, it is indicative that a change of attitude has taken place. This change no doubt has been occasioned by the attitude assumed by the Postoffice Committee in the House, recommending an abolition of the gag rule order, which prohibits the civil service employes from reaching congressmen in position. The recent order is as follows: "It is hereby ordered that petitions or other communications regarding public business addressed to the Congress or either House or any committee or any member thereof by officers or employes in the civil service of the United States shall be transmitted through the heads of their respective departments or offices, who shall forward them without delay with such comment as they may deem requisite in the public interest. Officers and employes are strictly prohibited, either directly or indirectly, from attempting to secure legislation or to influence pending legislation, except in the manner above prescribed. This order supersedes the executive orders of January 31, 1902, January 23, 1906, and November 26, 1909, regarding the same general matter."

The Senate on April 9 passed the Smoot printing bill, which provides for a revision and codification of the laws relating to public printing, binding and the distribution of public documents. The bill was amended to fix the price of the Congressional Record for the long session of Congress at $2 and for the short session at $1, monthly subscriptions being available at 10 cents. The issue however, of the Record is limited to 100,000 copies daily. One change in the bill allots to each Senator and Representative an allowance of $2,500 annually to be invested in public documents. The practice heretofore having been the allotting to each Senator and Representative so many documents of each kind issued.

The Burns of Immigration and Naturalization has just issued its January immigration bulletin. Entered from Southern Italy continue to head the list in point of number, there being admitted into the United States, during January, 4,975. The next race in point of numbers was Polish (4,417); Polish, 2,773; German, 2,751; English, 2,521. The balance being distributed between about thirty other nationalities. The total immigration for the month of January was 38,453.

BITUMINOUS MINERS APPROVE SETTLEMENT

The annual convention of the United Mine Workers is still in session.

No sensational developments have arisen. Last Friday the convention rushed through a number of resolutions. One of these requested mine-workers throughout the district to stop patronizing company stores. This was passed as a substitute to a resolution instructing the officers to refuse to sign a scale with any company which maintains stores. The latter resolution found little support.

A resolution introduced, which caused considerable discussion, was one asking for the appointment of a negro organizer in this district. John A. Batch, of Elizabeth, a negro, called attention to the fact that there is a clause in the constitution against discrimination of a man, no matter of what race, creed or color. He said that discrimination, so as understood, was made against the negro and to prove that this was not true he asked to have a negro appointed. The resolution was referred to the district executive board.

The Cleveland settlement strips district organizers of much initiative in making agreements. The wage question is settled, provided it is approved in the international referendum vote. It is left to scale committees to fix working conditions and it is understood that none of these is to increase the cost of production. Many deadends District No. 5 will make are already embodied in the inter-State agreement for all bituminous fields reached at Cleveland. Among the more important new demands are:

Abolishing machines in outracting rock and limiting uniform contract wage scale, uniform scale for slate and dead work, company check off for the organization for all men working in or about the mines, that house rent and the price of house coal remain the same and not be increased because the men's wages are increased, rent be $1 a room a month and house coal $1 a ton, no discrimination against miners for refusal to patronize company stores, that where a miner is discharged or forced to remain idle through a dispute with the company, and is afterward found to have been unjustly dealt with, he be reinstated and paid for lost time.

The check-off, which is having the companies pay union dues and assessments out of the miners' pay direct to the miners' organization, is now largely in operation in the Pittsburgh district. There is a limit, companies not withholding from miners' pay for the benefit of the organization more than 50 cents in any one pay.

That coal operators have bidden for the disposition of bodies of miners was the declaration made by Charles E. Shaw of Wheeling. Shaw's remarks were caused by a resolution to abolish the various accident and death organizations fostered by many coal companies, which was referred to the scale committee.

A "certain undertaker," he declared, had offered him a "rake-off" for all business he could throw his way. He read a letter from a West Newton, Pa., undertaker, wherein the under-

Pastor Russell's Sermon

JESUS A SPIRIT NO LONGER FLESH.

Pastor Russell Explains an Unscriptural Error—The Resurrection of Christ—Bible Clear and Harmonious on This Subject. Pastor Russell Points Out—Theory of Body Resurrection Unreasonable and Suggests Ghastliness—"Flesh and Blood Cannot Inherit the Kingdom of God"—Natural Men Cannot Appreciate Spiritual Things.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 14.—Pastor Russell addressed large audiences here. We report one of his discourses from the text, "With what body do they come."—1 Cor. 15: 35.

On last Lord's day we discussed the fact of the resurrection and showed from St. Paul's words that without God's purpose of a resurrection those who have fallen asleep in death would have perished as brutes. We followed with the Apostle the assurances that Christ did rise from the dead and became the first-fruits of all those who have gone into the sleep of death. Others, indeed, were awakened temporarily—as, for instance, Jairus' daughter, Lazarus the friend of Jesus, and the son of the widow of Nain.

Yet none of those instances is counted as a resurrection, for it is said that Christ is the First-fruits of those who slept. Their awakening was merely of a temporary nature, and they soon re-lapsed into the sleep of death. They did not have a full resurrection—anastasis is raising up to perfection of life, such as the redemptive work of Jesus guarantees to Adam and all his race willing to accept the same under the terms of the New Covenant.

You will recall that on last Lord's day we demonstrated from the Scriptures that it is not the body, but the soul, that is promised a resurrection—that it was our Lord's soul that went to sheol, or hades, to the death state, and that God raised Him up from death on the third day. We noted a difficulty into which all Christendom was plunged by the unscriptural theory that it is the body that is to be resurrected. We now continue to search and note still further difficulties into which this error plunged us as believers in the words of Christ, particularly in connection with our Redeemer's resurrection.

WHAT WENT TO HEAVEN?

The ordinary thought in Christian minds in respect to Jesus' death and resurrection is that when He seemed to die He did not die; that He, the living, soul, could not die—that, instead, He went to Heaven, and then, on the third day, came back to get the body which had been crucified; and that He took it to heaven forty days later; that He has had that body ever since, and that He will have it to all eternity, marred with the print of the nails in His hands and feet, the thorns upon His brow, and the spear mark in His side. What a ghastly thought! How strange that we should ever have been misled into so unscriptural and unreasonable a theory! Some endeavor to glorify the matter by suggesting that our Lord's flesh is glorified—that it shines—the shining presumably making the wounds all the more conspicuous.

Our Methodist friends have not yet changed their statement of the matter, namely, "He ascended up on high, taking His fleshly body with Him, and all that appertained thereto, and sat down on the right hand of God." This medieval statement correctly admits that the fleshly body was not the Lord's, but that He, the soul, took it with Him as luggage. The statement, "and all that appertained thereto," presumably would refer to our Lord's sandals, walking sticks and such clothing that the soldiers did not divide amongst them at the time of His crucifixion—if indeed He had any others! But our dear Methodist friends want to be sure that nothing was left behind.

All this is of a piece with the theory that the saints when they die go to heaven, and then, later, come back and get their bodies, "and all things appertaining thereto"—the inconvenience that they have been rid of for centuries! How many truckloads of "things appertaining thereto" may be taken by some, and how mixed an assortment by others is not stated. Neither are particulars given respecting those shoes, clothing, etc., have undergone worn out. But we have had enough of this if it has helped us to see the absurdity of our choice received from the "Dark Ages"—if it has awakened us to thought and to Bible investigation on this important and interesting subject.

WHAT SAY THE SCRIPTURES?

The Bible presentation of this subject is every way reasonable, consistent and harmonious. St. Paul points out that "there is a natural body and there is a spirit body." He does not mean and he does not say that the spirit body is a human body glorified. Quite to the contrary he declares that "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God"—no matter how glorified it might be. A human being would be so totally different from a spirit being that, as St. Paul says, "he hath not yet appear what we shall be," in our resurrection change; and the Scriptures do not even attempt to give us an explanation.

The Bible merely declares that as we now bear the image of the earthly, Adam, we shall, by the glorious resurrection change, be given a share in the nature and likeness of the Second Adam, our glorious Lord. We shall be like Him and see Him as He is, and, be it noted, we must change from flesh and blood conditions to spirit conditions by resurrection power in order that we may see Him as He is. Surely this proves that our Lord Jesus is no longer flesh, as He once was—in the days of His flesh."—Hebrews v. 7.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN HEAVENLY AND EARTHLY BODIES.

Our text calls attention to the difference between celestial bodies and terrestrial or earthly bodies, and declares that they have different glories. It tells us that the first Adam was made a living soul, a human body, but that our Redeemer, who humbled Himself and took the earthly nature, "for the suffering of death," thereby became the Second Adam—the Head of the New Order. The wide distinction between the Second Adam and the first Adam is clearly set forth. One was earthly and the other heavenly. As we now bear the image of the earthly, we shall, if faithful, bear the heavenly image of our Lord, the second Adam, after our resurrection change.

St. Paul illustrates by saying that we know of many kinds of organisms on the earthly or fleshly plane—one flesh of man, another of beasts, another of birds and another of fish. But however different the organisms they all are earthly. So on the heavenly plane, the spirit plane, there are varieties of organisms, but all are spirit.

Our Heavenly Father is the Head Chief—"God of all Spirit," Cherubim, seraphim, and the still lower order of angels are all spirit beings, and Christ Jesus, our Redeemer, after finishing the work of redemption, regretting that our Lord's flesh is glorified—that it shines—the shining presumably making the wounds all the more conspicuous.

Our Methodist friends have not yet changed their statement of the matter, namely, "He ascended up on high, taking His fleshly body with Him, and all that appertained thereto, and sat down on the right hand of God." This medieval statement correctly admits that the fleshly body was not the Lord's, but that He, the soul, took it with Him as luggage. The statement, "and all that appertained thereto," presumably would refer to our Lord's sandals, walking sticks and such clothing that the soldiers did not divide amongst them at the time of His crucifixion—if indeed He had any others! But our dear Methodist friends want to be sure that nothing was left behind.

All this is of a piece with the theory that the saints when they die go to heaven, and then, later, come back and get their bodies, "and all things appertaining thereto"—the inconvenience that they have been rid of for centuries! How many truckloads of "things appertaining thereto" may be taken by some, and how mixed an assortment by others is not stated. Neither are particulars given respecting those shoes, clothing, etc., have undergone worn out. But we have had enough of this if it has helped us to see the absurdity of our choice received from the "Dark Ages"—if it has awakened us to thought and to Bible investigation on this important and interesting subject.

be on the same plane of being as the one whom He would redeem. Thus Jehovah particularly specified, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life." Hence the death of an angel, or of our Lord in His pre-human condition, could not have affected the payment of man's penalty and the consequent release of the condemned race. Thus again we read, "A body hast Thou prepared Me," for the suffering of death."—Hebrews x. 5, 9, 10.

No one questions that this applies exclusively to our Lord's experiences during the years in which He was a man—in the third day He became a stranger on the shore, and to Saul of Tarsus, as a spirit being, of more than angelic brightness, "shining above the brightness of the sun at noonday." We overlooked the fact that these appearances if all put together, would probably not have exceeded four hours out of the entire forty days in which our Lord tarried with His disciples after His resurrection and before His ascension. We were not critical students when we overlooked those things, and forget to ask our readers why these things are so.

Now we see more distinctly why our Lord did as He did. His disciples were natural men and therefore could not appreciate spiritual things. Furthermore, they could not receive the guidance of the Holy Spirit until the Lord's ascension and appearance in the presence of the Father on behalf of His Church, to receive instruction for their sins, and to make them acceptable joint-sacrificers with Him. Meantime, had Jesus not tarried those forty days—had He ascended immediately after His resurrection—His disciples, stunned and bewildered, would have had no assurance of His resurrection. They would have found it impossible to go out and tell the people that He had risen from the dead when they had no proof to this effect.

And even if Jesus had appeared to them as He did to Saul of Tarsus, above the bright shining of the sun, this would not have been convincing and satisfactory. They might have said, Here is a phenomenal Lemon that can we positively associate it with the life and death of Jesus. Matters were

THE UNCONSECRATED CANNOT UNDERSTAND SPIRITUAL PROBLEMS.

Coming to the point of what is to be resurrected, we note the fact that our Lord appeared in a body of flesh, and showed the disciples the print of the nails and the hole made by the spear. But we, perhaps, failed to note that only twice did He thus appear, and but for a few moments each time. His other six or seven appearances during that forty days were all so very brief, and in various bodies—once as a gardener, another time as a traveler—the third time as a stranger on the shore, and to Saul of Tarsus, as a spirit being, of more than angelic brightness, "shining above the brightness of the sun at noonday." We overlooked the fact that these appearances if all put together, would probably not have exceeded four hours out of the entire forty days in which our Lord tarried with His disciples after His resurrection and before His ascension. We were not critical students when we overlooked those things, and forget to ask our readers why these things are so.

Now we see more distinctly why our Lord did as He did. His disciples were natural men and therefore could not appreciate spiritual things. Furthermore, they could not receive the guidance of the Holy Spirit until the Lord's ascension and appearance in the presence of the Father on behalf of His Church, to receive instruction for their sins, and to make them acceptable joint-sacrificers with Him. They would have found it impossible to go out and tell the people that He had risen from the dead when they had no proof to this effect.

And even if Jesus had appeared to them as He did to Saul of Tarsus, above the bright shining of the sun, this would not have been convincing and satisfactory. They might have said, Here is a phenomenal Lemon that can we positively associate it with the life and death of Jesus. Matters were different with Saul of Tarsus. He needed something to thoroughly arouse him and to teach him for all time, and others through him, that the Lord is not a Man, but "that Spirit." Besides, some of the disciples who already believed were able to give Saul of Tarsus assurances of what they knew respecting the resurrection of Jesus and His ascension.

NO FOOLISH SUGGESTION IN BIBLE ABOUT THE RESURRECTION.

The Lord adopted the only reasonable way of helping His disciples to understand that He was no longer dead—that He had risen from the dead—and that He was no longer human, but had been glorified, and had become a spirit being. The two things were necessary and they were done at the same time.

Even on the occasion when our Lord appeared in a body like to the one crucified, He took care that the manifestation should be under such conditions as would positively prove that He had become a spirit being. He came into the room where they were, while the door was shut, and after a few words with them He vanished from their sight, as no human being could have done and as He never did during His ministry. That the Apostles caught the thought is well evidenced by St. Paul's argument on the subject in our text. There is no question respecting the Bible about Jesus having a fleshly body in heaven—that is all in our creeds and hymn books, prepared for us by our well-meaning but mistaken forebears. But we do not hesitate one another at the stake if they failed to promptly agree together on such propositions.

We mourn the dead, but they shall awake;
The lost, but they shall be restored!
O! well our human hearts might break
Without that sacred word!
Dim eyes, look up! sad hearts, rejoice!
Seeing God's bow of promise on high,
At sound of that prophetic voice—
"I will make all things new!"

PILAT'S REPORT.

An Ancient and Interesting Document, Found in the Vatican at Rome, Which Purports to Be the Original Report of Pilate, Roman Governor of Judea, to the Emperor Tiberius Caesar; Explanatory of the Causes which Led to the Tumult in Jerusalem, in Connection With the Death of Jesus Christ.

The public is indebted to the energy of a Christian minister, W. D. Mahan by name, for calling attention to and securing an English translation of this interesting document. He first heard of it through a German student who had spent a large portion of several years in searching for curiosities in the immense library of the Vatican at Rome. The German professor did not consider the MS. of sufficient interest to take a copy of it, but years afterwards made mention of it to the gentleman mentioned. The latter felt a great interest in what he had heard, and finally he wrote to his friend, the German professor, who meantime had returned to Westphalia, Germany, requesting that the latter would translate with Father Priesthaessen—chief librarian of the Vatican—would kindly allow him to receive a transcript of the MS. into English. This was finally accomplished at a cost to Mr. Mahan of seventy-two dollars and forty-four cents.

The parties concerned in procuring this translation are unknown to us, but the circumstances leave no room for questioning the fact. The account does not contradict, but fully corroborates the account of the Apostles in the Bible. We give here an English translation of the letter purporting to be Pilate's report:

To Tiberius Caesar, Emperor, Noble Sovereign, Greeting:

The events of the last few days in my province have been of such a character that I hasten to report the details as they have occurred, as I should not be surprised at the course of time they may change the destiny of our nation; for it seems as though the gods have ceased to be propitious. I am almost ready to say, Cursed be the day that I succeeded Decius Gratus in the government of Judea.

On my arrival at Jerusalem I took possession of the Judgment Hall and ordered a splendid feast to be prepared in which I invited the tetrarch of Galilee, with the high priest and his officers. At the appointed hour no guests appeared. This was an insult offered to my dignity. A few days after, the high priest delayed to pay me a visit. His deportment was grave and deceitful. He pretended that his religious scruples had not allowed him to sit down at the table of the Romans, and to offer up libations to their gods. I thought it expedient to accept of his excuse, but from that moment I was convinced that the conspirators had declared themselves the enemies of the conquerors. It seems to me that of all conquered cities, Jerusalem is the most difficult to govern.

The turbulent were the people that I lived in momentary dread of an insurrection. To repress it I had but a single centurion, and a handful of soldiers. I requested a reinforcement from the governor of Syria, who informed me that he had scarcely troops sufficient to defend his own province. His insatiate thirst for conquest led to extend our empire beyond the means of strengthening our noble government.

Among the various rumors that came to my ears, there was one that attracted my attention in particular. It was said that a Truth or Holy Prophet in Galilee, preaching with a noble unction a new law, in the name of the God that had sent him. As I regard as unfavorable that his designs were to effect on the people against the Romans, but soon were my fears dispelled. Jesus of Nazareth spoke rather in a friend of the Roman than of the Jews.

One day in passing by the place of Silloe, where there was a great concourse of people, I observed, in the midst of the crowd, a young man who was leaning against a tree, calmly addressing the multitude. I was told that He was Jesus. This I could easily have expected; so great was the difference between him and those who were listening to him. His golden-colored hair and beard gave to his appearance a celestial aspect. He appeared to be about thirty years of age. Never have I seen a sweeter or more calm countenance. What a contrast between him and his hearers with their black beards and tawny complexion. Unwilling to interrupt him by my presence, I continued my walk; but stopped to say something to join the group and listen. My secretary's name is Manlius. He is the grandson of the chief of the conspirators who encamped at Etrurla, waiting Catiline. Manlius was originally an inhabitants of Judea and well acquainted with the Hebrew language. He came to me and was the bearer of my confidence. On entering the Judgment Hall, I found Manlius, who desired to me the words Jesus had pronounced at Silloe. Never have I heard the Patrician, nor in the works of the philosophers, anything that can compare to the maxims of Jesus. One of the ruling Jews, by the name of Jonorus in Jerusalem, having asked him if it were lawful to give tribute to Caesar, Jesus replied, "Render unto Caesar the things which belong to Caesar, and unto God the things that are God's." It was on account of the wisdom of his sayings that I granted to which liberty to the Nazarene, for it was in my power to have had him condemned and exiled to Pontius. In thus would have been contrary to the justice which has always characterized the Romans. This man was neither seditious nor rebellious, and I extended to him my protection unknown, perhaps, to himself. He was at liberty to set, to speak, to assemble and address the people, to choose disciples unrestrained by any Prestorian mandate. Should it ever happen—may the gods ever avert the omen—should it ever happen, I say, that the religion of our forefathers be supplanted by the religion of Jesus, it will be to this noble tolerance that Rome shall owe the premature allegiance, while C. miserable weeds shall have been the instruments of the Christians call providence, and we, destiny.

But this unlimited freedom granted Jesus provoked the Jews, not the poor but the rich and powerful. It is true that this was severe on the latter, and this was a political reason, in my opinion, not to control the liberty of the Nazarene. "Scribes and Pharisees," he would say to them, "you are a race of vipers; you resemble painted sepulchers." At other times, he would sneer at the proud train of the Patrician, telling him that the mite of the widow was more precious in the sight of God.

These complaints were daily made at the Judgment Hall against the insolence of the Jews. I was even informed that some misfortune would befall him—that it would not be the first time that Jerusalem had stoned those who called themselves prophets—and that I, myself, should be called, as appeal would be made to Caesar.

However, my conduct was approved by the senate, and I was promised a reinforcement after the termination of the Parthian war. Being too weak to suppress a sedition, I resolved upon adopting a measure that promised to establish the tranquility of the city, and without subjecting the Prefecture to humiliating concessions.

I'LL BE DOGGED IF I CAN SEE HOW MY MONEY GETS AWAY FROM ME.

I've worked for Joe, I've worked for Jim,
I've worked by the day, I've worked by the job;
I've received my pay and laid it by
And to save that money I sure did try,
And I'll be dogged if I can see
How my money gets away from me.

I've taught the school, I've kept the store,
They paid me the dough it made me sore;
I laid it aside for rainy days
But the leaked stuff it just has such ways.
For I'll be dogged if I can see
How my money gets away from me.

I've sold cook stoves, I've worn old clothes,
I've worked quite hard to set a start
But me and my money we a ways
I've owned ten millions I do declare
But it's almost gone and I don't know where.
For I'll be dogged if I can see
How my money gets away from me.

Woman and the Home

FOR GRACEFUL NECKS FICHUS OF LACE ARE VERY BECOMING

LACE AND NET FICHU

LOVELY draperies for the neck are among the features of current fashions. Fichus made themselves so popular that spring and summer modes have many conspicuous examples of these. The charming confection illustrated here is of net and princess lace. The graceful lines of the wearer's shoulders are brought out by the fichu, while it forms an effective means of helping out the evening toilet of the woman whose neck is not so well preserved as might be.

GAY GLOVES FOR WEAR WITH SMART NEW TOILETS

The New Embroidered and Bracelet Gloves

GLOVES are elaborately embroidered this season, but new long silk gloves for summer bidding are equally called with all manner of dainty handwork. The bracelet glove, as its name indicates, is to be worn with a bracelet, and the glovemaker has obligingly provided the bracelet with the glove. Inexpensive stones are mounted in these glove bracelets, which are merely half a bracelet applied to the top of the kid glove.

"Votes For Women" on Checks.

The latest device to aid for women who have their own private account in banks and trust companies to stamp on their checks, "Votes For Women." The story is told of a woman who drew a check for $5,000 signed by her own name and the suffrage motto on an account which had a balance of only $3,000. The master of fact husband gently reminded her that it was be well for her to know how to conduct her bank account properly before she undertook to let the world know that she was entitled to suffrage.

Emphatic.

"Speaking of etiquette, did you send the dollar for those advertised instructions on 'What to do at table?'"

"Yes."

"And what did you get?"

"A slip with one word printed on it: 'Eat!'"—Boston Transcript.

Power of the Teeth.

The force required to crush an ordinary nut, such as one too often sees cracked between the back teeth, has been shown to be equal to a weight of more than 110 avoirdupois pounds directly applied.

Good Form

Wedding Etiquette For Men.

It seems unnecessary to give the current attire for the groom and his attendants at a wedding, but some of the details are unfamiliar to many, so the following hint may be of use:

In the first place, so far as dress is concerned, there should be no distinction between the formal morning and the formal afternoon wedding. For either time the black frock coat is the regulation thing. The groom and his attendants should wear coats of the same style and color. A coat of dark gray is sometimes worn, but it is not a wise plan for the groom to choose one of this color unless he feels sure that the best man and ushers either already possess coats of this color that match or are willing to buy new coats which will be exactly alike.

Then, too, the coats may be worn buttoned or open, as preferred, but there must be uniformity in this respect also. In fact, all the details of dress should be as much alike as possible.

The trousers need not be of exactly the same shade or pattern, but they should all be of a striped gray cloth.

Light waistcoats of silk or mixed silk materials are usually worn, but linen and cotton fabrics in gray and cream white shades are perfectly correct. They need not all be of the same material, but they should be of the same color and the same cut. That is to say, a single or double breasted cut and a uniformity of gray or cream white in color.

Colored shirts should not be worn with dress of this style. To be sure shirts of delicate tones of gray are occasionally used, but the correct styles are those made of the pique and linens with self stripes and figures, white, of course, the plain linen shirt with stiff cuff or plain stiff fronts are always correct.

As for collars, one may wear the straight standing, the slightly poke pointed or the sharp or rounded wings.

The neckties worn are in shades of cream, white or gray and are made of silks of a fancy weave or of basket or rib weave. The Ascot shapes are those usually considered most correct, but many prefer the four-in-hand shape in-hands.

The gloves should be of light gray mocha or suede kid.

The boots should be of patent leather with black kid tops.

At the evening wedding the costume is the conventional evening dress, worn for every occasion.

A man who is a guest at a wedding ceremony or reception should wear the same as that worn for any other occasion of equal formality. He need not wear a light colored tie or waistcoat and a black or dark gray morning coat would be as correct as the frock coat worn at such event, but the regulation formal morning coat, which, like the frock coat, is of a different material and color from the material of which the trousers are made.

The above covers in all necessary details what may be called regulation dress for formal weddings. This may be varied, perhaps, by those who wish to have something decidedly out of the ordinary in the attire of the groom and his attendants.

Little Courtesies.

It is said almost daily that men are no longer so polite to women as they were. Life is such a hurry and trust that the civilities get pushed on one side and we are a little in danger of becoming uncouth.

It is for women to see that they do not allow such a state of things to become worse. For example, how of ten does a man forget that when he is walking with a lady in the street he must invariably walk on the outside of the pavement. He must take her safely across crowded thoroughfares, piloting her way, and he must never walk before her unless through a crowd where he clears the path for her.

When he meets a lady he knows he must wait for her to bow first. He raises his hat in return. If he meets a man he knows, walking with a lady with whom he himself is unacquainted he raises his hat out of courtesy to the lady.

It is easy enough for a man to remember these small courtesies if he will only try. Nothing so stamps a man in the opinion of the world as his behavior where women are concerned.

Rules For the Guest.

Reply to all invitations immediately. In your acceptance make it plain that you understand the length of time for which you are invited and be definite as to the hour of arrival of your train or boat.

Inquire about the customs of the household and be careful to conform to them.

Even though it is impressed upon you that you may have your breakfast in your room, be sure that it entails no hardship before taking advantage of the opportunity.

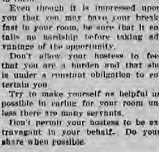
Don't allow your hostess to feel that you are a burden and that she is under a constant obligation to entertain you.

Try to make yourself as helpful as possible in caring for your room unless there are many servants.

Don't permit your hostess to be extravagant in your behalf. Do your share when possible.

THE GAITER SHOE.

New Styles in the Season's Footwear.



BOOTS SCILL LIKE GAITERS NOW.

Fashion favors this season the gaiter boot, with its cloth top buttoned down the outer side exactly like a well fitting gaiter. Two styles are shown here, both boots being of patent leather in walking style, one pair having green colored cloth gaiter tops, the other pair tops of navy blue twill fabric. The buttons are flat, and riveted to the cloth so they cannot fly off at a critical moment.

Only Women In This Orchestra.

A woman's orchestra, named the Orchestra Femina, with Mr. Siegfried Wertheim as conductor, is the latest London novelty. Mr. Wertheim has been working for a long time gathering the forces together, for he decided that it should be an all British institution, and now he appears to have succeeded. He has got together forty women, every one of whom is capable of playing solo parts. Mr. Wertheim contends that in the course of his search he has come across some real "discoveries."

Hitherto in the case of such instruments as the oboe, bassoon, trombones and the heavier wind instruments there have been no women exponents of very high rank. Mr. Wertheim has discovered English players of such instruments who are gold medallists of London, Paris and Brussels.

The only feature about the performance of the Orchestra Femina that will not be all British will be the music. Mr. Wertheim shrugs his shoulders at that line. He is to be a high class orchestra, and so he must rely on foreign produce for his programme, though popular music of English make will not be excluded.

Woman's World

Isabel Gordon Curtis, Author of "The Woman From Wolverton."

MRS. ISABEL GORDON CURTIS.

Among the story writers of today are a group of women who graduated not from a college, but from newspaper ranks. One of these is Isabel Gordon Curtis. Twenty years ago she was doing the dramatic work on a newspaper in Springfield, Mass. Later she took up magazine work, and recently her literary activities have taken head form, the result being a delightful story, "The Woman From Wolverton," which has been pronounced by critics as "typically American." It deals with the social experience of congressional people.

The local color and material for this story were gathered on the spot by Mrs. Curtis, who is the wife of Francis Curtis, director of the Republican literary bureau, and during a long residence at the national capital Mrs. Curtis has had a chance to become intimately acquainted with congressional families.

That two years for Washington life may be gleaned from a very characteristic remark made by the heroine of the story, who says: "If you wish to locate lost relatives or friends you have not heard of for years and indifferently learn something of former nature, become a newspaper in Washington before inauguration. Any inauguration will do."

Mrs. Curtis is a Scotch woman, having been born and educated in Bluntly, a little town in Aberdeenshire made famous by the Scottish romances of George Macdonald.

Positions For the Untrained.

A great problem is that of supplying girls and women of good birth, manners and education with an independent and honorable career. Unfortunately many applicants remain vague and unpractical as to the nature of the work required.

Now, the profession of governess and social secretary are posts which can be held only by highly educated, cultured women.

And it is hard to see what hope can be held out by the professional adviser to applicants of whom the following are typical: A girl, pleasing enough in appearance, says she wants work. Asked to be definite, she looks bewildered and then, thinking she has found the solution, replies with enthusiasm, "I am willing to do anything." Further questions elicit that she knows no French, no German, no typewriting or shorthand, nothing of account, does not like cooking or needlework, but can arrange flowers, act in amateur theatricals—in which she has been greatly applauded—can play the piano a little and considers herself eminently suitable to travel abroad as companion to a nice girl of her own age, who must be assured to pay well for the privilege. She goes away quite horrified that there is no immediate demand for such services as she can offer.

An elderly applicant for similar posts as housekeepers to widowers and are willing to do anything, from educating the children to entertaining the guests.

It should be impressed on women looking for definite work that definite qualifications are called for. A girl who is healthy and good at games, such as golf and tennis, if she has a command of fluent French or German, will be snapped up at once, as will the girl with a degree, no matter how ungenite her manners. It is the age of proficiency in everything.

Occasions do not make a man either strong or weak, but they show what he is.—Thomas a Kempis.

THE PANORAMA OF MOUNT ZION.

I'pon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psalters; upon the harp with a solemn sound. Psa. 92: 3.

And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps. Rev. 14: 2.

The ten strings—Creation, Condemnation, Law, Ransom, Resurrection, Justification, Consecration, Glorification, Restitution, Second Death.

As the voice of many waters heath
The shadows of the moon.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
With their harps!
As the song of feathered warblers on a sunny morn in June
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
As I listened to their music, their logic so profound—
My heart bubbled over and joined the lyrical sound.
The glory of Jehovah seemed to sparkle on the ground.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!,
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
As they harped the Scriptures became understood.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I saw a "groaning creation," washed
in Jesus' blood.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
These harpers had the Scriptures which they made to harmonize.
With the God the heaven who is both just and wise.
Full of tender mercy always ready to sympathize.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
They sang of man's creation—then of his fall—
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
How Jesus redeemed mankind and gave His life for all.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
The Creative, Condemnation, Law,
Ransom, Justification, Resurrection, Glorification, Restitution for the obedient—disobedience punished for correction.
Annihilation is the Second Death for incorrigibles refusing correction.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I saw the teeming millions rising from the dead.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
"All in their graves came forth," just as the Saviour said.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
The harpers kept harping a whole thousand years
Their music was so soothing it dried away all tears.
It healed the broken hearted and filled the earth with cheers.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!

He sat upon the throne says—"I make all things new."
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
"There shall be no more death—these words indeed are true."
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I saw the Kingdom flourish for which we're taugh to pray
The "former things" for sin and death forever pass away.
Health and happiness filled the earth forever and a day.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!

I saw a "great earthquake" shake the earth and sea.
Ceased not the harpers from harping
with their harps!
Just preparatory to the lifting of the curse—
A host fed "Mystic Babylon" and joined the harpers with their harps!
I saw Satan's Kingdom sink to never rise!
I heard hallelujahs rebounding to the skies!
I saw the whole earth become a Paradise!
I heard ten thousand harpers harping
with their harps!
Ten thousand times ten thousand harpers harping with their harps!

When "the times of restitution," were finished on this earth,
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
The earth became part of heaven filled with joy and mirth.
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps.
Thence to other planets I saw the harpers soar,
God's Plan of Salvation to other
Creations bore—
The harpers kept harping—For all eternity! Yes, forevermore!
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!
I heard the voice of harpers harping
with their harps!

Ohio, April 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I thought I would drop you a few lines to let you know that we appreciate your paper very highly. I've been getting your paper about five years now and it is getting better every year. I sent you my renewal through the Watch Tower as my time was up the 1st of April and also sent in five other names with mine. Wishing you success and the Lord's blessing and hoping you will continue the good work. I remain,

Yours truly,
MAX MATTHEWS.

Georgia, April 10.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

The Labor Tribune, as usual, was the most prompt in changing the address to my present branch of all the papers I take (with the exception of the Watch Tower of course) and I have not missed a copy.

This is one of the many things I admire about the Labor Tribune, it nearly always comes promptly on time, no matter how often one changes the address.

This reminds me, that our heavenly Father sees to it that every feature of His plan is brought to pass promptly on time, and I have been wondering about Matt. 24: 14, where we read "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." I have been following Pastor Russell around the world and I notice he has been preaching the "Glad Tidings" (gospel) of the Kingdom everywhere, and I have been impressed that by the time he takes another such a trip the "end" spoken of must be about in sight. And surely since the Jews are all nations to immediately follow that "end," those who have earnestly prayed "Thy Kingdom come" will have good reason to lift up their heads and rejoice that their deliverance is at hand.

Down here in Georgia it is evident that the Apostle Paul's words apply as the "whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together" waiting for the deliverance promised through the seed of Abraham which Pastor Russell shows very clearly to be Christ Jesus and His Church or body, and it surely ought to appeal to them as being "Good Tidings" (gospel) to hear about the coming time of refreshing (Acts 3, 19) which Pastor Russell shows the Scriptures to teach follows that time of the end of this "present evil world," and as I wanted a few of his grand sermons to hand to some of those who may be sufficiently wide-awake to appreciate the good news.

That was a grand sermon in the last number of the Tribune, and how good it is to be assured from the unchangeable Word of the Lord that the time is at the doors when the "desert shall blossom and bloom as the rose," and "all the blind eyes shall be opened" because Satan who blinds them shall be chained up for a thousand years, and with the Psalmist we exclaim "Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar and the fullness thereof. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein, then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord: for He cometh, for He cometh to judge the world with righteousness, and the people with His Truth." Bless the Lord O, my soul, and all that is within me praise His holy name." And we remember the Prophet Isaiah declares "When His judgments are abroad in the earth the inhabitants will learn righteousness."

Surely that will be a glorious time.

Very respectfully,
E. S. MASON.

The special session of the legislature which was called by Governor Osborne of Michigan, has passed the employers' liability and workmen's compensation act, endorsed by the labor organizations of the state. The bill has been signed by the governor. Only two dissenting votes were recorded against the bill.

POPULAR MECHANICS.

FLOW OF OHIO RIVER.

Discharges More Water Than Mississippi and Missouri Combined.

In volume of water the Ohio river is the main tributary of the Mississippi. Its mean discharge, according to the records of the United States geological survey, is about 205,000 cubic feet per second, which is much more than the discharge of the St. Lawrence river at Ogdensburg, N. Y., although the drainage area of the St. Lawrence is nearly twice that of the Ohio. The maximum flow of the Ohio is approximately 1,500,000 cubic feet per second —about thirty times the low water flow.

A comparison of records of flow of the Ohio river with those of the upper Mississippi and the Missouri shows that although its drainage area is but one-third that of the combined Mississippi and Missouri its mean and low water flow is 1.3 times as great as their combined flow and its maximum flow is 3.5 times as great. This fact is accounted for by the greater rainfall in the Ohio basin and by the general character of the region.

The Ohio basin affords many opportunities for storage, especially on the southern tributaries. From topographic maps of the geological survey and surveys of the drainage area of the Ohio a large number of reservoir sites have been located, some of them of enormous capacity. Careful surveys would undoubtedly show many suitable sites for dams that would impound large reservoirs.

The magnitude of such a flow as that of the Ohio is perhaps but little appreciated if it is stated that a discharge of 300,000 cubic feet per second would in one day cover 3(0,000 acres to a depth of one foot.

Chemical Tests of Welds.

It is impossible to determine the quality of fusion welds (oxyacetylene or oxyhydrogen) by a mere external examination; therefore one must depend on the honesty of the operator, says the Scientific American. The following is a simple chemical test which may be applied to welds on steel or iron: The spot selected for the test is exposed with the aid of a file, cold chisel and is carefully cleaned and rubbed off with emery paper. A solution of one gram of iodine and two grams of potassium iodide in ten grams of water is then applied with a hair-brush. A mixture of acetic acid, four parts; nitric acid, one part, and alcohol, one part, may be used instead, or the piece of metal may simply be immersed in dilute sulphuric acid (twenty-two cubic centimeters sulphuric acid to 100 grams water). Any cracks, flaws or blowholes will thus become exposed, and many "expert welders" will be made ashamed of their work.

Slendpipe Failure.

A standpipe twenty feet in diameter and about 100 feet in height recently collapsed last January at Sheboygan, Wis. The failure occurred after a stretch of unusually cold weather, during which the maximum temperature was plus 23 degrees F. and the minimum minus 20 degrees F. The effect of the cold was to cause a gradual freezing of the water inwardly from the shell, and in the early part of the winter itself an ice cap formed. Ultimately the wafer column was entirely inclosed within a shell of ice, and the pressure generally burst the standpipe at a point where a slight fracture already existed. The moral of this accident is that particular care must be taken in very severe weather to protect as far as possible the forming of such an ice envelope in standpipe towers.—Scientific American.

A Rich Soda Deposit.

"Soda lake," situated at Magadi, British East Africa, is one of the richest soda deposits in the world. Covering an area of more than eighteen square miles and containing a quantity of soda estimated at 200,000,000 tons. As fast as the blocks of soda are removed from the surface the places fill again, and the natives claim it to be possible to continually work the same position for several consecutive years. With the primitive tools at hand only 1,000 tons have been sounded to a depth of about nine feet and nothing but crystallized soda found. It is said that an English company with a capital of $5,000,000 will begin to exploit the deposit as soon as the Uganda railway reaches the district.

Huge Storage Battery.

The monster storage battery recently installed in Baltimore as insurance against interruption in the city's electric light and power service is said to be the largest ever placed in one plant in the world. The installation of the battery cost about $400,000, which includes the cost of the special building erected for it. The battery weighs 1,100 tons and required fifteen tons of copper to make the necessary connections. When accidents occur which necessitate the shutting down of one of the stations for short periods the battery will automatically supply current with no break in the service.

Largest of Whistles.

Measuring respectively nine inches, fifteen inches and twelve inches in diameter, the three bell domes of the whistle of the White Star liner Olympic are the largest of their kind ever made.

A MIGHTY DITCH DIGGER.

Huge Machine That Excavates a Mile of Trench Per Day.

The machine herewith illustrated is said to be the largest excavator of its kind ever built. It is employed in the construction of canals and laterals comprising an irrigation system to water the 16,000 acres which compose the Oakley ranch, situated in the Imperial valley of Mexico, just across the international boundary from California. The conditions are identical with those of the valley of the Nile, for this ranch is of silt lands built up by the ages of overflow of the Colorado river.

The huge machine weighs 100,000 pounds and covers an area of 25 by 60 feet. It is entirely of steel construction and is propelled by two thirty horsepower gas engines. The fore part of the machine carries the engines which drive a shaft wheel, which in turn by a series of cogs and chains propels the machine over the ground and at the same time operates the immense circular digger carried at the rear. The digger is equipped with scoops bearing sharpened blades of steel. It first picks up the dirt and, revolving upward, drops its burden onto conveyors, which carry it to both sides, depositing it upon the banks of the excavation.

The machine, or excavator as it appears, is so nicely adjusted that it can dig a ditch from two inches up to eight feet in depth and from four to twelve feet wide, shaping and finishing the excavation as it proceeds. With this machine seven men do the work of fifty scraper shovels handled by 100 mules, with a driver for each team.—Popular Mechanics.

Liquid Tar as a Fuel.

A new German type of oil engine is built to run with liquid tar as fuel and is said to work very successfully. One of the large gas companies had the engine designed by the Koerting establishment in order to see whether such tar coming from coal distillation could not be used to operate an engine. The present engine is built for a hundred horsepower and was tested by coupling with a dynamo. Starting and loading up in the first place are done by the use of paraffin oil. The engine was run on a sixty-six hour endurance test, carrying a two-thirds load, and after the trial it was found that the valves and the other parts were very clean and there was no deposit such as might be feared inside the engine. A very regular running was also one of the good points observed.

Cleaning Plaster Casts.

The cleaning of plaster casts cannot very well be accomplished by simply washing with water, as gypsum is to some extent dissolved by the water. F. Rathgen of the laboratory of the Berlin museum, Berlin, recommends the use of a saturated aqueous solution of gypsum. Such a solution may be prepared by covering the bottom of a large bottle with ground gypsum and filling up with water. The whole must be left standing for a few days, with shaking occasionally. Finally the clear solution is decanted and the plaster cast immersed in it. After from a few hours of immersion it will be an easy matter to remove any dust with the aid of a dense hairbrush. This can be done while the article is still in the water.

Conservation of Natural Gas.

The much discussed waste of natural gas is stated by the United States geological survey to be rapidly decreasing. The problem of conserving the natural gas supply may be considered as having been satisfactorily solved in Pennsylvania, throughout the Appalachian and the Lima-Indiana fields and in Kansas. The greatest waste is in Oklahoma and in the Caddo field of Louisiana, owing in Oklahoma to probable carelessness in enforcement of the law and in Louisiana to lack of a market. It is noteworthy that one of the two world wide in Louisiana that has made sensational examples of waste has been successfully closed and the gas thus conserved for future use.

The Harmless Ivy.

The impression that ivy is harmful to walls of stone or brick has been removed by the testimony of a large number of farmers, architects, builders, foresters and master gardeners. These trained observers agree that ivy has no tendency to make the walls damp. They maintain, in fact, that the clinging tendrils of the plant extract and hold any existing moisture and that the thick leaves protect the walls from the action of the weather. Furthermore, they find no evidence that the ivy roots affect the foundations of stone structures.

So She Does.

"Dog watches are common on ships, but what can a cat do?"

"She comes in handy for a fur, sir."—Baltimore American.

CHANGED THE PLAY.

Peter the Great Turned the Comedy Into a Tragedy.

It is related that Peter the Great, that mighty czar of Russia, strolling incognito through the camp, came upon a party of noncommissioned officers and grenadiers enacting a comedy, which he paused to witness.

All at once his brow became clouded. In the play a soldier in the uniform of his guards committed at a certain moment a robbery. Nevertheless the emperor allowed the play to proceed. The court martial is convened on the stage and the thief is sentenced to death. The spectators, composed of officers and men, showed the most lively concern in the performance and laughed at the grotesque contortions of the condemned culprit. The amateur actor played his part very well. Here come the squad that is to execute him. "Fire!" orders the lieutenant, and the amateur dropped down dead, his heart pierced by seven bullets—to make believe, but dead indeed.

Whereupon the emperor dropped his incognito and addressed these assembled: "A soldier of my guard who committed a robbery must die. If he did not steal why did he boast of it and sell his uniform? It is I who ordered the loaded rifles given to the men. I thought it right to teach soldiers to pity the trade of mummers."—Argonaut.

PHILADELPHIA SCRAPPLE.

How to Prepare This Inexpensive and Highly Nutritious Dish.

Have your butcher prepare a pig's head and split it in halves. Put it into a stock pot and cover with boiling water. Cook until meat falls from the bones. Remove the meat, strain the liquor and set aside to cool. Remove most of the fat, all gristle and bones. Chop meat fine.

Remove fat from liquor, place on range, bring to boiling point, add meat and one pound of beef liver previously parboiled ten minutes and cut in very small pieces. Season with salt, pepper and sage to taste. Add one capful of cornmeal mixed with one capful of cornmeal, letting it sift through the fingers of the left hand while stirring briskly with the right. Thicken with cornmeal until mixture is the consistency of cornmeal mush. Stir until thoroughly done. Remove to tank of range and simmer two or three hours. Use a heavy vessel to cook the scrapple in. This lessens the danger of scorching.

Pour mixture into brick shaped tinned pans and allow to cool and set in cold weather. When cold cut in half inch slices and saute in a well greased hot spider. Brown on both sides. Serve for breakfast or luncheon. This is an inexpensive dish and is highly nutritious and will serve seventy meals in cold weather.—National Food Magazine.

Straightening a Bent Shaft.

Place the shaft upon the lathes and set a forge between the bend and heat it to a bright red, then remove the forge or roll the shaft along the horses until the bend is straightened. Let the shaft so that the bow will be up. Apply a small stream of water on the center of the bow. This will cause the top to cool and contract while the lower side remains hot, thus stretching the lower side and straightening the shaft.

Reading the Date of a Worn Coin.

The date and denomination of a coin worn smooth can be determined in the following manner: Take an ordinary coal shovel or a piece of sheet metal, and place it in a hot fire. Allow it to become red hot, then remove and place the coin on the hot surface of the metal. Any figures or letters can be made out even when buried in the metal. The test seldom fails even when the inscription have been worn so smooth that they are invisible to the naked eye.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION UNSCRIPTURAL.

Mark 9:1, 7-13; Matthew 9, 15-16—April 21.

Text: "Ye did not choose Me, but I chose you and appointed you, that ye should go and bear fruit."—John xv, 16. R. V.

CHRIST'S lesson shows the perpetuity with which the twelve Apostles were chosen: that they were to have things said to and respecting them are equally appropriate to every one of Jesus' followers, and that things said to the Twelve to do and respecting them apply to none others of their day nor since. As for instances, the Savior said to the Twelve, and to none others, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." The import of those words clearly is that the persons indicted were assured that they would be so specially guided of Divine providence that they would be set forth as the Divine will amongst men nothing to be which Heaven would not sanction; and that they would declare not binding upon the followers of Jesus only such things as in God's sight would not be binding. In those twelve men, therefore, was invested the primary inspiration, or special guidance not accorded in this particular degree to others of the "household of faith."

Judas, unauthorized choice of Matthias.

Surely there is no intimation in the New Testament that as one after another of the apostles died other men were recruited as succeeding them. On the contrary, the Scriptures repeatedly refer to the twelve apostles "of the Lamb." Moreover, as the Jewish Dispensation began at the head with the twelve patriarchs and the twelve sons, so the Christian Dispensation begins at the death of Jesus, with the twelve apostles, and other Millennial dawn articles, for it is the best paper I have seen in both religious and style and clearness of print makes it easily and pleasantly readible for old eyes. May God's blessing rest on yours for your faithful work in spreading the Glad Tiding.

"Apostolic succession" unauthorized.

Then, again, we find that the Lord Jesus was not ignorant of the fact that the Adversary would be specially guided of Divine providence that they would be set forth as the Divine will amongst men nothing to be which Heaven would not sanction; and that they would declare not binding upon the followers of Jesus only such things as in God's sight would not be binding. Q.—Nature is not a virtue, why does it say in Ecclesiastes 10, 3 "There is a time to hate?" Why does Christ say in Luke xiv, 26 "If any man come to me and HATE not his father and mother, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple?" (F. W.)

Answer.—Our Lord in all of His instructions to His followers continually admonished them to love one another, and not only this but first they were to love God with all their heart, soul and mind (Matthew xxii, 35; Matthew v, 43, 44-48; I Peter ii, 23.) Therefore, it would not be consistent to think that the Lord would command His followers to hate those that were dear and dear to themselves, and towards whom there was every impulse to love and esteem. The Lord evidently used this word to impress the thought upon the minds of those who would be His followers, that the terms of discipleship are very rigid and exacting. In other words: none could become disciples of the Master unless they loved Him more than all earthly things, and consequently none can ever be recognized in the Lord as His followers unless they have taken the step towards wholehearted love and devotion to God and the things of God. It is left to be obedient to the Divine will even though it meant the loss of every relationship and the sacrifice of life itself. The thought conveyed in the expression found in Ecclesiastes iii, 8 is that there is a time for hostility and opposition to sin and error, and that sometimes it would be proper to "hate," or despise that which is contrary to the principles of righteousness and justice. All should hate injustice and be out of sympathy with those who oppress and wrong the weak and helpless. Also, those who are in opposition to the Lord and His just laws and arrangements, and who refuse to conform their lives should be righteously shunned and described—"hated with a perfect hatred."—Psalms cxxxix, 21, 22.

Q.—The Bible seems to infer that we will know our friends in heaven. Is it so? If they these human bodies cleaned and made whole; revamped and made over? (C. T.)

Answer.—The 15th chapter of I Corinthians is an inspired treatise on the subject of resurrection. In it the Apostle sets forth practically every phase and point relating to this momentous subject. He begins by giving a synopsis of the Gospel in a few brief words —"How that Christ died for our sins * * * and that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day." He then names the witnesses to attest the fact of Christ's resurrection. In verses 11-17 verses, he affirms and emphasizes the fact of Christ's resurrection. The Apostle then continues a statement that nearly all Christian people have overlooked or misunderstood. If Christ be not raised from death and resurrected "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." "Perished" means destroyed—annihilated. Here is one advance the absurd idea that the Apostle was referring to the bodies of those who had "fallen asleep;" for the bodies of all perish and disintegrate into dust. But he had reference to the individual being, the soul. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezekiel xviii, 4.) Because Christ died for all, and was raised from the dead for all. What comes forth—the body? Let the Apostle answer—"O senseless man! that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body which shall be * * * but bare grain * * * But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased Him, and to every seed his own body. It is sown a natural body (or being). Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God (therefore we shall be changed * * * at the last trump; * * * the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed." Verses 35-53.

Q.—Was Christ human and Divine at the same time?

Answer.—The word "Divine" signifies "like a part of God." The Creator God, is a Spirit Being glorious and immortal; dwelling in light that is inaccessible to mortal man. One possessing the Divine, immortal nature could never die. The human nature is the highest form of the earthly or fleshly nature. The Divine nature is the highest form of the spirit nature. The spiritual nature is the true thing and the fleshly nature is another thing. (I Corinthians xv, 44-46.) The blending of the two natures would produce a hybrid nature or being. As to which nature Christ possessed while in the flesh let the inspired record speak.—"The Word (Logos—Jesus) was made flesh." (John i, 14.) "Christ * * * being indeed put to death in the flesh but made alive in spirit." (I Peter iii, 18.) "Since then the children (of Adam) are common nature of flesh and blood, He also in like manner partook of them; in order that by means of His death He might annul so many still held to the creeds thus formulated by pseudo-apostles. The import of the hour is a recognition of these facts and an abandonment of all those creeds and a return to the words of Jesus and the Apostles and the Prophets. Only thus can we extricate ourselves from the multiplied errors represented in the six hundred divisions of the church of Christ.

Q.—Which is the oldest Church? (C. D. A.)

Answer.—There is but one Church, from the Scriptural standpoint. In the language of the Apostle, it is "The Church of the First-Born which are written in heaven;" or the "Church of the living God" or again, "The Church of Christ"—Hebrews xii, 23; I Timothy iii, 15; Romans xvi, 16.

It was this Church which our Lord established and for it He so partly name. It was merely the Church of Christ. Since then good people, more or less confused by the errors of the Dark Ages, have separated themselves into various bands and churches of bewildering organization and bound themselves together by human creeds. These are known by various names. Some of the names of those are authorized by the Bible nor mentioned in it. However, the one "Church of the Living God" is the Church in the probationary sense now, but an entrance into full membership in that Church, which is the Bride, the Lamb's wife, will be granted only to the "overcomers," after they shall have finished their course and become participants in the First Resurrection.

Q.—Please explain Isaiah xiii, 19-22, where the Prophet speaks of "familiar spirits," and "dizards" that work in the night? (E. B.)

Answer.—The "familiar spirits" are the demons that infest earth's atmosphere and who are responsible for impersonating the dead—representing that they are the spirits of the departed ones, and thus deceiving, and deluding many, who have not given heed to the instructions of the Scriptures to the effect that the dead are dead, and will not be alive or conscious until the awakening time in the resurrection. The "wizards" are the mediums who act as the agents of these demons, or fallen angels. They peep and mutter and work mysteriously in the dark, for the plan of Satan is to work out in the open where all may be clear and plain. The powers of righteousness are the laws by which we live and in an understand way, as they have nothing to conceal. The "hungry" ones are those who do not feed on the "Word and the testimony"—God's Word—and are giving heed to the doctrines of demons. They are dissatisfied with the neglected the only rest source of comfort and consolation—the Scriptures.

Q.—We read in the 10th chapter and the 8th verses of the Gospel of John the following: "All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers." Who are the terms "thieves and robbers?" (A. N. F.)

Answer.—The Lord Jesus was narrating a parable illustrating certain arrangements and conditions. Every sheepfold must of necessity have a door or gate and this would be for the use of the shepherd and the sheep. As stated in verse 1, any person attempting to enter the sheepfold in any other way than by the door would be a thief and a robber. Our Lord Jesus, the "Shepherd," by fulfilling the terms of the Law Covenant, entered the "door" and secured all the blessings and privileges which had been promised in the Law. The Scribes and Pharisees—the thieves and robbers—on the other hand, had been endeavoring to "climb up some other way," by a hypocritical observance of the letter of the Law, and by a heart observance and fulfillment of the spirit of the Law. Jesus, as the "Good Shepherd," laid down His life for the "sheep." The Scribes and Pharisees neglected the interests of the people and were engaged in seeking their own gain,—wealth and fame—while piously posing as religious leaders.

Q.—If Satan (the Devil) is the grand general supervisor over the lower regions, and he is to be destroyed, as we read in the Scriptures—(Hebrews ii, 14) who will be appointed to look after the interests of his department after his demise? (G. G. F.)

Answer.—Not only will Satan be destroyed but we read also that "hell," the place of supposed fire and brimstone, is to deliver up all the dead that are there and then the place itself destroyed.—(Revelation xxi, 13, 14.) The take of fire and brimstone is as all Bible scholars now know, is the symbolic expression denoting destruction, annihilation, or extinction of being. Death and hell being cast into this "lake," words, therefore, signify their destruction, or termination. Demonstrating the truth of this interpretation of the symbols, we find it stated in the 22d chapter and the 4th verse that "there shall be no more death;"—it having been destroyed in the "lake of fire and brimstone." Satan will have no successor, and the fire-proof demons will join the army of unemployed!

British Coal Strike Finishing--Many Miners Dissatisfied--Further Trouble May Eventuate in the Summer---Great Dundee Lockout--Government's Attack on Free Speech Resented--Serious Crisis Pending in London Building Trade.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, April 17—The British coal strike is still pending. Your correspondent has to express things in that non-committal way owing to the fact that despite the official union order to return to work a considerable section of the miners are still out and voluntarily so. It will be remembered that last week the question as to whether work should be resumed and the settlement of the minimum daily wage rates left to the district boards which are being set up under the Government's Minimum Wage Bill was put to the union miners on strike. Only about half of them troubled to vote and the result gave a majority of over 40,000 against resumption of work. Despite this the executive of the Miners' Federation called a conference of delegates from all parts of the country in London on April 4 which conference decided by an overwhelming majority that the miners should resume work. It was stated by the executive that as the strike was declared by a two-thirds majority only a two-thirds majority could continue it. And as that required two-thirds has not been obtained in last week's ballot the conference agreed with the executive that the strike should not be continued even though there was a majority of a fairly substantial character in favor of doing so.

As might be expected this decision of the national conference was received with very mixed feelings in different parts of the country but on the whole, the order is being loyally observed and the miners are getting down the pits as rapidly as possible. In many parts of the country, however, indignation meetings have been held at which the resignation of the local union leaders has been demanded.

The only direct result of this enormous strike has been the passing of the above mentioned minimum wage acts. The act stipulates that a minimum wage should be paid to coal getters and that the rate of the wage for each district should be determined by a committee composed equally of representatives of the miners and the coal owners. When these two parties cannot agree then outside arbitration is to be called upon. He, however, will not have compulsory powers so it is quite possible that we shall have the minimum wage in principle but not in fact and that further tremendous strife must be looked for in the near future. George Barker, a member of the Miners Federation Executive, declares that the affiliation between the railway workers, transport workers, and miners is more within the range of practical possibility.

The decision of the Spinners' and Manufacturers' association of Dundee, Scotland, declaring a lock out became operative on April 3 and over thirty firms, employing 30,000 workers, closed their works for an indefinite period. The lock-out is the result of the refusal of the strikers at Camperdown works to return to work. The Employers' association decided that unless there was a general resumption to shut all establishments and all the workers returned with the exception of the employees at the Camperdown works. A last chance was offered them on April 2 but out of 4,000 only about 1,000 returned. It is now not likely that work will be resumed until April 15 at the earliest.

The biennial conference of delegates representing the Amalgamated Union of Engineers opened at Leicester on April. The report showed a membership of 19,000 and it was stated that the miners' strike had cost the union nearly $25,000. A resolution was carried condemning the "intimidating methods of the Government" in relation to the prosecution of working men's leaders and calling for their immediate release together with the activist of Tom Mann, who had been arrested for issuing an appeal to soldiers not to fire on strikers if called upon to do so. The president, in his address, attributed the labor unrest to the falling value of stationary wages and the increased cost of living, the increasing tyranny of organized capital, and the failure of modern economic teaching.

The dispute which arose between masters and men in the London building industry towards the close of last year still remains unsettled. The Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners sent in their notices in December last. As this union has to give six months' notice of a desire to terminate an agreement with their employers these notices will take effect on June 8 if an arrangement is not come to before then. The masters in dispute are the rates of wages and the hours of work. Wages were settled at 21 cents an hour in 1900, and there has been no increase since then, although the cost of living has increased enormously. Consequently the workmen are now asking that they should be paid 25 cents an hour, though they would have been justified in asking for a much higher increase. They are also asking for a reduction of summer hours of working, and for double pay for overtime. At present the working hours are 47½ a week, and they are asking that it should be reduced to forty-seven.

The Sheffield moulders' strike is now six weeks old and is not yet settled. About 1,200 men are affected. The strike arose out of the difficulty of defining where the work of the moulder began and that of the coremaker ended. The moulders complained that the coremakers had work given to them which should belong to the moulder. The wages of

UNITED HATTERS WIN VICTORY.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The local union of hatters in Danbury, Conn., has won a decided and emphatic victory in The Superior Court. The union had a union shop agreement with one of the local factories, and one of the employers cancelled his membership with the organization and, according to the terms of the agreement, he was discharged. The discharged employe brought suit for $5,000 damages, and the decision above referred to was rendered in favor of the local union of hatters. It is a sweeping victory for organized labor and clearly makes legal the right of employers to make trade agreements with labor organizations to conduct a union shop.

NUMEROUS INCREASES FOR CARPENTERS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 20.—General Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, reports that the contractors of Galt, Ont., have signed an agreement with the local union which carries an increase in wages of from 5 to 10 cents per hour and the Saturday half holiday. At Beardstown, Ill., an increase in wages was secured of 5 cents per hours. Somerville, N. J., gave an increase of 4 cents per hour, and an increase of 2½ cents per hour has been granted the carpenters at Wildwood, N. J. At Jefferson, Mo., also the carpenters have been successful in securing an increase of 10 cents per hour, making the minimum wage 50 cents.

A jewelry firm in Bavaria furnishes the clothing worn by its employes while at work in the factories, and washes the garments at its own laundry. This is done to preserve any particles of gold or any tiny jewels which might admere to the clothes.

WHERE ARBITRATION IS VOLUNTARY.

THE farcial operation of the New York state law for arbitration of labor disputes was referred to in these columns last week. A reader calls our attention to arbitration which is not farcial. It is in New York, but it is not under the provisions of law, which is perhaps why it is so much more effective.

The particulars are given in a bulletin just issued by the bureau of labor Washington. In speaking of conciliation, arbitration and sanitation in the cloak, suit and cost industry in New York this bulletin says that during the year ending December 31, 1911, the machinery for settling disputes, consisting of a board of grievances and board of arbitration, has been successful in the settlement of 1,418 grievances, of which 1,282 were brought before it by the unions and 135 by the manufacturers. Of these, 405 were dropped or withdrawn at an early stage, 411 were conciliated, 379 were decided in favor of the unions and 392 against them; with 79 still unsettled and the disposition of 440 not ascertain. In 1,185 cases the disagreements were settled by the deputy clerks without even going before the board of grievances, and only five were referred to the board of arbitration; 223 of the grievances were connected with the wage scale, 239 were caused by the alleged discrimination of distribution of work, and 216 were complaints of discharge without cause. Only 40 dealt with hours of labor and overtime.

A voluntary arbitration system of this sort in one great trade is more inspiring than a dozen state arbitration laws cruelly or deceitfully drawn and farcically administered. The example of the employers and workers in the New York cloak trade is worthy of general imitation.

A HUNGER STRIKE.

MANY thousand textile workers on New York Mills, (Utica), with their families, are on strike and owing to the miserably low wages which they were receiving are now in need of the common necessaries of life. These poor cotton workers toiled 59 to 70 hours per week for an average wage of $6.36, the majority of the workers only receiving from $3.50 to $5.00 per week. This pitiful wage was often reduced by a system of fines which was nothing short of direct robbery. In some instances every cent of their hard earned pay was forfeited.

It is impossible here to tell of the tyranny of the company, the abuse endured, and although the cost of living has increased enormously. Consequently the workmen are now asking that they should be paid 25 cents an hour though they would have been justified in asking for a much higher increase. They are also asking for a reduction of summer hours of working, and for double pay for overtime. At present the working hours are 47½ a week, and they are asking that it should be reduced to forty-seven.

The Sheffield moulders' strike is now six weeks old and is not yet settled. About 1,200 men are affected. The strike arose out of the difficulty of defining where the work of the moulder began and that of the coremaker ended. The moulders complained that the coremakers had work given to them which should belong to the moulder. The wages of

GEORGE F. BAER, CHIEF SPOKESMAN OF MINE OWNERS.

THERE can be no doubt that to making George Frederick Baer their spokesman the bituminous operators have thrown themselves and the anthracite miners the mine operators have intrusted their case to a man who will do it full justice. His record is that of an honest and irreconcilable foe to labor unions, and even if he never made the statement popularly attributed to him that Providence had ordained that the present owners should administer the coal properties as their wisdom dictated it is certain that he believes the miners should have no loud voice in the decision of wage and other labor disputes. He began life as a "devil" in the office of a Pennsylvania country paper, studied law in the intervals of work, became colonel for the Philadelphia and Reading railroad and afterward its president and that of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company and several other coal companies. He entered the Union army as a private and came out of the civil war as a brigadier general of volunteers. It is said that his own employees receive far better treatment than those of most other coal operators, but they receive it as individuals and not as members of a union.

PITTSBURGH MINE CONVENTION ADJOURNS.

The annual convention of the United Mine Workers of District No. 5 (Pittsburgh) adjourned last Thursday. The faction which has been trying to break up the organization claimed the motion to adjourn had not been carried and went through the form of holding a rump meeting, but nobody is taking their maneuvers seriously. The 50,000 idle miners in Pennsylvania will return to work at once. President Feehan announced that the international referendum on the Cleveland settlement approved the terms made, 80 per cent of the membership voting in its favor, and that notifications had been sent to various locals to have the men return to work.

The rump convention has sent an appeal to National President White to interfere. As yet he has made no reply. They are threatening that if he ignores them they will "reconvene" the convention.

BIG RAILROAD STRIKE AVERTED.

That the railway managers had decided to accept the offer of government mediation to prevent a general strike of engineers was considered absolutely certain at their headquarters at 50 Church street, yesterday. One of the officials who refused to permit the use of his name, said:

"There will be no strike. We will accept the offer and there will eventually be an amicable agreement."

The committee promised a definite answer to Messrs. Neill and Knapp this afternoon. Both of the government officials said they expected this answer to be favorable.

When the committee of the railroad managers association went into session at headquarters yesterday, on its action depended peace or war in the railroad world.

The committee of the engineers, in pursuance with its historic attitude of preferring arbitration to strikes, had already accepted the offer of mediation made on behalf of the federal government by Commissioner of Labor Neill and Judge Knapp of the court of commerce without a second's delay.

But the railroad managers were in no hurry. Even when they went into session they were inclined to be defiant, although it was recognized that they could hardly afford to ignore the offer.

The railroads, it is already believed, preferred a strike because they believed that only in that way would they be able to persuade the interstate commerce commission to let them increase freight rates. This was indicated when Jefferson Levy, who represents a rich New York district in Congress, tried to persuade Grand Chief Stone to join with the railroads in an appeal to Congress to enact legislation which would nullify the action of the commission in compelling the railroads to refrain from advancing rates. Stone was told by the congressman that if he would take this action there was no question but that the railroads would be able to grant every demand of the men.

When the general managers went into session several of them privately said they did no see how arbitration could help because the roads simply could not pay any higher wages. To do this, they said, would mean that interest on outstanding bonds would have to be defaulted.

"Any proposition that means the expenditure of more money on our pay rolls is foolish and cannot be accepted by us," declared one of the managers.

Despite this fact, however, there was a general belief that the managers would accept the offer of the government simply because they could not afford to have the public believe that the railroads would stand in the way of anything that would "make for peace."

Railway Carmen Increasing

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 20.—Secretary Weeks of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen says that during the quarter ending March 31, eight new lodges were organized and several reorganized. This organization now has 852 local lodges, with a membership of approximately 53,000 and still growing.

Every six minutes day and night and every two hours a railroad employe is killed or injured.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

President Taft Appoints Miss Julia C. Lathrop, of Chicago, Head of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Commerce and Labor--Efforts Being Made to Bring a Labor Bill Out of Committee.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—President Taft made a woman a Government Bureau Chief on Saturday, the first appointment of the kind by any President, by naming Miss Julia C. Lathrop of Chicago, as head of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Commerce and Labor. The appointment followed immediately the passage of a bill by Congress creating the bureau.

Miss Lathrop will receive a salary of $5,000. She will have an assistant chief, a private secretary, a statistical representative, two agents and clerks. The appointment comes in recognition of notable service for the children by Miss Lathrop in Illinois. She has long been a member of the State Board of Charity, in which her work was marked by great efficiency.

From the Beginning she insisted that politics should not interfere with her. In 1905 she resigned from the board, and by letter assailed Governor Yates for having foisted on the board a secretary who was a machine politician, in violation of his promise to leave the charitable institutions of the State free from that sort of influence. Governor Yates accepted her resignation but public opinion sided with her so strongly that she soon had her way and was reinstated.

She has been associated for many years with Jane Addams in the work at Hull House and has taken a conspicuous part in charity conferences and in recent years in various sections of the country.

Miss Lathrop is a graduate and trustee of Vassar college.

During the entire session of the present Congress efforts have been made to have reported, favorably, from the Judiciary committee, of both Houses, labor's injunction limitation bill, but without success. Recently, however, Senator Bacon of Georgia, introduced in the Senate an injunction limitation bill and Congressman Bartlett of Georgia, introduced a similar bill in the House. These bills, instead of being referred to the Judiciary Committee of both Houses, as has been the custom, were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor of the Senate and the Labor Committee of the House. At a meeting held by the House Labor Committee on Wednesday, April 17, it was unanimously decided to favorably report the bill, and Chairman Wilson of the Labor Committee, the leader of the labor group in the House, reported the bill to the House on Thursday, April 18, and it was placed upon the calendar. This bill contains the provisions which labor has been fighting for many years, and signs has the influence and power which the American Federation of Labor is wielding among the national legislators.

Peter W. Collins, secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, has tendered his resignation, to take effect on June 1, 1912. In the circular sent to the local unions announcing his resignation, he states that he "deems it his duty as a trade unionist to devote his powers in the future to fighting the menace of socialism in the labor movement," adding, "I am fighting against our brotherhood by the socialistic movement and the socialists, fairly, daily and as a party, was a bitter and malicious attack on the trade union movement of our country, with the purpose in view of destroying the trade unions in their advancement of the cause of the workers." We were successful in defeating the socialists in the labor movement, and now in the decision of the courts of our country, which backed up the action of the American Federation of Labor. Our victory was complete. Our vindication by the labor movement and the courts indicate a splendid future for our brotherhood."

In addressing the United States Senate recently, Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, in discussing the employers' liability and workmen's compensation bill, stated that "every six minutes, day and night, a railroad employe is killed or injured, and every two hours one is killed." These figures are appalling," he said, "and it is not to be wondered that there has been a loud and persistent demand on the part of employes engaged in all forms of hazardous employment for a change in the doctrines which have practically cast the burdens of industrial accidents upon the employes and their families, and I am glad to be able to hear them. The trend of opinion is toward a policy where human sympathies are involved, and as it always has done to the inanimate instrumentalities."

LEGIEN'S RECEPTION IN NEW YORK.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—On the morning of the arrival of Carl Legien, the eminent German trade unionist, in New York, Organizer Hugh Frayne of the American Federation of Labor, together with Secretary Bohn of the Central Federated Union of New York, met him at quarantine, they having secured permission to board a revenue cutter destined to meet the incoming ship. Upon the reaching of the pier in Hoboken, Mr. Legien was met by a large number of representative trade unionists, who escorted him to his hotel. President Gompers arrived in New York in the evening of the 16th to greet Mr. Legien and later accompanied him to Boston and Quincy, Mass. Mr. Legien's great speech in this country was delivered at Quincy before the Granite Cutters' convention, President Gompers also addressing the convention. President Gompers and Mr. Legien then returned to Boston, where the mayor of the city tendered them a complimentary dinner. They also met the governor. A large mass meeting was held in the evening at Wells' Memorial hall, where President Gompers and Mr. Legien delivered addresses to one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Boston. At the conclusion of the meeting both came direct to Washington, arriving here on Thursday, April 18, on schedule time, and they were met by a large committee of Washington trade unionists. In the evening a banquet in honor of Mr. Legien was held at the Arlington hotel, which was attended by a large number of representative union men and congressmen. Arrangements are now forming to have Mr. Legien, who is a member of the German Reichstag, address the House of Representatives. A letter attended mass meeting was held in this city on Friday evening, April 19, at which Congressman W. B. Wilson, chairman of the Labor Committee of the House of Representatives, presided. President Gompers and Mr. Legien delivered addresses. Mr. Legien's first speaking date after leaving Washington is Buffalo, N. Y., where he is due Sunday, April 21.

STRUCTURAL IRON WORKERS' INCREASE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 20.—Since the first of the year the Indianapolis local union of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers has secured an increase of 5 cents per hour. The local union at Buffalo, N. Y., has also gained an increase of 5 cents per hour. At Chicago, Ill., the local organization has secured a three years agreement with an increase in wages each succeeding year.

The men's trade unions of Denmark have opened their ranks for the admission of women. Equal pay will be demanded for women who do men's work.

For the Children

A Pennsylvania Boy and His Queer Pet.

Children as a rule are interested in chickens, especially the wee "peeps" that have just come out of the shell. And what better fun for youngsters than the care of a flock? The crowing roosters, cackling hens and sprightly chicks are attractive, and the gathering of eggs from their own flock and taking them to mother is joy for any boy or girl. Poultry care is a nature study and for that reason is good for the young folks. It is good for any child who can do so to have a few for their very own. The boy in the picture has made a pet of a big Brahma hen.

Caps For the Doll.

When a doll's hair has been worn away around her forehead so that it is no longer pretty it is a good plan to put a narrow band of velvet or satin ribbon around the forehead to conceal the worn parts. The ends are fastened in the back with a little pin. The hair is puffed above this and made up in a kind of knot on the back of the head. If the doll's hair has been entirely spoiled she will have to wear caps. Just now it is very fashionable to have a number of these caps, some for morning and some for evening wear. The morning caps are called boudoir caps, and those meant for evening wear are called theater caps. The caps are made of fine white material, net or chiffon, and they are exactly like the caps that real people are now wearing. There is a full crown and a ruffle of lace around the face. Small flowers and little bows of ribbon are used to decorate the caps. They may also be made of gold brocade or gold gauze over a colored silk lining.

Yale Lock Tag.

This outdoor game for boys originated at the Yale University Summer School of Physical Training and was a favorite. The class wished the game to have a name that would suggest its birthplace, and so it became "Yale lock tag."

The players form in twos, with their arms locked, and scatter over the playground. One player is selected for runner and another for chaser. The chaser tries to tag the runner, who may save himself by locking arms with any one of a couple. This compels the third player to leave his partner and take the place of the runner.

To make the game most interesting there should be constant changes, and one player should not try to see how long he can run uncaught, but should lock arms with some one as soon as possible.

A Tale of Letters.

Which letters are the hardest workers? The Bees (B'es).

Which are the most extensive letters? The Seas (C'as).

Which letters are the most fond of comfort? The Ease (E'as).

Which letters have the most to say for themselves? The Eyes (I's).

Which are the oldest letters? The Jays (J'ay).

Which are the longest letters? The Ells (El'as).

Which are the poorest letters? The Owes (O'as).

Which letters are the greatest teases? The Tease (T'as).

Which are the most sensible letters? The Wise (Y'as).

Mirrors For Dolly's House.

Mirrors for the doll's house can be made of cardboard covered with tin foil and framed in gold paper. They may be any shape that you desire, round, square or oval, and you may make the frames quite elaborate by cutting out fancy borders from the gold paper.

The Reasons.

Fishes, fishes in the stream,
What makes you shine with such a gleam?

"The sun and water make me shine
That I to children may seem fine."

Birdies, birdies on the bough,
How do you sing so sweetly—how?

"The air in listening hears my throat
Delighting children with each note."

Flowers, flowers in the grass,
Why are you fragrant as we pass?

"The earth and sun and raindrops make My smell as sweet for children's sake."

So fishes, birdies, flowers—all
Live at children's love and call.

SUCCESSFUL WOMEN.

Many Are Doing Good Work in Business and the Professions.

Mrs. Mary D. Bradford was recently elected president of the Wisconsin Teachers' association at Milwaukee. Mrs. Bradford is the superintendent of schools at Kenosha, and is the second woman to be elected president of the Teachers' association of her state in the fifty-six years of its history.

Miss Mary E. Gearing has been appointed to the chair of domestic economy in the University of Texas, with the rank of associate professor. She is a native of Hunston, Tex., and a graduate of Teachers' college, Columbia university.

Mrs. Sarah D. Robbins of Harwich Center, Cape Cod, is said to hold the record for poultry producing the largest eggs in New England. Mrs. Robbins keeps a large flock of Rhode Island Red hens, one of which recently produced an egg weighing a quarter of a pound.

Miss H. K. Graham, secretary of the Church Temperance Union Society of the United States, is said to be largely responsible for the introduction of the lunch wagons now so common in our larger cities. The first night lunch wagons were sent out in New York city ten years ago, seven of them being purchased and equipped by a $10,000 donation. The first year 30,000 tencent lunches were served. Last year the number had increased to 285,638.

Miss Jane Addams Holt of New York is said to be the only woman oriental rug broker in the world. Miss Holt gained her training in foreign travel and selecting rugs for her friends. When she desired to earn a living for herself she announced that she would fill orders for oriental rugs. Success came to her almost from the start. Now she is said to have scores of private clients from Maine to California as well as many in England and other European countries.

Mrs. Maggie Dewar of Wakefield, Mass., is known in her section as the "duck milkman." She keeps forty-five ducks, covers five acres in her daily route with more than 500 customers and employs six horses in her delivery. Though she has aid of sons and men in her employ, she does much of the daily milking herself, delivers a good share of the milk and manages alone the financial end of her business.

A Delicious Dish.

For boiled haddock the following recipe, favored by a great French cook, is recommended:

Boiled Haddock.—The fish should first be cleaned and trimmed. Cut four or five incisions on each side of the fish.

Put it into a deep dish and cover with salt. Let it stay there for about two hours. Then wash and put the fish in the fish kettle to simmer for thirty or forty minutes if the fish is five or six pounds in weight. Serve on a napkin garnished with parsley and boiled turnips.

Egg sauce or cream sauce, which may be eaten with it, should be brought to the table in the sauce boat.

Cinnamon Cake.

Cinnamon cake is known to the Germans as zimmet kuchen.

Our German friends enjoy this cake with a cup of coffee at the afternoon kaffee klatch.

For the Children

The Lily Bells of Easter Morn.

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood.

O lily bells of Easter,
Once more your music swells
Through all the wakening woodland,
Through all the quiet dells!
No winter snow can hold you
Or mar your ministry,
No silent snows enfold you,
The spring has set you free.

O sacred, snowy beauty,
Our hearts wait sore and still
To hear anew the story
Of good spring out of ill!
O wondrous resurrection
Of flower from out the clod,
A sweeter, stiller and clearer
To hear the peace of God!

Customs of Eastertide.

In nearly all Christian countries the recurrence of Easter has been celebrated with various ceremonies and popular sports and observances. Some of these customs are curious indeed. In the north of England you may still hear the old rime:

Tid, tid and mimera,
Carling, palm and Peach egg day.

The first line refers to Christmas, the Embassy and Lent. Carlings are steeped peas fried in butter, with pepper and salt, and eaten on midlent or mothering Sunday, as the fourth Sunday in Lent is sometimes called. Palm Sunday immediately precedes Passion week and is so called from the branches of palm trees strewn in our Saviour's path at the time of his triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Pasch eggs are Easter eggs boiled so hard that you can play at ball with them, dyed with various colors and often having inscriptions or landscapes traced upon them.

Easter eggs symbolize the resurrection. An old writer says, "As the bird imprisoned within the shell comes to life and liberty at the appointed time, so did our Saviour on Easter morning burst the gates of the grave." The eggs were at first dyed scarlet, in memory of the blood of Christ shed upon the cross.

The Easter Rabbit.

Once upon a time, so the story goes, a nice, kind rabbit who was walking along a quiet woodland road came across a fine, large nest filled with eggs. The poor mother hen had been seized by a wicked, wicked fox and could not go back to her darling nest and pure white eggs. So the kind rabbit crept all night upon the eggs, and when he awoke on Easter morning the nest was full of little downy chicks. The children thought that the rabbit was their own really, truly mother, so they cried for something to eat, and the rabbit ran about the field for food for them, and she fed them and kept them warm until their feathers grew and they were old enough to shift for themselves.

Ever since the little German children love the rabbit as the special Easter genius, and on German child's Easter is complete without this dear little animal.

Easter Egg Game.

When your friends come to play with you during the Easter holidays select a leader. The leader stands in the center of a circle. Each player holds out his hands, palms upward, and, upon each of them the leader places an Easter egg. The leader then goes around the circle, catching up the eggs in turn and trying to strike them upon the hands that hold them.

Each one tries to withdraw his hands before they are struck. The game ends when or continues until he is able to strike some one's hands, whereupon the victim must take his place. If one's hands are withdrawn and the egg falls to the ground because of a feint on the part of the leader it is as if his hands received the blow. At the end of the game the eggs can be eaten.

Tailors' Thimbles.

If you have ever noticed a tailor's thimble you must have observed that it is not like the one your mother or your sisters use, because it has no top. As there is a reason for everything, there is a reason for this.

The stuff your mother sews on is usually very light, and the needle is easily pushed through it by pressing the top of the thimble against the needle. But tailors often have to sew very coarse and heavy material, and they cannot get enough pressure on the top of the thimble, so they use the side, and therefore they have no use for a top.

A Riddle.

A feeling all persons detest.
Although 'tis for every one felt.
By two letters fully expressed.
By twice two invariably spelt?
Answer—Envy (N).

How They Do It.

Did you ever hear of a womanless republic?

Well, there is one on a peninsula south of Macedonia, in Greece, where 10,000 men live, starting and spinning constantly.

Policemen guard the lands constantly to keep out those pilgrims and other undesirable guests.

This place is called the Mount of the Twenty Monasteries and was used in ancient times as a signaling station, but is now a real republic.

These 10,000 monks govern themselves without interference from Turkey or any other country. There are, however, no government buildings, no president or other officeholders.

The only police force is composed of men, who patrol the coast to keep out women and men who have no permit to enter this most exclusive of countries. Only those who have a letter of permission from the Greek patriarch in Constantinople are allowed to enter the holy place.

Some reports have it that this republic was formed in the ninth century, but it is said that the foot of woman has not touched the soil of the place for centuries.

The monks who live on the place work the soil a little, but they depend chiefly upon contributions from pilgrims for their existence. Probably the greatest collection of Biblical manuscripts is in the monasteries of this republic.

"It is the most interesting place in the world for the student of the Bible," said a traveler who recently visited that country. "I have been there three times already, and I will never tire of going. There are in the monasteries thousands of rare old manuscripts, and hundreds of them are connected with the New Testament.

"Hundreds of Bible students have studied many of these manuscripts very carefully, but there are other manuscripts that have not yet been read carefully. It may be that great discoveries, valuable to the Bible scientists, will emanate yet from this great storehouse of manuscripts."

Will Teach Small Talk to Girls.

Now comes the chatterbox class in the curriculum of several private schools. Many complaints have come from the mothers of girls in finishing schools that their lack of small talk is appalling. Teach them how to chat of current events, of persons in the public eye, of intentions, of anything that will make them appear intelligent, plead these mothers to the school heads. That a debutante knows music and French and a smattering of German goes for little or nothing in the ordinary drawing room gathering. They must know how to make talk, say the older ones, and they don't. The art of chatting that is becoming a lost one, even in Paris, where it used to reign supreme. In fact, the French boarding schools the teachers are arranging courses of drawing room talk since it is found that there, too, the younger generation has a way of letting a knowledge of current events come to it one day and sweep at the other.

Looking Forward.

Friend—Have you named the baby yet? Proud Mother—No; we must be very careful to give him a nice one, because there will be so many named after him when he becomes president.

DERBY OF BLUE MILAN STRAW.

These still derby hats, made of fine milan straw, are just now in fashion's favor. The derby illustrated is a model of blue milan with a band of velvet around the crown to matching shade and a plaited cabochon and bow at one side.

Those straw derby models are the nattiest kind of outing hats worn this spring.

Household Hints.

French chalk will do much toward removing a scorch on silk or delaine wool if a coating of the chalk be left on the spot for several days.

A good treatment for soiled coat collars is naphtha applied with a brush. Dip the brush in naphtha until thoroughly saturated, then give the spot or grime a few brisk rubs. The most delicate velvet will yield to this treatment, though with should not be treated in this way.

A teaspoonful of peroxide of hydrogen to half a tin of cold water is a splendid bleach for linguerie and white clothes. Let the clothes remain in the water overnight and after rinsing wash in the usual way. White silk and wool as well as linen may be treated in this way.

To remove white spots from furniture dip a cloth in hot water nearly to boiling point. Rinse over the spot, remove quickly and rub the spot with a dry cloth. Repeat if spot is not removed. Alcohol or camphor quickly applied may be used.

To prevent glassware from being easily broken, put in a kettle of cold water, heat gradually until water has reached boiling point. Set aside and when water is cold take out glassware.

A Reasonable Fad.

The tailors are doing surprising things with taffeta this spring, and the little afternoon silks of changeable taffetas are fetching affairs indeed.

Such a thing is pictured here. It is of blue and green changeable taffeta.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Georgia, April 8.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

In the Question Box of March 21st issue there is a question asked by "W. H. M." as follows: "Who was the serpent? What was its form? In what way did he induce our first parents to disobey the Lord?"

I beg to express a different view to the answer given, as there is nothing in the Scriptures to warrant such a conclusion, which, to my mind, is farfetched. It is remarkable that people will persist in sounding in mystery this passage of Scripture which is so plain.

If I may offer a suggestion, the word in the original is naschash, which means "to view or observe attentively; to acquire knowledge or experience by attentive observation." In Eccles. xii. 11, the creature called naschash is compared to a babbler. Whereas, our common English word "serpent" (nerachash, snake) comes from the Latin word serpo, to creep. (See Adam Clarke's Bible Commentary, Vol. 1, pp. 45, 46, etc., for a full and comprehensive treatment of this subject). Therefore, the term "the serpent" of Gen. 3: 1, has no reference to a snake of any species.

In the language of Gen. 3: 1 is as plain as can be, and it clearly identifies this creature, naschash, "the serpent," as a "beast of the field." The contrast is clearly drawn between naschash and the same species—"beast of the field." No other kind of animal is mentioned, and the whole chapter is personal, as naschash, or "the serpent," both as to the offence and the curse, and did not affect in any way the unoffending members of his family, with whom he is compared and where he excelled in point of subtilty.

That this is true is shown by the language of the curse placed upon him as a punishment for what he, personally, had done. "Because thou hast done this thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field." Thus excluding from the curse every other "beast of the field." (Gen. 3:14).

The "all cattle," and the "every beast of the field," mentioned in the curse, are merely representatives of the two different postures: (a) The position and all-fours, as occupied by the "all cattle," (quadrupeds); and, (b) The erect posture, as represented by the "every beast of the field," (bipeds). This is clearly shown in the nature and form of wording of the curse. The curse is directed specifically against his posture (and not against any other natural endowment), and the curse is then clearly shown to have been the effect. There was a marked point about depriving him of his power of speech, nor of depriving the unoffending members of his family of the other "beasts of the field" whom he excelled in point of subtilty of their speech.

From the careful analysis of the text, we find the tempter of Eve possessed of the faculty of speech, and therefore, evidently common to every "beast of the field," to-wit: 1. The power of reason and intelligence in a marked degree, for an animal; 2. Articulate speech, for a conversation is here recorded between this creature and the woman; 3. He possessed a knowledge of God and of His law, as clearly shown by the manner of his approach to Eve (Gen. 3: 1); 4. He possessed the erect posture, as shown in being cursed above "all cattle," (quadrupeds), and above "every beast of the field," (bipeds), and being consequently degraded in his posture to the lowest form of animal life as a punishment for his (individual) offence; 5. This creature, the tempter of Eve, is also clearly identified by the language of the text as a "beast of the field."

Let us all be reasonable as respects the plain teaching of the Scriptures on this important point, viz: That there is nothing in the Scriptures to warrant the forced conclusion that the tempter of Eve, "the serpent" by name, was a snake, except the similarity in the pronunciation of two wholly different words.

Respectfully submitted,
C. W. LYENS.

THE ANSWER.

New York, April 16.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Replying to the above letter, we respectfully submit the following: The term "serpent," Gen. III: 1, as stated is from the Hebrew nachash, which, according to Strong's Exhaustive Concordance, means "a snake," and is from the primitive root expression signifying a hiss. It is this same word nachash that is used in Numbers xxi: 9, where it is stated that "Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole; and it came to pass that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived." In John iii: 14, the Anointed Jesus refers to this "serpent" saying "And a Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up." Here the Greek word ophis is used which signifies, according to the above quoted authority, "a snake, or in a figurative sense, a sly, artful, malicious person; especially Satan." By consulting a Bible concordance and noting the various passages of Scripture in which this work is used it will be readily seen that a serpent or snake is referred to, and not some unknown "quadruped or biped." Dr. Adam Clarke's Bible Commentary was considered a very able and comprehensive work in its day, but is now regarded as somewhat obsolete, because of the increasing light and knowledge of our time.

The term "cattle" has reference to the grazing and domesticated class of animals, while the expression "beasts of the field," signifies the living creatures of the earth, wild animals and creatures that prey upon one another. The thought is that the serpent (snake) was raised above all other earthly creatures, both herbiverous and carnivorous. All readers of the wide distinction between these two classes of animals, thus clearly indicated in the Scriptures.

The original Hebrew words for "cattle" and "beasts of the field" do not contain the slightest intimations of the distinction made between "quadruped and biped." It would require a considerable stretch of the imagination to so interpret the original expressions. Therefore, let us accept the reasonableness of the Scriptural presentation of the matter, and consider that Satan, as a powerful spirit being, had the ability to control or obsess any earthly being, and thus used the serpent as the medium for the serpent so as to accomplish his purpose.

Do we not remember Balaam's ass that spoke to the wayward Prophet? The angel of the Lord was able to make the dumb ass speak. Instances of obsession of human beings are familiar to all.

In view of the foregoing, we see nothing unreasonable in what the Scriptures teaching to the effect that a literal serpent was used by the great Adversary to bring about the temptation and down-fall of our first parents.

Sincerely yours,
SUBSCRIBER.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I assure you that with great pleasure I renew my subscription to the Tribune and with just as much to recommend it to my friends.

How glad I am to see your untiring efforts in the dissemination of the Gospel Message, through that remarkable paper, the Tribune, whose undaunted courage and fearlessness in declaring the Message has brought him many bitter enemies and many true friends and I am indeed glad to state that I am numbered one of the latter.

Where in all the world is there as clear a solution of the Bible as "the Plan of the Ages," and where is there such a treatise on the life of a suffering, sorrowing and dying race likes unto the Kingdom of God's dear Son, who shall wipe the tears off all faces and cause the tired nations to leap for joy. And the only reason to my mind of its superiority because it is the pure, unadulterated Gospel of Good Tidings of Great Joy; but what we should expect from "A God of Love," and I think of no better place for this message to be found than in the Tribune. For I have never seen a cleaner paper in my experience and I firmly believe that it does not exist.

Wishing you many blessings and future reverses, I remain,

Yours very truly,

Editor National Labor Tribune:

About two weeks since I sent in my renewal for the third year to your paper. I sent through the Watch Tower as usual. I would not willingly be without it, as I consider it by far the best paper I have ever seen in the giving of Pastor Russell's Sermons and the other religious features, besides the many clean and beautifully printed sheet. Like many others who take the Tribune, I have a feeling that the editor is in sympathy with the Truth as set forth in the sermons. So that as it may, there is a blessing for him who gives even the cup of cold water in His name and you are surely fulfilling a glorious mission in thus scattering broadcast over the earth those grains of living Truth.

I send my paper to friends in different parts of the states that they too, may be benefited by its exposition of facts. May you prosper till the "Time of Restitution" are fully ushered in.

Sincerely your friends,

Pastor Russell's Sermon

SAUL OF TARSUS AND WHAT HE SAW.

"As One Born Prematurely" He Beheld the Glorified Jesus—Sermon on Resurrection — Another Proof That Jesus Is no Longer a Man, but a God—The Indispensableness of His Sacrifice and Also of His Resurrection Clearly Shown by Pastor Russell in Louisiana's Capital City.

NEW ORLEANS, April 21.—Pastor Russell gave two addresses here. We report one of them, which was from the text: "Last of all He was seen of me also, as of one born before the time." (I Cor. 15: 8.) He said—

St. Paul was discussing the resurrection of the dead. He realized that on that great fact rested the weight of the Gospel Message. It was easy enough to prove that Jesus had died, but to an incredulous world it was difficult to prove that He had risen from the dead; and whoever should not believe that great fact could not believe the other great facts which stand or fall with it.

For instance, the Apostle presented that Jesus had left the heavenly glory and had become a Man for the purpose of meeting the demands of the Divine Law against Adam and his race, involved by him. He could show the reasonableness of this logic. He has proven that as the whole world was condemned to death through Father Adam's disobedience it was absolutely necessary for an untainted life to be sacrificed in order to meet the penalty and to secure the release of the condemned race.

GOD WOULD NOT LEAVE HIS SON IN DEATH.

The Apostle had declared that Jesus had been faithful in His ministry in daily laying down His life and that the entire matter was pleasing and acceptable to the Heavenly Father. If so, surely God would not leave His Son in death, but would raise Him from the dead. This fact the Apostle had repeatedly enunciated, showing that our Lord entered into His glory and reward and ascended up where He was before—to perfection on the spirit plane.

But all these claims fell flatly upon some of his hearers, who claimed that it was much more easy to believe that Jesus never died at all, but merely transmuted, than to believe that He died for our sins and rose again for our justification; hence the Apostle's frequent references to Christ's resurrection and his insistence upon it as absolutely necessary to Christian faith, for not only would the Heavenly Father's favor toward the Lord Jesus thus be shown, but the bulk of all the holy prophecies would remain unfulfilled unless Jesus arose from the dead.

In other words, a dead Redeemer would be of no advantage; matters would be just as unfavorable for the sinners as though Jesus had never come at all. Additionally, if the resurrection of Jesus was a questionable matter, how could those who disputed that great fact acknowledge the resurrection of the Church and of the world? Saint Paul emphasizes this, also declaring that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust," as a result of the redemptive work of Jesus—He dying for man's sins, and His resurrection in glory to carry out the blessings secured by His death.

"LAST OF ALL HE WAS SEEN BY ME."

Prosecuting his argument, the Apostle marshalled the whole chain of witnesses except the women who first saw the Lord on the morning of His resurrection. He says, "He was seen of Cephas (Peter); then by the remainder of the twelve; then of above five hundred brethren at once; later, He was seen of James; then of all the Apostles," when He ascended. Then comes the text: "Last of all He was seen of me also."

There is something pathetic in this reference to His own glimpse of Jesus. It called up the period of his own bigoted persecution of the Church. It reminded him of his own responsibility in connection with the death of Saint Stephen, and of the blind hatred which led him to persecute Ineffective fellow-creatures, simply because they believed that Jesus died and rose again, the very thing which He was now trying to testify to all having the hearing ear.

His memory went back to the madness which he had manifested in pursuing Christians even to Damascus, hailing them to prison. Again he saw the great, blinding light from heaven, above the brightness of the noonday sun, his fall to the earth, and heard the voice speaking to him, saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" (Acts ix. 3-9; xxvi. 13-19.) Again he remembered his astonishment at learning that those whom he had persecuted were not renegade and deceived Jews, but highly esteemed and acknowledged by this Great One, a glimpse of whom felled him to the earth. Ah, that was a wonderful sight! If Messiah was so great, so glorious, no wonder He could believe in Him, he could reverence Him.

The objection which all Jews had to Jesus, and what they considered absolute proof that He was not the Messiah, was His apparent weakness, His apparent inability to accomplish the things foretold by the Prophets. They said, It is foolish to think of a man without an army and without wealth claiming to be a king. It is still more foolish for Him to claim that He is the Messianic King, who is to be above all kings, and before whom every knee shall bow and every tongue confess They said, therefore, that Jesus must either be beside Himself crazy, or else He was seeking to deceive the people and temporarily create a little commotion of popularity.

To them it seemed that when He was crucified a demonstration had been given that He was not the Messiah. Was not the Messiah to live forever, and was He not to reign successfully as King of kings and Lord of lords? Was it not, therefore, proven that any man whom the Jews or the Romans could crucify, could put to death, must have been an imposter? They considered the matter proven to a demonstration. The persecution of the followers of Jesus was merely with a view to stamping out a new religion, which, if it were heard would do harm to Israel in that it would call in question the hopes of Israel respecting a coming King and His Kingdom. Thus Saul of Tarsus had left himself fully satisfied in persecuting all of that way of thinking—for "the good of the cause," as so many persecutors have said.

A NEW VIEW OF MATTERS.

The honesty of Saul of Tarsus led him to be just as honest after he got his eyes of understanding open as he had previously been with them closed. It took him a little while to get the proper focus, then he saw and could explain to others the necessity for the death of Jesus and how it was typified in the sacrifices of the Law and how the Divinely arranged Plan had made this great sacrifice in order thereby to more fully show forth the Divine Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power.

Now he saw, not only the need for Jesus to come in the flesh and to give Himself a ransom price for all, but he saw equally the necessity for His resurrection, not in the flesh, but in the spirit, that He might be both a fully qualified Ruler and Savior—not only to save His people from the Romans, the Assyrians, but also to save them from Satan, from sin, from sickness, from sorrow, from death. Now, also he saw how great Messiah must be in order to meet the necessities of the case!

The matter changed immediately in his mind; instead of a human Savior and Messiah and an earthly King, God had prepared a Heavenly One, partaking of the divine nature, glorious, far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named. Now he saw that the suffering of Jesus had a twofold value. First, they were necessary for man's release from the death sentence and secondly, they were necessary as a demonstration of the loyalty of Jesus. Now he saw that God, in preparing to bring many sons to glory, determined first to prove the loyalty of Him whom He had invited to become the Captain of our Salvation, and that this was done by the arrangement which necessitated Jesus' death.

The climax of the argument was reached when he found that God not only had raised up Jesus from the dead, but that additionally He had bestowed upon Him the glory, honor and immortality of the divine nature, of which Saul had a demonstration or proof in the blinding flash of light which felled him to the earth, and in the voice which said to him alone, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest."

CROWN HIM LORD OF ALL.

I like to think that, as I was once blinded to many of the precious truths of God's Word, so it is with many others whose eyes of understanding have not yet opened. I like to think of Saint Paul's experiences, his alacrity, even to hatred and persecution, and then his loyalty, even to stripes and imprisonment and death. I like to think of him as exemplifying possibly a large class of the opposers of this Truth.

I hope to hope that all they will need to bring them into line with God's arrangements and to make them loyal servants of righteousness will be the clearer light which will shine forth resplendently very soon, when the due time shall come for Messiah to take to Himself His great power and reign—when all shall be glorified with Him. I like to remember the words of the Lord through the Prophet respecting that glorious Epoch: "Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened and the ears of the deaf unstopped; then shall the lame man leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb sing."—Isa. xxxv.

Where would Saul of Tarsus have ended his career if the great Redeemer had not interposed for his help? And how poorly you and I would have fared and how little of the Light Divine would we have seen if Divine providence had not helped us in various ways? And so with the world: It is beyond our power to give the hearing ear or the seeing eye. This is the work of the Great Physician, and His day for healing and blessing and uplifting the world we perceive to be night, even at the doors.

Ah, yes! Now we can see that the little opening of the eyes and unstopping of the ears and healing of the lame accomplished in our Lord's first advent merely foreshadowed His coming glory and much greater work. Now we can see a reason why so many of His mighty works were done on the Sabbath days—because they were all prophetic as the Sabbath days themselves were prophecies of the great Thousand Year Sabbath of Messiah's glorious reign, during which all of humanity who will may enter into His rest—rest from sin and from Satan and from everything that would hinder them from a full return to the Heavenly Father's love and favor.

Now we see that the great work of that thousand-year Sabbath will be the healing of the morally lame and the giving of sight and hearing to the minds now blinded and dead under the evil influences of the great Adversary—"the god of this world (who) hath blinded the minds of them that believe not."—2 Corinthians iv. 4.

ONE BORN BEFORE THE TIME.

Many have remarked at the peculiarity of Saint Paul's statement that he saw the Lord as one prematurely born. But, if at first the statement was dark and puzzling, now it is luminous and enlightening. His import is this: the time for giving ocular demonstrations of the Lord's resurrection had gone by; the next manifestation of Him is to be to His saints. The world of Jew and Gentile is past the hope to the groaning creation, that its bondage soon ended, because the work of all lovers now so ably defended by that servant we love, behold his stately stepping by short strides the pulpit and heard of Christ's presence, and the sermons simply grand, so fair and Every Body's Quee brethren." So the hope of all of God's people is that the begetting of the Holy Spirit is the present time will be followed by the resurrection birth, which Saint Paul describes in this same chapter, saying, "It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown an animal body, it is raised a spirit body."

With these things before our mental eye we see the meaning of the Apostle in the words, "He was seen of me also, as one born before the time." He was not thus seen by the other Apostles. They saw Him merely as He appeared—sometimes in one form of body and with appropriate clothing, at other times in another form and with diverse clothing. He appeared and disappeared, but they did not see Him, the New Creature, they saw merely the various forms in which He appeared. But Saint Paul saw the Lord more nearly as all the saints shall see Him when they shall be born from the dead by the glorious resurrection change.

CHURCH'S GLORY TO BE GREATER THAN THAT OF THE ANGELS.

One great difference between the effect of what Saul saw and what the entire glorious Church will see in the resurrection is that, while Saul's sight was injured by the sight, besides, he saw nothing very distinctly—merely a blinding light, which the voice explained to be the appearance of the glorified Jesus. Far more precious will be the experiences of the Church. Before beholding Him who is declared to be "the express image of my Father's person," whose voice hath been our ear, our earth-ly sight which no man can approach unto—before this, we shall have been changed, glorified. This will enable us to see Him as He is for the glory of the Church will be like to the glory of her Lord, and superior to the glory of the angels.

While heavenly glory does not consist exclusively of brightness, nevertheless the Scriptures everywhere seem to associate bright shining with the heavenly ones, and would imply that the brighter the station and rank the brighter will be the shine, the glory. Thus the glory of the Heavenly Father is represented as being so great that few could endure it; and angels and seraphim are represented as veiling their faces before the Divine glory, which so greatly transcends their own.

It should not, therefore, surprise us that the Scriptures everywhere represent that our Lord Jesus and the Church, "made partakers of the divine nature" (II Peter 1, 4), will have a great honor and brightness, far above that of angels and all others except that of the Heavenly Father. As the Lord Jesus was able to veil the glories of His person and to appear as a man after His resurrection, so undoubtedly He could as respects the world, during the thousand years of His Messianic Reign.

And, similarly, it would be possible for the Church to appear as such with the glory veiled. It might appear at first as though this was what was signified through the Mosaic type when Moses descended from the mount, glory, came down from the mountain, his face radiant, but veiled for the sake of the people. Our thought, however, is that Jesus and the Church will appear thus veiled in the flesh as angels have done in the past, but that on the contrary the Ancient Worthies, perfected on the human plane, with their glorious flesh nature sensitives in all communications with mankind. Thus, "the Law shall go forth from Mount Zion (the Spiritual Kingdom) and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (the earthly Kingdom), to every nation, people, kindred and tongue, that all may be blest if they will, and attain everlasting life.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Scotland, April 14.

Today I have renewed my subscription to your paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. It is a great privilege to have such excellent sermons so fully and so nicely published week by week in a clean newspaper.

PETER KELLY.

Massachusetts, April 17.

How I wish that every person could read Pastor Russell's Sermons. Christ Rose From the Dead." What joy it brings to have the knowledge of God's great plan of salvation!

Thanking you for such a paper, I remain,

MRS. J. M. WOODRUFF.

Maine, April 17.

I do not want to lose one copy of the Tribune as I think it the best paper we ever had in our home.

Pastor Russell's sermons are food for our spiritual life.

Surely our dear Master has come forth to serve this "meat in due season." God bless you in your labor.

Yours in the Lord,

MRS. A. J. R. HOYT.

Massachusetts, April 19.

Inclosed you will find my renewal to the Labor Tribune for another year. Have been reading this paper ever since you started printing Pastor Russell's Sermons and enjoy them very much. Also enjoy the Question Box and Sunday School Lesson.

May the Lord bless you for publishing the Glad Tidings.

Sincerely,

MRS. A. N. CHAPIN.

Texas, April 17.

I have just renewed my subscription to your valuable paper. The Tribune is great and of national scope. It has courage and backbone to publish the hope to the groaning creation, that its bondage soon ended, because the work of all lovers now so ably defended by that servant we love, behold his stately stepping by short strides the pulpit and heard of Christ's presence, and the sermons simply grand, so fair and Every Body's Question Box conspicuously there. A word to the Editor of Tribune, our friend. We appreciate his noble work that he so ably does by our cheerful remittance.

A. P. LOGAN.

Pennsylvania, April 12.

It does one's heart good to see such a grand spirit of unselfishness as exhibited in your paper. H. E. from Nova Canada in his letter to you as published in your April 11 number. He did not forget to send the name of his friend to your excellent paper either, and the way you set forth Pastor Russell's Sermons and Bible Studies is beyond criticism. We hope also that it will be well with Editor Bryson's publications as well for pleasant words are as honeycomb, sweet to the soul and health to the bones (Prov. 16: 24.)

May the good work go on. He that handleth a matter wisely shall find good, and whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he—(Prov. 16: 20.

Respectfully,

ROBERT J. CRAIG.

Texas, April 15.

I want to write you a letter of commendation for your paper. I do enjoy reading a sheet that is so clean and white, the print is better than any other paper which I ever read and the Sermons which I read I do not find strain the eyes like some print does.

Your paper as a whole is excellent, but if it had never been for the religious department I suppose I never would have seen it. I hope you will keep this department going like it is so long as the Lord wants it to be your. May He bless your efforts in publishing these glorious Truths. I also enjoy reading the letters very much.

Your friend,

MRS. FRANKLIN MERRITT.

Pennsylvania, April 12.

For some time I have been a subscriber to your valuable paper on account of your presentation of the Truth.

I am also interested in its many other glorious features, especially your impartial handling of the labor question.

Having a small talent as a "song-smith" before coming into present Truth, it has occurred to me that possibly I might have been "chiding it," and so I enclose a few verses which I will be very glad to have you publish if you think they would be helpful in any way.

Very truly yours,

R. D. WORK.

PILAT'S REPORT.

I wrote to Jesus requesting an interview with him at the Judgment Hall, and he came. You know that in my veins flows the Spanish, mixed with Roman blood, as incapable of fear as it is of puerile emotion. When the Nazarene made his appearance I was walking in my court, and my feet seemed fastened with an iron band to the marble pavement, and I trembled like a woman. Such as a guilty culprit, though he was calm—the Nazarene—calm as innocence. When he came up to me, he stopped, and by a signal seemed to say to me, "I am here." For some time I contemplated with admiration and awe this extraordinary type of man—a type of man unknown to our numerous painters, who have given form and feature to all the gods and heroes.

"Jesus" said I to him at last—and my tone was faltered—"Jesus of Nazareth, I have granted you for the last three years ample freedom of preach, nor do I regret it. Your words are those of a sage. I know not whether you are the real Socrates, or Plato, but this I know, that there is in your discourse a touching simplicity that elevates you far above those philosophers. The Emperor is informed of it, and I, his humble representative in this community, am glad of having allowed you that liberty, of which you are so worthy. However, I must not conceal from you the fact, that your enemies have risen up against you powerful and inveterate enemies. Neither is the surprising. Socrates had his enemies, and he fell a victim to their hatred. Yours are doubly inveterate, from you on account of your sayings, and against me on account of the liberty extended towards you. Already accuse me of being indirectly leagued with you, for the purpose of conspiring to the Emperor of the little evil power which Rome has left them. My request—I do not say my order—is that you no more attempt, in the future, and more tender in arousing the pride of your enemies, lest, finding you powerful, they again repulsive, and compel me to employ the iron hand of justice."

The Nazarene calmly replied:

"Prince of the earth, your words proceed not from the voice wisdom. Say to the torrent, Stop in the midst of the mountain home' because it will uproot the trees of the valley. The torrent will answer you, that it must obey the laws of the Creator. God a one knows whither flows the torrent. Verily I say unto you, before the Rose of Jericho blossoms, the blood of the Just shall be spilt. "Your blood shall be spilt," replied I with emotion. "You are more precious, in my estimation, on account of your wisdom, than all the philosophers and proud Pharisees, who abuse the freedom granted them by the Romans, consider against Cesar, and construe our bonds into fear; flendent wretches, they are not aware that the wolf of the Desert sometimes clothes himself in the skin of the sheep. I will protect you against them. My palace is open to you as an asylum."

The Nazarene shook his head, and said, with a grace and a divine smile,

"When the day shall have come, there will be no asylum for the Son of Man, neither in the earth, nor under the earth. The abode of the Just is there," pointing to the heavens. "That which is written in the book of the Eternal must be accomplished."

"Young man," answered I, mildly, "you ought not to convert my request into an order. The safety of the province, which has been confided to me by the Emperor, will not allow me to serve more moderation in your discourse. Do not infringe. My orders are precise. My happiness attend you. Farewell."

"Prince of the earth," replied Jesus, "I came not to bring war into the world, but peace, love and charity. I was born the same day on which Augustus Caesar gave peace to the Roman world. Persecution proceeds from men. I expect it from no one, and will meet it in obedience to the will of my Father, who has shown me the way. Restrain, therefore, your worldly prudence. It is not in your power to arrest the victim at the hour of the Altar of expiation." So saying he disappeared like a bright shadow behind the curtains of the palace.

To Herod, who then reigned in Galilee, the enemies addressed themselves to wreak their vengeance on the Nazarene. Had Herod consulted his own inclinations, he would have ordered Jesus immediately to be put to death, but though proud of his royal dignity, yet he was afraid of committing an act that might diminish his popularity with the people. Herod called on me one day at the Prestorium, and I replied that I could appear some insignificant conversation, he asked my opinion concerning the Nazarene. I replied that Jesus appeared to be one of those great philosophers that great nations sometimes produce, that his doctrines were by no means sacrilegious, and that the intention of Rome was, to leave him to that freedom of speech which was justified by his actions. Herod smiled maliciously, and said to me with an ironical respect he dreaded.

The great feast of the Jews was approaching, and the intention of their leaders was to carry in triumph themselves of the popular exultation which always manifest itself at the solemnities of a Passover. The city was overflowing with a tumultuous populace clamoring for the death of the Nazarene. My missaries informed me that the treasure the temple had been employed in bribing the people. The danger was pressing. A Roman cohort was at that moment upon its way to the prefect of Syria for a hundred foot soldiers and as many cavalry. He refused. I saw myself alone, with a handful of veterans, in the midst of a rebellious city, too weak to suppress a disorder, and having no other choice left but to tolerate it. The seditious rabble had seized Jesus, and although they felt that they had nothing to fear from the Prestorium, believing with their leaders that I winked at their sedition, continued vociferating, "Crucify him, crucify him!"

Three powerful parties had combined together at that time against Jesus. First, the Herodians, and the Sadducees, whose seditious conduct seems to have proceeded from double motives; they hated the Nazarene, and were impatient of the Roman yoke. They could never forgive me for having entered their city with banners which bore the image of the Roman Emperor, and although in this instance I had ignorantly committed the fatal error, yet the sacrilege did not appear less heinous in their eyes. Another grievance also rankled in their bosoms. I had proposed to employ a part of the treasure of the Temple in leveling edifices of public utility, which proposal was scouted at.

The Pharisees, too, were avowed enemies of Jesus, and they cared not for one forevermanal. They bore with bitterness the severe reprimands which the Nazarene, for three years, had been showering out against them wherever he went. Too weak and pusillanimous to act by themselves, they had vaguely embraced the quarrels of the Herodians and Sadducees. Caiaphas, the high priest, had up to contend against the reckless and profligate populace, always ready to raise a sedition, and to profit by the disorder and confusion resulting therefrom.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

To Whom This May Come—Greeting:

Gents—Inclosed find one year's subscription price for the Tribune, and wish to say in this connection that some year when I first subscribed for your paper I scarcely knew anything of Pastor Russell or any of the Goldens. But he taught, but when I saw your beautiful paper, together with your beautiful type, I certainly did admire it to say the least, but when I discovered the wonderful sermons and Bible studies, and the deep questions of the Bible were explained, I certainly did admire the preacher, his sermon, Bible questions, deep questions, and editor, all at once. Since then, dear Pastor, I have seen the Truth, bless God, which for 40 years I had been trying to find and I do pray God to bless you in your work of publishing the Harvest news through the columns of such a beautiful paper.

Yours in the Truth,

THOMAS BOYD.

Colorado, April 17.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Having been a subscriber to your paper for many years, I wish to say my appreciation is increasing every week, as you so faithfully support and publish Pastor Russell's sermons, so full of blessed Bible Truths. I see that you are also giving more space to these question at heart, that so many people are anxious to know God, among the different denominational creeds. The questions answered in everybody's Question Box are very interesting, and the world in general should appreciate the Sunday School Lessons. The labor question is treated so fairly in your paper only corroborate what the Bible teaches we may expect.

I thank you for giving so much space to the cause. I hope to be able to send you some new subscribers soon.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. S. M. ASHBY.

POPULAR MECHANICS

ASBESTOS THREADS.

Finest Spun Contain Cotton and Run Over Two Miles to the Pound.

It is a matter of more than ordinary interest that the production of asbestos in the United States is rapidly increasing. It more than doubled in 1911, and the figures now largely in favor of the serpentine fibrosolite variety, of which the best grades are spun and woven into fireproof fabrics for theater curtains, motor brake bands and the like, where incombustible material must be used.

The finest asbestos thread yet spun carries a small percentage of cotton and runs over two miles to the pound. The total production of asbestos in the United States in 1911 was 7,304 short tons, valued at $139,935, and it came almost wholly from Vermont and Georgia. A little came from Wyoming and Virginia. Canada, however, produced thirteen times as much asbestos in 1911 as the United States, and we imported for our manufactures 62 per cent of all Canada produced and 85 per cent of the exported.

One of the most remarkable features of the asbestos industry in recent years is the growth of the demand for the lower grades. Being fireproof and an electric and heat insulator, asbestos is extensively used in the building arts, and the interest in this sort of manufacturing is a matter of paltry pounds, but our country indicates that the industry it declension rapidly.

The spinning new application of asbestos was made last September in London, is extinguishing a burning oil well which 40,000 barrels of oil were escaping daily.

The finest asbestos yet found in the United States comparable in quality with the best from any part of the world, is in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona. It is not, however, easily accessible.

THE ELECTRIC SHOCK.

Effects of a Death Dealing Current on the Human Body.

An English electrical journal states that as the result of prolonged observation and the collating of records it has been constituted that death in the case of electric shock usually results either from contraction of the fibrils or muscular fibers of the heart or from paralysis of the respiratory nerve. While there is no known remedy for the former, artificial respiration may sometimes overcome the respiratory paralysis.

The effects of direct and alternating currents vary with the current strength, the duration of contact and the path through the body, and with alternating currents the frequency is usually the most dangerous than high. The lower animals are more susceptible to electric shock than man, dogs being often killed by a direct current at seventy volts.

In the average man a direct current of 100 volts is scarcely noticed, 200 to 400 volts give rise to muscular cramps, while 600 volts suddenly stop respiration. An alternating current of 100 pressure often affects the heart. At 1000 volts both ventricular contraction and respiratory paralysis ensue, but at 2,000 to 4,000 volts the effect is usually confined to the respiratory organs. Ament can endure records of 1,000 volts of a current of 2 to 7 amperes at 1,500 volts, 12 to 20 cycles per second, always stops the heart when operated at 65 to 80 seconds although in a few seconds it may fail to kill.

Scarcity of Bismuth.

Bismuth is one of the few metals of which the United States can not or does not produce enough to supply its needs. The scarcity of bismuth in this country and the accredited control of the market by a foreign syndicate have kept the American price high, yet according to the United States geological survey interest is rapidly being developed in the recovery of bismuth as a by product in electrolytic lead refining. No large deposits of bismuth are known in the United States, but some ores mined for their gold or silver have been found to be more valuable for their bismuth than for their other mineral content. Thus in 1910 a Colorado mine reported to the geological survey the production of ore which carried up to 18 per cent of bismuth, in addition to gold and silver.

How Light's Speed Was Found.

One of the greatest discoveries of science is due to observation of the eclipses of Jupiter's moons. It was found that when the earth was in the part of its orbit nearest to Jupiter these eclipses occurred sixteen minutes earlier than when it was in the farthermost part; whereas by all rules of astronomy they should have occurred at the same minute each time. It was deduced from this that light was not instantaneous and consequently took sixteen minutes to traverse the diameter of the earth's orbit, a distance of about 200,000,000 miles, thus giving it a velocity of 182,000 miles a second, which was accurately shown later by other experiments.

Removing Varnish.

A good and easy way to remove varnish from old furniture is to wash the surface thoroughly with 95 per cent alcohol. This dissolves the varnish, and the wood can then be cleaned with a strong solution of soap or wood lye. If lye is used it should be washed off quickly and the wood dried with flannel cloth. When the wood is thoroughly dry it will take a fine finish.

TIES MADE OF CONCRETE.

Improved Form Withstands Severe Test on Panama Railroad.

One of the men employed in the construction of the Panama canal has designed an improved form of concrete tie that appears to stand up very well under severe tests. The inventor, Sigmund Frydenlund, obtained permission to lay a hundred of his ties on a curve of the main line of the Panama railroad. The road is of broad gauge, and the traffic because of the canal building, is unusually heavy. The ties were made with the tie plates set exactly to gage, as the inventor was ignorant of the fact that the spacing is slightly increased at curves. As a consequence, the first train to pass over this section of the track sheared the bolts off all the plates. The tie ties held perfectly and are still in good condition after several months of service.

The construction of the ties is indicated in the accompanying drawing. A heavy wire cage is used for the reinforcing. This is shown roughly in the cross section. Plates are imbedded at the tie for the rail to rest upon, and tie rods serve to bind the plates to plates. Clamps are secured on these plates by bolts that pass up through the tie. The plates at the outside of a curve are slanted out to form a chair. The ends of the ties are recessed to facilitate handling them. To test the satisfactory strength of the construction a tie was supported on rails at the rail plates and loaded in the center. A load of 27,342 pounds caused a deflection of 0.02 inch. At 7,150 pounds the deflection was 0.25 inch. Two cracks appeared on the side near the rail plate and extended up for two inches. Under a load of 7,865 pounds cracks could be given, to one inch. As the load was increased the deflection was progressively greater, reaching 1.91 inches at 15,035 pounds and 1.51 inches at 16,445 pounds. Large cracks showed, and the tie began to crumble, and at 17,100 pounds the tie failed. It did not break into two pieces, but sagged gradually in the middle. The effect of the tests was to show that the ties were very rigid under normal loads.

Substitute For Steel.

An American scientist has discovered a new alloy which is likely to prove a great change in some parts of the industrial world. By means of this alloy manufacturers will be able to produce machinery without the use of iron or steel—a feat that has hitherto been impossible of accomplishment. The inventor claims that the alloy possesses the manufacturer, who makes a hobby of chemistry. His discovery is a combination of aluminum and copper. It is unoxidizable and retains its luster under all atmospheric conditions. It will take an edge and will compare favorably with the best steel, to which it is claimed to be superior in many respects. The alloy will take a hard polish and is pleasing in appearance. Pocket knives and razors have been made from it and used with remarkable success. Iron has been turned on a lathe with it, while the fruit knives made from it have been found not to tarnish from contact with fruit juice.

Peat Dust Fuel.

According to a new Swedish system of making use of peat, the material is powdered finely and blown into the furnace by a fan blast and the dust is consumed while in suspension. The advantage of this method is that the dust of peat may be easily and quickly adjusted by regulating the amount of peat powder delivered into the interior of the furnace. This power is said to represent a greater efficiency than heretofore experienced in the utilization of peat for fuel, the peat dust consuming the same amount of energy as two of coal. In this shape peat is also economical as fuel in the locomotive except when the power is needed.

High Living in Germany.

The Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin publishes an urgent appeal to American society leaders to return to "simple eating." It says that the luxury sin in Germany has caused an extravagance in dining which threatens financial impoverishment and digestive ruin. Carlsbad, Hirschwald, Kissingen and other spas which cater to the needs of "pentient gluttons" are, says the journal, thronged by summer and autumn crowding, who go there in spring and summer to make amends for overeating and overdrinking in winter. "It would be a possible public service on the part of leading society personages if they would begin by practical example to wage war on the sensual luxuriousness of modern entertaining, so far as the culinary end of it is concerned. Only by a return to simple and sensible dinners can we avert genuine economic and physical perils."

Ohio, April 16.

Realizing that your excellent paper has a wide circulation, I suggest that some of its readers are not especially interested in the sermon feature. I am interested chiefly in the light continually being thrown by men that act and speak unselfishly. I thought to send the following propositions, hoping and trusting that they might be helpful to all honest doubters and unsure seekers in their search for Truth. These propositions do not include all of Pastor Russell's teachings, but some of the most salient features that could be easily grasped by those who are "outside" of the Truth. All students of history know that God has used extraordinary means as special leaders all down the entire Gospel Age. Reason would tell us that such is the case now, for at this close God would raise up some one or more to set all the facts "in due season." Now, without any prejudice either way, the evidence is overwhelming that Pastor Russell is the last but not the least of the Channing Great Reformers. In the days of Luther, Calvin, Wesley, Campbell, etc., the times were ripe for a great spiritual leader to arise. Such it is today. Good and grand as these men were, yet exceedingly childish in the thought that they clearly grew and understood all of the vast mysteries and full, complete revelation of the Almighty God. Rather, we should follow that standard of excellence, the Bible, and be content to receive from the unfolding of Truth as time rolls on. In the words of Isaac Newton, Robert Russell is "easily the greatest logician and Scriptural expounder of all the Knowledge" of any age. Read any of the six volumes of "Studies in the Scriptures." In simple, classical language, he has laid down in systematic order the true philosophy, principles, and doctrines of God's plans for the world, and the church's salvation. Here are some of the propositions of those wonderful books, and it should be noted that these great fundamental principles were never set forth, preached or declared by previous expounders and writers, in their entirety, clearness and fullness, all in the range of church history:

1—God is just. No embodiment of all justice. "Will not the King of all the earth do right?"

2—God is love. "long suffering, slow to anger and plenteous in mercy."

3—Christ gave himself a "ransom for all," "died for all," and thus the testimony against the race by Justice have been satisfied.

4—A full reward, or a full penalty cannot be given, to any one in this age, without sufficient light, sufficient knowledge and opportunity. This is the Divine law for all ages.

5—No man is on trial for eternal life, until first, willfully, consciously or actually he is lifted from under the natural sentence placed upon the race through Adam's disobedience.

6—Sins committed by the unregenerate, during the Gospel Age and ages, affect their character for good or ill, but because of propositions 4 and 5, will be dealt with upward for the good you are doing, I am.

Very truly yours,

J. L. CAIN.

I inclose another subscription for the good "Old Reliable" Tribune. We rejoice in your courage in giving so much space in your good paper for religious matters. We know from our own experience that many of those who ought to rejoice and be with the first in spreading the Good Tidings, are very much opposed to having these Truths published in the newspapers. They are using all the influence and power against it to prevent the people from hearing it. It seems that they would rather have the people to listen and read most any kind of nonsense, but the Good Tidings of Great Joy.

As soon as they learn of any of their people in contact with the Truth they get very much excited and some of them very angry and do all in their power to prejudice the worldlings all. But the Truth shall prosper and all the people shall be brought to a knowledge of it and their antiquated Scribes and Pharisees and Sadducees, will have much to answer for and be ashamed of when all the secret things will be brought to the light. We trust and pray that you may have grace and courage to continue publishing the good news in spite of all opposition.

Yours for the Truth and its Purity,

Inclosed please find check for another year's subscription to the Tribune. I am interested chiefly in the religious feature of your valuable paper. Surely the Lord will bless you for these many years of rewarding water of life. What a blessing these Good Tidings must be to many hungry and perplexed souls at the present time.

I intend to take your paper just as long as these sermons are printed.

Very sincerely,

MRS. L. A. KIMPTON.

Massachusetts, April 17.

Please find P. O. order for renewal of my subscription to the Labor Tribune. I want to thank you very kindly for printing the sermons of our dear pastor in large type, as much more easily read by old eyes. Words fail me, in expressing my love and appreciation of our Heavenly Father's great love for me in begotten sons, in thus revealing to them His Divine Plan of the Ages, and some and more of his wonderous divine character of wisdom, justice, love and power, by the paper of his Holy Bible, interpreted and made plain to us through his now approved and chosen channel, C. T. Russell. May God richly bless you for your useful part in sending forth the Good News to so many grateful readers.

Truly your friend,

DR. C. P. POWLEY.

New York, April 19.

I am again renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower and Bible society, also sending you a new subscription.

I want to assure you of our continued appreciation of your paper. I have been taking it for several years because of the splendid manner in which you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons. Now that you have added the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons we appreciate the weekly visits more than we can express. Altogether it is the cleanest newspaper I ever read and it reflects much credit to have my children read. Hoping you will continue your work for the good you are doing, I am,

Very truly yours,

As soon as they learn of any of their people in contact with the Truth they get very much excited and some of them very angry and do all in their power to prejudice the worldlings all. But the Truth shall prosper and all the people shall be brought to a knowledge of it and their antiquated Scribes and Pharisees and Sadducees, will have much to answer for and be ashamed of when all the secret things will be brought to the light. We trust and pray that you may have grace and courage to continue publishing the good news in spite of all opposition.

THE PALACE OF BLESSEDNESS.

Matthew v, 1-12—April 28.

Text: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Verse 8.

Of the Great Teacher we read, "He spoke as never man spoke." The eight Beatitudes illustrate the difference between the teachings of Jesus and all other teachings from every other quarter. He had a new view of what to present. His is a different Message from all other messages to this day.

While other teachers held forth the rich, the great, the learned, the mighty, the influential amongst the fallen race, Jesus came to be comforted, if happiness would be attained. Jesus, in these Beatitudes, sets forth the reverse. His prescriptions for happiness have indeed been non-popular. Blessed are the poor in heart, followed by a few, and these alone appreciate their need and are finding the blessings promised.

The Palace of Blessedness.

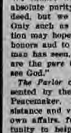
The foundation-stone of the Palace of Blessedness is Hunger. None can ever hope for a share in the Messianic Kingdom except as they are hungry. "Blessed are they who are poor in spirit, for theirs is the Kingdom of heaven." To such and such only is this promise of blessedness. It would never do for God to accept as a member of the Kingdom class one who is filled with the spirit of pride and selfish ambition.

The Palace Reception Room, upon the foundation of Humility, is the Gospel door of the Palace, is the chamber of Sorrow-mourning. Only such as know what it is to be touched with the feeling of human infirmities can be members of the Royal Priesthood, which by and by is to dispense and meet back to harmony with God whoever wills of all humanity.

The Palace Library is Meekness. None can answer who is to be taught of the Lord without the quality of meekness or teachableness. Into this Library the followers of Jesus most frequently come there to learn valuable lessons, without which he could not make progress in his future training and character development. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." As members of Messiah, heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus their Lord, these will come into the full possession of the earth, the Adamic dominion, which mankind will be uplifted out of sin and death to perfect manhood, redeemed by Christ.

The Dining-room: hunger for righteousness. All who will be joint-heirs with Christ will be hungry for righteousness and haters of iniquity, in likeness of the Redeemer. It is very important, therefore, that in our Palace of Blessedness we have a large and well appointed Dining Room, where our hungry and thirsty fellow-members may be encouraged and satisfied at the same time. "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." They will get their fill of it, for their own perfection in the First Resurrection, and in the uplifting of their fellow-members in all the earth during the thousand years of the Messianic reign.

The Parlor of the Palace: Mercy. One of the most important lessons for the New Creature to learn is love, sympathy, kindness. These are strengthened as we must go out and in at this door constantly. Our own imperfections and frailties will be a constant help and should as continually impress upon us the merciful disposition toward those with whom we have to do. Only thus will we be fitted and prepared to be faithful members of the Royal Priesthood in dealing with and blessing the world of mankind during the Messianic Kingdom.



"Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." "If ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses."

The Parlor of the Palace, through which we may see God, is Purity of Heart. We cannot while in the flesh attain absolute purity of heart, word and deed, but we can have heart purity. Only such as have this heart condition may hope to attain the Elisha's share, honors and to see Him whom no human has seen, nor can see. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

The Parlor of our Palace is represented in the characteristics of the Peacemaker. It implies a certain resistance and victory in respect to our own affairs, frequently the opportunity to help others. "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

The Kitchen of our Palace represents the trials and difficulties incidental to the rounding out of our characters and our proper meeting and upbuilding spiritually. "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My Name's sake; rejoice and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven."

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS, OR BY MAIL, IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE.

Q.—What is the "key of knowledge" referred to in Luke xi, 52, where the Lord Jesus said to the Scribes and Pharisees "Ye have taken away the key of knowledge; ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered?" (V. E. K.)

ANSWER—Some one has said "The summary vent of the age is that bad philosophy into which shall have been sifted all other philosophy, which shall be at once so subtle and so eclectic, which shall be the joint growth and fruit of reason and faith, and which shall shed forth through every walk of research the blendest light of discovery and revelation." The Bible is just such a revelation and contains that true philosophy which is the basis for all philosophies. It is the "key of knowledge" to the Standard of Truth, and all lines of investigative thought which ignore this Standard and are contrary thereto are vain philosophies and are more falsely so-called." (1 Timothy vi, 20.) The "havers," Doctors of the Law, the Scribes, were resisting the Gospel and believing, became the first Gentile convert to Christianity. (Acts x, 44.) And in Revelation ii, 18, the glorified Savior is represented as speaking, saying "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore. Amen; and have the keys of hell and death." The Lord Jesus, by virtue of His death, resurrection, accomplished the redemption of the race of mankind from death and hell—Adam's sin. He has opened up the way for the Gentiles to come into the Kingdom by preaching the Gospel to Cornelius, thus accepting the message,

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Many Unionists Tink With the Titanic. Havelock Wilson's Work Bears Fruit in the Compensation Which White Star Line Must Pay to Dependents. Iron and Steel Workers Desire Closer Action--No Coupulsory Arbitration.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, April 21—The loss of the Titanic overshadows most other topics this week. Labor's connection with the disaster is great. Within before the first survivors' stories are known it looks as though most of the crew perished. Said though the trouble is, it is worth while recalling that owing to the splendid efforts of Havelock Wilson, the widows and other dependents of these men will receive compensation. When the Workmen's Compensation Act was first passed in this country, in 1896 seamen were excluded from its operations. It took ten years' hard work, on the part of the well-known leaders of the National Sailor's and Firemen's Union to secure the inclusion of sailors and other ship workers. The liability of the White Star Company in this respect is of course covered by a mutual insurance ring to which the leading shipping corporations subscribe according to their tonnage. The act provides that where death results compensation shall be paid to any dependents of a workman wholly dependent on his earnings equal to his earnings during the three previous years, or the sum of £300, whichever be the greater, but not more than $1,500.

Practical all the crew of the Titanic were members of some trade union and the loss to certain unions is very severe. The Seamen's and Firemen's Union had some 200 of their members on board the Titanic and in all cases where it was shown that a member had others dependent upon him and had lost his life, a sum of $25 death benefit is payable. A number of the crew were also members of a British Seafarers Union which is a Southampton organization.

The stewards and cooks, of which there were about two hundred on board the ill-fated vessel, are members of a separate union, which has its headquarters at Liverpool. This also pays benefits to those dependent in case of death.

The important movement towards the amalgamation of all the trade unions engaged in the building industries progresses favorably. Close upon 200,000 workmen were represented at the special convention held in London on April 18. Over twenty unions sent delegates including carpenters, bricklayers, painters, plumbers, masons, slaters, tilers, French-polishers and machinery attendants. The general laborers were also included. A committee was appointed comprising one member from each society with a view of carrying out the amalgamation.

Another suggested federation of trade unions is one which will embrace all the workers in the iron and steel industry. The object of this is to prevent sectional strikes; but it will obviously wield an enormous power in other directions. A conference has just been held representing the British Steel Smelters, the National Amalgamated Steel and Iron Workers of Great Britain, the Steel and Iron Workers of England, the Steel and Iron Workers of Scotland; the Blast-furnacemen's Union, the Tin and Sheet Mill Workers of South Wales, and the Engineer's and Cranemen's Society. By a majority it was resolved to consider a scheme of federation, though the engineers and craftsmen and the smelters were in favor of amalgamation. The difference, however, is one of degree not of substance.

Deflination, the birthplace of the British railway system, will be the scene on April 29 of a huge conference of railwaymen, organized by the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. An important program, bearing upon the rates of wages, normally fixed by the carriage and wagon examiners, greasers and oilers employed by the North-Eastern Railway Company, will be submitted for consideration. The program is as follows:

Wages for examiners—$7.50 per week, first year; $8, second year; $8.25, third year.

Examiner-greasers—$6.25 per week, first year; $7, second year; $7.25, third year.

Greasers and oilers (men)—$6.00 per week, first year; $6.75, second year; $7, third year.

Lads—50 cents per week advance $1 round.

Hours—Eight hours per day for all men and lads employed.

The 1,200 Sheffield shipbuilders who have been on strike for seven weeks decided to return to work on April 17. The no-bers objected to certain work being given to core makers which they contended is within their province at a higher rate of pay. They have agreed to go back to work pending a conference with the employers on the points in dispute. Any questions upon which the conference does not agree will be referred to a board of umpires, whose decision will be binding, pending the formation of a demarcation board comprising representatives of the employers, the moulders and the core makers.

An April 14 protracted negotiations for the settlement of the dispute affecting 30,000 Dundee jute operatives were brought to a successful issue. The workers have been idle for nine weeks for six weeks consequent on the refusal of a five per cent increase of wages. The settlement now arrived at is that the strikers return to work at an advance of 2½ per cent to the pairers and spinners and that a scale of wages raising the wage considerably be introduced without delay.

The Boiler Makers' and Iron and Steel Shipbuilders' Society are contemplating a thorough reconstruction. This course has been rendered necessary by the disadvantages of section al trade unions in one industry, in view of which there is a general tendency among trade unions to merge small unions into one large industrial organization. At their April monthly meetings the members of the Boiler Makers' Society have to vote on the five following questions:

Are you in favor of federation with the Liverpool shipwrights?

Are you in favor of amalgamation with the Shipconstructive and Shipwrights' Association?

The present membership of the Boilermakers' Society is 55,000; the Shipwrights' and the Ship Constructive Society have 25,000 members, and the

FACTORY WORK MADE SAFER.

NEW fire and sanitary safeguards for factory workers are established by the eight state laws just signed by Governor Dix of New York, providing for the strict er regulation of factory premises.

For better security against fire the new laws prohibit smoking in factory workrooms, compel the installation of automatic sprinklers and of fireproof receptacles for waste material, and prescribe fire-drills at least as often as once every three months. On the side of sanitation they enlarge the powers of the Commissioner of Labor with regard to unclean factories, require that articles manufactured on premises where evidence of contagious disease is found shall be labelled to that effect, and restrictions in the use of poisonous substances in manufacture, and prohibit the employment of women in less than four weeks after child-birth, as well as of minors not certified as to their physical fitness. The Governor's veto of the bill limiting the number of operatives on a factory floor to accord with the capacity of the stairways is based on its contradictory provisions.

In general, an amount of protective legislation has been added to the factory statutes which is creditable to the legislative session. The New York World says: "That these reform measures were largely inspired by the Asch disaster is one conspicuously result of that appalling sacrifice of human life in industry. If there had been no vengeance of the law on the individual for the dead, there is at least the definite gain of better security for the living."

CAUSE OF THE UNREST.

BIG time is rapidly approaching when the wealthy will face mob violence on the streets. This situation will be due to the fast approaching day when working people will be deprived of means of subsistence. Every day the position of the working men is becoming worse."

Is this the utterance of an anarchist? No, they are the words of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the man who has tried hard for many years to save the nation from poisoning by the incorporated food poisoners of the nation.

"I thoroughly agree with Judge E. H. Gary," said Dr. Wiley, "that unless something is done to alleviate the present condition of unrest in the nation, mob rule is bound to come. The sentiment of abhorrence comes from over-capitalizing great industries, the selling of watered stock, the promotion of worthless land schemes, the extortions of express, tele hone and telegraph systems and decrees other schemes for deceiving and defrauding the people."

WHERE HEROES COME FROM.

AN ANALYSIS of the Carnegie hero fund commission's report dated January 31, 1912, shows these figures on the total number of awards made since the fund became operative April 15, 1904: Total number of awards, 583; awarded to wage workers, 309; awarded to students and schoolboys, 92; awarded to businessmen, 35; awarded to professional men, 21; awarded to women and girls, 31.

It is doubtless true that the notably large proportion of awards to wage workers was due mainly to the fact that they are engaged in the hazardous occupations which gives more frequent opportunity for the display of heroism. But the fact remains that when the opportunity arose, the men of the dinner pail brigade were not found wanting but were conspicuously ready to make the supreme sacrifice.

After an inspection of places where the unemployed congregate, Governor Hiram W. Johnson, of California, has instructed the state labor commission to make a thorough investigation of the subject with a view to accounting for the number of unemployed skilled laborers in San Francisco.

Labor unions of Quincy, Ill., have decided to build a labor temple and will incorporate under the name of the Quincy Labor Temple association, capitalized at $25,000.

PRESIDENT TAFT AS HE LOOKS TODAY.

THOUGH not given to phrase making, President Taft has enriched the preconvention presidential campaign with one expression that is likely to be used with telling effect. It is his characterization of the proposed "presidential primary" as "soap but primary." By this he means a primary heartily arranged for so that members of an opposition party may if they choose express their preference for a candidate for whom they do not intend to vote. Speaking before the Massachusetts legislature, which has recently passed a presidential primary bill, Mr. Taft said. "Wherever full and fair notice of the election can be given, wherever adequate safeguards can be thrown around to protect a preferential primary for the presidency, wherever the constitution of the state permits its being made applicable to the present election, I favor it and welcome it."

HARD COAL STRIKE ALMOST ENDED.

Confirmation of the report that the anthracite miners and operators had reached an agreement in settlement of their dispute as to wages and hours of labor was made last Friday at the office of President Baer of the Reading Railroad. President Baer gave out the following statement:

"Mr. George F. Baer, the chairman of the operators' committee, has issued a call for a meeting of the general committees of operators and miners' representatives in New York on Thursday, May 2, at 2 p. m., to receive and act upon the report of the sub-committee appointed by the general committee to suggest a method of settling differences, the sub-committee having unanimously submitted a recommendation of terms and conditions looking to an adjustment of all differences.

"The terms and conditions of this report, however, will not be made public until after the meeting of the general committees on the second of May."

The report that the sub-committee of anthracite miners and operators had reached an agreement in New York, and that the new pact includes a 10 per cent increase in wages, was received with satisfaction in all parts of the anthracite regions.

The new working arrangement will be presented to the full committee of ten operators and ten miners today (May 2.) If this committee approves it the proposed agreement will have to be ratified by the miners before it can be put into effect. This probably will be done at a convention of delegates from the three anthracite districts.

According to the reported agreement, the miners are conceded a 10 per cent increase in wages. They asked for 20 per cent.

The Board of Conciliation created by the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission after the strike of 1902, with some modifications, is continued. The miners asked for a "more convenient and uniform system of adjusting local grievances."

The sliding scale by which the men were given an increase of 1 per cent when the price of coal was advanced 5 cents a ton above the $4.69 basis at tidewater, is abolished.

A four year agreement is reported. The miners asked for a one-year agreement.

Nothing has yet been made public regarding the demand for a reduction of hours, recognition of the union, or the minor demands.

The sub-committee has been meeting almost daily since April 11. It is expected that if the agreement is ratified by the miners the 170,000 men who have been idle since April 1 will have returned to work by May 16. It is possible that the executive committee of the three anthracite districts, headed by National President John White, may order the workers back at an earlier date, and trust to the convention to endorse their course.

Pennsy Operatives Present Grievances

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 29.—Following a meeting here today of representatives of the Brotherhood of Firemen, Conductors and Trainmen employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, a list of grievances was sent to S. C. Long, general manager of the company. The men do not call for an increase in wages nor a shorter work day, but ask for a clearer interpretation of the rules of the company in so far as it affects them.

Among the officials of the brotherhoods that attended the meeting were W. M. Clarke, vice president of the conductors' organization; George H. Bliss, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and P. J. McNamara, of the Brotherhood of Firemen. About 20 officials of the organizations attended.

A labor temple, with a summer garden on the roof, where tired working girls may rest and breathe the fresh air, is being planned by the women's Trade Union league of Chicago.

The first women's strike in America was that of textile workers at Dover, N. H., in 1828.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Vote On Workmen's Compensation Bill is Set for To-day, but an Attempt Will Be Made to Postpone--Injunction Bill on Calendar--Bill to Acquire the Express Comyanies is Introduced. Carl Leghien Addresses House.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—As reported in last week's letter, the injunction limitation bill, H. R. 23189, has been reported from the Committee of Labor by Chairman Wilson and placed upon the house calendar. This is labor's bill to make lawful certain agreements between employers and laborers and persons engaged in agriculture and horticulture and to limit the issuing of injunctions in certain cases and for other purposes. The report number is 588, which is favorable to the passage of the bill.

Congressman Wilson, chairman of the House Committee on Labor, and leader of the labor group, reported to the House on Saturday, April 20, H. R. 22912, to create a Department of Labor, with amendments recommended by a favorable report, No. 575, and the bill and reports were referred to the committee of the whole house on the state of the union. It is thought this bill will be favorably acted upon by the House before the adjournment of the present session.

The Senate has come to an agreement to vote on the workmen's compensation bill on May 2. Senator Overman of North Carolina, gave notice that he would interpose a motion to postpone it until next December.

The Senate, last week, passed the immigration bill which imposes the educational test and otherwise provides for restrictive immigration. The head tax was increased from $4 to $5. An exception is made in the case of "all aliens who shall prove to the satisfaction of the proper immigration officer or to the secretary of commerce and labor that they are seeking admission to the United States solely for the purpose of escaping from religious persecution." This bill follows very closely the lines of the house bill.

The Senate has passed a bill providing for an international investigation of the causes and remedies of the high cost of living. The bill authorizes the president to invite foreign governments to participate in a conference to promote an inquiry into this subject throughout the world, and provides for the participation of the United States in the investigation.

The House Committee on Interstate Commerce has reported favorably a bill providing that the government shall acquire by condemnation or otherwise, the express companies which are to be operated, if the bill becomes law, as an adjunct to the postoffice department. This measure was originally fathered by Congressman Lewis, coal miner, of Maryland. The action of the committee, however, has been overshadowed by the adoption of the rule which makes this subject in order as an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill in the house, now pending before that body. It provides for the establishment of a parcels post and postal express to be administered by the post master-general and operated through the present facilities of the express companies.

Congressman Murdock of Kansas, has offered an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill providing that "magazines, periodicals and other regularly issued publications in related characters for the use of the blind, which contain no advertisements and for which no subscription fee is charged, shall be transmitted in the United States mails free of postage." Another amendment was a so introduced by Congressman Dodds of Michigan, providing in part, that periodical publications issued under the auspices of a benevolent or fraternal society or order organized under the lodge system, and having a bona fide membership of not less than 1,000 persons, or by or under the auspices of a trade union shall be admitted to the mails as second class matter and the postage thereon to be the same as on other second-class matter, with the provision that such periodical publications being permitted to carry advertising matter must not be donated or published primarily for advertising purposes. It is also provided that these publications shall be limited to copies mailed to members, exchanges and bona fide subscribers together with 10 per cent of such circulation in addition as sample copies. It is further provided that the publications referred to must appear at least four times a year.

Carl Legien, who is now making a speaking tour of the United States under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor delivered a short speech before the members of the Labor Home in Congress last week. Chairman W. B. Wilson of the Labor Committee, made the motion for a recess in order that Mr. Legien might address the House, the usual custom being followed in such cases. The following is Mr. Legien's address, which was delivered in German and translated by his secretary, Mr. Baumeister: "Permit me to state that the organized workingmen of Europe stand for progress in their respective countries, but also are the strongest advocates of international peace. Our party in the German Reichstag has always brought pressure upon the government to avert war by getting into friendly communication with our neighboring countries. Our party has consistently opposed the policy of increasing armaments. The labor movement the world over aims to bring about universal peace instead of allowing nations to rival with each other in securing the latest weapons to murder each other. Our labor movement has for years furthered legislation for the protection of workers, emigrants and the general public of humanity. We are full of hope when we note that the same efforts are being brought to bear in this land. Such legislation fosters good

FUTURE SREEL CONSUMPTION.

The Steel Corporation over the last four weeks has been producing ingots at rate of more than 16,000,000 tons a year, comparing with 14,200,000 tons in 1910. The question is, will the industry be able to continue this record breaking pace for any great length of time. On this there is a great difference of opinion. Certain manufacturers contend that after July, when consumers' wants have been satisfied, there will be a slowing down. On the other hand, there are producers who say that in the event of good crops there will be no shrinkage to speak of from the present level.

Steel companies have been unfortunate, as the pronounced rise in production has not been accompanied by a corresponding advance in prices. In other words, nearly all the steel they have been delivering over the last four months has been on a basis of the existing prices. In the current quarter the various companies will get better prices for their steel than in the first quarter, but quotations have not advanced far enough to warrant the statement that big earnings are in prospect for April, May and June. One of the drawbacks will be the delay in movement of ore to the lower lake ports.

Wabs bars are quoted at $1.20 per 100 pounds and structural steel and plates at $1.35, the bulk of recent orders has been taken at $1.15 and $1.20 respectively. This means that deliveries of the steel will be made on the latter price basis in the current quarter.

ENGINEERS' DEMANDS BEING CONSIDERED.

There is still some hope that the railroad engineers' demands will be assented to without a lockout. But suggestions that President Taft should appoint a board of investigation to arbitrate the dispute between fifty railroad companies and their engine drivers were rejected last Friday by Hon. John S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, as savoring of politics.

"We want no politics in this controversy," asserted Stone. "It is purely a business proposition."

Reports had reached Stone that the railway managers wanted a commission of nine, two to be named by the railway officials, two by the engine drivers and five by President Taft, or by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"I would not be a party to any commission appointed by President Taft, as that would raise the question of partisan politics," said Stone. "Nor do I think that President Taft could afford to name any members of such a commission, even if it was requested to do so."

As Charles P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor, began his work as the domain between the railroads and the engine drivers, it was reported that the railway officials would demand the appointment of a commission to arbitrate the dispute the decision of the body to be final.

Mr. Neill made it clear that he is acting as a mediator, not as an arbitrator, and declared that his official position would bar him from becoming an arbitrator.

Thousands of lives will be saved in the future in the opinion of the bureau of mine officials, by means of an oxygen pumping apparatus with which the bureau's workers during the last year restored to life more than 30 persons who had ceased breathing. By means of the long filling and emptying machine used by the bureau, oxygen is forced in, the poisonous gases drawn out and normal breathing is started.

THE PSYCHE KNOT TO SET OFF PRETTY FACES.

THE Psyche knot, although for a few months out of fashion, is again asserting its claim for popularity. It is a style of coiffuring so simple and so generally becoming that its return should be welcome. Unlike many styles of dressing the hair, it is simple enough for business, yet, with the addition of a pretty ornament, is quite charming enough for any evening entertainment. ### SAGE ADVICE.

The Secrets of Success For Ambitious Business Women.

A woman who has made a notable success of business thus advises other business women:

Don't complain.

Don't demand sympathy.

Don't say you are unlucky. You are as lucky as you think you are, and opportunity is always at your door.

Be alert mentally and clean physically.

Work as if you had no idea of ever marrying and as if business were your sole interest in life.

Don't think you would succeed better somewhere else than where you live.

Don't waste time on self pity.

Don't be persuaded that you must be absolutely healthy before you start to work. You may find health in your work.

Don't stay in an employment which really is a detriment to your health. If you are brave enough to try you will find something better suited to your needs.

Study conditions around you and find out what requirements are most urgent. Learn to meet these requirements or the demands of the market near you.

Work with a goal before you. Don't be satisfied with your own degree of efficiency or knowledge. You can always acquire more.

Care of Cutlery.

Knives not in daily use should be well polished and buried in a box of sawdust until required for use.

Homemade Chloel Lamp.

A simple spirit lamp can be easily made out of a tin blacking box. Drill holes all round the lid, fill the box with absorbent cotton and soak it with alcohol. Put the lid on, and place a lighted match against the holes. As the alcohol evaporates it will burn like a small gas ring. This makes a splendid little stove for invalids' food.

THE OUTDOOR LIFE.

Popular Possibly Because It Is an English Fad.

The fashionable Englishwoman is devoted to country life. She tramps miles over the moors and meadows clad in a short tweed walking suit and wearing stout, sensible shoes. No storm keeps her indoors. She rides to hounds with all the enthusiasm of her father or brothers or husband. She can cast a line with the skill of the most finished angler. As a whip she is unexcelled. She plays tennis and golf and sometimes even takes a hand at hockey and cricket. On the river she can punt and row to perfection, and as a yachtswoman Britannia certainly rules the ways.

All these sports have received an impetus in America, and their popularity is partly due to the fact that they are fashionable.

For Burning Feet.

To cure burning feet first discard tight shoes, then take one pint of bran and one ounce of carbonate of soda; put in a footbath. Add one gallon of hot water. When cool enough soak the feet in this mixture for fifteen minutes. Relief is instantaneous. This should be repeated every night for a week.

Marks of Hatchets.

Marks made by scratching matches on the wall can be readily removed by rubbing lightly with a piece of cut lemon, then with a cloth dipped in whiting and finally washed with warm water and soap.

Not Fully Tasted.

"What an absurd little watch!"

"It keeps very good time."

"Ah, it may do now, but wait till the longer days come." — London Punch.

Truth is our only armor in all passages of life or death.—Emerson.

THE MAN WOMEN LIKE.

The one who has coolness in a crowd.

The one who can face a storm with a laugh.

The one who can fight a fire or hunt a burglar without losing his head.

The one who is brave without foolhardiness.

The one who is not fussy about trifles.

The one who quietly stands between her and the hard and dangerous things of life.

The one whose chivalry is so perfect that he never snubs a woman no matter how well she may have deserved it.

CLEANING HOUSE.

Forethought and Method Save Work and Worry.

The spring cunningham of house cleaning may be simplified by using method and forethought.

It is always wise to provide in advance the necessary tools and utensils such as nails and hammer, picture cords, brushes, brooms, paint, cloths, paper, paint, varnish, shelf papers, soaps, soda, ammonia, floor and furniture polish, etc.

The next thing to do is to begin at the top of the house and turn out all the cupboards and drawers, relining these with clean paper and eliminating superfluous or otherwise useless articles.

Then wash all curtains, bed valances, covers, blinds, etc., the advantage of this being that when the rooms are scrubbed out everything is ready to be put back again, clean and bright, and so complete the whole effect.

It is advisable to do one room at a time where practical. If painters and paper hangers are necessary then one must try and do the work as methodically as possible to avoid a muddle.

It is policy to have little cooking to do, so that the meals may get on quickly. Therefore provide a good joint, pies, etc, to last a few days.

When turning out a room the best way to go about it is as follows:

Lift the carpet, having arranged for it to be beaten and returned in readiness for relaying.

Remove all pictures and ornaments. Wash these thoroughly and pack the ornaments in a clothes basket, which should be well covered and kept free from dust.

The ceilings and walls should be well brushed.

If a bedroom is being done the mattresses should be taken into the open air and beaten thoroughly. The bedsteads should be rubbed thoroughly with a cloth wet with kerosene. This brightens and cleans the bedstead. The picture frames and glass must next be well washed. No soda must be used for this work. White paint is much improved if rubbed with a little dry whiting and then well cleaned with a leather. The outside frames of the windows should also be done.

The windows are next polished. A little ammonia in the water gives a brilliant luster to glass of any kind.

The furniture then requires to be washed with a little warm water and vinegar to remove all greasy marks and finally polished.

Everything is now ready to be replaced. The carpet is relaid. If it is surrounded by linoleum or stained boards these are cleaned and polished with floor polish.

That to believe in goodness makes goodness.

That every promise is an obligation.

That there is no worse joke than a true one.

That it is much easier to be critical than correct.

That the woman who knows when to hold her tongue also holds her friends.

It's always the lost opportunities that seem to bear the highest rate of interest.

That being well dressed doesn't atone for being ill mannered.

That the woman who talks too much always gives herself away.

That the woman who knows a little of everything seldom knows much of anything.

CLOTHES OF OUR GRANDMOTHERS

Heirlooms In the Shape of Rich and Stately Brocades May Be Made Over Into Modish and Elegant Garments.

DOLLY gloated over the invitation from her college chum.

It was for a week and in the city, which to a country school teacher meant much. All would have been well had it been from any friend but Dolly. Dolly, alas, was fashionable, and the invitation referred to a dinner at one of the smart restaurants of the big city, with afterward an evening at the opera to bear a famous prima donna.

This would have been delightful had Dolly's wardrobe been as amply supplied with garments as Dolly's. Dolly had a wealthy father who catered to her needs.

After considering every phase of the case, Dolly sat down to write a note of regrets. She had absolutely nothing to wear to the dinner and the opera in such company. Fashionable folks in the city do not consider neat tailor mades quite the thing for evening wear.

Fortunately, before that note was written in blew Dolly's good angel in the shape of her pretty fellow teacher in the primary department of the village school.

"Why," cried little Miss Gray, "you mustn't let a good chance like that escape you! Let's look at the fashion books."

A short study of the plates showed that Dolly had a gown which with a little attention from the village dressmaker might be made to do. It would be easy enough to manage a hat. She had a beautiful plume, and the local milliner was a person of taste and discrimination.

"Pot a wrap!" wailed Dolly. "One can't go to the opera at night without an evening wrap!"

"Oh, that's easy!" little Miss Gray exclaimed airily. "There are all those lovely old clothes that belonged to your great-grandmother and your grandmother? You loaned them to the church ladies, you know, for the tableaux."

"They're up in the attic," replied Dolly, "but I don't see what use they can be."

So they went up to the attic, and the minute Miss Gray laid her eyes on Grandmother Brown's old gold brocade she exclaimed:

"There's the thing!"

They carried it downstairs, and Miss Gray pointed to one of the plates in the fashion book.

"Well make it just like that," said she.

The village dressmaker entered into their plans with enthusiasm. Fortunately, she was one of those elect dressmakers who know how to fit.

When finished the coat looked much like the one shown here. The brocade was combined with plain satin and all over lace. The deep collar, the cuffs and the wide band about the outside of the coat were of the plain satin. Lace was laid over the satin of the revers and was set into the very full sleeves. A big wooden button was covered with satin, and bands of the plain satin were gathered over cords to make a trefoil for the front of the coat. The button fastened the coat by slipping through one of the loops of this ornament.

And Dolly only smiled when Dolly exclaimed at sight of the wrap:

"Oh, my dear, where did you get that perfectly stunning thing? I saw one just like it the other day at madame's, when she opened that last box of style models from Paris."

Dolly could afford to smile, for madame was the most fashionable dressmaker in the city.

RIBBON GIRDLES.

Dainty Dresden Ribbons to Be Worn at the Waist.

Ribbon girdles are to enjoy a tremendous popularity, according to dressmakers. Summer gowns of wash fabrics will be considered scarcely finished without some sort of bright girdle or sash to encircle the waist. Many of the girdles are to be fashioned of the dainty Dresden ribbons in colors to harmonize with the gowns.

Very broad ribbon is used and laid in folds to make the girdle of suitable width. A choice of the ribbon or a dainty ornate fastener one end hides the place where the belt is lapped over.

Sometimes a sash effect is given by allowing short ends of the ribbon to hang from the rosette.

A buckle covered with ribbon may be substituted for the rosette or chou, any fancy ornament that can be covered with ribbon being considered suitable for this purpose.

CURLY HAIR.

Art May Step In Where Nature Has Been Unkind.

If you wish to make naturally straight hair curly there are several methods, but the results are only temporary.

Shampoo the hair with soapy water in which a few grains of carbonate of potash have been dissolved. While the hair is still damp plait the parts that need it and waved in the side braids or else put them up in thick locks over hairpins. If mere fluffiness is desired dress the hair loosely while damp, fluffing out the front with the fingers.

Another method is to moisten the hair with strong tea or aromatic vinegar, in which about ten grains of carbonate of potash or a half pint of the tonic have been dissolved.

There are some bandolines and mucilaginous substances useful in keeping the hair in curl. It is bad to use these constantly, as their tendency is harmful to the hair structure. When used only occasionally—say two or three times a month—a curling fluid is not generally necessary.

The hair may be moistened with the following before rolling it over kid or rag curlers:

|---|---|
| Tragacanth | ½ ounce |
| Rose water | 1 pint |
| Oil of almonds | 1 dram |

Crush the tragacanth and put it in the rosewater; let the vessel stand in a warm place, stirring occasionally till the gum is swollen and soft. Strain through a single cheesecloth and then through three thicknesses. Then add almond oil and a few grains of carmine or saffron to tint it.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Oregon, April 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Inclosed herewith find money order in payment for those five extra copies of the Tribune which you sent me as per my request. I thank you for your promptness. I have been mailing those copies to different parties in different states.

I earnestly wish that the National Labor Tribune was a weekly guest in every American home. God bless you, dear brother, for giving us such a newspaper. Most of the newspapers of present day dislikes to present religious matter in their columns, claiming that such subject "is out of place" in a public newspaper, but I venture the assertion that the religious subjects set forth and discussed in the Tribune is strictly brand new news to a vast number of its readers and outrivals all the Association Press dispatches as real news—but thank God for this blessed (old) news and "which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:21. This blessed knowledge of Gods gracious Divine plan and His loving provision for man, recovery from sin and death. Oh, how truly our precious Redeemer stated our case when He said, "Ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make you free." John 8: 32. And, oh, brother, what a blessed freedom we enjoy. No more children tossed to and fro, and carried about "with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Eph. 4: 14. No longer hypnotized by creeds and erring priestcraft. No longer a stockholder in the theology of satan "that man is immortal" and is not really dead when he is laid in the grave, and no longer do we behold our Heavenly Father as a Being, void of reason, justice and love, who would delight in torturing His helpless creatures through endless eternity. Thank God for a sound mind and freedom from such "doctrines of devils." And blessed be the holy name of our Lord Jesus Christ for this marvelous light of Truth now shining forth as a beacon guide unto His trusting disciples, the faithful "little flock." Thank God for giving us our beloved Pastor Russell. The Lord knew all about the coming of that teacher when He said "O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Dan. 12: 4. As fast as God's "due time" have arrived the different process of His works He has always found a fitting servant to carry out His glorious purpose. Truly our Lord is Almighty. And now, Mr. Editor, I want to say that from the bottom of my heart "I love you" for the glorious work you are forwarding and supporting in the columns of the National Labor Tribune. I can hardly wait from one week to the next. God bless you my dear brother, for your earnest labor and your zeal in the Lord's blessed Truth. I cannot refrain from calling your attention to the following text, "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." I Cor. 15: 58.

Inclosed herewith I add another subscription to the National Labor Tribune which I desire you to send to an old friend who is poor in pocket, but yet is a member of the Watch Tower family and a late student in the Lord's Truth. I want him to participate and enjoy the good things served by the Tribune unto all who loves the second coming of our precious Lord, Advocate and Redeemer, Jesus Christ. (Kindly count this old brother in with your list of Pastor Russell's Sermons.) I hope to see my way clear soon and to be able to send some more subscriptions. Glory be to God for the blessed privilege we have to assist in His glorious harvest work. I enclose a few verses which I had printed after I had received the blessed Truth of God, and oh, I thank God for the privilege of giving me this precious knowledge of His loving purpose for all Adam's race.

Yours in the Love of God and His Beloved Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

As a new subscriber to your paper I wish to express my appreciation of its many valuable features, particularly the Religious Department. Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Bible Studies and Question Box in this department have made your paper the most valuable paper that comes to our home.

May the Lord reward you for the wonderful work you are doing.

Yours in thankful appreciation of the Heavenly Father's love, I am,

Maryland, April 20.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to offer a liberal contribution to the religious interests of your estimable paper and its readers.

It seems remarkable how the truth upon all subjects is coming forward in these days with such leaps and bounds, as illustrated by Pastor Russell's Sermons, of which I am a critical reader; and if we wish to keep pace with the increasing light, we must reconstruct our whole faith-structure. Never before have we realized the force and weight of the Apostle's prediction in I Cor. 3: 11-15: "Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it . . . of what sort it is." As we survey, in the light of present truth, our former faith structures, the creeds we subscribed to, and the awful doctrines we heard preached, and believed, we are moved to exclaim with the poet

"It is nothing but wood, hay and stubble,
Which surely some day will be burned.
This useless fruit of our talents some day is to be returned."

Realizing as all thoughtful Christians do, that we are living in a time in which great dangers of false doctrine, infidelity, "higher criticism," and other loose and pernicious influences, are prevalent, even within our Christian churches and pulpits, we wish herewith to appeal to earnest Christians and ask them a few very pertinent questions.

What's not and what isn't?

It's a liberal reward for the candid expression and answering of the following questions, we will send free of charge, postage prepaid by us, a series of sixteen of the Scripture studies, which will richly repay you for your time and study and response to the following questions.

An Appeal to Honest and Intelligent Christians!

(1) Do you believe that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, died for our sins according to the Scriptures?

(2) Will any enter the heavenly kingdom who do not believe in Jesus Christ as their Redeemer?

(3) Will any inherit the heavenly kingdom who are not converted from the pursuit of sinful and world pleasures?

(4) Will any share in the heavenly kingdom who have not fully consecrated and resigned themselves to God in consecration, and who do not take up their cross, deny themselves, and follow in the footsteps (after the example) of Jesus, and who are not born again?

Dear reader, the proper answer to these questions is of the most vital possibly much to you for time and eternity. Study the Scriptures, and give your answers with full consent of heart and mind.

See (1) John 3: 16, 18, 36; 5: 1; I Cor. 15: 1-3; (2) Acts 4: 12; John 6: 51-56; Rom. 5: 1, 2; (3) Matt. 18: 3; Mark 10: 15; Matt. 5: 20; Rom. 6: 9, 10; Gal. 5: 19-21; (4) Luke 9: 23-25; 14: 26, 27; I Pet. 2: 21; 1: 15; I John 2: 4-6; Rom. 6: 5; 8:13.

If after examining the Scriptures you agree that faith in God and Christ and full consecration to God are essential to salvation, we wish to ask you a few more questions: Consecration to God are essential to salvation, we wish to ask you a few more questions:

(5) Is eternal torment the fate and doom of all except the saints?

(6) Are the thousands of millions of heathen and idolators who have died in ignorance of the Gospel of Christ saved in heaven?

(7) Is there any provision made in God's Word and plan for the conversion and probation of those unsaved after death?

(8) Is asserted by some ministers of various denominations that no intelligent clergyman any longer believe in eternal torture as the doom of the wicked.)

(9) Where is there a Christian denomination which has renounced the doctrine of eternal torture for the unsaved?

(9) Do you know of any clergymen of any of the Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Baptist, Disciple, and other so-called Orthodox denominations, who publicly disavow, openly, the hell-fire doctrine, or who believe in probation after death?

(10) Can you find us one text in the Bible where it speaks of an immortal soul in man? Does the Bible teach that death (oblivion) is the penalty for sin?

Please give Scripture reference in proof of your answer, and we will mail you the Scripture studies.

PILAT'S REPORT.

Jesus was dragged before the High Priest and condemned to death. It was there that Caiaphas, the High Priest, performed a derisory act of submission. He sent his prisoner to me to pronounce his condemnation. I answered that as Jesus was a Galilean, the affair came under Herod's jurisdiction; and I ordered him to be sent to him. That wily tetrarch professed his humility, and protesting his reverence for me, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, recommitted the fate of the man to my hands. Soon my palace assumed the aspect of a besieged citadel. Every moment increased the number of the seditionists. Jerusalem was inundated with crowds from the mountains of Nazareth. All Judea appeared to be pouring into the devoted city. One thing we are sure, namely, that Jesus gave no odd address while He was dead. He preached in the way we sometimes refer to when we say, "Actions speak louder than words."

It was the great object lesson which the fallen angels saw that constituted to them the great sermon that gave them a ground for hope. On several occasions the fallen spirits, when commanded to come out of human beings, declared that they knew Jesus in the long ago they had known Him, whom, as the only begotten of the Father, and His Representative, the God created them and all things that are made, and was also the mouthpiece for all Divine orders and regulations. They realized that He had come into the world to be a Redeemer; they perceived the great scope that He had made from His lofty position on the heavenly plane to the degradation of human conditions. They admired His loyalty and faithfulness to God, but doubtless believed Him to arise from the dead. But when they saw His resurrection on the third day to glory, honor and immortality, far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named, "His sermon to them was complete. His resurrection was the antidote for the sting of death, and the wages of sin is death," but that "the gift of God is eternal life." (Romans vi. 23.) And as they realized thus the power of God, and the wisdom of God for His human creatures, the Apostle's words imply that this constituted to them a message of hope. Perhaps they would also fall readily into God eventually would have mercy upon them, even as He had had mercy and had provided for humanity.

The lesson is one for all. God's power is infinite, so is His love, His mercy, His goodness. Nevertheless every willful sin will have its punishment, a just recompense of reward, and every willful disobedience shall have the Divine favor and everlasting life. Let each apply the lesson to himself.

Pilate's report to Cæsar was that Jesus was a Galilean, the affair came under Herod's jurisdiction; and I ordered him to be sent to him. That wily tetrarch professed his humility, and protesting his reverence for me, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, recommitted the fate of the man to my hands. Soon my palace assumed the aspect of a besieged citadel. Every moment increased the number of the seditionists. Jerusalem was inundated with crowds from the mountains of Nazareth. All Judea appeared to be pouring into the devoted city. I had taken a wife—a maiden from among the Gauls—who followed me into this fatuous city, weeping and throwing herself at my feet, said to me, "Beware, and touch not that man, for he is holy. Last night I saw him in a vision. He was walking on the waters. He was flying on the wings of the winds. He spoke to the tempest and the fishes of the lake—all were obedient to him. Behold the torrent of Mount Kedron is rolling blood. The statues of Cæsar are filled with the filth of Gennadon. The columns of the Lebanon have given way, and the earth is veiled in mourning, like a vestal of the tomb." O, Pilate! evil awaits thee, if thou will not listen to the entreaties of thy wife. Dread the curse of a Roman Senate, dread the powers of Cæsar.

The time limit the stars granted under the weight of the multitude. The Nazarene was brought back to me. I ordered the Hall of Judgment to be followed by my guard, and asked the people in a severe tone what they demanded. "The death of the Nazarene," was the reply. "For what crime?" "He has blasphemed in what has prophesied the ruin of the temple. He calls himself the Son of God, and declares that He is the King of the Jews." "Roman justice," said I, "punishes not words, but offenses. My guard, 'Crucify him, crucify him!' pelched forth the relentless rabble. The vociferations of the infuriated mob shook the palace to its foundations. There was no one that appeared to be calm, in the midst of the vast multitude. It was the Nazarene.

Caiaphas and Judees attempts to prevent from this furry of his merciless ferocecutes, I adopted a course which, at the moment, appeared to me to be the only one that could save his life. I ordered Him to be scourged; then calling for an ewer, I washed my hands in the presence of the multitude, thereby signifying to them my disapproval of the death of Jesus. It was in vain that those wretches thirsted for.

Often in our civil commotions have I witnessed the furious animosity of the multitude, but nothing could be compared to what I witnessed in the present instance. It might have been truly said that on this occasion all the furious passions of the infernal regions had assembled at Jerusalem. The crowd appeared not to walk; they were borne along, whirling and rolling like living waves, from the portals of the Pretorium, even unto Mount Zion, with howlings, screams, shrieks and vociferations, such as were never heard in the solitudes of the Panonia, or in the tumult of the Forum.

By degrees the day darkened like a winter's twilight, such as was witnessed at the death of the great Julius Cæsar, which was likewise towards the Ides of March.

HOW JESUS PREACHED TO SPIRITS IN PRISON.

Who They Are and What Was Their Offense—"Cast Down to Tartarus." Pastor Russell, at Georgia's Capital, Tells How Angels Once Materialized and Took to Themselves Wives From Among the Daughters of Men—Fate of Dead of Titanic Disaster Pointed Out From Scriptures.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 28.—While we weep with survivors of the "Titanic" disaster, let us thank God that a better understanding of the Bible enables us to sorrow not hopelessly. Not long ago, misguided by our creeds of the Dark Ages, we would have asked, Were any of the 1,500 who perished saints? And assured that a very few of them would have claimed to be saints, we would have concluded that all the remainder, plunged down to a Catholic purgatory of torture, or worse, to a Protestant hell of eternal torture.

Even the lales of their great gallantry and heroism would not have altered the decision which would have hung over the question. Did they confess Jesus in word and deed? we would have asked. Were they church members? This is the same argument used respecting the 30,000 persons who die every day in the year, "going down into Christless graves," the "London Missionary Society" texts says, but means and is understood to mean into Christless eternal torture.

Now, how different! Now we see that a faithful, elect Church is being selected during this Age, that in the next Age they with Jesus may satisfy, bless, uplift all the non elect to an earthly salvation to human perfection, to the new Paradise—Earth—which Messiah's Kingdom will usher in. Thus, only the willfully wicked will ever be annihilated.

But our old errors die hard, because we have twisted the Bible to fit them. For instance, let us consider St. Peter's words:—

"Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened in the spirit, by which (two experiences —death and resurrection) He preached unto the spirits in prison."—1 Peter iii. 18, 19.

This text, said Pastor Russell, has been made the basis for some perfect presumptuous. Some of these have deduced a intermediate state lasting between death and the resurrection. Others have claimed it as an authority for the doctrine of purgatory. The difficulty in every case seems to be the failure to remember that the Bible always and everywhere teaches that the dead are really dead, that they know nothing, and that, therefore, it would be impossible to do any preaching to the dead humans. Undoubtedly the theory that people are more alive after they die than when they were alive is responsible for nearly all of the foolish things which we have all at some time professed to believe.

Before dismissing the thought that these "spirits in prison" are human spirits, let us note the fact that to say, "human spirits," is an absurdity of itself, because human beings are not spirits and spirit beings are not humans. "Who maketh His angels spirits," is the Scriptural proposition. True, we do sometimes speak of human as possessing a spirit of life, but by this we merely mean that he possesses the power or energy of life, and the same would be equally true of the lower orders of creation, beasts, fish, fowl, etc.

Again, we sometimes speak of the Church as spirit beings—begotten of the Holy Spirit. Thus the Apostle speaks of the natural man in contrast with the New Creature, a spirit being. To appreciate this statement we must remember that the Church class receives the begetting of the Holy Spirit to the end that, if faithful, they may attain unto a spirit resurrection and become spirit beings, like unto the angels and like to the Redeemer. But we are not spirits yet, except by faith—by hope. However, the context shows that the Apostle had no reference to the Church, either. We were not in prison; we received the Message of salvation through the Apostles.

SPIRIT ONCE DISOBEDIENT.

The spirits to whom the message was given had proven themselves disobedient, says St. Peter. He even tells us the time of their disobedience, namely, that it was "in the days of Noah, while the ark was preparing." Surely, if nothing these particulars mentioned in the context, no one would be excusable for misunderstanding this Scripture and considering it in any way applicable to the manity of our day or to humanity in general. However, it is helpful to us to learn the full particulars of the matter. What was their disobedience, and when and how were they imprisoned?

Turning to Genesis vi. 1-3, we find there is reason of the disobedience of those angels, who for a time had been permitted to see what they could do for the uplift of humanity, or, rather, permitted to demonstrate that the downward tendency of sin is incurable except in the manner which God has already arranged for through Messiah and His glorious reign of a thousand years.

Instead of those angels helping mankind out of sin they helped themselves into sin, and by so doing they increased the depravity amongst the human race, and the wonderful record is that "the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thought of his heart was only evil continually." The parallel on the side of those angels was that when they were granted the privileges of materializing—of taking human bodies for the sake of helping and instructing mankind—they misused this power and took to themselves the daughters of men for wives.

Those these angels came straight to order to live as men amongst men and to rear earthly families rather than to abide in the condition in which they were created—spirit beings, higher than humans. Not only was this wrong in principle, but it was taking a course in opposition to the Divine arrangement, but it was wrong also because the thing was done for the gratification of lust, and it led to their own moral defilement as well as having a baneful influence upon humanity; for we can readily see that for the angels, of superior power, and wisdom, to become leaders in lustful practices would mean a great influence upon mankind toward sin.

We are particularly told that the offspring of this improper union between the angels and the daughters of men were giants, both physically and mentally superior to the fallen human family—"men of renown." And this statement, that they were "men of renown," was at a time when mankind's estate was reached at a hundred years, and implies that God did not interfere to hinder or stop the progress of sin for perhaps several centuries. In the meantime the race had become so corrupt that any harmful evil only Noah and his family were uncontaminated—all others had more or less come under the influence, directly or indirectly, of these fallen angels and their giant sons. Hence, of Noah it was written (not that he was a perfect man, but), "Now Noah was perfect in his generation" (uncontaminated) and his family apparently the same. Hence these alone were saved in the ark, while all the remainder, more or less contaminated, were destroyed by the flood.

"IN CHAINS OF DARKNESS."

It was then and there that God imprisoned those spirits, angels, who kept not their first estate, and are therefore called fallen angels, devils, demons. They were not imprisoned in some far-off world called hell, nor are they confined there in making fires for the torture of poor humanity. Following the leading of the Scriptures we find that when the flood came they were not destroyed because, while their fleshly bodies which they assumed might indeed perish, yet they would merely dematerialize, or assume their spirit condition again.

The record is that God cast them down, that He condemned them to an overthrow—that they might not any longer associate with the holy angels, but must be reserved in tartarus—our earth's atmosphere. Here they were imprisoned, not in a special place, but in the sense of having their liberties restrained "in chains of darkness." They were no longer permitted to materialize and thus to associate with humanity. These things are distinctly told us by St. Jude and St. Peter (Jude 6; II Peter ii. 4, 5)—an explanation in full harmony with the Genesis account of their fall.

ONCE DISOBEDIENT—STILL DISOBEDIENT.

We of course cannot know that all of those fallen angels are still in a disloyal condition of heart. On the contrary, in harmony with our text, we may suppose that some of these fallen angels have since repented of their wrong course and it would be none too strong a way to state the matter—that any such repentant ones would surely have terrible experiences as a result. To be obliged to be in close touch and relationship with the more evil and malignant ones and to have knowledge of all their evil intentions, would be a terrible experience and, besides this, we may be sure that the rebellious would not hesitate to persecute the repentant ones in any convenient manner, that they would be lawless, regardless of the Divine will.

On the other hand, the repentant ones would be obliged to restrain themselves from any display of ever evil for evil, knowing that this would be contrary to the Divine will. In other words, repentant ones amongst those fallen spirits, influenced by the preaching of Jesus or otherwise, would have a kind of purgatorial experience, and the thought calls forth our sympathies.

When dispossessed or cut off from the privilege of materialization, many of the fallen spirits, we know not what proportion, continued their active opposition to God after the manner of Satan. Hence they are spoken of as his angels, his messengers, his servants and he is spoken of as Beelzebub, the Prince of Demons. Satan, who existed much earlier than the others, and in a different way, the Scriptures tell us was an angel of a higher rank, or a higher nature, and the superintendency of his has made him the Prince or ruler over the hosts of fallen spirits.

FIGHTING AGAINST GOD.

The fight of Satan and his fallen angels is against God, against all who are in harmony with Him, against all the principles of righteousness, and against all the channels and servants whom the Lord may use. St. Paul's words along this line are forceful: he remarks that our warfare contends not "with flesh and blood," but also "with wicked spirits in high positions," and the question arises, "Who is sufficient for these things?" The answer is that no one is sufficient without the aid of the Redeemer His Church would be quite overcome and vanquished by evil.

Likewise, without the Redeemer's aid through His Kingdom, without the binding of Satan, without our Lord's releasing of the world from the bondage of sin and death, there would be no hope of the world's recovery from its present bondage. But with the Apostle we exclaim, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Romans viii. 31.)

THROUGH MEDIUMS AND OBEISIONS.

Satan's original plan of attack was to bring on sin under his influence by misrepresentation — by putting darkness for light and light for darkness—for instance, the temptation under which Mother Eve fell. Satan there represented himself as Eve's friend, giving her sound advice. He represented God as having a selfish motive behind His command that our first parents would not eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Satan declared that God had told an untruth when He said that the penalty for sin would be death. Satan declared that man cannot die.

And has he not since kept up the same line of falsification? And has he not deceived the whole world upon this very subject? Do not all peoples in very fact believe that when one dies he does not die, but gets more alive—exactly Satan's lie of the first instance? How few have believed God, even amongst His people who truly love Him, and have a desire to believe the teachings of His Word! We have all been under a kind of "hoodoo." "The god of this world (Satan) hath blinded" our minds on this subject. We are now coming to see that death is the penalty for sin and that the resurrection is the salvation God promised and will provide.

Satan has had powerful allies and servants in the fallen angels, and it is through their prosistence that his lie has triumphed over the Divine Word of truth—"Dying, thou shalt die." These fallen spirits have made various manifestations in every land for centuries, and thereby have apparently substantiated the theory that a dead man is more alive than when he was alive. Knowing that mankind would have nothing to do with them if their real personality were known they hide their personality and represent themselves as our dead friends who desire to speak with us, either directly or through mediums.

A further desire of these angels is to obsess or to get possession of a human being. Being chained or restrained from the privilege of materialization, the next most desirable thing in their estimation is to gain control over a human being and to use his body instead of their own. This is styled obsession, and persons so afflicted today are sent to an insane asylum where, it is estimated, they constitute at least one half of the entire number. In the days of our Lord these were not mistakenly supposed to be insane, but rightly declared to be obsessed. All remember the New Testament account that one Savior and His Apostles cast out legions of fallen spirits.

HOW JESUS PREACHED IN DEATH

Here arises another question. If Jesus was really dead, as the Scriptures declare, if "He poured out His soul unto death," and made His soul an offering for sin," and His soul was not raised from the dead until the third day after His crucifixion, how could He in the meantime preach to spirits in prison, or to anybody else?

We reply that He could preach in the same way that the Apostle refers to, saying, "He, being dead, yet speaketh" (Hebrews xi. 4); and again in the same way that the blood of Abel is said to have cried to God—figuratively. Of one thing we are sure, namely, that Jesus gave no odd address while He was dead. He preached in the way we sometimes refer to when we say, "Actions speak louder than words."

It was the great object lesson which the fallen angels saw that constituted to them the great sermon that gave them a ground for hope. On several occasions the fallen spirits, when commanded to come out of human beings, declared that they knew Jesus in the long ago they had known Him, whom, as the only begotten of the Father, and His Representative, the God created them and all things that are made, and was also the mouthpiece for all Divine orders and regulations. They realized that He had come into the world to be a Redeemer; they perceived the great scope that He had made from His lofty position on the heavenly plane to the degradation of human conditions. They admired His loyalty and faithfulness to God, but doubtless believed Him to arise from the dead. But when they saw His resurrection on the third day to glory, honor and immortality, "far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named, "His sermon to them was complete. His resurrection was the antidote for the sting of death, and the wages of sin is death," but that "the gift of God is eternal life." (Romans vi. 23.) And as they realized thus the power of God, and the wisdom of God for His human creatures, the Apostle's words imply that this constituted to them a message of hope. Perhaps they would also fall readily into God eventually would have mercy upon them, even as He had had mercy and had provided for humanity.

The lesson is one for all. God's power is infinite, so is His love, His mercy, His goodness. Nevertheless every willful sin will have its punishment, a just recompense of reward, and every willful disobedience shall have the Divine favor and everlasting life. Let each apply the lesson to himself.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Texas, April 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Am sending you postal order with two names and will send more soon. With 2 could place one Tribune in every home in the county, but we are in the drouth-stricken section of Texas and people have no money to spare for papers.

We appreciate the Tribune more and more for its various good features but especially its Good Seed Sower department. With best wishes for your future prosperity, I remain, ever

Yours sincerely,
MRS. S. S. MADDOX.

Oregon, April 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We read in the old testament as follows:

"For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God: the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth." The Lord did not set His love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people.—Deut. 7: 6-7.

Now are we not to consider the above texts first, as applying in a literal sense to the Jews, the fleshly Israel?

Secondly—As a type, and as such apply its meaning to the new creature, the Body of Christ, the Church as presented by the Apostle in Acts 15: 14; I Pet. 2: 9; Titus 2: 14?

Yours in the love of God, and for the true light upon His Word "Now made manifest unto His Saints."—Col. 1: 26, 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I want to say a word for your good paper. It comes to our home every Thursday and we enjoy the reading of it very much, especially the regious feature of it. It is a fearful thing to be of benefit to all classes of people. May the Lord's blessing accompany that feature especially.

Respectfully yours,
M. M. BROOT.

New York, April 25.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We have taken the Tribune for a number of years and enjoy reading it, especially the Sermons, Question Box and I hope the dear Lord will abundantly bless you for the good work you are doing in speaking the good news and praising that you may receive a rich blessing.

Sincerely yours,
M. M. BROWN.

Pennsylvania, April 25.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

I put into these columns you print and the Question Box certainly answers question that puzzle all Christian people. I have read Pastor Russell's Six Studies in the Scriptures ten and four times, and I find something new of the age or any age in Scripture elucidation.

I read the Centurian story running in your paper and liked it so much, am also very anxious to read Pilate's report.

In closed you will find a money order.

Sincerely yours,
MISS ELIZABETH FOLL.

Nebraska, April 25.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We are appreciating the Tribune more and more, and we are sure you will be rewarded for your zeal in setting forth the Truth in its pages.

Yours very truly,
W. H. DICKERSON.

THE TRUTH POST CARDS.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

A friend of mine handed me one of your papers the other day, it was April 4, 1912, issue. It was fairly loaded with good things, Pastor Russell's Sermons, Sunday School Lessons, Question Box and some of the best letters from Christian people who have learned to know the Joyful sound. Was forced to read to read Rev. Mr. Gabough's letter. I am going to subscribe through the Watch Tower.

Pastor Russell's exposition of the world's relative to death, hell and the resurrection came to me like new revelation. I truely believe he has set forth on these interesting topics. In reading him I was sharply remind of the world's tendency through the wilderness of woe to follow the beaten trails of the jungle paths worn by many feet the old errors of the Dark Ages, the fathers of later times and their followers and imitators of today. For centuries we have carefully trudged along in those well worn paths, and by the pioneers in the world's religious though and venerated to our forebears. It illustrates the great power of inertia of the race to move along on the lines of the beaten roadway. It is a characteristic of the human Home whose strong aversion to exercise their own powers of brain, we have already noted. The race is saturated and steeped in the imitation habit in religion, political, economic and commercial in all their comings in and goings put. I like Pastor Russell's views for the reason that his theology honors God, ennobles man and give one a more satisfying and consistent view of Divine providence, one that accords more harmoniously with the Biblical declaration that God is Love. To create millions of human beings to be tormented eternally with no possibility of alleviation or escape has always been a fly in the ointment of my creed. For years past with the widening of my spiritual horizon I practically lost sight of the fly so that Pastor Russell's exposition of the word finds ready echo in my thermonel heart. The earnestness, simplicity and scholarship and independent thinking in accepting God's word before man's impress me profoundly. I am sure he is doing a great work in his interpretation of the word of life and wish him God speed in it. As I have already confessed I am ready to entertain Pastor Russell's theology heartily.

May the dear Lord bless you for publishing the Glad Tidings of Great Joy.

Yours for righteousness,
E. W. HOTTSMAN.

OCEAN PERILS AND FATE.

In the late dreg sea disaster of the Titanic whereon hundreds were engulfed and swallowed up through the jaws of the great, relentless monster—Death—we are constrained to proffer this word of Christian solace, to the effect that if the hoary monster were a friend, as some assert, it shows a thoughtlessness beyond expression. Alas! that this reasoning should swing so far out of balance from the center of gravity of such misapprehension of the "grim reaper" needs public correction and the copious citation of fact and inspired testimony. We read in Holy Writ (Luke 13-4) of how those sixteen upon whom the water tower of Siloam fell, were not greater offenders than those who dwelt in Jerusalem. Likewise those Galileans were not the chiefest sinners to have their blood mingled with the sacrifices. Right here we note the exact analogy of Jesus' logic as sharp as the knife to prudent mind. Again in human fact the toto of evil done in Israel declared in will, one voice strong against Death's sanity. Negative arguments are completely overwhelmed by the eyes of all nations, thickens when in the presence of the unrecognizable harvester.

We shall be pleased to supply your readers a few treatises quoting inspiration and affording comfort of those affected by these sad calamities, and whose sources of consolation have dried up by reason of tangled "nets" and "dark age" dogmas.

The solution we would say that the springs of hope when touched with the intelligent sense of Divine revelation flow over with fullness of mercy and heavenly balm. The combination to the above book is now sure, owing to the masse touch of him who has the secrets of death and hades. It is a weak sister to second doctrine on such vitals of life and be swift to prove all things and hold fast the good.

Very sincerely,
JOSEPH GRECO.

Bellefontaine, O., April 27.

Virginia, April 27.

First a few words to let you know that I appreciate your paper more and more from week to week. It has been a very welcome visitor to our home for nearly five years. I also thank you for the letter for Pastor Russell's Sermons, but I fancied it to be a letter for me, for I greatly appreciated the way you treated the letter questions as they came up; the Reversal with your letter treated the difference between labor and capital. Then the Sunday school Lessons still have the same attractiveness of your paper. Then the Bible Question Box where different Bible questions receive a reasonable and logical answer. I hope to be on your list as long as I live, and I am willing to pay in advance. May the giver of every perfect gift bless and keep your labors in spreading the Glad Tidings of Great Joy which shall be unto all people. Yours in the love of the coming kingdom.

POPULAR MECHANICS.

LIVE WIRE DETECTOR.

Safety Device For the Protection of Electrical Workers.

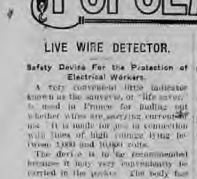
A very convenient little indicator known as the safety-fuse, the life preserver to most in France for finding out whether wires are carrying current or not. It is made for use in connection with lines of high voltage, ranging between 1,000 and 10,000 volts.

The device is to be recommended because it may very conveniently be carried in the pocket. The body for the safety of a student and it is removable from the chassis rod. An ammeter unit coil is to see that the device is in good working order just before using.



DEVICE WARNS LINEMEN OF LIVE WIRES.

ing it. A light swinging arm works on a pivot and is attracted to the fixed metal piece lying below when the wire is alive.

To test the instrument the student rod is taken off and the watch portion is set up in a steady position. Then the rod is rubbed briskly on the coat sleeve so as to electrify it and is brought near the top bell. When all is in good order the pivoted arm swings around and so indicates the electric charge. One is thus sure that a live wire will carry out its effect and the watch part is then mounted on the rod and held up with the tail near the wire. The double rod serves as a holder to insulate the top and also keep the charge from entering the body.

New Use of Aluminium.

With a pencil of aluminium indelible characters may be written on the wet glass or porcelain, and when treated with hydrochloric acid the surface covered by the characters becomes opaque. When the characters are not etched, but simply burnished, they exactly resemble fluted silver. The discovery of aluminium was discovered by a Swiss scientist.

It is indispensable first to remove every trace of grease from the surface to be ornamented by polishing with chalk, and the stimulants will not hold. Since the effect is produced only on substances containing silicic acid it has been suggested that an ordinary lead pencil would be an onerring detector of false diamonds. Magnesium, cadmium and zinc are in a similar manner, but their traces readily oxidize.

Steel Rods Made by New Process.

There is employed in Great Britain a comparatively new process of making bars of steel and other metal. This process consists in heating the metal until it becomes plastic, and then forcing it, with the aid of a hydraulic ram, from the compressing cylinder through a die. It issues from the die in the form of a rod, the subsequent from a sausage machine. The rods are round, square or hexagonal, according to the shape of the die, and it is said that they possess practically double strength than rolled bars of equal size. Wire so small that it weighs only one hundredth of a pound to the foot in length, as well as heavy bars, is produced in this way.

The Jungfrau Railway.

The recent completion of the Jungfrau railway turned the attention to that striking work of engineering, the Jungfrau railway, which on its completion will be the highest railway in Europe. The final station will be built at an elevation of 2,000 feet above the present end of the line, and from the station, which will be cut out of the solid rock, an elevator will carry passengers 500 feet to the summit of the Jungfrau, which stands at an elevation of 13,600 feet.

Utilizing Waste Heat.

Utilizing the waste heat from iron furnaces and converting it into electric current, then raising it back into light and power, is the latest thing in electrical work over in England. Instead of letting the heat blaze away into the air, the power companies put it under boilers and make it work. A favorite scheme is to take the coke gas that is thrown off in the purification of by products and use that for making electricity.

EFFECT OF COLD ON IRON.

Difference of Opinion Between Scientists and Metal Workers.

Recent cold snaps call to mind the old saying as to the effect of cold upon iron. With its naturally low temperature, yet certain scientists who are reported to be likely to have some interesting strength of material point that cold does not cause metal to become brittle and that the theory universally held is a popular fallacy. Among the scientists holding these views are Sir Dr. Fairbairn, Kennedy, Wetzer. The British Government Commission appointed and others, but they have availed them all the practical men who have to handle tools in material in zero weather.

It is no superstition that induced a woodchopper to warm his ax before he started in on a frosty morning, and it is the teaching of experience that induces the trackmen to lighten his shovel on his cold days when the temperature is low, and he knows it is not necessary to cut so deeply into the rail to be broken as it would be if the day were warm. Civil engineers, as a rule, have insisted that temperature makes no difference to the resisting power of metals, notwithstanding that the popular voice has always maintained that metals break more readily in cold than in warm weather.

The correctness of the popular belief concerning cast iron getting brittle in cold was vindicated by tests made by a member of the British Institution of Civil Engineers some years ago. A series of drop tests were made on axles kept artificially in a temperature of zero and on other axles of the same kind kept at 100° F. The results were that the axles tested warm exhibited an average of 50 per cent more resistance to the blow than those tested at the lower temperature.—Chicago Tribune.

SIMPLE METAL TESTER.

Effective Apparatus For Determining Degree of Hardness.

The amateur who wishes to discover the hardest piece of metal among a number of samples will find the apparatus illustrated herewith just right for his requirements, writes B. F. Dashiel in the Scientific American. Its quantity a delicate instrument is made for this test. However, for the average amateur's needs the rough instrument here described is sufficiently accurate.

It consists of a light riveting hammer, A, secured to a piece of iron rod, D, about three feet long. A protractor, B, is fastened to a support from which the riveting hammer is suspended. Normally the rod hangs with its edge directly in line with the 90 degree mark of the protractor. The metal to be tested is indicated at C and should be held in a vise so that it just touches the riveting hammer. The hammer is then drawn back 45 degrees by the position indicated by dotted line at E. On being released it falls against the metal C and rebounds. The rod, thus giving the greatest rebound is the hardest.

Steel Belting.

After being abandoned for the last few years endless steel belts are coming into use in Germany. According to Engineering Mechanics, they are very thin steel bands from 0.04 to 0.59 inch thick, and on the other hand they are very broad, from eight to eleven inches. Such bands are made by hot rolling, then a cold drawing of the edges and smooth polishing of the best Swedish steel. The joint is made by the new Ehesser method, using a tongue and groove which revealed to the band in connection with screw joints. It is stated that an adhesive material is applied to the rolling side of the steel belt so as to prevent slipping.

Slag in Cement.

It is reported from Germany that as a result of several official tests Portland cement containing 30 per cent of ground dried blast furnace slag is deemed equal to pure cement. It has been discovered that certain deserts lose all slag with the addition of about 10 per cent of portland cement and a small proportion of gypsum form an excellent cement, and that in sea water particularly its behavior is remarkably satisfactory.

Engines in Sailing Ship.

The most important feature in the construction of the auxiliary cargo ship La Lorraine, recently launched at Bordeaux, is the installation of two 200 horsepower oil motors, each driving an independent screw. These motors will use heavy oil, the low price of which will be of decided advantage, and the owners believe that this equipment will materially shorten each voyage, as the motors will drive the ship at a speed of eight to ten knots when the wind is not favorable.

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, April 27.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

There seems to be no end to perpetuity in the minds of many about Divine Healing nowadays as to whether it passed away with the apostles, or does it still remain. The word of God gives the answer. As traced from James 5 it and in the first reference points in Matt. 9, 37, which in the two cases refers to the sinners. Then, rather in going from Matt. 9, 37, where in the case of sickness, which especially of sin, they heals, and reads in the time to come Isaiah 35, 5, 6, and the inhabitants shall no say I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity, see Jer. 50, 20. In those days and in that time, saith the Lord, they inquire of Israel shall go unto their God and Zion, with their faces thitherward, saying, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten. Jer. 50, 4, 5. Then shall dwell safely in Judah itself and in Jerusalem shall dwell safely. Jer. 23, 6. In those days and at that time will cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David, Isaiah 33 and 6, and then the land of Judah shall be saved and the earth of dread shall be unstopped, verse 6, then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing, for in the wilderness shall waters break out and streams in the desert.

Let us say if Divine healing is still the same as in the days of apostles, faith enough to give unto to the blind and speak to the deed is not the same. I only know of one attempt on this score, viz., the blind girl at McKeesport about a year ago. Those prayers were not answered because it was asked amiss, or before the time. There is a time and a season to every purpose under heaven. A time for Divine healing, pointed out by the Scriptures found in Acts 3, 19 to 21, times of restitution, which God hath spoken by mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. Again in Rev. 21 and 4 and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, neither shall there be any more death neither sorrow nor crying, no more pain for the former things are passed away. In short it seems that every miracle performed in those days pointed to the future, for all that were healed died again, which proves that it was temporary, or, as the few a shadow of good things to come, as in Jer. 31-33-34. And they shall teach more teach every man his neighbors, and every man his brother, saying know the Lord; for they shall know me, from the least of them to the greatest of them saith the Lord; for I shall forgive their iniquities and their sins I remember no more.

CONFIDENCE.

How wonderful is God's free grace,
Which shelters all in Christ's embrace;
Though trials and testing come, forsooth,
Nothing shall move us from the Truth;
Now Creatures, overcoming old,
Exchanging "copper" for the "gold."

As brethren of our heavenly Lord,
Begotten by His holy Word,
And feasting on the frankincense,
Where "smoke" sweet-smelling doth commence

To penetrate beyond the vail—
Baptized in Him we'll never fail!

With pow'r from God we onward move,
Humility and Love to prove,
Before our "change" from this estate
To that we try to emulate.
"Oh, faithful we do wish to be
That shortly we may be with Thee;

Too prone to idle time away,
Oh help us live as in the Day;
From out'r spirit let us be filled
With zeal and courage for the fight,
Oh spur us on with love divine,
Our wills immersed—forever thine!

Bought with a price we're not our own;
By Jesus blood in weakness sown
To rise in immorta lity—
No "evil" or "darkened glass" to see—
Where all is Day—oh, glorious place—
For there we'll see our Savior's face.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS — BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

THE RICH MAN IN HELL.

Luke xvi., 20-26; xvi., 19-31—May 6.

"A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."—Luke xii., 15.

NOT ALL THE POOR shall inherit the Kingdom of God!

We are to notice the setting of the Master's words. It is "And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, "Blessed are ye poor, for yours is the Kingdom of God"—"ye shall be filled"—"your reward is great in heaven."

The second part of our lesson is one of our Lord's most striking parables. We read, "He opened His mouth in parables and dark sayings, that, hearing, they might hear and not understand." Of all our Lord's parables not one has been most seriously misunderstood. It would be unreasonable to suppose that a man would be cast, after death, to torment because he fared sumptuously every day, and wore purple and fine linen. Nothing whatever is said about the character of the man. The Rich Man represented a class.

Similarly, the poor man symbolized a class, because no reason is given for his blessing after death, except that he was poor, covered with sores and lay at the rich man's gate.

The Rich Man represents the Jewish nation. The beautiful table represents the rich promises of the Law and the Prophets. Similarly, the time they symbolically died to those favors. The Rich Man's purple represents the "glory" they were God's typical kingdom.

Hard for a rich man to enter the Kingdom.

The "offal-meal" of the rich man represented the traditions granted the Jewish nation alone. It was a typical justification.

A harvesting of the Jewish people began with our Lord's ministry, and lasted forty years. It ended in A. D. 70, when the Rich Man, as a nation, died at the hands of the Romans. Nationally, the Rich Man is buried, and will be non-existent until the Lord's blessing extends to the Jewish nation as explained in Romans xi. But though nationally dead, the Jewish people have not yet ceased to live ever since, and have been entrenched, tormented and tormented.

Although the nation of the Jews contains representatives of all the tribes, it is specially represented in Judah and Benjamin; hence these two tribes sometimes in the Old Testament are termed, "scattered abroad," proportionately represent the "five brethren." This thought is confirmed by the statement, "They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them." None but Israel had Moses and the Prophets.

Lazarus in Abraham's Bosom.

Lazarus, the poor outcast, who longed for a share of the Rich Man's favor, represented a class. The Gentiles, such as the Centurion, whose servant Jesus healed.

Of the same Lazarus class was the Syro-Phenician woman, who besought Jesus to heal her daughter. Jesus answered, "It is not proper to take the children's bread and give it to dogs"—dogs being a familiar name for the outside nations at that time. The woman answered, "Yea, Lord, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from the children's table." Thereupon to such faith Jesus granted her a crumb from the Divine table.

From the same Lazarus class, sick, covered with sores—because not shares in Israel's yearly sin-atonement sacrifices—will be gathered the promises of God primarily belonged to Israel. They were outside the gate of Divine favor—because not granted favors peculiar to the commonwealth of Israel." The Lazarus class, chiefly Gentiles, had as its nucleus "the outcasts of Israel"—the publicans and sinners.

The parable pictures a great change in this Lazarus class—they died to the conditions where in they were. They ceased to be strangers, aliens and strangers. But Lazarus was not buried; "he was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The angels were the Gentile apostles and ministers of the Gospel. These declared to the Gentiles that previously they were "aliens and foreigners in the commonwealth of Israel." They were now "brought nigh through the blood of Christ," and the beggaring of the Holy Spirit.

Abraham typified God, the Father of the faithful, and the carrying of Lazarus to "Abraham's bosom" symbolically said that the worthy outcasts of Israel and the Gentiles became children of God, children and heirs of Abraham, who typified God.

The Jew in his misery has beheld with jealous eye God's favor toward those he despised. He has even humbled himself to ask that relief might be sent to him through Christian Gentiles, "one drop" of refreshment. But no relief will be afforded until the Messianic Kingdom is established, then Israel dead and living shall obtain mercy through the elect.—Romans xi. 1-33.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THIS COLUMN, OR BY MAIL, IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS PAPER.

Q.—Why is the Bible so hard to understand? Why cannot EVERY ONE capable of reading the printed page comprehend God's Word?

Answer.—The Bible was not written for the unbeliever, nor was it written in such a manner that the world could comprehend its meanings. In order to read behind the Bible we must have the attitude of pupils to Christ, and must be taught of him. The Bible is like a telescope: it is not until we find that you see the outside of it, its pictured and joints. It is for sufficient that we even look through the telescope. Many have looked into a telescope merely across its shining barrel without seeing out at the other end at all. Even when we look through the telescope properly and out at the other end, still we must have it properly adjusted so that we may obtain the best results of the glass or else it is entirely useless to it is with the Bible: as we draw nigh to God, he draws nigh to us, and the more we are exalted to a precious more and more the deep things of the Word. But only the saintly life of the regenerate can understand and appreciate the breadth and length and depth and height, and to know the love of Christ.—Ephesians iii. 18. He who passeth knowledge, but which is revealed in the Holy Scriptures. St. Paul declares that the lack of spiritual understanding, saying, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Until God has revealed them unto his church, the consecrated, by his spirit. (1 Corinthians ii. 14, 10). Even the deep things of God are understood known by our acquiring more of the spirit of God, the spirit of the Truth, the spirit of the Word.

Q.—Would you kindly explain the 25th and 26th verses of Matthew xxiii., where the Lord said "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and killest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a bird gathereth her brood under her wing, but ye would not! "Behold your house is left unto you desolate?" (R. W. F.)

Answer.—The Savior standing upon the Mt. of Olives and gazing out upon the Holy City, Jerusalem, gave expression to these words with a heart filled with conflicting emotions. For three and one-half years He had been laying down His life for the Jewish people in preaching to them the wonderful things of the Kingdom of God. He had healed the sick, comforted the sorrowing and the afflicted, and even raised the dead in some instances. Now, on this sad day, after having ridden into the city in triumph, and being rejected by the nation, through their representatives, the Scribes and Pharisees; in sorrow and with tears, He declared that they as a nation were cast off from Divine favor and no longer recognized as the chosen people of God, but were true to the declaration of the Lord are the facts of history as outlined in the secular annals of the time. Jerusalem that moment they declared in favor, and disaster after disaster came upon them until the nation was overthrown by the Holy City was conquered by the Roman army, and they as a people were scattered abroad throughout the whole earth to be persecuted, oppressed, and slaughtered by the Gentiles. The Jew is the miracle of history. The man without a country." The Lord Jesus, in prophetic vision, foresaw all the long centuries of afflictions that would come upon them, and in His sympathy and love, He grieved for them, and gave expression to His love by saying "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a bird gathers her brood under her wings, but ye would not!"—Corrected Translation.

Q.—Is always had a sneaking idea that sentences in the subterranean depths of my make-up there was an immortal germ or something which could never be extinguished, and when this tabernacle that I am inhabiting returns into its original elements this what-ever-it-may-be will pass into the spirit world, of course, and remain in the realms of boundless space. Now, what I'd like to know is: aint there a few souls that prove my theory true is correct? I aint never been able to find it myself, although my grandpappy said as how it was there. (Z. E. D.)

Answer.—The Bible does speak of the place where "their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched." (Isaiah lxvi. 24.) This place however, has reference to the Valley of Gehenna, where the refuse of the city of Jerusalem was cast. In this valley fire also burned, and worms were always continually. The bodies of dead animals, and criminals who had been executed, were sometimes thrown into this place. These would frequently lodge upon the rocks and would be consumed by worms, which were undying until the carcases were consumed. Thus the Prophet was forcefully picturing the absolute destruction of the wicked, and was in no sense picturing their preservation. As there is to be a resurrection of the dead, it follows that there must be something that is preserved when death takes place. This "whatever-it-may-be" is the character or the identity, which, in the awakening, will be endowed with a new body suited with life. See 1 Corinthians, 15th chapter. Scientists and Bible students have never discovered any "immortal worms."

Q.—What is an angel? We are told by our ministers that if we go to church and pay our pew rent and never do nothing real bad that some day we will be an angel and go to heaven when we die. Now I want to know what angels are like. Did they all live as man and woman upon the earth before they became angels, and how did they become angels before there were any churches and their regular collections? Were there ever a chosser way of getting to be an angel than never? (A. U. D.)

Answer.—The popular conception of angels is that they are radiant beings dressed in white with wings attached to their shoulders. Many have been invariably represented as women, and are supposed to spend the larger part of their time in beautiful open fields and fragrant parks. In the Bible, angels are referred to as spirit beings, who are the messengers of the Lord. We know of no Scriptures in which it is stated that human beings will ever become angels, but, on the contrary, the Lord has promised earthly blessings to all of the world of mankind, who will be obedient to His righteous laws of justice and love, when His Kingdom is established in the earth. Salvation will be free to all who will accept it upon the terms and conditions of full obedience to the Divine will. Matthew vi. 10.

Q.—I am the financial secretary of a church and, as such, I have the responsibility of raising funds for the various expenses of our regular church work. We must confess that it is a strained part the compass of my wits to know how to get any more money out of our members than we are doing at the present time. The difficulty with us is that our membership is increasing every month. We have some high-priced singers in our choir and must continue to raise their salaries, or else they will leave us. We must have a new organ and keep up with the other churches all around us or lose our membership. Kindly suggest some up-to-date methods of getting the money. We have tried suppers, and socables, and fairs, and grab-bags, and the latest organization seems to be a little tired of these methods; as pleas give us some new ideas? (PERPLEXED.)

Answer.—There are two methods by which the regular church may be made a success. One of these is to popularize the church membership by transforming the church into a "social" institution, by elaborate musical programs with fifty brief sermons for the regular services, and all other times, theatricals, socables, balls, and entertainments. The other method is to adopt the one used by the Lord Jesus and His Apostles.

Q.—In Genesis i., 16, 17, we read—"and the Lord God commanded the man saying * * * but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." In Genesis iii., 4, 5, we read as follows—"And the Serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened; and ye shall be as Gods, knowing good and evil." My question is: which of these statements are we to regard as true? (R. L. D.)

Answer.—The Apostle says that God cannot lie, and one of the earliest writers of the Scriptures declared that "God is not a man that He should lie." (Numbers xxiii., 19.) Satan is the liar, the Lord, on the contrary, is speaking of Satan, the Serpent, said—"He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh of a lie he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar and the father of it." (John viii. 44.) In view of these plain declarations of the Scriptures, it would be advisable to accept the Lord's Word on the subject of death being the penalty for disobedience. Accordingly, our only reliance is the Word of God, all agree that the dead are dead; and not alive, as Satan and his lie tenders would have us believe. See Romans iii. 4.

Q.—In II Peter ii. 4, Revised Version, we read "For if God spared not the angels when they sinned, but cast them down to hell, and committed them to pits of darkness to be reserved unto judgment." What is the meaning of the word "hell" or as the marginal reading gives it "TARTARUS," which is the Greek word translated "hell?" (C. V. S.)

Answer.—The translators of the Revised Version of the Scriptures erred when they placed in the marginal readings the word tartarus," for that is not the word contained in the original Greek manuscripts. The word tartarus, used by Peter, very closely resembles tartare, a word used in Grecian mythology as the name for a dark abyss or prison. But the word tartarus seems to refer in some to an act than to a place. The fall of the angels who sinned was from honor and dignity, into dishonor and condemnation; and the thought seems to be—"God spared not the angels who sinned, but degraded them, and delivered them into chains of darkness." This is the only place in the Scriptures where this word tartarus occurs, and refers to the condition of the fallen angels or evil spirits, and not to the members of the human race in any sense or particular. See Jude 8, where it also reads, "the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, He hath reserved in age-lasting chains, under darkness, unto the judgment day."

British Labor Movement Marching Steadily Ahead--Discontent Amongst Coal Miners With Regard to the New Minimum Wage Act--Scottish Trade Unions in Convention--The Olympic Firemen and Sailors' Strike.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, April 26.—Labor topics are very numerous just now and all the signs point to a very strong stirring up amongst our trade unions. Amalgamations of unions and federations are proposed more and more and the sympathetic strike secures much and more adherents. The coal miners are now all back at work but it cannot be said when one looks at all the facts of the case that they have secured a great victory. The district boards arranged for by the minimum wage act are beginning to meet. The proceedings of the first one that has so far sat are very instructive. Both sides held separate preliminary meetings with the object of preparing evidence. The miners, very rightly, adhered to their original schedule; the masters made counter proposals. The case contended that under the terms of the minimum wages act the average wages should be considered; the masters argue that regard shall be had to the "daily rate of wages paid." The meeting adjourned without agreement having been found on any single point.

This is the beginning of the working of the great act of settlement; this is a sample of what the miners have gained! This scene will recur whenever the men's representatives are determined and united—the miners will claim the schedule rates, the master will refuse them. Where they are not determined, the masters will have it all their own way.

And the casting vote is with the chairman. How is the chairman appointed? By agreement between the men and the owners, or failing that, by the Board of Trade. What sort of chairman will the masters agree to? Your correspondent is afraid that there is not much doubt about the way the Board of Trade nominee will use that casting vote.

In the next case possible, with a really neutral chairman the deliberations of the board will drag out and drag out interminably. This is the employers' game. In the worst cases the miners' representatives will find themselves in an everrating minority—passive witnesses of the proceedings of a board of employers engaged in fixing the wages of their men.

A large number of miners are coming to the conclusion that they have been tricked by the politicians and that the wages boards will do nothing or they will do harm. The minimum act is a device for partying and controlling them. Every recent Government measure dealing with labor has been an attempt to control labor. Whether or no the wages boards are controllable enough to be at once destroyed we must wait and see. If they are all as fut le as was the meeting at Cardiff miners can afford to laugh at them and go on organizing and agitating outside for the schedule and nothing but the schedule. They have likely to be dangerous, why, then the miners must clear them out of the way.

One help that the labor movement has in this country now that it never had before is the Daily Herald," which is the first labor daily paper ever issued in Great Britain. It is a twelve page paper and is sold for one cent (1d). It must not be confounded with the Daily Citizen, which is due to appear next autumn and which will be the official organ of the Parliamentary Labor party. The Daily Herald stands primarily for trade unionism and offers an independent support to the Labor party in Parliament which is somewhat different from the object of the Daily Citizen.

The sixteenth annual Scottish Trade Unions Congress was opened on April 24 in Glasgow. David Palmer, Aberdeen, chairman of the Parliamentary Bills Committee, presided and there was an attendance of 145 delegates (including a number of ladies) representing over 700,000 trade unionists.

Robert Smillie, president of the Scottish Miners' Federation, said they, like many other miners' leaders, did not agree that all had been gained by the miners at the time when the Prime Minister gave a pledge of reception of the principle of the minimum wage. They admitted the principle and do nothing to bring it about and to trans ate it into pounds shillings and pence were different things. To some extent the miners failed. It would be out of place for him to go into the cause of that failure that day, but he looked forward very hopefully to the future. The fact that Parliament had been brought to legislate even on the principle of the minimum of any body of workers justified them in believing the time would come when the Government would find it necessary to act and not only the principle but recognition of the amount of a minimum wage to the other trades in the country.

There is a growing tendency on the part of a British trade organizations having mutual interest to combine, the movement in the ranks of the railway workers being a notable example. The British building trade workers are, as already reported, also moving to strengthen their forces from a retraining point of view. Whether a national movement to improve the conditions of all classes of workers in the industry will be entered upon if the amalgamation proposals should be attained remains to be seen. Mr. Carpenters and Joiners' society is at present concerning itself solely with an effort to secure increased wages for its own members. The carpenters' and joiners' General Secretary Chandler, has stated that satisfactory progress in this direction is being made by the carpenters and joiners. "In Manchester," he said, "the employers made an offer which our men did not think quite good enough and they have responded by making a revised offer on which the men are going to ballot. In London, where the men are asking for a considerable advance in wages, where the employers are quite reasonable disposed, and the question will, I think, be settled without difficulty. In the country generally we may have one or two little disputes, but the employers as a whole are meeting us fairly and I certainly do not at present anticipate any widespread trouble. The recent coal strike will probably have far-reaching effects on the franchise unless the Government pro-

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BILL PASSED.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The workmen's compensation bill was passed in the Senate today 61 to 15, substantially as framed by the Employers' Liability Commission and amended only to increase its benefits. The measure, sharply fought by some of the Democrats for several days, now goes to the House. A number of amendments were offered, but only a few were accepted and those were the acquiescence of Senator Sutherland, in charge of the bill.

The principal changes made during three hours of roll calls, provided that compensation for accidental injury and death of railroad employes shall continue to children until they are 18 years old, and would extend payment in the case of daughters until they are 20, unless sooner married.

In general, the bill would provide an exclusive remedy and compensation for accidental injury or death to employes of railroads in interstate commerce or the District of Columbia on the theory of insuring each employe against results of injury in employment without reference to contributory negligence or any of the rules of common law limiting employers' liability. It would provide medical service for the injured and means for money recovery proportioned to the pay of the victim. It is the outcome of a long investigation by the commission and was strongly urged by President Taft.

In the long debate which preceded passage of the bill many senators took part and there were spirited passages.

RETAILERS' ACTION ON COST OF LIVING.

MANY American cities are establishing city markets in an effort to do away with the ordinary retailer and middleman by bringing producers and consumer face to face. It means very largely that the consumer pays cash and delivers to himself what he buys and there is undoubtedly possibility of a reduction in the cost of living thereby.

But to meet this movement retailers at several points in the far west particularly are revolutionizing their business by going into a cash basis, doing away with their delivery rigs and lowering their prices. They claim that with such heavy drags as bad accounts and delivery expense cut out, they can sell at much lower prices and still reach the old profits. It is very likely that this experiment of the retailers will tend to reduce the high cost of living in many instances. The credit system and the telephone have had a whole lot to do with increasing household bills. Many a housewife gets things she could dispense with if she did not have credit at the store, and it is so easy to run to the telephone and order things that one would get along without if one had to go after them and then carry them home.

On the other hand, the merchant who consults the convenience of customers by letting them have a reasonable credit and who delivers goods instead of asking women to tote market baskets is performing a considerable public service which thousands of families, not of extravagant habits, appreciate so highly that they will give him their patronage. The western retailers who are going in for spot cash and mode-levery are therefore going to reduce prices for some of the principle of the minimum wage. They admit the principle and do nothing to bring it about and to trans ate it into pounds shillings and pence were different things. To some extent the miners failed. It would be out of place for him to go into the cause of that failure that day, but he looked forward very hopefully to the future. The fact that Parliament had been brought to legislate even on the principle of the minimum of any body of workers justified them in believing the time would come when the Government would find it necessary to act and not only the principle but recognition of the amount of a minimum wage to the other trades in the country.

THE HEALTH GUARDIAN OF THE PORT OF NEW YORK.

GREAT responsibility attaches to the position of health officer of the port of New York, since it is the duty of that official to protect not only the city, but the country at large, against the entrance of persons suffering from contagious diseases, especially such as cholera, plague and trachoma. His principal care, of course, is to see that only healthy individuals among the hundreds of thousands of immigrants shall be admitted to the United States. The present incumbent, recently appointed by Governor Dix to succeed Dr. Alvah H. Doty, is Dr. Joseph J. O'Connell of Brooklyn. At the time of his appointment he was an alienist in the Kings County hospital and the visiting examiner of the psychopathic ward. He has been connected with the health service of Brooklyn and Greater New York for fifteen years.

BOOM IN WORKINGMEN'S COMPENSATION LAWS.

THE Democratic-Republican platform's pledge of a liberal workingmen's compensation law is one which the new party leaders should not have made if they were not fully prepared to redeem it. Workingmen's compensation is a subject which is occupying a large share of the public attention. It can not be easily dismissed, especially in view of the fact that the organization which has just been dispossessed by the Roosevelt tidal wave had gone so far as to appoint a commission to prepare a bill to be taken up at the legislature's next session. That commission contains representatives of both capital and labor, one of the labor members being Francis Feehan, president of the United Mine Workers of the Pittsburgh district. England, of course, has set a pace in legislation of this sort which the United States will be a long time in catching up with. But enough states have already enacted workmen's compensation laws to make it unconfortable for the politic bosses of the states which refuse or dodge action.

A review of what has been accomplished in the last ten or even five years, is highly significant. Liberal compensation law went into effect day before yesterday. During the last year ten states have put compensation or industrial insurance laws on their books. These are, besides Illinois, California, Kansas, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey and Wisconsin (compensation laws), and Ohio, Washington and Massachusetts (insurance laws.)

Besides all this, the following states have appointed commissions to study the subject: Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Iowa, Michigan, North Dakota, Texas, West Virginia, and, as above stated, Pennsylvania. The old common law practice which put upon a workingman from recovering for injuries where a fellow servant (all kinds of bosses being gradually labled by the courts as fellow servants) contributed to the mishap by negligence, will soon have very little left of it. The enlightened conscience of the age is against it, and the laws of the land, also, will soon be against it.

THE RAILROAD WAGE ARBITRATION.

WITH the selection of P. H. Morrissey by the board of chairmen of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers as their representative on the board of arbitration which is to decide whether the eight hours shall receive a wage advance or not, all danger of a great railroad strike which would paralyze transportation and industry in the larger part of the country disappears. The railroad managers have not yet announced the name of their representative, but the general expectation is that it will be Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio.

After the railroad representative has been designated, it will be in order for him and Mr. Morrissey to select the five neutral arbitrators who will complete the board of seven. According to the agreement, if the two first-appointed arbitrators cannot agree on all or any of their five associates within fifteen days after their own first meeting for the purpose, the board's membership is to be completed through appointment by the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, the presiding judge of the Commerce Court, and the commissioner of labor, acting together. The second and third of these referees, Judges Knapp and Commissioner Neill, are the government mediators under the Erdman act, who, last week, by their personal intervention, averted the railway strike. The majority decisions of the board of arbitration, as thus constituted, are to be binding on both parties to the wage dispute for the period of one year, and thereafter subject to thirty days' notice.

The principle of conciliation, and of friendly reference of matters in dispute to impartial outsiders who will be guided only by a sense of justice and a desire to conserve the paramount interest of the public, is one whose maintenance is greatly to be desired. The engineers' brotherhood and the railroad companies both deserve, and will receive, the heartiest public commendation for agreeing to a settlement in this manner instead of by the mutually hurtful method of strike and lockout. It is safe to predict that the decision of the arbitrators will be more satisfactory than any settlement which would have resulted from an appeal to violence. And not only the workers and the companies, but the general public, will be, instead of out of, pocket.

ARIZONA ADOPTS RECALL

WASHINGTON, May 6.—A bill providing for the recall of the judiciary has passed both houses of the Arizona Legislature with but two dissenting votes in the Senate, and has been signed by the governor. This is in accordance with the wishes of the people of that state, and is the provision that Arizona had to consent to strike out of its constitution before President Taft would sign the bill admitting it to statehood, although it was known at the time that the action would be hypocritical, and that exactly what has happened would happen.

REQUIRE TWO OPERATORS

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The Senate has passed a bill requiring two or more wireless operators on every ocean-going vessel carrying the people, whether passengers or crew, an operator to be on duty at all times, and further requiring that the wireless apparatus be capable of transmitting and receiving messages from a radius of at east 100 miles. The bill was passed without discussion or a dissenting vote, and is to go into effect on July 1, 1912.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Decision of Jurisdiction Dispute in Steamfitters' Case--Parcels Post Project Makes Progress--Anti-Gas Provision Added by House to Postoffice Bill--Bill for Three-Cent and Half-Cent Pieces Introduced Into Senate.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—At the St. Louis convention of the American Federation of Labor the report submitted by the executive council recommended, after giving a brief history of the jurisdiction dispute between the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters Helpers and the International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers, "That the pipe fitting trade should be represented in the A. F. of L., also in the Building Trade Department, by one general association of the pipe fitting industry—the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada. Bowas further recommended "that the executive council of the A. F. of L. be instructed and the executive council of the Building Trades Department be requested to carry this into effect." The Atlanta convention adopted the report. Following the convention conferences were held between the representatives of the organizations involved, with a view to securing amalgamation and putting into effect the action of the convention, but the International Association refused to accept the terms of amalgamation. The executive council refused to accept unless the amalgamation is agreed to by April 1, 1912, no payment of per capita tax or of any other character shall be received from the International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers, and that the American Federation of Labor will on and after May 1, 1912, recognize no one organization of the pipe fitting industry, that being the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada." A circular letter has just been issued, in substance stating "there is now but one organization of the pipe fitting industry recognized by the American Federation of Labor and its departments, namely the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada, and all international and national unions, a state federations and city central bodies, and all organized labor of America are, in the interest of the workers in the pipe fitting industry, the wage earners of the country and for a well ordered, and imposed discipline in our movement, requested and urged to aid by every means within their power to carry into effect the decision of the American labor movement in this case."

By vote of 42 to 36 the Senate has refused to recede from its amendment to the Post Office appropriation bill for the direct election of Senators. The Senate conferees failed to reach an agreement and recorded the difference between the House and the Senate, and so reported to the Senate. Thereupon, by the decisive vote above mentioned, the Senate maintains its position. The amendment was proposed by the Senate retains the right of Congress to exercise a supervisory power over the time, manner and place of holding election of Senators, whereas the House resolution, as passed, gives this power to the states. It is though that the House will recede from its position and accept the Senate amendment.

As stated in last week's letter, Chairman Wilson of the House Labor Committee formally reported an injunction limitation bill to the House. Following that, the Judiciary committee of the House favorably reported another injunction limitation bill. This latter bill contains provisions which prevent the issuance of injunctions, either temporary or permanent, without serious notice to the parties to be enjoined, and without a hearing, except in certain cases. It also forbids blanket injunction. It is expected that a minority report will be filed by the Republican members of the Judiciary committee on this latter bill.

The House has adopted a provision in the postoffice appropriation bill which will prevent the imposition of the "gazette" on employes in the posts service. The vote on this provision was 132 in favor and 1 against, the Republican minority leader, Mr. Mann, recording his vote in the negative. The provision will secure to the employes of the government their rights as citizens under the constitution and prohibit the promulgation of any executive order denying the right of postal employes of the government to appeal before committees in Congress or engage in other activities in securing increase in wages, shortening of hours, or redress of grievances. The American Federation of Labor is directly responsible for the insertion of this provision in the bill, and the postal employes, as well as all other employes of the government, if this provision is accepted by the Senate, will be possessed in their right to form labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. It is probable that the Senate will accept this provision in the bill, and as it is an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill, the president will have no powerless to eliminate the provision except by vetoing the entire bill.

A provision in the postoffice appropriation bill provides for a limited parcels post service, principally on rural routes. It restricts the delivery of packages in such routes, but allows delivery from one route to another where the two routes center in the same postoffice. The rate agreed to is 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound up to 11 pounds, the latter the maximum weight that can be carried, and a general parcels post service of 12 cents a pound for 11 pounds is also provided. The rural route parcels post has been adopted as an experiment and a provision is incorporated in the bill to appoint a committee of three Representatives and three Senators to study all the bills that have been presented on the subject and present a report to the next session of Congress.

The special committee appointed by the American Federation of Labor on industrial education will meet in Washington during the coming se-

PROBE OF U. S. STEEL IS BEGUN.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The inner history of the Steel trust, including its absorption of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company, and the great ore deposits of the lake regions, will be laid up to the light in connection with the public hearings begun today in the disso ution suit brought against it by the government.

When Henry T. Brown, the examiner appointed by the federal court to take testimony, opened his hearings today in the customs house, it was believed certain that a great deal of sensational testimony would result. Not alone the giant trust, but all of its 36 subsidiary companies, are on trial.

The government asks that each be dissolved. Named individually in the action are also J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, his son, John D. Jr.,

Andrew Carnegie, Charles M. Schwab, George W. Perkins, E. H. Perkins, Henry Prick, Charles Steele, James Gayley, William H. Moore, A. H. Moore, E. C. Converse, Percival Roberts, Jr., Daniel G. Reid, Norman B. Ream, P. A. B. Widener and William Palmer.

It was believed that the hearings here would last more than two months and that the testimony to be taken would exceed that taken in either the Standard Oil or Tobacco trust cases, although it was the intention of the government to prevent the dilatory tactics that spread those litigations over a great length of time.

The steel trust is bitterly fighting the action. It was represented today by a dozen high-priced attorneys and every effort will be made to justify the existence of the giant corpora-

Pastor Russell's Sermon

KEY OF KNOWLEDGE LOST BY PHARISEES.

Modern Application of Jesus' Words by Pastor Russell — The Lord's Blessings Hidden—As the Jewish Expounders of the Law Refused to Instruct the Common People, So Do Our Modern Doctors of Divinity— Failure of the Scribes and Pharisees to Endorse Jesus Barred His Message to the Multitude, Who Trusted the Scriptures.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 5.—The Academy of Music was crowded to hear Pastor Russell's discourses on the "The Lost Key of Knowledge." Taking his text from Luke 11: 52, he said:

In the New Testament the word lawyer has a very different meaning from our general usage. It applied to those religious teachers of the Jews who made special professions of sanctity of heart and earnest desire to know God's will as expressed in the Mosaic Law, and to teach the same to the people. The corresponding class of today are designated Doctors of Divinity. For text therefore, with this correction reads, "Woe unto you, Doctors of Divinity, for ye have taken away the Key of Knowledge; you entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering ye hindered."

"THE COMMON PEOPLE HEARD JESUS GLADLY."

It was the custom amongst the Jews that lessons from the Law and the Prophets should be read every day in their synagogues. The people were thus familiar with the letter of the Divine Law and promises. The majority of them, of course, were illiterate, for educational facilities were not what they are now. As a result only a few calmed to have an understanding of the spiritual part of the Law and the Prophets. These were chiefly of the literary and wealthy classes. To these the common people looked for guidance respecting the Divine will and plan.

As an illustration. When the common people heard Jesus gladly they were unwilling to trust their own judgments, but inquired, "Have any of the Scribes and Pharisees believed on Him?" Have the Doctors of the Law, the Doctors of Divinity, endorsed Him They have made a study of these things and we would rely more upon their judgment than upon our own. But none of the Scribes and Pharisees endorsed Him, and hence comparatively few of the people believed Him and became His disciples.

The common people were hungry for the Message which Jesus brought. It is recorded that they said of Jesus' teachings, "Never man spake like this Man." The nation would have come over promptly to Jesus had the Scribes and Pharisees, the Doctors of the Law, set the example and given the word. Moreover, the teachings of Jesus harmonized the message of the Law and the Prophets over which the Scribes and the Pharisees and the Sadducees had long wrangled and disputed. Had the Doctors of the Law been as hungry for the Truth as were the people, undoubtedly all of their differences of interpretation would have speedily been solved in the light of the then present Truth and knowledge of God, which was shining upon the Bible through the Holy Spirit, Jesus and the Apostles being Jehovah's mouthpieces.

"THE KEY OF KNOWLEDGE BURIED."

In our text Jesus charged the Jewish Doctors of Divinity with the responsibility of having taken away the Key of Knowledge, refusing to use it themselves to enter into the great appreciation of the blessings then due, and hiding it from the common people who trusted them so implicitly. We charge that the same thing is true today. Not only were the Jewish people typical of spiritual Israel, and their Age typical of this Age, and their Harvest typical of the Harvest or closing time of this Age, but additionally, now as then, God's people perish for lack of knowledge." (Hosea iv. 6.) Now, as then, the Doctors of Divinity will not use the Key of Knowledge themselves, to enter heartily into the wonderful privileges and blessings now due, and additionally they have buried the Key of Knowledge, hiding it from the people under a mass of forms and ceremonies.

BUT IS KNOWLEDGE NECESSARY?

In our Lord's day the Jewish Doctors of Divinity, or Rabbis, contented themselves with telling the people what they should do and what they should not do, but they did not teach the people—they did not help them to any understanding of the deep meaning of the Law and the Prophets. In our text Jesus said to the "D. D.'s," "You bind heavy burdens on the people, grievous to be borne," but you do not attempt to carry those burdens yourselves.

It is so to this day with the Jewish Rabbis, as well as with other Ministers, for instance, a sinister shade as a representative and mouthpiece of the church creed, which in roundabout terms declares that whoever does not live a saintly life will suffer an eternity of torment. Is not this a grievous burden to put upon any conscientious soul? Has it not caused infidelity's anguish to many of God's dear people? And has it not repulsed and driven many from God and the Bible, thousands of the most intelligent minds in the world?

But the patients may not sleep, or just as in a nursery noise is excluded that children may sleep."

Alas! it is too true that the nominal church of Christ is like a hospital, many of whose patients are blind and deaf and asleep and mentally confused. But the trouble is: These got into this condition because of a lack of healthful exercise, and keeping them quiet will but turn the present hospital into a Cemetery.

What the churches of all the denominations need is the Word of God —as presented in the words of Jesus and the Apostles: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." The sin-sick and lame, the blind and deaf and mentally afflicted need to hear the voice of Truth—"Wonderful Words of Life"— otherwise they will become more sick and will perish as Christians, but to become alive is perhaps not their pleasure more than lovers of God."

An Episcopal minister in our hearing urged his congregation to simply rest, not to bother themselves about their creeds, future or quite ours. The Holy Catholic Church, he said, resembled a ship, in which the members should come as passengers to be carried to the heavenly destination. They need not examine the compass, nor the chart, nor the machinery. All they need to do is to sit down and enjoy the journey, trusting that their baptism and the Holy Spirit have given them a free ticket to a proper destination.

NECESSITY FOR KNOWLEDGE.

Knowledge of God, the Bible declares, is indispensable for the attainment of the Great Prize of the High Calling. Thus Jesus said, "This is life eternal, that they may know Thee, the Only True God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." (John xvii. 3.) We are not to understand this to signify that anyone who has merely been made acquainted with the fact that there is one Creator, and that Jesus is His Son, is on account of this knowledge to be granted everlasting life. Some think to be able to make void the various Scriptures which tell us of the necessity of making our "calling and election sure," by running as to obtain the prize. (I Corinthians ix. 24.)

Our Lord's words do not refer to a knowledge about God, but to a knowledge of or personal acquaintance with God and His Son. And such an intimate acquaintance is not obtained merely by an introduction, but by companionship; it signifies an intimacy of acquaintanceship, a familiarity. Everything in the Divine Word encourages those who accept the Divine invitation to draw near to God, to come into fellowship with Him.

But this knowledge of God which will bring a saintly few to salvation on the highest plane stands related to God's Word—the teachings of the Bible—for thus God exalted His Word, by making it the channel for spiritual refreshment and personal acquaintanceship with Himself.

Thus Jesus prayed for us, His followers, "Sanctify them through Thy Truth, Thy Word is Truth." Those who neglect the Divine Word will fail of the sanctifying power and thus fail of the ultimate acquaintanceship with God which alone will guarantee everlasting life. The reason why the Lord has thus arranged the matter and made knowledge of the Scriptures essential; doubtless is that those His faithful people may be benefitted, as they alone receive the instruction which will profit them alone, but would more or less injure others. Thus it is written, "Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free."

As the Jewish Doctors of Divinity carried no such burdens, neither do the Doctors of Divinity of Christendom. In private they acknowledge that they carry no such burdens. In public they carry the inference that they do—not so much by positive terms as by implication, tone and inflection of voice, and by the general fact that they stand for and as representatives of the creeds which to teach. It does not cause them substantial embers for them to claim that in their official capacity they lose their personal responsibility and shift it upon those who made the creeds and those who subscribed them. The people are no longer trusting the creeds. They realize that the creeds contain many inconsistencies, and that greater light is today shining upon the page of the Bible upon another, than shone in the days when those creeds were formulated.

The common people trust the Bible —Jesus, the Apostles and the Prophets. They know that all the creeds of Christendom claim to be built upon the Inspired Record. They understand the Scribes and Pharisees Doctors of Divinity of Christendom, to give assurances that these creeds properly present the teachings of the Bible. The creeds claim they would become ropes of sand if all the prominent Doctors of Divinity of Christendom came forward and publicly renounced them, as they nearly all do in private conversation. It is this matter of misleading the people, deceiving them, that constituted the basis of Jesus' charge against the Doctors of Divinity of old, and we believe that His Judgment is applicable to the Doctors of Divinity of Christendom—"Ye have taken away (ye have hidden) the Key of Knowledge. Ye have not entered in yourselves, and them that were entering ye perhaps."

Christian people today are so disgusted with the creeds which have separated them and their forefathers into six hundred different denominations that the future is quite safe in the hands of

ACETYLENE FOG HORN.

Produces Sound by Means of Explosions of Gas and Air.

A patent has been issued to Gustaf Dalen of Sweden, by the Dominion of Canada, says the Scientific American, which covers the production of sound of a given tone by means of a series of explosions of acetylene and air. A rotating disk containing little pockets on its periphery, which are exposed at one point to the air and at another to a jet of acetylene, and which brings the mixture to an electric spark in front of the aperture of a flue or horn, causing a series of explosions, the rapidity of which is based upon the speed at which the disk is rotated. Therefore 600 explosions of acetylene per second are easily within reach, the tone produced by these series of explosions depending upon a prearranged calculation as to the rapidity of rotation.

Dalen is the inventor of the sun valve for the acetylene buoy, by means of which the light of day extinguishes the flame and darkness ignites it, and the object of the present invention is to place on the buoy a fog horn which will give warning at all times when a fog arises.

A problem yet to be solved, however, appears to be how to control the operation of the disk so that it will only run when needed. Although the consumption of acetylene is very small, some of the buoys are in such exposed conditions that they cannot be visited except at long intervals. A record of fifteen months' continuous service without attention has already been obtained. The gas capacity of acetylene buoys is necessarily limited, hence some method must be devised to limit the consumption of gas for the production of sound. It has been proposed by Dalen, and the problem is now on the way to solution, thereby, to utilize the tuning fork for this purpose. Vessels coming frequently to the same port might be equipped with wireless, which could be attuned to the note of the tuning fork, and when approaching a dangerous coast in the fog strike, as is the regular custom, blow the fog whistle. On approaching the buoy the tuning fork would be set in vibration and respond to its note, thereby releasing the disk, which would remain in action as long as the vibration continued. Allowing for a reasonable distance, the whistle of the vessel would reverse as the buoy and the sound from the buoy would come back to the vessel in the form of an echo or answer, thus giving the necessary warning. The consumption of acetylene, being limited to these short periods, would scarcely be appreciable.

Making Use of Tree Stumps.

The stumps of the Norway pine left on the fields years ago in the trail of the woodsman are now being turned to account by many establishments in Michigan and Wisconsin. These stumps are rich in turpentine and resin, and the process utilized is one of destructive distillation, which is quite simple and interesting owing principally to the great variety of material which is secured from this refuse of the fields. The stumps are cut into lengths and loaded on cars, when they are conveyed to the yard in a retort. The heat drives out the moisture and all that opens up the fiber of the wood. The wood now consists of fuel, loosened by the resin, then turpentine, succeeded by a mixture of tar and turpentine, and finally the flow consists of pure tar. The average yield is twenty-six gallons of turpentine and fifty-seven gallons of tar from a cord of wood weighing about 3,333 pounds. The residue consists of forty bushels of soft charcoal. From this raw material there are obtained the following products: Sheep dip, tree spray and disinfectant; shingle stain; wood filler; embalming fluid, furniture polish, face lotion, paint and pigments.

Ants Eat Through Lead Cables.

White ants are causing much trouble in South Australia in telephone routes and also in the underground electric light lines. On the lead sheathed telephone cables grazes between the conduits began to occur. Upon withdrawing some of this cable from the ducts it was found that the ants had eaten through the lead in many places. On the Sidney system of electric lighting the ants ate through the bitumen compound and then through the lead and high tension insulation next to the wire. To stop the ravages which will turn an enormous expense if not checked, arsenious oxide mixed with bitumen, a sort of pitch, is being applied to the cables. Carbon bisulphide is also being tried, with the idea that the odor will drive the ants away.

A Bonus For Inventors.

Seven thousand five hundred dollars has been subscribed by a number of gentlemen connected with the rubber industry and is to be offered to the inventor or inventors who can suggest the best method of making rubber nonslipping for pavements, roads, etc., or for any use to which it may be put in all atmospheres and for all kinds of traffic. The idea is to divide the sum into three prizes. An important point is that the inventor or inventors will have absolute right in the invention, the patent being conveyed free to the successful competitor or competitors.

Success is not in an endeavor to do a great thing, but in repeated endeavors to do greater things.—Cope.

TRENCHING MACHINE.

Motor Driven Asphalt Cutter Performs Work of Many Men.

A motor driven trenching machine capable of cutting out in one day from 600 to 1,200 linear feet of asphalt and concrete pavement preparatory to the sinking of ditches for sewer and water pipes of considerable size has recently been demonstrated in the streets of Washington. It is claimed that the machine, which can be operated at the cost of about $15 per day, can accomplish more cutting in that time than forty-five to sixty laborers armed with picks and crowbars.

This trenching machine is constructed almost entirely of steel and resembles a huge road roller. It is operated by a forty horsepower gasoline motor fly wheel of a series of gears the power is transmitted to the tractor wheels, is also connected with a vertical shaft which carries a series of cutting knives, which are forced down by a screw device. The knives are operated at a speed of about 1,000 revolutions per minute, and are pressed down against the pavement with great force, thus penetrating any thickness of the edge of the asphalt outside of the trench and inserting a clean cut. The knives can be operated in a sidling or diagonal manner, and with which they lift the asphalt can be varied from 250 to 2,500 pounds. Three blades in the series are only required to cut the asphalt. The peculiar construction of the knives causes the asphalt to be swayed up in the center and entirely loosened from the concrete base.

ASPHALT CUTTING MACHINE.

The cutting of the pavement is done in two operations. The machine first cuts away the asphalt surface. This is accomplished at the rate of from five to seven feet per minute. After the broken asphalt has been removed the machine then passes over the ground a second time and cuts away the concrete foundation or base.

During the second operation a heavy hammer is brought into play, which crushes the concrete into rubble, so that it can be used again when the trench is resurfaced. The cutting of the concrete is a slower operation, yet from three to five feet can be cut per minute.—Popular Mechanics.

Deadening the Noise.

Experiments have recently been carried out in Germany with the object of deadening machinery and thereby rendering walls and ceilings capable of effective resistance to sound transmission. One of the more recently devised methods involves the use under the ceiling, of parallel to the wall, as the case may be, of a network of wire stretched tightly by means of pulleys secured into adjacent walls and not touching at any point the surface to be protected against sound. Upon the wire network is plastered a composition consisting of strong plaster of paris and granulated cork so as to make a flat slab, between which and the wall or ceiling is a cushion of confined air. The method described is said to be good in two respects—first, the absence of contact between the protected and protected surfaces, and secondly, the colloid nature of the composition recommended for the plaster.

A Whitewash Mixture.

Write says that a beautiful, clear white coating with a whitewash made up as follows: One teacupful of salt, one teacupful of lime, and two cupfuls of powdered blue vitriol are separately dissolved in hot water and then added to one gallon of water stirred well. Stir the parts together thoroughly. This will make a whitewash that will not rub or rest off.

The vitriol gives a bright, clear color if a yellow tint is desired, use green vitriol instead of blue. The vitriol is the more expensive part, but when it dries on the wall it will be a nice yellow.

The New York Barge Canal.

State Engineer John A. Bensel recently reported that the barge canal will be ready for use in 1915. The first section of the canal to be operated will be the Champlain canal, eighty-one miles long. This will be opened in 1914. It will provide for transportation of ore from Port Henry to New York harbor. The boats to be used on this canal will be 207 feet long and have a thirty foot beam. They will draw twelve feet of water.

Appreciations

We have been requested by many of our readers to republish the following:

A WORD FOR ELDER RUSSELL.

(W. S. Gadcoup, Pastor Christian Church, Bloomington, Ill.)

I have read a number of articles in the Christian Standard during the past few months concerning Millennial Dawnism as taught by Elder Russell. We have all heard the criticism of the Pilgrim Fathers, how, having left their own country and endured all sorts of hardships for the sake of religious freedom, they themselves became the worst of bigots and persecutors of those who later disagreed with them. The treatment accorded Elder Russell by the disciples of Christ is very similar to the actions of those early fathers. Since reading Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures," the first and fifth volumes more than once I have read all the articles and tracts against his teachings I could find. In not a single instance does the writer reply in the same Christian spirit which characterizes Russell's writings. In some instances the writer resorted to the only weapon left in the mind of an ungenerous critician. Others either willingly misrepresent his teachings or do not know what he does teach. As a rule they do not touch upon the real subject matter of his work, but attack some minor subject that Russell himself would not hold as a matter of faith but as being of a more or less speculative character.

To my mind, Elder Russell presents the most Scriptural, clear and satisfying conception of the person of Jesus I have ever heard or read. The same is true of man, his creation, his experience with sin, God's plan for his redemption, the gospel of Jesus Christ, and man's future destiny. Now if any good brother feels that Elder Russell's books are doing the church or Christ harm, let him read his books (all six studies) carefully, prayerfully, once or a dozen times if he need be, until he knows he has the authors thought, challenging every doctrine though until it is proven by the open Book, then just as carefully, prayerfully and with the Christian spirit shown by Elder Russell, let him take up his task, and in a logical, Scriptural way, step by step show his brethren that the teaching of Elder Russell is incorrect. Then will he have something worth while. But so long as Elder Russell is attacked in the present manner, no one who has read his "Studies" will be convinced of the error therein if error there be. Let no brother deceive himself into thinking that he can successfully answer Russell's six volumes of "Scriptural Studies" in a few articles in the Christian Standard or even in a tract, such as Haldeman's and others.

One thing Elder Russell's books will do if carefully read by an earnest, thoughtful Christian he will read and study his Bible more and more, he will lose his interest in worldly things. It will not be necessary to preach to him that he could not go to the theater, play cards or dance, for he will have no desire to do those things as well as many other things in which most Christian people indulge. It will not be necessary to solicit money from him for the Lord's work—it will be forthcoming without solicitation. It would seem that, until some brother is able to present the gospel and provide "meat in due season" that does this work as well as Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures," it might be well to look inward for the beam, not outward for the mote and let his "Studies" continue to do that which most preachers admit they are not able to accomplish. Give Elder Russell a square deal.—Pastor, Ill., Daily Record.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We write to tell you how much we love the Tribune, especially Elder Russell's Sermons, Sunday School Lessons and Bible Questions, they are so soul-satisfying. You are doing a great deal to spread the Good Tidings of Great Joy which shall be for those be unto all people, and dear editor, we realize we will be blessed for anything we do whether great or small, for the Lord. He is so wise and loving and he always blesses us more than we can ask or think. May the Lord continually bless you as you continue this work of spreading the good gift in the Tribune.

Yours for the Tribune,
MR. AND MRS. DAN CALDWALDER.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to renew my subscription. How we appreciate the Tribune. Glad to note that you are giving more and more space to the blessed Truth in your valuable paper which is such a welcome visitor in our home and which I feel we cannot do without and it is with joy and gratitude that I again renew my subscription. May the Lord reward you in due time.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. LIZZIE MARWOOD.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Again I wish to express my thanks to you for giving us a good clear type in your most excellent paper, and it contains the most logical reason on religious principles than any other papers that I perused. Elder Russell's every interesting because it confirms the great Apostle's testimonies concerning same. I like the Bible Study and Question Box, because I get so much opportunity and a privilege to ask some of the dark questions concerning the great mystery hid from agree and generation, but now made plain unto His saints. Please explain Isaih xi: 6. Does it refer to the Catholic system? What then should Lord it over God's heritage? Please explain fully. Wishing you success in same. I remain,

Yours sincerely,
GEORGE K. KAPOOHY.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

In response to your solicitation for the Tribune, I can not refrain from giving my testimony in regard to the excellent make-up of your entire paper. To me it is second only to the Watch Tower and the light on the Scripture that is being shed abroad by the publication of Pastor Russell's Sermons and his other expositions on the Scripture is unbounded. Indeed the work far exceeds any nominal Christian missionary movement ever thought of. The Sermon, Question Box and Sunday School Lessons are bringing truth and comfort to the anhearted, cheering the sorrowful and light to those who are seeking Truth and showing from the Bible the only hope for the world's salvation.

The Lord's blessing rest on the work of the National Labor Tribune.

Yours in Truth,
S. A. SUMMERS.

LOVING OUR NEIGHBORS.

Luke vi, 27-38; Romans xiii, 8-10—May 12.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

TODAY'S STUDY is from St. Luke's record of the Sermon on the Mount. It does not profess to be a regulation for the world, but applies to saints—to those who have consecrated their lives fully to follow in the footsteps of Jesus—to suffer with Him that they may also reign with Him. Even these may not be able to live up to every feature of the Master's instructions, because of weakness in their fallen flesh. We must take the Master's words addressed to the faithful as representing the full, perfect standard. It is for each disciple to recognize this supreme standard and to gauge his thoughts and words and doings thereby.

As for others than God's people, He does not speak to them at all, except to tell them that they are sinners under the sentence of death, but that He has made provision for their reconciliation through the merit of the blood of the cross, and that whereby they become disciples of Christ or not under the call to it. Evidently, however, unless they accept the Apostle's testimonies concerning same, I like the Bible Study and Question Box, because I get so much opportunity and a privilege to ask some of the dark questions concerning the great mystery hid from agree and generation, but now made plain unto His saints. Please explain Isaih xi: 6. Does it refer to the Catholic system? What then should Lord it over God's heritage? Please explain fully. Wishing you success in same. I remain,

"He smites, did so relative

The next statement is more comprehensively given by St. Matthew. "If any man sue thee at the law and take away thy coat, let him have your cloak also." The follower of Jesus may flee from an adversary, or he may resist him to the extent of the opposition of his holy spirit, through the Word of Truth, concerning the deep and profound questions of the Divine purpose. It is related of our Lord Jesus, that in all of His teachings He addressed the multitudes in parables and dark sayings, and then afterwards explained them to His disciples. (Mark iv, 11, 33, 34.) The Parable of "The Rich Man and the Poor Man" is a remarkable prophecy of conditions relating to the Jews and the Gentiles, and, we believe, could have been stated in no other way without disclosing the realities, which, it was evidently intended by the Lord, should remain disguised or concealed from the world in general, and whose real significance would be known only by His devoted followers. The entire book of Revelation is composed of prophecies thus concealed in signs, symbols and figures.

Q.—Was Adam "born in sin and shapen in iniquity" as stated in the Scriptures of all of Adam's posterity? —Psalm li, 5. (A. N. D.)

Answer—Strictly speaking, Adam was not born; he was created of the dust of the ground. Science confirms this statement, for the chemical of the elements contained in the human body are found in the earth. Man was a direct creation; and not a product of evolution as some deluded scientists maintain. When God formed man at the early elements He pronounced him "very good;" and the Scriptures elsewhere declare that all of God's works are perfect. (Deuteronomy xxxii, 4.) As a perfect man it was optional with Adam as to whether he would obey the Lord or not. The very fact that Adam had the power of choosing between the good and the evil proves that he had not been created a mere machine but that he was a free moral agent and hence in the image of God as the Scriptures affirm. If Adam had been imperfect, of a sinful nature, degraded and evil as the race is to-day, the Lord would never have placed him on trial, as he would have been condemned already without the need of a test. As the result of Adam's disobedience, he passed under the sentence of death and involved all of his posterity in the same sentence. Deliverance from that time to the present the race has journeyed over the downward way leading to destruction. Death reigns as all will admit. The race is to be delivered from death at the second coming of Christ as the Apostle says "For He must reign until He has placed all enemies under His feet; even death the last enemy shall be destroyed." "And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."—I Corinthians xv, 26; Revelation xxi, 4.

Q.—I God is a God of love as the Bible tells us, how can we understand His command to the Children of Israel to utterly destroy their enemies, man, woman and children? (E. A.)

Answer—Four hundred years ago North America was a vast wilderness inhabited by roving bands of savages who warred with one another and practiced all kinds of infanticide. Today, in place of the scattered tribes of murderous Indians there are millions of civilized and enlightened people who are engaged in developing the higher and nobler qualities of mind and heart and cultivating the arts and sciences and the various branches of industry. Which of these two arrangements is the best? Was the Lord unjust in moving in over ruling the affairs of earth so that the Indians should practically be destroyed root and branch in order to make way for civilization? We think not. The same conditions prevailed in the land of Canaan. The Philistines, Amorites, etc., who occupied the land were practically savages, as they engaged in all forms of abhorrent worship, offering up human sacrifices in connection therewith. If were because their wickedness and depravity had reached to such a stage that God, in His wisdom and justice, saw that it would be best to destroy them and to place in the land a people, who, under His instructions, attained to a high degree of civilization. When the Jews were about to enter the land the Lord established a system of laws with them with the assurance that if they obeyed the Law they would be marvelously blest, and if disobedient they would be severely punished.

Q.—Conceding that "Dives and Lazarus" is a parable illustrating the Jews' and the Gentiles' position of favor and disfavor during this Christian age, the question arises concerning the figure itself: (a) Is it not a well-known fact that our Lord used every day occurrences and things to make up the various figures and "Dark sayings?" (Barley, grain, seed, sower, harvest, reaper, stewards, etc.) (b) Then why did Lazarus die to be carried to Abraham's bosom; why must the "Rich Man" be alive in torment when he is CAST OUT into "outer darkness" of "gnashing of teeth," why did the "Rich Man" remember his "five brothers?" Lastly, if the Lord knew of such a place; why did He picture Dives in the hell of Hades (Sheol)—even for the sake of a figure? (T. G.)

Answer—The Scriptures were written and arranged in such a way by the Lord, through the inspired writers, that they could not be understood except by those who would come into harmony with Him by faith and obedience. The Lord is pleased to enlighten His children by the operation of His holy spirit, through the Word of Truth, concerning the deep and profound mysteries of His Divine purposes. It is related of our Lord Jesus, that in all of His teachings He addressed the multitudes in parables and dark sayings, and then afterwards explained them to His disciples. (Mark iv, 11, 33, 34.) The Parable of "The Rich Man and the Poor Man" is a remarkable prophecy of conditions relating to the Jews and the Gentiles, and, we believe, could have been stated in no other way without disclosing the realities, which, it was evidently intended by the Lord, should remain disguised or concealed from the world in general, and whose real significance would be known only by His devoted followers. # EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THIS COLUMN, OR BY MAIL, IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS PUBLICATION.

Q.—I have heard good devout Christian brethren praying to the Lord and pleading, during revival services, that sinners might be saved, and that the sinners might not have rest day nor night until they gave their hearts to the Lord. Also they prayed that God would stir up a great revival amongst the people, and that sinners would be saved from an awful hell. But I find that these brethren's prayers have not been answered as only a few are converted, and of these the most of them go back into the world again. Are these brethren praying right or wrong? You know it says "Ask and I will give." (G. G.)

Answer—The Lord Jesus and His Apostles never prayed for the conversion of sinners and they never authorized any one to do so. In that notable prayer of the Lord Jesus to the Heavenly Father as given in the 17th chapter of the Gospel of St. John, the Lord said: "I pray for them: I pray not for the world, (sinners) but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine." Here we see that the prayer was for the Apostles, and in the 20th verse of this chapter, He prayed for those who would believe on Him through their word, and ignored "sinners" completely. The reason why some good Christian brethren have not had their requests answered is because they have asked amiss. See James iv, 3.

Q.—Here is a Scripture that is confusing. If you can explain it I will be much thankful. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."—I Corinthians xv, 22. What is the meaning of the latter part?

Answer—The correct translation of this text is thus: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall they be made alive" Adam by disobedience brought death upon himself, and all his children being then in his loins all inherited death. The redemption price for Adam and all his race has been provided through the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. In due time Christ will offer to Adam and all his children, all the blessings of life everlasting. This offer will come to the world in the reverse order, however, from that in which it has been withheld being last. All after coming to a knowledge of the truth concerning the redemption in Christ, receive and accept Christ and obey him will be made alive. Accepting Christ and obeying Him will secure for that all such will be Abraham's children, and those accepting it upon the terms offered will come up to full and perfect life.

Q.—Can you tell me where I can find it stated in the Bible that the Lord was forty days old when He was presented in the temple as the Heavenly Father by His parents? Is this the basis for the custom observed by some of the sects of forty days old the Lord?

Answer—As narrated in the second chapter of Luke, verses 21-23, the mother of Jesus, in conformity with the Law which had been given to the children of Israel through Moses, presented Him in consecration to the Heavenly Father. (See Exodus xiii, 12, 13.) This consecration could not take place until the time of the mother's purification had been fulfilled, which, according to the Law, (Leviticus xii, 1-4) would require forty days. All of the first-born of the children of Israel were regarded as belonging unto the Lord, and to redeem these from sacrificial service the Law required that a sacrifice should be offered, either a lamb, or two doves, and these must be sacrificed. (Exodus xxxiv, 19, 20.) We believe that it was this Jewish custom that is largely responsible for the consecration services observed by some of the sects at forty days old.

Q.—Revelation xxii, 17 says: "The Spirit and the bride say, Come." Has this Scripture been fulfilled, and if not, when will it be?

Answer—This will be fulfilled in the future for the following reasons: There is no "Bride" now. Jesus during the Gospel age has been preparing a place for the Bride as he declared, (John xiv, 2-4.) The union of the Bride and the Bridegroom takes place at the second coming of our Lord. (Revelation xix, 6-8.) During the Gospel Age the consecrated members of the Bride class have the Lord's spirit in them. Each true follower of Jesus is by "spirit or water" springing up unto everlasting life." (John iv, 14.) Bye and bye when these well-springs are all brought together and united with our Lord, then the Bride and the Bridegroom will constitute the great "river of life," or "water of life" which shall flow out from the throne of God and which shall bless and heal all the nations of the earth, in harmony with the promise which God made to Abraham saying, "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Then all who will, may come, and take of this "water of life" freely. The water of life means the message of truth setting forth the means of blessing. All who will accept may have its blessings, but those who do not accept and render obedience to the Lord shall not receive a blessing.

Great Strike of London Tailors and Tailoresses Indicates Further Spread of Minimum Wage Movement--Colliers Discussing Wage Questions With the Owners but No Decision Yet--May-Day Labor Demonstration.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, May 7.—The industrial unrest which has been noted as an increasing factor in the labor movement in this country during the last few weeks has now begun a sudden and dramatic spread to the tailoring trades. The result is at the time of writing ten thousand London tailors and tailoresses are on strike, practically all the leading West End and financial district firms being seriously affected. The tailoring trade in this country has been a difficult one to organize, but still has had its substantially strong unions for many years. The Amalgamated Society of Tailors is the organization at the top of the bill and second in strength appears to come the London Society of Tailors and Tailoresses. The master tailors are also well organized in an employers' association under the title of the Master Tailors' Association.

Briefly the demands of the strikers are that the employers shall provide proper workshop accommodations for doing work in; shall revise the process governing piece work; and shall increase the rate of daily wages where they are paid. Very much of the high class tailoring in London is given to what are known as out workers, that is tailors working at home. It is alleged that this often necessitates the clothing being perpared under unsanitary and improper conditions or that it entails charges upon the men for shop rent.

In the spring of last year there was a strike upon this special question and the workers assert that although the employers then agreed to provide adequate workshop accommodation they have not complied with their bargain. In the case of weekly employees a minimum wage of $15 per week for 47 hours is asked while the tailoresses are prepared to agree to a grading system according to skill in three divisions with a minimum weekly wage in each case of $8.50, $6.50 and $5.50. With regard to piece workers a general revision of what are called log prices is demanded. The present schedule is calculated according to certain time limits for the production of certain garments. According to the schedule this would give the piece worker 12½ cents per hour but it is said that some of many of the duties connected with making a garment being carried out in much shorter time by the men than is allowed for in the log the latters often earn double the log hour wage in the 60 minutes and it is said to be generally accepted that a log hour rate of 15 cents is equal to an actual wage of 24-25 cents. Some idea of the kind of revision demanded by the piece work tailors may be gathered from a comparison between the prevailing log established in 1891 and the one that is proposed to be established now. According to the earlier log the time allowed for making the frockcoat is 22¾ hours. The men suggest that this time shall be increased to 27 hours. For making a morning coat the old log allowed 26 hours; the tailors now demand 30¾ hours. Trans ated into money, most of these alterations would res ly mean that the fall or would be entitled as increase of 4 cents per hour, or more properly speaking, 4 cents per log hour.

London tailors are a very polyglot body. Most of their union proceedings and papers are published in English, French and German and that has made the task of effective trade union organization difficult. Despite this, however, the fighting feeling was very strong and by the attack upon the non-unionists were also coming out with the unionists. It is rumored that unless the trouble be settled very soon as many as 50,000 men and women may be out on strike in a week's time.

All over the country upon the various coalfields the district boards are now sitting in accordance with the provisions of the Minimum Wage Act to decide what shall be the actual minimum wage paid in each separate district. It is doubtful whether any very friendly agreements will be arrived at between the employers and the men but the first decision is expected about May 9. Upon that date Lord Mersey, who is the independent chairman for the Northumberland board, has declared that he will announce the minimum wage for Northumberland. Then we shall be able to judge whether the miners' strike in England has been a victory or whether it was merely the prelude to another and even more gigantic conflict.

Three interesting bills have been introduced into the House of Commons by labor members this week. James O'Grady is fathering a bill to amend the Allens Act of 1905 with the intention of trying it to prevent bringing blacklegs from abroad into the United Kingdom to take the place of British workmen during a trade dis-

TARIFF BILLS IN SUSPENSION.

THE announcement of the House leaders at Washington that Congress will be kept in session through the summer reveals a well-formed purpose on their part to pass all of the pending tariff bills. It will mean a fight between House and Senate which is likely to prove both bitter and protracted.

The House passed the Steel Tariff bill on January 29. It was referred the next day in the Senate to the Committee on Finance and did not emerge until April 5, when the Finance Committee the majority of whose members are Republicans reported it adverse'y. The bill revising the chemical schedule passed the House on February 21, was referred next day to the same Senate Committee and has not since been heard from. The bill levying an excise tax on individual business incomes, "placing some part of the federal tax burden on wea th," passed the House on March 19, was referred next day to the same Senate Committee, which still has it.

Other bills in possession of the Senate Finance Committee are the wool bill and the bill abolishing the duties on sugar. The wool bill is opposed by large agricultural interests, just as the steel bill is opposed by virtually all the independent steel industries of the country, which insist that the reductions it makes in duties would be a deadly blow to them and would therefore help the trust, which can club down wages where smaller industries could not. As for the free sugar bill, it is advocated by the Democratic leaders as a bi l in the interest of the consumer, whereas the truth is the trust would charge the consumer as much as ever and simply pocket the $40,000,000 a year which it is now obliged to pay the government in duties.

The bills are as a whole political in motive and misleading in text. They represent no fair and honest or non-partisan effort to adjust the tariff to legitimate and moderate protective requirements. Excepting the wool bill, they are not based on expert investigation or competitive production data here and abroad. They are framed solely to stir up prejudice, embarrass President Taft, and make Democratic votes. That is the use to which this action depends on their ability to deceive the public. They cannot become law for Mr. Taft will certainly veto them, believing them to be hypocritical, flimsy campaign capitalists which it would be his duty to prevent from being imposed upon the country. The Senate will therefore be justified in refusing to pass them. The Finance Committee ought to make an adverse report on every one of them. The country wants no tariff laws framed on the eve of a Presidential election.

FEDERATION AFTER CONGRESS.

ADVICES from Washington agree that the American Federation of Labor has become impatient at the non-action of Congress on promised labor legislation and has begun to bring pressure upon Representatives and Senators alike, so that certain pending bi's may be passed before the session closes. Particularly, the Federation wants the Clayton contempt and anti-injunction bi l put through, as well as the Bartlett bill, exempting labor organizations from the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust act. To urge the cause, President Gompers, Secretary Morrison, and others of the Federation appeared before the House Committee on Rules last Friday and asked the committee to bring the Bartlett bill before the House under the special rule which would require a vote without a limited number of hours.

"All these bi ls," declared Mr. Gompers "must be considered by the House. We'l take our chances in the House, not only at the hands of the Democrats, but at the hands of the Republicans."

It was pointed out that the Bartlett bill, or a measure embodying its principle, had passed the House and the Senate separately several times, but never had its passed both bodies. Mr. Gompers, who described himself as one of the few living witnesses of the passage of the Sherman act, testified that he had been assured by Senators George and Hoar at the time that by no means could the courts interpret the Sherman law as applying to labor organizations.

Mr. George and Mr. Hoar probably did not foresee the length to which federal judges would go in their efforts to cripple or kill labor organizations. The measures Mr. Gompers and his associates are insisting upon are not only just but are necessary for labor's protection. Every member of both Houses should be forced to go squarely on record.

GOVERNOR WILSON AS A "PURE FOOD" CANDIDATE.

GOVERNOR WILSON'S candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination has been generally considered without reference to the choice of a running mate, but it has recently been suggested that the combination "Wilson and Wiley" would make an excellent ticket—a pure food label, as it were. Those who favor the reeping of the two names have other arguments than the "apt alliteration." They point to the governor's advocacy of legislation against infectious diseases and the smoke nuisance and of improved factory, tenement and employers' liability laws and assert that he and Dr. Wiley would carry on a formidable campaign on a platform with a strong conservation of human resources plank.

IRON AND TIN PLATE WORKERS' CONVENTION

The annual convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Plate Workers is still in session at Chicago. President Williams in his annual report declares the general impression that the organization is losing members is incorrect. Mr. Williams says there has been a gain.

The report of Vice President Jones and also of Vice President Walter Larkin of the Sheet and Tin division and Martins Ferry, were decidedly optimistic from the association's stand point. Vice President Ben F. Jones of the Rolling and Finishing divisions carried debate by requesting the adoption of a system for organizing the different manufacturing districts of Canada. From a statement made by Jones, who has been on a recruiting tour, the Canadian workmen as far north as Nova Scotia he considers ready for the movement, and the field there most fertile as the present time for organized labor.

In spite of the hopeful tone of the official reports it is significant that at least 40 lodges in different sections of the country that have been in the past represented at the national convention failed to have delegates on hand in the present convention to answer for their charters. They sent communications saying that owing to lack of funds, because of the long shut down of mills in their district, they would be unable to send delegates, but would acquiesce in the arrangement of the wage scale and amendments to the constitution of the organization as adopted by this convention.

The convention will, as usua, not pub ic its action on the scale question but it is admitted that on take in wages will be demanded.

The convention committees are: Iron Wage—Edward Knight, Joseph Grandidier, George Wilber, P. J. Gallard, Frank Doherty, John X. Thomas, Peter Kehll, R. Louisen, William J. Williams, John Fitzpatrick, John T. Jones, George Beadle. Tonnage—W. Craig, W. S. Collier, Roland E. Layer, John F. Conroy, Edgar Fell, Edward Sandlin, Louis Leonard, Joseph Larkin, John Williams, chairman; M. F. Tighe, secretary.

Constitution and General Laws—John Ridd, chairman; George Wilber, secretary; John Fitzpatrick, Daniel Costello, William A. Howard, Jerry J. Hatcher, Edward Knight, Andrew Quinlan, Frank Doherty, William J. Williams, George Price, John X. Thomas, Raymond Reed.

Ways, Means and Appropriations—Frank Donahson, chairman; R. G. Bowers, secretary; John Clifford, Peter Kohll, Charles Sim l ington, Thomas O. Jones, John Osborne, P. J. Gainard, John F. Conroy, Thomas P. Jones, Hugh Ward.

TRADE MOVEMENTS OF CARPENTERS

INDIANAPOLIS, May 11.—The local union of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters at St. Catherines, Ont., Canada, gained an increase in wages from 37½ cents to 40 cents per hour and an increase of 2½ cents per hour for foremen, without strike. The local union at Sheboygan, Wis., gained an increase of 2 cents per hour, making the minimum wage for carpenters in that city 45 cents per hour. At Joliet, Ill., the outside carpenters have gained an increase of 5 cents per hour with a present wage scale of 55 cents after a three days' strike. The mill men in the same city have just reached an agreement providing for an increase from 37½ to 25 cents per hour, and an increase of 2½ cents per hour for all men receiving over 25 cents to 30 cents inclusive. They also gained a reduction in hours from 10 to 9. These conditions were granted as a result of a strike lasting a month and a l men are now back to work.

URGES INCREASE FOR TEACHERS

WASHINGTON, May 11. — The United States Bureau of Education is about to issue a pamphlet in which an urgent plea is made for an increase in the salaries now being paid instructors in pub ic institutions of learning. The report deals with the years 1909-1910 inclusive, and calls attention to the fact that although the salaries of male instructors were increased 38 per cent in that time and the salaries of female teachers 27 per cent, the average wage is about $550 per year, or less than $10 a week. The commissioner of education maintains that it is impossible to procure competent teachers at such menial wages. In most of the states less than 10 per cent of the teachers have had the advantage of university training.

New Carmen Lodges

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 14.—The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen has just organized two new lodges and taken over one which formerly was affiliated with the International Association of Car Workers, on account of that organization's non-affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and is located in the city of Chicago. The other two lodges organized are located at Windsor, Ont., Canada, and Portal, N. D. The International organization has also sent out during the past week nearly $5,000 to assist carmen that are on strike on the Harriman lines, Illinois Central and M. K. & T.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Printers' Representative in Congress Makes Brilliant Speech Attacking the Injunction Evil--Public Health and Marine Hospital Service to Urge Improvement of Conditions in Mines. Constitutional Amendment for Election of Federal Judges--Eight-Hour Day for Postal Clerks.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Congressman Isaac R. Sherwood of Ohio, a member of the International Typographical Union, recently made a brilliant and illuminating speech in the House. The House had resolved itself into a committee on the state of the union, having under consideration the bill making appropriations for the legislative, executive and judicial expenses of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913. The subject of the address was "Judicial Tyranny and the Remedy." It was one of the clearest expositions of the usurpations of the judiciary ever delivered in the House, and marshaled an array of questionable decisions handed down by the courts that was appalling. During a portion of the speech the congressman referred to the contempt case against President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, and scathingly arraigned Justice Wright for the part he played in the contempt case. This speech appeared in the Congressional Record of Friday, May 3, and is well worth perusal.

A constitutional amendment which provides for the election of federal judges, has been proposed in the House by Representative Neely of Kansas. The resolution would limit the tenure of office of district judges to six years and provides for their selection by the regularly qualified voters of the district. Its provisions do not change the existing and constitutional method of electing the judges of the superior federal courts.

The director of the Bureau of Mines has entered into an arrangement with the public health and marine hospital service whereby one or more surgeons will carry on safety work relative to the improvement of mine conditions. Casual inquiries and investigations have shown the prevalence of tuberculosis and other diseases. The investigation to be made will place the bureau in a position to advise the most efficient methods of preventing diseases peculiar to this industry and also suggest such precautions in the conduct of mines that will reduce to a minimum the danger of the contracting of disease.

In the consideration in the House of the postoffice appropriation bill a section was adopted which reads as follows: "That on and after July 1, next, following the passage of this act, letter carriers in the city delivery service and clerks in first and second-class postoffices can be required to work in excess of eight hours a day, and for such additional services they shall be paid extra in proportion to their salaries, as fixed by law; that should the needs of the service require the employment on Sunday of letter carriers in the city delivery service and clerks in first and second-class postoffice the employee who are required and ordered to perform Sunday work shall be allowed compensatory time on one of the six days following the Sunday on which they perform such service."

During the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill an amendment was offered and adopted providing that all periodical publications issued as frequently as four times a year, and conducted under the auspices of trade unions and other specified societies, shall be admitted to the mails as second-class matter. The qualifications provided are that the association or issuing such publications shall have a bona fide membership of not less than 1,000 persons, and shall be limited to copies mailed to members, exchanges and bona fide subscribers, together with 10 per cent of such circulation in addition as sample copies. These periodical publications may be allowed to carry advertising matter, but they must not be designed or published primarily for advertising purposes, and shall be distributed and published to further the objects and purposes of such trade unions or societies publishing same.

New Sheet Metal Workers' Unions

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 12.—The Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers International Alliance has recently chartered unions at Saskatoon, Canada, Lincoln, Neb., Emporia, Kan., Jacksonville, Fla., Bar Harbor, Me., and Princeton, W. Va. The sheet metal workers of Chicago have renewed their agreement with the employers covering a period of three years, during which time a series of 2½ cents to 20 cents inclusive. They also gained a reduction in hours from 10 to 9. These conditions were granted as a result of a strike lasting a month and a l men are now back to work.

TROUBLE FEARED IN ANTHRACITE.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., May 13.—Authorities at Minersville are greatly alarmed over the enormous sale of firearms and ammunition during the last two days, as some of the dealers have practically sold out. Naturalized foreigners, it is said, are buying the weapons and distributing them.

The death of Michael Mullarge, who was shot through the body, has had the effect of stirring the foreigners. David Davis, believed to be mortal y wounded, is still living, but his condition is said to be hopeless. Captain Wilhelm of the state police says he will use force to stop the sale of firearms unless martial law is declared, and the situation does not warrant such action. It is feared by some that an attempt may be made to lead the state troops into ambuscade along some of the mountains roads, and that the foreigners have armed for that purpose.

Although Mullarge was a stranger in Minersville, arrangements are being made by the foreign element to hold a demonstration when he is buried.

There is no serious rioting in the coal field today. Some women and boys marched to two washeries with the intention of driving the employes from their work, but were persuaded by union officials to return to their homes.

Several hundred company hands who had been doing repair work were sent home by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company officials at Shamokin today with instructions to remain away from the mines until the coal suspension ends.

Lehigh Valley Coal and Iron police dispersed miners' pickets near two collieries in the neighborhood of Mt. Carmel and Centralia. They arrested, after a sharp fight, a foreigner for throwing stones at engine No. 7. The train was not derailed.

Owing to unsettled labor conditions in the coal region special policemen and track walkers have been distributed along the Reading railway.

Bridge and Structural Ironworkers

INDIANAPOLIS, May 11.—The following local unions of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers received the following increase on May 1, 1912: Local No. 15, Philadelphia, Pa., received an increase from 50¢ per hour to 60 cents per hour. Local No. 6, Syracuse, N. Y., received an increase in wages from 50¢ cents to 60 cents per hour. Local No. 1, Chicago, Ill., with a membership of 6,000 secured an increase in wages from 66 cents per hour to 68 cents per hour, the agreement to run for three years.

SUMMER HATS ARE BEAUTIFIED WITH PLUMES IN SHADED COLORS.

PLUMES are among the popular trimmings for summer hats, particularly for those of the picture type. Willow plumes are most often used, and on hats with turned up brims they are generally arranged to fall over the side. Shaded feathers are much worn, and the plumes are made to wave as carelessly as possible, an art which marks the expert. Dark red and bright cerise are two favorite combinations in shaded feathers

TWO PLUME TRIMMED HATS

The new red called primrose is very effective. Many hats show the plumes wound around the crown, while in other cases they are made to surmount it. The sleepladder hat, with the tall plume standing straight up, is affected by women who go in for extreme modes. The wide rimmed picture hat shows here with drooping side plume is of linard green straw, with the plume in white. The other hat is of dull blue milan straw, with plumes in shades of blue and gray. Gray satin lines the brim, and gray velvet ribbon rests like a frill on top of the brim.

BABY'S CLOTHES.

The Dainty Touches Seen on Garments For the Tots.

Hand embroidery is being lavished on children's clothes.

Mercerized rep in white and color is used in children's clothes.

The tiny new bonnet boxes are almost as cute as the new bonnets.

Rosettes for caps have a cluster of tiny satin bows in the center of quilted ribbon.

It is a little more dainty to keep a girl under four all in white, but after that a touch of color is quite resplendent.

Baby baskets have handles. A dainty one is done in net over blue with blue ribbons and tiny pink chiffon bows.

Little white frocks smocked in blue or rose have turnover collars on which a scroll design or separate rings are stitched.

Many little bonnets are in Quaker form with turn back drys. They are hand embroidered and are inset with frill lace.

Pique strap slippers are embroidered and are usually handsewed. They are ironed flat, and this makes a crease down the center of the toe.

Shantung silk is seen on the newest small frocks. They lose forget-me-nots are done on batiste in it, and usually there is a touch of pink somewhere in the makeup.

PRETTY OUTING BONNET:

Modish Headgear of Straw Braid For the Fair Motorist.

This pretty bonnet of straw is the newest thing in headwear for the automobilist. It may be made of linen woven straw braid and lined with satin. Bows and strings of satin ribbon are its only ornaments.

MOTORIST'S BONNET.

Pretty Negligee.

A convenient dressing sack is made of a square of fine outing flannel or other material.

The "sleeves" are formed by tying a point together about six inches from the point itself. Another point forms the neck, while the last point is cut in a circle in the center to form a place for the neck. The whole is edged with pretty lace and tied under the cloth with fancy ribbon.

WHEN THE SCHOOL DAYS ARE OVER

Charming Little Entertainments For Her Chums a Girl's Favorite Way of Celebrating the Release From Lessons.

THE schoolgirl and her social affairs are a matter of interest as the commencement season approaches. School friendships are often lasting, and out of them grow some of the most helpful influences of life.

The mother who takes an interest in her daughter's affairs can show to these friends many thoughtful courtesies.

Spring luncheon parties are charming, for the advantage at that time in the way of flowers for decorations is obvious. If the affair can be given late enough to use roses so much the better, for a pink scheme is always lovely and is one that never fails to appeal to the girlish taste.

The luncheon served should be a simple one. Girls like plenty of sweets, and the favors should be as pretty as possible, though they ought not to be expensive. Bonbons in pretty boxes, baskets, any dainty fancy work which may serve as a remembrance of school days, are suitable for the commencement farewell luncheon.

Bonbon boxes, which make charming luncheon souvenirs because of their unique shape, fill the uses to which they may afterward be put, are miniatures of water buckets in hand pierced tree bark, curved to allow for the interlacing of the lined edges, equipped with handles. They are lined with moss green satin and make convenient receptacles for finger rings.

Of braided straw there are small turbans trimmed with flowers made of silk and lines and in metallined pasteboard representations of clocks, mandolins, guitars and violins, which are just what is needed for holding sets of fancy toilet pins.

Ideal receptacles for gloves and veils are the large sized bonbon boxes of gold watered white silk, edged with gold cord and of glace paper painted on the sides with a crocus design. Crape paper tulips decorate the tops of these boxes, which have hinged lids. Satin linings and practical key equipped locks.

French fruit bonbon baskets, which come in quilted satin lined willow with daisy and blue topped white satin ribbon bisques cud tied together lids, may be used for sewing utensils or embroidery flosses, and the shallow low circular baskets of fancifully woven splints, color striped and with conical lids fastening with bisqs, are useful for cards and invitations.

Also of French design are the silk covered round bonbon baskets having an upper side wreathed with tiny flowers and foliage of silk and velvet and a padded somber lid, which make a dainty pincushion for the desk or the dressing table.

Among the more practical boxes are some of heavy silk representing an ear of corn, the kernel covered portion holding the sweets and the flat end forming a lid which opens with a tiny spring, miniature log cabins of wicker which fit over wood colored lower sections of stiff paper and grass covered oblong boxes with tops representing white canvas wall tents decorated with a union jack.

Pretty china, immaculate linen and shining glass will make a table attractive. A cluster of flowers in a vase is ample to beautify it to suit the schoolgirl's taste. Music, and that of the kind the young girls enjoy, will be enough to promote their enjoyment of the after luncheon hour. Accessories may be handsome, but they should not be overelegate or costly.

The afternoon tea, lawn party and picnic are all ways of affording the girl graduate a chance of saying a formal farewell to school days and of celebrating this event with her chums.

Relieving Bad Sores.

To treat bed sores successfully, as soon as redness or numbness of the surface appears in a spot subjected to pressure, apply hot fomentations for half an hour twice daily; afterwards apply alcohol, then rub the parts thoroughly with tannine or olive oil.

THE OUTDOOR GIRL MUST BE SMART

Unbecoming and Slovenly Garments Are No Longer Tolerated by the Woman Who Golfs or Rides or Plays Tennis.

NOW is the time the athletic girl's thoughts turn lightly to thoughts of mother outing garb.

Never before has the interest in outdoor sports been so great, and even the woman who has no particular athletic fad shares in a certain degree the growing enthusiasm for the outdoor life.

When one considers the sound health, cheerful spirits and improved appearance that result from a devotion to open air life it cannot be encouraged too much.

We owe our interest in it to the English. It is one of the few fads which the anglomaniac is to be commended for introducing.

Walking is a recreation that none of us is too poor to enjoy. Any one who walks much and in all sorts of weather should have a short waterproof skirt and boots that shed water and are comfortably puff. Any old shoes were once thought to be good enough for tramping, but the smart woman is just as particular about her walking shoes as about those for the ballroom.

Manufacturers in this country are making materials that meet the demand of the outdoor woman. There are worsted fabrics which in weave, weight and general appearance resemble the smart Scotch tweeds and English suitings. Homespun weaves and small brakes checked and striped patterns are also shown, and these mixed wool fabrics, combined with plain colored cloth trimmings, braid and huge fancy buttons, make very smart garments for country club and for athletic wear.

As for shoes, tan calf is the leather used in the outing boot worn with short skirts of tweed or wool mixture.

TENNIS BLOUSE AND NEW PARASOL

These boots, with broad, sensible heels, welted soles and the heavy stitching which gives a strong, manish look to the outing boot, are comfortable and durable.

For wear with white serge outing skirts there are buttoned boots of buckskin, but these are not the sturdy tramping boots of calf, but well suited for walking and running about out of doors.

For riding smart habits are built of worsted mixtures in fine broken checks in black and white, with black riding derby, black calf boots and gloves or tan calf boots and gloves. A black and white checked riding coat is very smart. There are leather riding petticoats which do away with the use of the trim street boot with a buttoned top of dull calf, and these patticoat reach over the knee head of the riding breeches. The woman who rides has always a warm topcoat ready to slip into directly she dismounts.

Golf and tennis call for skirts a trifle wider than those allowable for indoor wear. The fullness is accentuated on the lower part of the skirt to permit freedom of movement. Some of the serviceable tweeds or homespuns are preferred for these garments. Such skirts are suitable for all outdoor purposes. They may have short jackets to match or may be worn with a warm sweater drawn over the trim linen waist that is almost invariably donned with it.

Linen outing suits, of course, have many devoted adherents. Made in some of the charming colors now to be affected they are very fascinating. They make serviceable tennis, golfs, croquet or walking outfits. The tweeds and linens and serges are invaluable as all the year garments.

The woman who walks has a new way of carrying her parasol. It is snpplied with a stout cord that may be slung over the shoulder just like the cordelier bags she has been wearing.

THE NEW NECKWEAR.

The size of neckwear is decreasing, and fan frills and jabots are taking on more modernic proportions, which undoubtedly are more becoming.

All kinds of fancy collars of pique will be worn with one piece frocks and coat suits and will have scalloped or embroidery trimmed edges.

Strands of flowers hang from the neck in place of jabots.

Deeply pointed frills of net and lace mounted to high standing or very low collar bands are fashionable.

Frill pins of aluminium set in a single row of rhinestones are dainty and not conspicuous.

All manner of frilly neck and sleeve ideas are considered good style for the simple frock of foulard and taffeta.

The treatment of the neck resolves itself into individual preference, as both the tall, well fitting collar and the collarless styles have their admirers.

Many models admit of a chemisette, so that one of lace or net or chiffon may be had to illustrate.

When collars are worn low they are turned well away from the throat, with a deep fichu like piece of softest muslin and lace or a sailor collar of oriental embroidered linen.

The very high collar, perfectly shaped and boned, of soft and filmy material is considered smart and figures on most of the smart afternoon gowns.

Stocks with jabots to match are seen, and instead of the fancily tinted varieties the simple graduated pink is shown. Hand embroidery and simple thread lace are the favored trimmings, and a bit of color is occasionally introduced by means of ribbon and bows.

Padding Embroidery.

Where heavy padding is needed under embroidery try using wads of cotton instead of filling in the padded space with many stitches of darning thread.

To pad a scallop catch up a bit of raw cotton in your fingers and roll it between the thumb and forefinger until it is the length of the scallop, thick in the center, but tapering to a mere thread at each end. Lay this on the scallop and with a few stitches catch to the material. Embroider over it in the usual way.

Flowers have their petals padded by making little cushion-like wads of cotton and catching them down to the material outside the working line with ordinary sewing cotton.

Coin dots and ribbon designs are treated accordingly.

Have Plenty of Towels.

Lack of towels in a bathroom is an unfortunate economy. A visitor towel bar is not enough for the average family. A good plan is to reserve one or two for the bowels in use, where they can be spread full width while drying.

The practice insisted upon in some homes is that all towels be folded after using, regardless of condition, is both insanitary and foolish.

The supply of soap, as well as of towels, ought not to be allowed to run short. Reserve cakes should be easily at hand, for any member of the family should understand where they can be found.

Mandatory.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

That following news item appeared in the Greenville (S. C.) News, March 31:

"A. P. Operator Gets Final 30."

Dalton, Ga., March 31.—James Smith, for many years a telegrapher in the employ of the Associated Press, died at the home of his brother in this city yesterday. Mr. Smith's last work was with the New York World. He was considered one of the best operators in the business. His health broke down about a month ago and he returned to his home in this city. He is survived by a widow.

HIS "30" (Good Night) NOT "FINAL."

See 1st Cor. 15: 21. 1st Tim. 2: 5, 6. Dan. 12. 2. Jno. 5: 25.

"Final 30?" Nay, He's only asleep. In "the morning," he'll awake from death's slumber deep—
And answering to that bressed "Call," He'll rejoice to know that Jesus died "for all."

"Final 30?" "N. M." Just in "the hair." Awaiting for the Saviour's great "O. H."
He'll come back—Jesus died for him— In the "Resurrection morning." "he'll hear the "Chief's." "G. M."

"Final 30." Never, He'll again awake—
What a glorious message "Alive again." He won't "B. K."
The "wires," will hum with "Press." lous news then—
That "Jesus gave His life to save all men."

"Final 30." "Nix." The wires now on "Ground."
Will be "Cleared"— "The Ransom," the "trouble" found!
Hark! James Smith, "in the time," will arise—
Mid hallelujahs rebounding to the skies!"

—James Walker Heatherly.

TUNE—"I LOVE THEE, I LOVE THEE."

Come, Jesus, Sweet Savior, take charge of my heart;
Oh, grant me this favor—Thy Spirit impart.
No matter whatever thou may want me to do—
Wherever thou lead'st me I am anxious to go.

I have wandered in darkness, I have spent years in sin,
With nothing but shadows and doubtings within.
Confusion and errors, the doctrines of man,
Have clouded my vision to the truth of God's plan.

But now through God's mercy at last I am free,
And now in my Bible His great love I see.
And Oh, what a blessing it brings to my soul!
Discarding false precepts for the teachings of Paul.

So now through Thy harvest I'll watch, I will strive
In the light of Thy counsel to walk all through life.
For these "Scripture Studies" I thank Thee, my Lord;
God bless him who brought this blessed light on Thy Word.

For now, Sweetest Savior, I am leaning on Thee,
Thon sought me and brought me, and Thine I will be.
Oh, Jesus, Sweet Master, accept of my love,
And help me be faithful, so that Thou will approve.

Oh, strengthen and brighten my faith every day,
Through grace may Thy wisdom be mine all the way;
Oh, help me, sweet Savior, Thy true servant to be,
Until I in glory Thy dear face shall see.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Inclosed find order for four subscriptions for one year each, to your valuable paper.

We appreciate the fact that you are sending out to the public a clean paper, also the fact that you treat matters pertaining to Labor and in a reasonable, conservative way.

We also appreciate the ever increasing comments, queries and answers from a religious standpoint, especially the Sermons of Pastor Russell.

Yours sincerely,
H. B. MORRISON.

Colorado, May 12.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have been taking your paper for a short time, but I regret in seeing so many Letters of Appreciation and the long list of new subscribers of our beloved Pastor Russell's friends every week for you can fully appreciate the great blessing that many a heart gets through the columns of your paper of our beloved Pastor Russell's sermons and hope you receive blessings in return.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. D. GARDEN.

Arkansas, May 9.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I believe my subscription to your most valuable paper is paid up for another year, but our dear old Ur. S. Hallingsworth's subscription is now due. We enjoy its paper so much, ourse, yes we are sure this old mother in Israel does also and she is hardly able to keep up her subscription, so we are sending in her subscription for her. Ah, dear friends, you have a grand, good paper. We know there are many mighty and wonderful things that have come out of the great Smoky City (Pittsburgh), but from our point of view, away down here in the swamps of Arkansis, there has never a greater thing come out of mighty Pittsburgh than the National Labor Tribune. Your views on the labor situation seems wonderfully fair, clear and good and the fact that you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons every week a little clearer and better than anyone else and besides all that you have the Sunday School Lesson and Questions and Answers, and now, for good measure pressed down and running over, you have added Pastor's Report. My, my, who would ever have thought so many good things could come out of that Smoky City as the forks of the creek. We must admit we have nothing to beat it down here in the fat woods. We have a mighty river down here that has done broke through her levees and water is running neck deep to a horse all over these woods. We have water a plenty I thank you, but even this mighty flood is not equal to the flood of God's Truth that is flowing to all parts of the world through the columns of National Labor Tribune.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I have just renewed my subscription to your most excellent paper through the Watch Tower office and I want to say that we enjoy its weekly visit to our home very much, and as you send out the refreshing Truths of God's Holy Word through its columns, your dear heart must also receive some of the refreshment given to others, Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and all other features pointing to our everlasting welfare, are made so plain that all may understand and enjoy. Now, as never before we can truly say, what a wonderful plan our heavenly Father has caused to be unfolded to us, and we say praise His dear name. What a loving, gracious Heavenly Father is ours. I am sure you will receive a blessing for devoting so much space to these Good Things of the Kingdom.

Yours in the Master's service.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

It is with very greatest of pleasure that I herewith inclose two more new subscribers for your high appreciated Tribune, like the other names, I have sent in, I am also sending these two for the purpose of getting the National Labor Tribune introdnced into these homes, knowing full well that it will be highly appreciated and cannot fail to produce good results. My own Tribune just as fast as I have read them, I mail them to other people as I consider them too valuable to be destroyed. May God bless you and reward you for the strong helping hand you are lending in the Lord's work. Keep up the glorious good work, brother, knowing that the promises of the Lord are sure to arrive and at all times let us continue faithful to His blessed service, always bear in mind this encouraging text, by the Apostle Paul—

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord." 1st Cor. 15: 58.

What stronger assurance can we ask for than is given us in that text.

Yours in the love of God, Christ our Lord, the Captain of our salvation.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

GENTLE REPROOF MOST SUCCESSFUL.

How St. Peter Was Punished for Denying His Lord—Jesus' Third Appearance—Pastor Russell Points Out an Important Lesson Generally Overlooked by Christian Ministers. What Jesus Meant by "Feed My Sheep"—Why the Church of Christ Languishes—Some Erroneous Ideas of Modern Expounders of God's Word Corrected.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me more than these?"—John 21: 15-17. The context shows that these words were addressed by the Redeemer to St. Peter on the occasion of His third manifestation to His disciples after His resurrection. This was presumably three or four weeks after the Master's resurrection from the dead. His manifestations to the women on the morning of His resurrection and His later manifestations to the two as they went to Emmaus are evidently not counted, but the manifestation the same evening in the upper room, when all the disciples except Thomas and Judas were present, is counted the first. And the manifestation a week later, Thomas being present, is counted the second.

The delay in giving this third manifestation was evidently for the purpose of testing the faith of the Apostles and of leading them to reach a conclusion respecting their future course, which Jesus wished to correct. So far as we can understand the record at least two Sundays passed with out any further manifestations of Jesus to His disciples. And Peter, growing impatient, they decided to return to the fishing business and did so. The journey to Galilee and the resumption of business presumably took another week.

During those thirty days the most all estimable of all the Apostles and the other disciples can be better imagined than described. They were perplexed, they had indeed had evidences of the Master's resurrection; they had had the Scriptures called to their attention which proved that this was necessary; and that God had properly so arranged. They had hoped for further conferences with Jesus and that He would have told them definitely what to do.

Instead, left to themselves, the disciples were thoroughly disheartened. They had left all to follow Him, to tell the people that He was the Son of God, the long-promised Messiah, and that He would soon set up His Kingdom, which would bring blessings, primarily to Israel and, secondarily, through Israel, to all the families of the earth in harmony with the Abrahamic Covenant. Now apparently all of these hopes were dashed, frustrated. How foolish they thought it would seem for them to try to convince the people that a man, crucified as a malefactor, as a blasphemer, was indeed the Messiah! How foolish it would seem to tell of His resurrection! They felt that they could do nothing else than abandon the ministry as a lost cause; and the resumption of the fishing business was the logical conclusion.

THEY TOILED ALL THE NIGHT.

Their first night was a discouraging one—they caught nothing. It looked indeed as though God was punishing them for the course they had taken in becoming disciples of Jesus—that everything was going wrong. But not so; they were merely being taught needed lessons.

In the morning they beheld a stranger on the shore who beckoned and shouted to know if they had any fish for sale. They replied, No, they had made no catch. The stranger suggested casting the net on the other side of the boat. And although the suggestion seemed a foolish one, having been so unsuccessful, yet they did so, and immediately the net was filled with fishes! It did not require long for them to learn the lesson. They knew instinctively that the unknown stranger upon the shore was none other than their Master. They remembered a very similar experience at the time they were first called to leave their nets and to become fishers of men.

All intrust had just centered in the fishing business, but now boats and fish and nets all lost their value in the estimation of these fishermen. Here was their risen Lord, for whose third appearance they had been waiting now nearly three weeks. Fearing that the Master would disappear from before he could get to him, St. Peter plunged into the sea and swam ashore. To his surprise the stranger already had fish and had them cooked, and all were invited to join in the breakfast on the shore of Galilee.

The stranger had not the clothing by which they had known their Lord, neither did He have the marks of the nails in His hands and feet, that they might thus identify Him. This was a different manifestation. They knew Him as did those with whom He walked to Emmaus, who recognized Him in the blessing of the bread, and not by His features or clothing or wounds. They recognized that none other than He could have performed such a miracle. They did not ask who He was; they felt a restraint; as we read, "None of them durst ask who He was," but all knew that He was the Lord.

"LOVEST THOU ME MORE!"

The stranger addressed St. Peter particularly saying, "Lovest thou Me more than these"—these boats and nets, etc., pertaining to the fishing business? St. Peter answered, "Yea, Thou knowest that I affectionately love Thee." He used a word expressing fondness of love. Jesus replied, "Feed My lambs."

Then came the question a second time, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" A great pressure was felt by St. Peter. Why did the Master so particularly question his love? Why should He put the question more to him than to the others? Was it because he had been the first of the disciples to suggest the resumption of the fishing business? Was he to blame for this? But he answered, "Lord, Thou knowest that I affectionately love Thee." Jesus this time replied, "Feed My sheep." For the third time Jesus said to St. Peter, "Simon, son of Jonas, dost thou affectionately love Me?" Here Jesus used the same word that St. Peter had used, as though He questioned the affection and depth of Peter's love. Ah! the third time must have sent the memory of St. Peter back to the scene in Caiaphas' Judgment Hall, when he denied his Master the third time, even with cursing. And now Jesus for the third time had asked him respecting his love and whether it was really his love of affection? St. Peter's choking reply was, "Lord, Thou knowest all things! Thou knowest that I affectionately love Thee!" The Lord's reply was, "Feed My sheep."

In harmony with these words of the Master to St. Peter the chief work of His followers has been to minister to the needs of the spirit-begotten sheep. It is full harmony with this that St. Paul, addressing the Elders of Ephesus, counseled that they "feed the flock of God, which He had purchased with the blood of His own Son." There is a point here that perhaps is too frequently overlooked. If all of the Lord's followers could realize that the message of St. Peter is the same as it comes to all of us, perhaps it would make a change in most of our preaching.

OUR MISTAKEN METHODS.

Have not Christians in general overlooked this important lesson, namely, that the chief work of the ministers and undershepherds of the Lord's flock during this Age is to "feed the flock?" Is it not true that comparatively little feeding is being done? On the contrary, the thought usually received by her covenants is, Now you are saved; go, evangelize, and bring others to Christ—especially bring money, for with plenty of it we can convert the world. Work for Jesus by soliciting funds for church expenses, extension, etc., etc.

If the inquirer has thought or feelings is it not too often the case that his instructors know not how to answer them, but merely say, "Stop thinking, and go to work." Alas, that this is so true! the "lambs" should be fed until they become "sheep." The sheep should be tended, cared for, guided, instructed, and the sheep should also be fed with the stronger meat than those which the lambs could appropriate. St. Paul gives this thought when on one occasion he urges his hearers to desire "the sincere milk of the Word that they may grow thereby."

But few seem to copy the great St. Paul in respect to their methods. Few seem to realize and apply to themselves the Master's words to St. Peter, "Feed My lambs" and "My sheep." As a consequence, the Church of Christ is in a languishing condition. Many, sincere at heart, know not what they believe. Many would find it impossible to follow St. Peter's admonition, "Be ready to give a reason for the hope that is within you, with meekness and reverence."—1 Peter iii, 15.

REASONS FOR THE NEGLECT OF THE DOCTRINES OF CHRIST.

There are two reasons which have led up to the neglect of "the doctrines of Christ"—the teachings of the Bible. These two reasons fully explain why so many are telling new believers, never mind the sentence of Christ, but go out and convert somebody.

The first of these reasons is the erroneous thought which gained ascendency during the Dark Ages, namely, that the pentecost and all the second coming of Jesus is the time allotted by the Heavenly Father for the world's conversion, and that this is the dispensation which He gives to His people, and if the world be not converted the responsibility for their eternal torture will fall upon His people.

All of this is a mistake. Not a word of Scripture tells that the Church was commissioned to convert the world before the second coming of the Lord. Quite to the contrary, the Scriptures show that the Lord's second coming the world will be unconverted. The Apocalypse particularly tells us that when the Lord at His second coming shall establish His Kingdom, the nations will be angry and Divine wrath will come upon them, thereby introducing the great "time of trouble" with which this Age is to end, according to the prophetic Word.

These testimonies do not signify that holiness will perish, nor that all of the Lord's people will be unfaithful; they simply mean that the world in general will not be the Lord's people, they will still be enemies, Gentiles, unconverted. Nor are we urging that the Church has nothing whatever to do with the world. Quite to the contrary; while she has not been given the mission of converting the world in the present Age—while she does not consider it her love—At the third time must have sent the memory of St. Peter back to the scene in Caiaphas' Judgment Hall, when he denied his Master the third time, even with cursing. And now Jesus for the third time had asked him respecting his love and whether it was really his love of affection? St. Peter's choking reply was, "Lord, Thou knowest all things! Thou knowest that I affectionately love Thee!" The Lord's reply was, "Feed My sheep."

In harmony with these words of the Master to St. Peter the chief work of His followers has been to minister to the needs of the spirit-begotten sheep. It is full harmony with this that St. Paul, addressing the Elders of Ephesus, counseled that they "feed the flock of God, which He had purchased with the blood of His own Son." There is a point here that perhaps is too frequently overlooked. If all of the Lord's followers could realize that the message of St. Peter is the same as it comes to all of us, perhaps it would make a change in most of our preaching.

OUR MISTAKEN METHODS.

Have not Christians in general overlooked this important lesson, namely, that the chief work of the ministers and undershepherds of the Lord's flock during this Age is to "feed the flock?" is it not true that comparatively little feeding is being done? On the contrary, the thought usually received by her covenants is, Now you are saved; go, evangelize, and bring others to Christ—especially bring money, for with plenty of it we can convert the world. Work for Jesus by soliciting funds for church expenses, extension, etc., etc.

If the inquirer has thought or feelings is it not too often the case that his instructors know not how to answer them, but merely say, "Stop thinking, and go to work." Alas, that this is so true! the "lambs" should be fed until they become light? How strange that any should ever think that when the Heavenly Father sent out the call to those who have the hearing ear, to unite spiritually with Jesus Christ their Lord, He would consign to eternal torment any who would decline to accept the admittedly stringent rules and conditions appertaining to this "call"—the "narrow way" of the footsteps of Jesus—self-denial, etc.!

We do the Scriptures assure us that the saints "wrestle not with flesh and blood merely," but rather "with wicked spirits in high positions"—of influence. (Ephesians vi. 12.) Well does the Apostle tell us that it is the God of this Age who hath blinded the minds of those who believe not. (II Corinthians iv. 4.) Well can we see how he put light for darkness and darkness for light during the Dark Ages.

ANOTHER LESSON WE MAY LEARN.

We must not leave our text without calling to memory a most wonderfully instructive lesson concerning the proper way to reprove and rebuke our brethren when the same is sadly necessary. So far as the record shows, the three inquiries which our Lord made of St. Peter respecting his love for Him were the only rebukes ever given him as an offset, or supplement for his shameful denial of the Master on the night in which He was betrayed.

Had many of us been in the Master's place we would have felt that it was necessary to make St. Peter very humbly apologize before we would have anything further to do with him. We would have been inclined to speak of his weakness, of his ingratitude, of how he knew better, etc., etc. Our sense of justice would in many instances have entirely overshadowed our sense of mercy and sympathy. But not so with the Master. He knew the loyalty of St. Peter's heart. He knew that he had already gone out and wept bitterly over the matter.

He knew what a sense of shame would be upon him and how much courage it would mean for him to think at all of meeting the Master whom he had denied.

Surely it was on account of this sympathy for St. Peter and this appreciation of the tendency he would have to become entirely discouraged that led our Lord to mention St. Peter first amongst the Apostles on the morning of His resurrection, saying to Mary, to whom He first appeared, "Go and tell My disciples, and Peter"—don't let Peter think that he is an outcast. Let him know that I think of him and love him and sympathize with him and have forgiven him, because I know he did it under stress.

WE SHOULD COPY THE MASTER'S METHODS.

And if our Lord and Master has set us such an example of longsuffering and forgiveness without request, how are we learning this lesson? To what extent do we forgive others their trespasses and to what extent do we go more than half way to let them know that we harbor no resentful feelings toward them? To what extent do we send them word that we feel in their wrongs generously? And when the appropriate time comes and it is proper for something to be said can we not take a lesson from the Master's loving forbearance and gentleness in His merely asking the erring one if he had a proper kind of love, and when he confesses special love, then to ask him if he were sure that he had the special love?

No doubt our success as the Master's servants in feeding the brethren, the flock, and helping instead of hindering them, will be in proportion as we remember these types of style and methods. So, then, while feeding His flock let us have continually before us the great Shepherd's example of how the flock should be dealt with.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Wisconsin, May 10.

Just few words in appreciation of the Tribune. I am very much pleased with the manner in which Pastor Russell's Sermons are put up. The sample space it occupies, also the Sunday School Lesson and Question Box. These all have a much light on perplexing Bible questions. Trusting you will continue the good work, I am respectfully,

Yours,
JAC. INGELSE.

Michigan, May 12.

I am this day renewing my subscription to your paper for another year. I have been a subscriber for the past four years, and I find that each year my interest is growing deeper in your paper, especially because we are now living in the evil day and that satan is seeking to use every means possible and available, even those that profess to be children of light to thwart the Lord's Truth. We know that there are those that would seek to hinder these sermons from reaching the public. On the other hand we know that because your faithfulness in printing the Truth you have gathered to yourself a host of friends that are loyal and true to the core. Let the good work go on and you will find supporters to that which is good.

Yours for the good of humanity and glorification of our God.

E. H. EHRICH.

Ohio, May 7.

We certainly appreciate your paper at our home on account of its fearless writing of the gospel messages and the great type, making the reading easy to see.

C. B. SECREST.

California, May 12.

Permit me to encroach upon you time one moment to express to you my great appreciation for your high y esteemed paper.

We have been a subscriber for a number of years and our attention has been turned particularly to a sermon which you regularly publish, delivered by Pastor Russell of Brooklyn, U. S. A., frequently. I desire to show appreciation for this item because we believe it to be a great incentive to Bible study as well as being extreme y interesting to all Truth seekers.

We have been greatly interested in the stand you've taken in adding to this item the Question Box and other lines of great interest. We are assured that this excellent work is the interest of the Redeemer's Kingdom by your va'ued journal will receive a corresponding blessing so that frequently we find it to be so in the Bible.

May the interest that you have manifested in the spreading such logical and stimu ating Bible truths bring special blessings to you as well as to general Christendom.

Yours very truly,
L. T. CORTI.

Washington, May 10.

I much appreciate your good paper because of the valuable Sermons of Pastor Russell, the Sunday School Lessons and Question Box, etc. I will be pleased to take your paper. Let me know when you continue putting them before your readers in such a pleasing manner.

Yours truly,
MRS. MARY B. WILLS.

Georgia, May 10.

We wish to express our appreciation of your good work in the Tribune, especially for Pastor Russell's Sermons and other features such as Question Box, Sunday School Lessons and Letters of Appreciations from the friends, also like the clear print and large type.

J. P. CURRY.

New York, May 10.

I realize that I am tardy in expressing my appreciation of your valuable paper, but will do so now, and I especially appreciate it because of Pastor Russell's Sermons, and the fine large type in which they are printed, so easy to read, and also the Sunday School Lessons and the Question Box, etc., for a'l these are helps to Bible Study, and may the Lord bless you for the way in which you are helping God's true children to understand His Word.

Yours in best wishes and respectfully,

PILAT'S REPORT.

The report that Jesus had risen from the dead created more excitement even than the crucifixion. As to its truth I cannot say for certain, but I have made some investigation of the matter; so you can examine for yourself, and see if I am in fault, as Herod represents.

"Joseph buried Jesus in his own tomb. Whether he contemplated his resurrection or calculated to cut him another, I cannot tell. The day after he was buried, one of the priests came to the praetorium and said they were apprehensive that the disciples intended to steal the body of Jesus and hide it, and then make it appear that he had risen from the dead, as he had foretold, and of which they were perfectly convinced. I sent him to the Captain of the royal guard (Malchus) to tell him to take the Jewish soldiers, place as many around the sepulchre as were needed; then if anything should transpire they could blame themselves, and not the Romans.

"When the great excitement arose about the sepulchre being found empty, I felt a deeper solitude than ever. I sent for Malchus, who informed me he had placed his lieutenant, Ben Isham, with one hundred soldiers, around the sepulchre. He told me that Jesus and the soldiers were greatly alarmed at what had occurred there that morning. I sent for this man Isham, who related to me, as near as I can recollect, the following circumstances. He said that about the beginning of the fourth watch they saw a soft and beautiful light over the sepulchre. At first they supposed the women had come to embalm the body of Jesus, as is their custom, but he cou d not understand how they had gotten though the guard. While these thoughts were passing through his minds behold, the whole place was illuminated, and there seemed to be a shaking of the earth as in a storm; all shouting and filled with ecstacy, with a light around and above was heard the sweetest music. The whole air seemed full of voices praising God. Each there seemed to be a reeling and swimming of the earth, so that he became so sick and faint that he could no longer stand on his feet. He said the earth seemed to swim from under him, his senses left him, so he knew not what else did occur. I asked him in what condition he was when he found himself. He said he was lying on the ground with his face down. I asked him if he could not be mistaken as to the light. Was it not day approaching in the East? He said at first he thought of that, but at a stone's cast it was exceedingly dark, and then he remembered it was over the first day. I asked him if his dizziness was not from being awakened from profound sleep suddenly, as it sometimes had that effect. He said he had not slept at all, as the penalty for sleep on duty is death. He said he had allowed some of the soldiers to sleep at a time. Some were as sep then. I asked how long the scene lasted. He said he did not know, but he thought nearly an hour; it was full by the light of approaching day. I asked him if he had gone to the sepulchre after coming to himself. He said no, because he was afraid; that just as soon as the guard came they all went to their quarters. I asked him if he had been questioned by the priests. He said he had. They wanted him to say it was an earthquake, and that the guard were as sep, and offered money to say that the Disciples came and stole Jesus; but he saw no Disciples; he did not know how the body was gone until he was told. I asked him what he thought of the conduct of those priests he had conversed with. He said that some of them thought Jesus was a good man; that he was not a human being; that he was not the son of Mary; that he was not the same that died on the cross of the virgin to be Bethlehem; that the same individual had come to earth before with Abraham and Lot, and at various times and places.

"I desired to me that, if the Jewish theory be true, these communications are correct, that they are to show that the man's life as he shows and testified to by both friends and foes, for the eternity were no more in his hands than clay in the hands of the potter. He could convert water into wine; he could change back into life, disease into health; calm the sea; still the storm; call up a few with a silver coin in its mouth. If he could do all these things, which he did, and many more as the Jews all testified and it was doing these things that created enmity against him, and for which he charged with criminal offenser, nor was he charged with violating any law, nor of wrongdoing immorally in person, and all these facts are known to thousands, as well by foes as by friends—and to whom he lived to say, as did Manalas of the cross, 'Truly this was the Son of God.'

"Now, noble sovereign, this is as near the facts in the case as I can arrive at, and I have taken pains to make the statement very full, so that you may judge of my competency for the whole, as I hear that Antipater has said many harsh things of me in this matter. With the promise of faithfulness and good wishes to my noble sovereign, I remain,

"Your obedient servant,
"PONTIUS PILATE."
(The End.)

Washington, May 12.

National Labor Tribune:

Will say that I am well pleased, indeed, with your paper, and with the part you are taking in reminding us of those who died for us! Now, about this treat which commenced on April 11, Pilate's Report. I will say it's worth many times the price of subscription. Just think that a piece of actual history, from a secular source should in God's providence, be given to His people at this time, when the worldly wise are trying to tear to pieces that book (the Bible) which has been the comfort and hope of ages forefathers, and us, and thus to reassure us of the fact that a perfect man has lived in the world, together with the circumstances under which He suffered.

Respectfully,
HANS HELGESON.

To heal those hearts which throb and ache—
Restore every one!

"I pray thee Lord my soul to take."
Though in the sea,
Yet'l give it back for Jesus sake—
My soul to me!

"And men stand bowed in stold grief."
Seek not their precious ones again,
Not knowing of the Great Relief—
And that a great plan to save all men!

Virginia, May 12.

I must ask your pardon for allowing my subscription to run out, and now am inclosing herewith my check for one year's subscription and want to thank you for your kindness in continuing my paper after my subscription had expired.

I also want to tell you how I admire the Tribune. I think it is the cleanest all around paper coming to our home. The best, clear type, the excellent arrangement to the different departments, and the general tone of the paper makes it very interesting to all classes of readers.

Personally I am most interested in the religious departments. I take the sermons to be grand, and I do think you are continuing to publish them. I shall remain a permanent subscriber as long as these features are continued. Assuring you of my very good wish, I am

Most cordially,
D. CULBERTSON,

New York, May 12.

Have been a reader of your valuable paper for almost a year. It is much prized in the home on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons with the other religious features, they so beautifully unfold the Plan of God as shown in His precious word. We look forward to its weekly visits with much pleasure.

Assuring you of our continued subscription as long as you print those valuable sermons. With best wishes to the Tribune.

Yours truly,
MRS. CHAS. BRIAN

Tennessee, March 11.

Let me thank you for the help that I get from the religious matter in the Tribune. I enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons, also Question Box and Letters of Appreciations. May the Lord bless you and continue to use you to give us the Truth. "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." "The King's favor is toward a wise servant, but his wrath is against him that causeth shame."

I am by His grace, yours for the Truth.

MISS LIZZIE KELLEY.

New York, May 7.

We wish to express our appreciation of your valuable paper for which we subscribed as you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons. We do enjoy to read the sermon and Sunday School Lessons and Question Box are so helpful. Your paper is welcome in our home. May God bless you in this good work.

Yours here truly,
MR. AND MRS. S. WATSON.

POPULAR MECHANICS

HANGING HAND SAWS.

A Hole Drilled in the Point Saves Time and Preserves Tools.

Hand saws are usually hung up by the handle, involving a very awkward operation every time they are taken for use or replaced on the pin. It usually requires both hands to go through this performance, so common to every woodworker that its awkwardness is not appreciated, and will not be until he has his saws installed by the point, with the handle within reach. Then he will wonder why he didn't do that job drilled in the point long ago, says Blacksmith and Wheelwright. By the way, drilling that hole is the only difficulty in the matter, but any mechanic knows how to drill a saw or ordinary temper. Don't be contented with a small hole, but make it five-eighths of an inch or three-quarters of an inch, although the machine will doubtless drill a small hole first.

When you have your saws thus properly suspended, you will hang them up a dozen times a day where in your new law them down for a few minutes until you want them again. Besides, this method has decided advantages to the saw itself. Its handle is not scratched and marred by being constantly placed and replaced on the nail or screw, and its blade is not corroded by the sweaty hands of the workman, as is necessarily the case in the old way. It would be a decided boon to wood workmen if sawmakers could be induced to put this hole in the saws when they are made.

SPRING FOR A VISE.

Simple and Effective Contrivance For Holding Small Bolts.

The accompanying sketch shows a spring such as is the best for the purpose of holding very short center shank head bolts, machine screws, etc. It is constructed from a piece of coil wire spring of from one and one-quarter to two inches in width and about twelve inches in length.

When made from two inch steel it should be drawn wider at A in order to give it enough spring motion. The face of the jaws B should be made as shown at C so as to have a firm hold on the bolt. The pins D are inserted to prevent the vise from falling down from the larger vise. The spring is strong and large enough for heavy work.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

A VISE WITHIN A VISE.

Frostbitten Concrete.

When concrete has been frostbitten before final setting it is very apt to develop defects that call for its removal or repair, says the Concrete World. The following method of repairing such concrete has been successful: Chip off with a pick or other suitable tool the concrete which has been affected by frost and wash the roughly wash the exposed surface with water, using a stiff scrubbing brush, until entirely clean. A one to three solution of muriatic acid is then applied with a brush, and the surface is again washed. As soon as practicable after this is done a very wet mixture of new concrete is applied. Where the old surface has been thoroughly cleaned, and the new concrete kept damp for a week, it blends nicely with the old surface, making it appear as solid as if the entire mass had been placed at the same time.

Test For Typewriter Ribbon.

All aniline colors fade and finally disappear from the effect of light, and only ribbons impregnated with a colored containing a carbon base are permanent, says a French magazine. To find if the ribbon will give indelible writing or not, scrape off some of the substance on the ribbon, stir it up in hot alcohol and put a drop of the mixture on a blotting paper. If the spot made is uniformly colored, the ribbon contains aniline, but if there is seen around the central colored spot an outer uncolored ring of moisture, the ribbon will make indelible writing.

Valuable Scrap at Panama.

The disposal of scrap iron and useless machinery which passed into the possession of the United States on the sale of the canal by the French company has netted the surprising sum of $2,112,000. In spite of the fact that a considerable amount of the French plant has been overhauled and put in service, nearly 30,000 tons of metal scrap have been shipped to the United States from the isthmus.

Yellow Beats the Eye.

It has been found, according to Cosmos, that yellow paper is very restful to the eye, and it is therefore recommended for use by writers, students, engineers, in making long and complicated calculations, etc. Paper of green color would be still better, but has the disadvantage that writing in ink on it soon assumes a reddish hue and becomes indistinct.

ELEVATOR FOR CONCRETE.

Ingenious Device For Pouring Liquid Mixture Into Silo Forms.

An interesting elevator outfit for pouring liquid concrete into the forms used in silo construction is shown in the accompanying illustration. A receptacle containing the concrete is drawn up to the top of the required height and discharges into a funnel at the end of a section of pipe, which, in turn, discharges into a second funnel slidably mounted on a shaft placed upright in the center of the silo. The second funnel, with its pipe, is revolvable about the shaft, so that the operator may direct the discharge into the forms at any point in the circle. The concrete mixture is located at the base of the elevator to such position as to discharge direct into the receiving receptacle.—Popular Mechanics.

CONCRETE FOR SILO ELEVATOR.

New Wood Jointing Machine.

A demonstration of the Linderman woodworking machine has just been given at Newark, England. The machine is designed to utilize waste strips of wood by converting them into boards of any desired width, with dovetailed glued joints. It is provided with two endless tools traveling from each end toward the center, where they meet. The stock is automatically fed into each end of the machine; in transit toward the center it is dovetailed and glued, and as the pieces of wood reach the center they are united and automatically discharged as the joint is completed, in this way coffin boards, door panels, table tops, etc., may be worked up from waste lengths and odd widths of wood. No glue is deposited on the outside of the boards, and the machine can be readily adapted to deal with different lengths of material. The rate of feed varies from thirty-five to seventy feet a minute, according to the nature of the timber dealt with. The machine will joint a rough or sawed edge, and the boards may be of any width from one and one-half inches.—Consular Report.

Cement For Celluloid Articles.

Several formulæ have been proposed for passing celluloid articles. One of these is found serviceable is the following: Prepare a mixture of three parts of alcohol and four parts of ether and keep this in a well stoppered bottle. When two surfaces of celluloid are to be placed together wet them thoroughly with the mixture and repeat the operation until the substance has become softened and then press them together for twenty-four hours. Another solution which may be used is one containing one part of camphor in four parts of alcohol, to which one part of shellac wax is added. This cement must be applied hot.—Le Temps.

Gasoline Street Car Experiment.

An experiment in the propulsion of street cars by the gasoline engine, which should afford valuable data for comparison with the cost of electricity generation, is being made on a short line of line in England. The experimental car, with a capacity of thirty-seven passengers, is driven by a fifty-five horse power gasoline engine. In a comparison of cost the gasoline car has the advantage that there are no fixed charges for the overhead or underground equipment for transmission of the power. The economy of a good gasoline engine should compare favorably with that of a neutral steam electric plant.

Pens of Tantalum.

Some very interesting tests have been made by German scientists. The tantalum metal was cut, formed and split into a customary steel pen. Then the points were bent, ground, shaped and sectioned by a special hardening process, which was found to greatly prolong the life of the pens. Comparative tests were made between steel, gold and tantalum pen points on stic nides of paper, and the results showed the hardened tantalum pen to be far superior to the others. The tantalum pen showed these pens to be proof against the attacks of ink.

To Remove Rust From Tools.

A deep rust on tools may be removed by soaking them in a strong hot bath of potash and water for half an hour, then digging them into a solution of one part muriatic acid to two parts cold water.

PASTOR RUSSELL REPLIES WITH FACTS

Editor National Labor Tribune:

In my sermon of May 5 I charged that the Christian ministry is hiding the Key of Divine knowledge from the people, as did the Doctors of Divinity of Jesus' day. This has aroused much comment. I am asked in substance: Why, Pastor Russell, did you not specify the particular subjects on which the clergy are failing to keep the Pew in ignorance? Is hiding the key of knowledge? If what you say is true the laity must awake to this unsuspected danger! But prove to us that it is true!

Sad I am that it is true that the ministers of all denominations (with some noble exceptions) are the chief foes to real Bible study. Christians of all denominations love and reverence the Bible as the Word of God. Under the light now shining from one page of it to another, they would soon discard the creeds of the darker past and become one united Church—with "one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism," were it not for the ministers. The preachers having real faith in the inspiration of the Bible are "thicker critics." They do not wish to show their unbelief, hence avoid Bible discussion. They await the ripening of unbelief when they can publicly say, We educated ministers have not believed the Bible inspired for many long years." We kept quiet until you would not be shocked by the statement. But to the proofs:

(1) The preachers know that the only Hebrew word translated hell in our Bibles has no reference whatever to a great torture-chamber such as their people believe contains nearly all humanity. Privately they will admit that "sheol" means the tomb, and that its equivalent in the New Testament Greek is "hades." They will admit, too, that "Gehenna" is the name of a valley outside Jerusalem where rubbish was consumed and explained. Biblically to symbolize the Second Death.—Rev. 20: 14.

(2) The clergy fear Haldeman, D. D., with attempting in throw dust into the mental eyes of Baptists by hurriedly misrepresenting my teachings, to hinder his people from studying Bible teachings to which I call attention, by cracking over their heads the whip of fear. When he declared my teachings to be "the blasphemous religion which teaches the annihilation of Jesus Christ," he intended his untruthful words to prejudice you against "sheep" and hinder Bible study. He has only succeeded in hiding the key of knowledge," but in his unscrupulous way he tries to keep the Lord's people from finding it. I am positive he would not think for a moment of defending his own Church Creed in this way. The "sheep" portion of my teachings is to rally the old spirit of the "dark ages" for the sake of loyalty and sectarianism. His followers will not so closely examine their own creed if they are kept in a well aligned opposite enemy, and Dr. Haldeman misrepresents me to be that enemy. Alas! what a heavy penalty we may run if we take the hands of the Lord upon those who, posing as Bible teachers, are serving the cause of darkness—hating the light and misrepresenting it.

I might multiply facts, but these may suffice for the present. If Christian people once realized the extent to which they are being hoodwinked by the clergy they would soon find abundance of proof. If they ask for Bible instruction along simple lines (bread) they will be given a stone of evasion. If they ask for strongest meat (fish) they will get a serpent—a stinging rebuke, for meddling in matters theological, as though they doubted that the preacher knew everything, and as though they supposed that the laity were capable of understanding anything! Abraham Lincoln well said, "You can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time." Faithful to the Morning light (2 Pet. 1: 19.)

Appreciations

Canada, May 15.

I wish to thank you for the paper as it comes regularly every week and also for the publication of Pastor Russell's Sermons and other great Truths. May the Lord's blessings be yours in the work of spreading the Glad Tidings of Great Joy which shall be to all people.

Sincerely,
MRS. WM. ROBINSON.

Texas, May 12.

I especially appreciate the Bible Question Box and Sunday School Lessons conducted by Pastor Russell, also his Sermons, which are indeed Good Tidings of Great Joy, and the only sermons published that are in perfect harmony with the whole Bible.

Yours by His grace,
JNO. M. PATTERSON.

I would like to say a few words for the commendable paper you publish, especially do I like Question Box Department and Sunday School Lesson and the Sermons. Surely the Lord will reward you in due time. Jehovah is mighty and the Truth shall prevail. May His grace rest on you part you are taking toward the establishment of the long promised Kingdom.

Yours for the Truth,
W. H. PARKER.

Kansas, May 16, '08.

I just love those sermons you print and the Question Box certainly answers questions that puzzle all Christian people. I have read Pastor Russell's Six Studies in the Scriptures too, and find his writing the most wonderful of the age or any age in Scripture elucidation. The religious part is the main feature for me. May the Lord's blessing accompany that feature especially.

Respectfully yours,
L. A. LANDES.

New Jersey, May 12.

I have been receiving the Tribune for quite a long time. I have the former one printed and some of the new, but I would a like to keep the present one, as it is good stuff. The last issue of the Tribune was grand to those interested in the theology as explained by the I. S. S. S.

Many thanks to you for printing Brother Russell's discourses. There is no doubt awakening many along the Truth lines, for it is what the world urgently needs, a plain, clear construction, and it can come in no other way, only as appointed by our Great Creator. We send along with others our best wishes for the Labor Tribune in printing Pastor Russell's Sermons, Bible Studies, etc. You will in due time receive a reward for your labor, no doubt.

Sincerely yours,
E. LEE.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHING — BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

CHRISTIANITY AND THE LAW.

Matthew v, 17-26—May 19.

"He that keeth his neighbor hath fulfilled the law."—Romans xiii, 8.

THE Great Teacher declared that He came not to destroy the Law and the Prophets, but to fulfil them. While the Law was spoken of as Moses' Law, it was really the Divine Law given to Israel as a basis for the Divine Covenant with that nation, and Moses merely stood as mediator of that Law Covenant—that agreement by which Israel was obligated to keep the Law, and God was obligated if they did so to grant those everlasting life, Divine favor and the glorious privilege of being His kingdom agents for the blessing of all nations, under Messiah's Kingdom.

The failure of even the most sincere Israelite to gain the promised everlasting life proved, not that God's Law was unjust, but that Israel, like the remainder of the world, shared by inheritance Adamic weaknesses, which so impaired their moral quality that they could not keep God's perfect Law. Hence our Lord defined to be whole-hearted love for God and "Golden Rule" love for the neighbor.

The Gospel of Jesus magnifies the Jewish Law by admitting its righteousness. The proposition of Jesus in respect to His followers is that by being perfect, was able to keep the Mosaic Law perfectly, and had a right, therefore, to everlasting life and reward for love; he died; but instead of retaining this life He laid it down sacrificially, as a part of the great Divine plan for the blessing of the world. That sacrifice will bring to the world the blessed opportunity for eternal life which it is their natural birthright. Messiah's Kingdom will bring. But meantime the Redeemer, carrying out Jehovah's plans, offers an imputation of His merits to any who have His spirit of full consecration to do the Father's will by laying down their lives sacrificially, to gain with the Redeemer a heavenly, spiritual life, glory, honor, immortality, the Divine nature, as Jesus' joint-heirs in His Kingdom. All who thus do will be counted as a part of the spiritual Seed of Abraham, through whom all the families of the earth will receive their blessing.

These disciples of Jesus sacrifice their earthly interests and rights and thus become reckonedly dead to earthly things. God accepts their offers and begets them of the Holy Spirit. Thus they become New Creatures in Christ. But, how could God accept a blemished offering? and are not these New Creatures held responsible for the conduct of their flesh, so long as they live—until their sacrifice is completed?

The Scriptures answer. The great High Priest, who presents these offerings as part of His own, makes good their imperfections by an imputation of the merit of His own sacrifice, which is already finished, and is now in effective waiting for application on behalf of the sins of the world. When the High Priest presents Himself to God, accepted with His own merit as a robe, we are assured that the sacrifices are "holy and acceptable" to God.

As for subsequent weaknesses of the flesh, the New Creature is indeed held responsible, but is granted, through the once our High Priest tasted death for every man and for all sins of heredity, therefore these subsequent sins of infirmity are assured that all their trespasses, of ignorance, or weakness, may be forgiven, and that the Advocate—Lord and Head and representative in glory, will, upon application, impute His merit for the reconciliation of such imperfections, that they may be maintained in their standing, "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing."

The Pharisees' Standard Lower.

The Pharisees prided themselves on their zeal for the Law and found fault with Jesus' disciples and with Himself for healing the sick on the Sabbath. They were particular in respecting the ritualistic requirements of the Law, but were careless respecting its spirit of love. This was termed hypocrisy; He declared that publicans and sinners followers were nearer right in heart than were the Pharisees they would get into the Kingdom sooner. All who must remember the difference between the ordinary Kingdom inaugurated at Pentecost and the Kingdom class into which the "faithful" will be gathered by the First Resurrection. All Christ's followers, however, must manifest righteous but also their lips and the very thoughts of their hearts, that even in thought they be free from wrong toward the spirit of the Divine Law of love.

Spirit of Law—Hatred Is Murder.

The intimation is that if we have wronged a brother and delay to make the matter right and the case come before the Lord for settlement, we will be obliged to suffer the full penalty of our neglect, "the uttermost farthing," before we will be fully restored to Divine favor and fellowship.

Q.—Yesterday I saw a man arrested by the "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals" because he was shoeing a poor horse he had hitched to a heavy load; and I wondered when I saw this man arrested, whether any society could be more kind to dumb animals than God was going to be to the great mass of mankind who do not live saintly lives and are therefore not fit for heaven, and must go, if our creeds are correct, to an eternity of suffering, a thousand times worse than that horse ever suffered. If man has passed a law making it a crime to torture animals, can it be possible that God, who has instructed us to love our enemies, will forever torture human beings? (S. P. C. A.)

Answer.—While we must admit that some of the old creeds still convey the thought of eternal torture, yet we are glad to say that the scholarship of the world in our day has advanced past the horrors of the "Dark Ages." If you ask your minister his understanding of the teachings of the Bible on this point he, doubtless, will surprise you by saying that he has no such idea as suggested by your question. You may be glad that the idea against God's name and character is being removed. (See Romans vi, 23; Psalm cxiv, 20; 1. 6.

Q.—Was Jonah three days and nights in the whale's belly, the day and night each forming a "twenty-four-hour period of time, or was it's day longer than twenty-four hours? (W. A.)

Answer.—In Matthew xii, 40, where the word "whale" is used it should more properly be translated a great fish, as this is the true significance of the Greek word ketos. In the Old Testament account we read that "the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah." (Jonah i, 17). We are justified in accepting the story of Jonah as being authentic, because the Lord Jesus, the truest and the highest authority that the world has ever known, verified it, when He said, "For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the fish; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." The evidence is overwhelming that our Lord and two parts of three days and nights in the tomb, from Friday evening to Sunday morning. In view of this fact, we cannot understand from the Savior's words that as Jonah was to the belly of the great fish for parts of three twenty-four-hour periods of time, so not for three full days and nights. Doubtless the time seemed much longer to Jonah than it did to the Savior "in the heart of the earth." Jonah was in the belly of the great fish for parts of three twenty-four-hour periods of time, and Jesus was in the tomb for parts of three twenty-four-hour periods of time, and we have every reason to believe that if they get to heaven they will be human beings in the resurrection. Which is right, or does the Bible teach that Jewish and gentile alike will be human beings in the resurrection? (S. W. G.)

Answer.—The Bible plainly teaches that there will be two kinds of resurrection. There is the resurrection to spirit conditions and honors that will be experienced by those who have been faithful followers of the Lord Jesus throughout this Gospel Age. (I Corinthians xv, 42-44, 51-53; Revelation xx, 6.) This resurrection is not to the angelic plane or sphere of existence, but is to a far higher spirit plane, even to the divine nature, of glory, honor, and immortality. (II Peter i, 4; Ephesians i, 20-22; Revelation xi, 21; Romans ii, 7.) After the Church is completed and glorified, then will follow the world's resurrection, not to spirit conditions of existence, but to human or earthly conditions of perfection, morally, mentally, and physically. This is Scripturally termed a "resurrection by judgment." (John v, 28, 29, R. V.) That is to say, it will be a judging up by trial or judgment and restoring to full perfection and life, under the glorious conditions of the Church, whose members are to judge the world. Acts iii, 19-21; I Corinthians vi, 2, 3.

Q.—From my earliest childhood this Scripture has been near and dear to me—"God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son; that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish but have everlasting life." However, there is one part that I do not fully understand. How can Jesus be the ONLY Son of God if the old theology is the correct one, that God is responsible for every birth and, therefore, our Father and the giver of every gift? Does not every mother consider her baby as a gift from God? (S. S.)

Answer.—The Scripture which you refer to is probably the favorite text of nearly all who are interested in the teachings of the Bible, and for that which you are experiencing difficulty with is fully as satisfactory as the remainder of the text when rightly understood. The Lord Jesus was the "beginning of the creation of God" (Revelation iii, 14), and as such became the agency through whom all other creatures were made. (John i, 3.) Being the Son of God, created by the Logos, was endowed with pre-creative powers, and he brought a family into existence, "born in sin and shapen in iniquity." The members of the race are Adam's children and not the children of God, for all are condemned since or less, and tainted with the virus of sin. Adam and his posterity were disinherited. They will be restored to sonship during Christ's reign.

Q.—Do you think that there will ever be a universal language established in the earth and that all nations will adopt it? Has the Bible answer this question? (Philologist.)

Answer.—The Scriptures unmistakably teach that a great international government is to be established throughout the whole earth, and that it will constitute the "FIFTH UNIVERSAL EMPIRE." The trend of events in our day is absolutely in the direction of the formation of a government whose power and authority will extend all over the entire world. All political and imaginary lines and boundaries will be eradicated. Modern discoveries, inventions, and improvements have already brought all the nations together into a vast community of general interests. From present indications, as well as from the fulfillment of prophecies relating to the latter days, we have reason to believe that within the next decade this world-government will be fully established in the earth, with Jerusalem as the capital city of the world. (Isaiah ii, 2, 3.) The Jews are returning to Palestine in ever increasing numbers (about 600,000) there at the present time, and when the land has been completely restored to them, they will have a government of their own which will form the nucleus for the universal government or dominion, and this arrangement will eventually result in the abrogation of all wars, and the bringing in of peace and prosperity to all people. (Isaiah ii, 4.) The entire scheme for the establishment of this perfect and all-comprehensive government is wonderfully elaborated and outlined in the full presentations of the Scriptures, under the title of "THE KINGDOM OF GOD." A universal language would certainly then be in order, and perhaps Zechariah iii, 9, may have a literal fulfillment.

Q.—If little children go to heaven when they die, why should not God allow all to die when small, except those that would finally be saved? And was not death a good man and a benefactor when he caused the slaying of so many infants in Bethlehem at the time of the Lord's birth? Should not mothers rejoice when their babes die knowing that they have gone to rest in the regions of eternal bliss, and will thus escape the sorrows and sufferings of life with the chances greatly preponderating that they would eventually get into a place of eternal torment in fire and brimstone? (D. A. D.)

Answer.—All the teachings of our senses as well as the operations of our reasoning faculties based upon scientific observations and authentic accounts from the Scriptural declarations to the effect that death is an enemy. (I Corinthians xv, 26.) Nowhere in all of the Bible is death referred to as a friend. If death were a friend then it should belong to the class of human powers and happiness of mind in place of grief and sorrow and anguish of mind and heart. I. S. S. S. (Ecclesiastes iii, 1-8.) In order to enter into the great prison house of death, the tomb, all remain there until He, who has the key to unlock the door of, hades, the tomb, shall come forth at His return from the heavens and will open the doors and release all of the prisoners for whom He died and paid the ransom price for their deliverance. (Revelation i, 18; Isaiah xxi, 1; John v, 28, 29.) It is right enough that mothers should mourn over the death of their little ones, and they should also be comforted in the resurrection of the Word of the Lord that the loved ones shall "come again from the land of the enemy"—the dominion of death. —Jeremiah xxxi, 15, 16.

Q.—We hear so much about "FAITH CURES" these days that I wonder sometimes if there is anything in it. Some of my Christian friends and acquaintances are afflicted with various ailments and diseases and they suffer, as far as I can judge, as much as those who make no profession of Christianity. Why is this? What is your explanation of Psalms xci, 3, particularly the last clause where it says, "and health all thy diseases?" (M. E. J.)

Answer.—Would there be any special merit in being a Christian if all the conditions of the Christlike life were made smooth and favorable? Are the Lord's followers to find the Christian on flowery beds of ease when He and His faithful Apostles suffered and endured great trials and hardships with much weariness and illness of body and grief of mind and heart? Were the sisters called in when Timothy became afflicted with a weak stomach? When Epaphroditus was sick, nigh unto death, he was not healing about his being healed by prayer and faith. There is not a single statement in the Scriptures by which it is set forth that the Christians were ever healed by faith. The Apostle Paul prayed to the Lord three times that his thorn might be removed, but the Lord did not take away this "thorn in the flesh." Are we better than Paul? Christian character can be developed only as other saints by trials and sufferings, either mental or physical, and, therefore, the Lord permits His people to be afflicted. In view of the foregoing, the only reasonable explanation of the words of the Psalmist—"and healeth all thine diseases"—is that the maladies of the soul or character are referred to. These are healed of the Lord by His spirit through the Word of Truth. Disease and death will be destroyed during the reign of Christ on earth at His second advent.—1 Corinthians xv, 25, 26.

British Coal Miners Coming to Conclusion that Minimum Wrge Act is No Good--Seamen Pushing Ahead With Their Agitation for Increased Manning of British Ships--Tom Mann Imprisoned for Alleged Incitement to Mutiny.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, May 14.—There seems no reason to doubt that the Minimum Wage Act for coal miners, the passing of which caused the closing down of the national coal strike, is proving a failure. Only one of the district boards formed in accordance with the provisions of the act has come to any decision. This is the South Wales board and the decision of that board was that the miners should be paid a daily wage of 7% cents with certain percentages which would bring the daily wage up to a little over one dollar. As this figure is less than is already being earned per day in South Wales on the average, and as the South Wales men cannot usually work more than four days a week, the much-boomed Minimum Wage Act would give them less than a living wage. The above amount of wages was arrived at, after the men and employers on the board had failed to agree, by the so-called independent chairman of the board, a titled nobleman who could not perhaps be expected to have much sympathy with the working coal getter. South Wales miners resent the decision and are not going to accept it. If this is going to happen in the first decision arrived at there is not much prospect of the Minimum Wage Act giving the miners the minimum wage and the shorter day and further extensive national trouble already looms up in the near future.

The strike of London tailors which began on May 1 when about 6,000 tailors came out has now extended from the West End tailors who deal with high-class and society clothes to the East End workmen who are a more numerous set and who handle the cheaper trade. It is presumed that at the time of writing quite 50,000 tailors and tailoresses are on strike in London despite the fact that the principal national union in the trade—the Amalgamated Society of Tailors—has refused to sanction the original outbreak and is therefore not handing out any strike pay.

The demand of the men and women are still for healthy workshops to be provided by the employers as opposed to the present system of working at home, and general rises in rates both for the piece workers and the time workers. This would mean practically a minimum of $5 a week for the West End tailors and of half that figure for the West End tailoresses. Dealing with cheaper goods, the East End minimum demands are not so high. A rather unfortunate feature of this otherwise enthusiastic and sympathetic uprising is the existence of differences of opinion between the overlapping unions in the London tailoring trade. These divisions of opinion upon internal management have been the bane of the tailoring trade of this country for many years and no good scheme has yet been evolved to secure the co-operation of all tailors and tailoresses in one union.

Echoes of the Titanic disaster are still found in the increasingly fervent resolutions on the part of British sailors and firemen for an increased manning scale for British ships. Certainly the unions have made their demands for more white sailors on English ships before the great White Star liner went to her end. The national demand, however, for more lifeboat accommodation on board the ships has played into the unions' hands and they are now able, by demanding more lifeboats per ship and a minimum of two white trained sailors per lifeboat, to put their demands for larger crews in a different form and one more calculated to appeal directly to the public interest.

The first sign of a definite fight upon this matter occurred when the great White Star liner, the Olympic, a sister ship to the Titanic, was held up at Southampton, England, by a strike of the crew against what was declared to be still insufficient lifeboat accommodation. Fifty-three of the crew were arrested for mutiny but the police court proceedings were a farce. The men were found guilty but were discharged with no penalty.

The next step was the holding up of the P. & O. liner Mooltan. The ships of the Peninsula and Oriental line, trading as they do between England and India and the East, carry a large number of Indian natives in the crews as crew. The white sailors on board are never the majority of the crew on these ships and very often they are a very small minority. The unions assert that the only line of safety for the passengers and crew on these ships is the provision of at least two qualified experienced white sailors for each lifeboat carried; frequently the steamship line stated provide what would work out at less than one white man per boat. Of course the steamship owners argue the Lascars are thoroughly good and qualified seamen and that they are essential for navigation operations in the tropics. The real reason for their employment, however, may not be put forward to their employers and to the fact that the accommodation provided for them on board is of a much lower and cheaper order than the white sailors would demand. The Moolton eventually sailed but the feeling has become very acute and the Sailors and Firemen's Union has now appealed to the National Transport Workers' Federation for support in a big campaign in all the ports for an increased manning scale and for at least a minimum on all ships of two experienced white sailors per boat.

Tom Mann, the well known British Labor leader, has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment in connection with the charge against him of inciting British soldiers to mutinous practices. It will be remembered that he accepted responsibility for a leaflet addressed to soldiers pointing out that they were likely to be called upon in cases of strikes in this country to fire upon members of their

ANTHRACITE STRIKE ENDED.

AFTER seven weeks of idleness the anthracite coal miners are returning to work, thanks to the agreement reached by the miners and operators on Saturday last. Aside from so much shortage as this cessation of activity has occasioned, the supply will be forthcoming in the regular way. Labor troubles have turned out, in several important respects, less disturbing than was originally feared; but in practically every case peace has come through the granting of increased wages—a result of the high cost of living, which in turn proves a further contributor to the same tendency.

It may at least be said of a decent standard of wages in the coal mining industry that this is one of the most practicable of all ways of conserving our stored resources. Some things are so cheap that they are ruthlessly consumed, even where the total supply is inadequate for economic needs. This was the case with the Buffalo robe. Present and prospective prices of anthracite coal will doubtless have some effect in the direction of its more economical use, and so of extending the time within which the world must make up its mind how to get along without the black diamond. One of the very best features of the agreement reached Saturday is that it covers a period of four years, thus assuring peace to the anthracite region for that period at least. And while the advance in wages is not quite as large as the miners asked, it is a very substantial one indeed, making their wages the highest they ever received. They may well share President White cordial appreciation of the splendid settlement he has secured for them.

UNION WRECKERS AT IT AGAIN.

THE element which has for a long time been unsuccessful trying to wreck the United Mine Workers' organization in the Pittsburgh district is at it again. As usual, the real purpose of the campaign is masked behind an attack against President Peehan. The disorganizers held a meeting within small attendance in Tin Lake Temple on Saturday night—soon—the last place in the world in which a meeting should have been held for the purpose that is animating those behind the conspiracy. A few accredited delegates of the recent regular convention were there, having been duped into thinking the movement has a good purpose. The majority of those present were without credentials from any recognized authority, however, and there was all the less excuse for any local trades union man's taking any part in the affair, for none but a committee of the national organization is by previous arrangement in Pittsburgh today to investigate the so-called charges against President Peehan and consider the distinct affairs generally. The committee consists of three members of the International Executive Board—James P. Mcnan of Iowa; Frank Farrington of Illinois, and Edward Pitzgibbons of Kansas. The committee should have little trouble in discovering that there is ground for the anti-Peehan charges.

ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL PASSES.

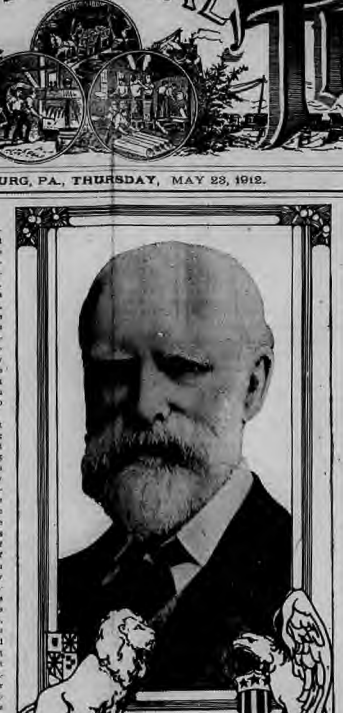
LOGICAL result of the agitation against the courts was expressed in Congress last week when the House of Representatives adopted the Clayton anti-injunction bill by a vote of 244 to 31. Every Democrat present voted in the affirmative, along with many of the progressive Republicans. The bill now goes to the Senate, and inasmuch as it was virtually been made a party measure it will at likelihood meet only the progressive Republican votes in the Senate in addition to the Democratic strength there to pass it and send it to the President. What that official will do with it is not so easy to foretell. The sharp limitation it imposes upon the courts are unquestionably not in accord with his way of thinking. But campaign exigencies, and his anxiety to secure a renomination and re election, may lead him to give the measure his approval. He certainly would not gain popularity by any other course.

There are critics of the bill who consider it a dangerous concession to the people, and who see in it the first step toward the debasement of the judiciary. The farther removed from the people the judiciary is, the better these persons like it. Their trouble is that they do not believe in government of the people by the people for the people but believe in the government of the people by a privileged class for the benefit of that privileged class. And in order to secure this sort of class government, courts must be above and beyond the people's reach. The bill passed by such an overwhelming majority in the House last week brings class-favoring judges down not merely one per but several. It prevents the arbitrary issue of blanket injunctions and virtually requires a judge to proceed in an injunction hearing much in the same way as he would proceed in any other proceeding to deprive men of their liberty. Peaceful picketing and even boycotting is legalized.

The boycotting provision will provoke more widespread question than any other. It is admitted by the most radical legislation either House of Congress has endorsed for many years. But the judges who have been issuing blanket injunctions against working men and asserting their unquestioned lawful right to go on strike and attempt to persuade others to join them are responsible. If they had not been guilty of such excesses, there would have been no such radical retaliatory measures as Congress is passing now.

The Clayton anti-injunction bill is the inevitable reaction against the gross abuse to which unjust and reckless judges all over the country put the injunction process. They were warned, but would not listen. They, and not the leaders of the American Federation of Labor, are the authors of the Clayton measure. When sure a bill passes the House by a majority of over 200, and when a nation-wide agitation rises for the recall of judges, it is only what all sober observers foresaw when the courts began to set themselves up not merely as Judges of the law but as the makers of the law as well.



JAMES BRYCE, BRITISH REPRESENTATIVE IN WASHINGTON

IF, as has been suggested, Ambassador Bryce's tour of the world should prove to be the preliminary to his retirement from diplomatic life his stay in Washington will be especially regretted. His intimate knowledge of the people and institutions of the United States, as well as his kindly personal qualities, has made him one of the best liked representatives ever accredited by Great Britain to this country. His famous "American Commonwealth" was the greatest argument in favor of his appointment, which has been amply justified by his record at Washington. He had exercised political and administrative experience before he entered the diplomatic service, having been a member of parliament and having filled several cabinet positions. The ambassador and his wife are notably modest and democratic.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION

The Illinois Supreme Court has handed down an unanimous decision which destroys the theory of assumed risks. The court rejects the theory of "individual liberty." The court says: "The duty of the master has been changed. He may no longer conduct the business in his own way; he may no longer use such machinery and appliances as he chooses. The measure of his duty is no longer reasonable care to furnish a safe place and safe machinery and tools, but in addition to such reasonable care he must use in his business the means and methods required by the state. The law does not leave to his judgment the reasonableness of enclosing or protecting dangerous machinery, or permit him to expose to increased and unlawful dangers such of his employes as may be driven by force or circumstances to continue in his employ, rather than leave it and take chances of obtaining employment elsewhere under lawful conditions."

TOM MANN SENTENCED

MANCHESTER, England, May 18.—Tom Mann, president of the Syndicalist Education League, has been found guilty, according to the court, of having endeavored to influence British soldiers from their duty," and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Before being sentenced Mann addressed the court, arguing that when acting under the civil law the soldiers were only citizens. He denied that he had endeavored to influence soldiers, as soldiers, from the performance of their duty.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Long Fight of American Federation of Labor for a Law to Restrain Judges From Injunction Tyranny Over Labor is Finally Crowned With Victory in the House of Representatives--Other Developments of the Week.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, May 21. — The House of Representatives last Thursday passed the Clayton injunction limitation bill by a vote of 243 yeas to 31 nays. The Clayton measure is practically a committee bill. The original anti-injunction bill was introduced by W. B. Wilson, coal miner, and Chairman of the House Labor Committee. The bill came up for discussion pursuant to a rule introduced by the Rules Committee, and upon the passage of the rule took the measure from the calendar for general debate and action. The rule under which the discussion proceeded provided that only one amendment should be offered by the Judiciary Committee opposition to the bill, which was presented by Congressman Sterling of Illinois. The prominent features of the Bill as passed provide that no injunction shall be issued without previous notice, giving an opportunity to be heard on behalf of the parties to be enjoined, but if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court or judge that irreparable injury is likely to ensue, authority is given to issue a temporary restraining order, but such order must define the injury and state why it is irreparable, and why the order was granted without notice, and the effect of the order shall only run for seven days unless extended or renewed for a like period. It is also provided that in the issuing of injunctions security must be given by the applicant conditioned upon the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who may be found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained thereby. Also that every injunction issued shall set forth the reasons for the issuance of the same in specific terms. The concluding paragraph of the bill provides that no restraining order shall prohibit any person or persons from terminating any relation, ceasing or persuading others by peaceful means to terminate their employment or from attending at or near a house or place where any person resides or works, or carries on business, or from persuading any person to work or to abstain from work, or from ceasing to patronize, or to employ any party to a trade dispute, or from recommending, advising or persuading others by peaceful means so to do, and concludes that any individual shall not be enjoined from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of any dispute between an employer and employee. The bill now goes to the Senate for action.

The Walsh-Borah bill to create a commission on industrial relations has been favorably reported to the House by the House Committee on Labor. This measure was recently advocated in a special message by President Taft. The bill provides that a commission of nine members named by the President shall make a study of the relations between employes and employers; the cause of industrial unrest, the general condition of labor, and shall endeavor to discover the underlying cause of industrial dissatisfaction in this country and abroad. The commission bill be required to report its findings to Congress, together with such recommendations as may be deemed pertinent to the questions under consideration.

The Atlanta convention of the American Federation of Labor directed the Executive Council to thoroughly investigate the boy scout movement, relative to its influence, economic and otherwise. Agreeable to that recommendation James E. West, chief scout executive, and Edgar S. Martin, scout commissioned and superintendent of play-grounds of Washington, D. C., appeared before the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and explained in detail the movement. The representatives of the scout movement explained that the organization was designed for the character building of boys, the teaching to them of self-help and helpfulness to others, and that the movement was not military in character and that it was in no manner hostile to the aims and purposes of organized labor. It was explained that there were two boys scout movements in this country, the one named the American Boy Scout Movement being of a military character, but not recognized by the regular movement, which is non-military in character. The Executive Council will make a full report on this matter to the coming convention.

Senator Warren of Wyoming, is championing a bill for an appropriation of $100,000 yearly for rifle practice in public schools and colleges, or under the direction of the War Department. The executive council has passed a resolution disapproving of this World peace Wireless Wireless; that such a purpose or tendency contributes to militaristic and nationalistic tendencies to divert the activities and ideals of American boyhood to the destructive and brutal art of war, rather than to the activities and ideals of the arts of peace; that the proposition contained in the Warren bill is un-American and not calculated to develop the best conception of citizenship or the maintenance of the national spirit of liberty."

By a vote of 237 to 38 the House of Representatives receded from its former position and accepted the Bristow amendment to the joint resolution proposing to amend the constitution providing that the United States Senators shall be elected by the people of the several states. The amendment, as agreed to, will now be submitted to the several state legislatures for their ratification. If three-fourths of the states ratify this amendment it will become an accomplished fact.

ANTHRACITE SCALE IS AGREED ON.

(Special to National Labor Tribune.)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., May 18.—By a vote of 233 to 64 the miners' convention this afternoon ratified the peace protocol agreed upon by representatives of the coal operators and the underground workers at their conference in New York two weeks ago. The pairmen will report for work on Monday, and the great body of miners will resume their regular occupation on Wednesday.

While the overwhelming affirmative vote on the resolution was not unexpected, it was the means of creating the greatest enthusiasm among the delegates. The good news spread fast, and there was great rejoicing everywhere throughout the valley.

President White, of the United Mine Workers, issued a statement tonight, in which he says the new agreement insures the anthracite mine workers the highest rate of wages ever paid in the hard coal industry and the first gain in wages they have ever secured without striking.

Mr. White also says the future prospects of the anthracite miners are much better than at any time in the past.

The local coal operators interviewed on the outcome of the work of the convention appear to be pleased. The mine superintendents claim that as a result of the settlement in readiness for a resumption of work on Wednesday, it was different after the six months' strike in 1902. Before that conflict the pump runners were called out and water accumulated in the mines. As a result it took over a month before things were in shape for the resumption of mining.

It was announced that the official notice to the men would be issued through the newspapers. It is as follows:

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 18, 1912.

To the Anthracite Mine Workers—Fellow miners: In accordance with the action of the tri-district convention, composed of Districts 7, 7 and

SOCIALISTS NAME DEBS AND SEIDEL.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 18.—With the national tickets complete, and the party platform out of the way, the Socialist national convention got down to business an hour and a half ahead of time today.

The leaders were insistent they would have final adjournment not later than Sunday night, and possibly by midnight tonight, but so far the rank and file of the delegates have run the convention and done just as they pleased. This was probably best exemplified in the nomination of Eugene V. Debs of Terre Haute. The majority of the bosses were against Debs. This was noticeably so in the case of Morris Hillquit, the New York lawyer, and Victor Berger, Milwaukee's congressman. But when it came to casting the vote the appeals of the intellectuals and the bosses had no effect. The rank and file wanted Debs, and long before the roll call was completed, it was plain that he would receive the choice of two-thirds of the delegates.

The majority of the delegates similarly wanted Charles Edward Russell of New York, for vice president, but finding yielding to the entreaties of the New York machine, permitted his name to be presented for presidential honors for the sake of harmony, but when it was so soundly defeated for Debs, that chagrined, he refused to permit consideration of his name for second place. That empty honor went to the conservatives through the naming of Emil Seidel, former mayor of Milwaukee, but they had a bad scare before they landed their man, as "Big Dan" Hogan of Arkansas developed unexpected strength and only forceful appeals for the "Milwaukee idea" to the eastern and far western delegates prevented the second turn-

TO SHADE MILADY'S LOVELY FACE PARASOLS ARE QUAINTLY PRETTY.

THIS season manufacturers of parasols achieve their novelties by means of variations in the shapes of the sunshades. They are dome shaped, bell shaped, elliptical and in many other novel forms. Sometimes two or three sets of ribs are used in attaining the desired outlines, and then the fitting of the cover is a work that takes the skill of even expert parasol makers. During combinations of color are seen on many new sunshades, and striped effects are popular. Ruchings and embroideries seem to be the modish decorations for the lingerie parasol. Those of linen embroidered by hand, while expensive, are a safe investment, as their popularity does not wane from season to season, and they can so easily and effectively be cleaned when they become soiled. Parasols of pongee are also useful. One of these in natural color is shown here finished with a narrow white border. The other sunshade illustrated is of white linen embroidered with clover leaves.

PARASOLS OF LINEN AND PONGEE

Charlotte Russe.

Line a fancy bowl or glass dish with stale sponge cakes or lady fingers which have been split. Soak two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of cold milk for ten minutes. Heat two tablespoonfuls of milk and add to the gelatin. Set the dish containing the gelatin in hot water until the gelatin is dissolved. Then let it cool, but not harden. Whip a pint of cream and add to it two tablespoonfuls of pulverized sugar, the cooled gelatin and vanilla to flavor. Set in a pan of cold water on the stove and heat till it thickens. Pour into the dish with the cakes. Garnish with maraschino cherries.

Savory Mutton Stew.

In order to make this cut a round and a half of any cheap part of mutton in small pieces. Put a tablespoonful and a half of butter in a stewpan on the fire and as it melts add a tablespoonful and a half of sifted flour. When it is a rich brown add a pint of water and let it simmer. Now put in a tablespoonful and a half of butter in the frying pan and melt. Into this butter stir half of a turnip cut into small cubes, half a chopped onion and half a teaspoonful of flour. When it is a golden brown add the meat. Season with salt, pepper and herbs and simmer for an hour and a half. Serve very hot.

SUNSHADE BEAUTY.

What the Summer Girl Will Find New in Parasols.

PARASOL WITH PERSIAN LINING.

Persian effects are seen in dress materials, in frock trimmings, and now this season comes the Persian silk lining in the latest parasols. The outside covering of such a sunshade is usually of some dark color harmonizing with the costume with which it is to be worn.

The sun-shade illustrated is of dark blue satin with a lining of Persian silk in tones of tan and old blues.

About Parsnips.

In parsnips are starch and sugar and a little gluten. They have not so much water as turnips or carrots and hence are a better food.

Parsnips are served with fish, prefer ably with salt fish, and with corned beef.

Line the Yokes.

The young woman who has a fierce for active sports should see that all her shirt waists have lined yokes at the back. If this precaution is omitted this part will become soaked with perspiration, which will mean ruin to the colored waists at least.

Still Does Her Work.

Mrs. E. M. Scott is just seventy years of age, and yet she still paints in oils and water colors. She was recently presented with a life membership in the National Arts of New York City, having been one of the founders.

Cookery Notes

Good Things For the Spring Table.

Cocoa Flavored With Cinnamon.—If the afternoon cocoa served in place of tea at the sewing meet or at the little supper is especially delicious it might be well to inquire into the secret if such familiarity is warranted by acquaintance with the hostess. The mixture of some such delicious cup is often a surprise to women who have always supposed that chocolate is chocolate and cocoa cocoa. For instance, one woman flavors her cocoa with cinnamon, sherry and vanilla and often adds a cupful of strong coffee to the potful and she gives a strange consistency by using a tablespoonful of arrowroot for every quart of hot milk. Four tablespoonfuls of cocoa are allowed to this amount, and it is cooked slowly for twelve minutes (with the cinnamon, arrowroot and about three tablespoonfuls of sugar. At the end of this time a tablespoonful of sherry is stirred in with a teaspoonful of vanilla and a saltspoonful of salt. Then the cocoa is whipped with a revolving egg beater until it is a mass of foam. The coffee, very strong, is turned in at the very last if it is wanted.

Swiss Steak.—Put two and a half pounds of round steak into a saucepan with just enough cold water to keep it from burning as it slowly cooks until tender enough to fall to pieces. Keep the saucepan well covered. A casserole is the best dish for cooking this tender. Then remove the bones, fat and gristle and mince very fine. Add garlic and pepper to suit the taste, a pinch of nutmeg and a little catsup or hot table sauce. Press out the juices and work into the meat one unbeaten egg. Mold into shapes four inches long and three inches wide. Saute these a nice brown in good sweet dripping or lorein fat; arrange on a hot platter and garnish with parsley. Make a sauce by adding a large tablespoonful of butter to the pressed out juices, a cupful of milk, half a cupful of water and salt and pepper to taste. Thicken with a little flour paste and add half a can of button mushrooms or a dozen small oysters parboiled in their own liquor. In the oysters are used take the oyster liquor instead of the water for making the sauce.

Jelly Filled Oranges.—Take as many large China oranges as liked, then with the point of a sharp knife cut out from the top of each a round about the size of a quarter, then empty out the pulp, taking care not to break the rinds.

Throw into cold water. Make some jelly of the juice pressed from the pulp and strained quite clear. Color one-half a bright rose color with prepared cochineal, leaving the other very pale. When the jelly is nearly cold, drain and wipe the oranges and fill with alternate stripes of the different colored jelly, each color being allowed to get quite cold before the other is poured in. When they are perfectly cold cut into quarters with a very sharp knife and arrange tastefully on a dish with sprigs of myrtle between.

New England Pie.—Use a deep pie plate. Pare Baldwin or greening apples, core and cut in thin slices. Line your pie plate with pastry, place a layer of apples over this and sprinkle with brown sugar. Then another layer of apple with the sugar until the pie plate is well filled and heaped in the middle. Over the top dot bits of butter, shake a bunch of salt over the whole and a small dash of red pepper, which will give a rich, pungent seasoning that other spices will not. Wet the edge of the lower crust sparingly with flour, put on the upper crust and press the edges firmly together. Bake a rich brown.

Parsnip Stew.—Wash and scrape half a dozen parsnips and slice the round way. Put on to cook in just enough water to cover. Add half a dozen thin slices of fat salt pork, two large onions, sliced, half a dozen medium sized potatoes. Stew all together slowly, adding salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne fifteen minutes before serving. When done, add half a cup of cream, a small piece of butter and flour enough to thicken the gravy. Serve hot on a platter around boiled salt mackerel or finnan haddie cooked in milk or broiled.

Puree of Carrots.—Boil enough carrots to make two cupfuls after they have been put through a sieve. Add three cupfuls of milk, add salt to taste and place over the fire and let come to a boil, then add three small tablespoonfuls of flour stirred with a little cold milk. Stir constantly until it boils, add a tablespoonful of butter, a dash of pepper and take from the fire and serve. A little light brown sugar may be added and a dash of grated nutmeg if you like.

Casserole of Chops.—For a casserole of chops, sauté the chops in a pan with minced onions until they are well browned. Then put the chops into the casserole, cover them with two minced peppers, the contents of a bottle of button mushrooms, diced potatoes that have been parboiled and a can of peas drained from their liquor. Moisten the contents with hot water, season with salt and pepper, and cook slowly for about half an hour. Some persons add a tomato.

IN THE WORLD OF FASHION.

Modish Fancies For the Well Dressed Women.

The latest kind of mallines comes one yard wide. It is especially intended for millinery and costs 40 cents a yard. It is called crinkled mallines, and its tones are changeable. Probably the most popular of its shades is the new "heart of fire" tint.

New petticoats for young girls are of china silk in pale colors and white. These are lace edged with an underpiece of silk accordion plaited. Petticoats for silk slips are of chiffon in white and colors, and small chiffon roses of many hues are added about the border, scattered or in wreath pattern.

One of the newest black and white parasols has a fringe of silk around its edge about four inches in depth. However, the black and white parasols with wide stripes are being too generally shown to become popular with the woman of refinement and exclusive taste in dress. A dainty parasol for the debutante in her first summer is of ecru tone very thin plain china silk, and for the maroon there is shown a taffeta parasol, the center in black and white stripes, the border with a flower design in blue, pink and lilac. This has a fringe of chenille.

The Trained Pannier Gown.

Here is one of the latest and most ugly the ugliest of the pannier fashions that have been revived this spring but it emanates from that fountain head of style—Paris. Consequently the leges have encouraged boating, and their graduates have carried their enthusiasm for it to their homes and imported it to other young women.

Canoeing does not make so much of a demand on the strength as boating, and it is therefore a more strictly woman's sport. Any young girl can learn to manage a canoe, but parents should not have permission for her to do so on her first learning to swim. If a knowledge of swimming were required before any other aquatic recreations were undertaken the hearts of mothers might be at peace, no matter how venturesome their daughters.

A houseboat vacation is one of the most delightful imaginable. The journey from town to town along the river can be made with the assistance of the "teams" of farmers, who will welcome the fees for towing the city folks on their way. A small boat should always be part of the houseboat's equipment, and rowing and fishing excursions can then be enjoyed.

No elaborate toilets are needed for the houseboat vacation. A few simple linen sailor blouses like the one shown in the illustration, a couple of serge skirts, sturdy, comfortable shoes, a warm sweater for chilly nights and a jaunty outing cap are enough for the aquatic girl's vacation outfit.

A neat bathing suit should be included for sea or fresh water bathing and for swimming. Flannel or serge are the best materials, and the blouser type of skirt is, after all, the most comfortable.

A sleuth heart may be ruined in fortune, but not in spirit.—Victor Hugo.

AQUATIC SPORTS ARE COMMENDED

The Young Woman Who Can Swim and Row Expertly Is Generally Healthy, Handsome and Clear Witted.

THE recent ocean disaster calls attention again to the chances taken by those who travel by water. Wrecks do not always occur in the icy north, where the swimmer has no advantage over those not thus equipped. It was shown by the promptness with which the Carpathia appeared in response to the wireless appeal of the Titanic that in ordinary waters those who are equipped with life belts and can swim have an advantage and a definite chance of surviving the disasters on the sea. If a woman can swim she can guide herself out of the way of danger, and the belt will keep her up indefinitely.

Even when there are plenty of lifeboats in case of an accident on shipboard, says a veteran traveler, the woman who wears a life belt and can swim insures her own safety, for life craft have met with accidents after launching.

Aside from the assurance of safety from dangers in travel on the water, swimming is one of the most useful forms of exercise. It brings more muscles into play than anything else, and she who swims regularly is apt to be a handsome, clear limbed creature who is ready for any emergency.

Water sports of all kinds are to be commended. In England punting is a favorite sport. Many an English society belle and beauty can take a hand at the oar as effectively as her brother. The best yachtswomen in the world are English.

Our many beautiful lakes and rivers offer a delightful field for the development of aquatic sports in this country. Of late years the women's colleges have encouraged boating, and their graduates have carried their enthusiasm for it to their homes and imported it to other young women.

Canoeing does not make so much of a demand on the strength as boating, and it is therefore a more strictly woman's sport. Any young girl can learn to manage a canoe, but parents should not have permission for her to do so on her first learning to swim. If a knowledge of swimming were required before any other aquatic recreations were undertaken the hearts of mothers might be at peace, no matter how venturesome their daughters.

A houseboat vacation is one of the most delightful imaginable. The journey from town to town along the river can be made with the assistance of the "teams" of farmers, who will welcome the fees for towing the city folks on their way. A small boat should always be part of the houseboat's equipment, and rowing and fishing excursions can then be enjoyed.

No elaborate toilets are needed for the houseboat vacation. A few simple linen sailor blouses like the one shown in the illustration, a couple of serge skirts, sturdy, comfortable shoes, a warm sweater for chilly nights and a jaunty outing cap are enough for the aquatic girl's vacation outfit.

A neat bathing suit should be included for sea or fresh water bathing and for swimming. Flannel or serge are the best materials, and the blouser type of skirt is, after all, the most comfortable.

A sleuth heart may be ruined in fortune, but not in spirit.—Victor Hugo.

I enclose money order for renewal of my subscription to your good paper. I have been a subscriber for a number of years and I like your paper very much, chiefly because of the space you devote to religious subjects. I have read Pastor Russell's Sermons in other papers but never have I seen them in such large and e'ear print and so fu'l and complete as in the National Labor Tribune. I appreciate this and I wish to thank you from the depths of my heart for the part you take in the spread of this gospe' of the kingdom and you will be richly rewarded. I remain,

Sincerely yours,
JOHN BURCH.

New York, May 17.

I want to thank you again for all the good things found in your paper, especially Pastor Russell's Sermon, the Bible Question Box and Bible Studies, also for the reprinting of Pilate's Report. May we not have the reprint of all of those reports. They seem to me to be very valuable documents and although I endeavored to save them when printed before, still I think I missed two or three which I would be very glad to greatly appreciate this reprinting. Thanking you again, I beg to remain yours with sincere appreciation.

MRS. C. W. LONG.

Georgia, May 15.

Am inclosing check to renew my subscription to your most valuable paper. I appreciate it more and more, every feature of it, but my special interest is in our dear Pastor Russell's Sermons and the other features of the Truth.

Most sincerely yours,
MRS. A. L. RYALS.

We have subscribed through the Towers and Peart society, Brooklyn, N. Y., for your noble paper; it is getting better every week, the Sermons of our beloved Pastor C. T. Russel are grand, such good substantial food for all people, then the Sunday School Lessons, Bible Questions and all the dear friends Letters of Appreciation are so good to read and the Lord's table is spread so abundantly in your noble paper that we can hardly wait from one week to another. This is the sixth year we have taken your valuable clean paper and we will be one of your subscribers as long as you print these grand sermons of our dear pastor. We are so glad that you are taking such a noble stand in spreading the Glad Tidings of Great Joy to all the people. May the Lord's richest blessings rest with you. We are sending you a new subscriber and wish we could send a hundred names.

R. R. MANSON AND WIFE.

North Carolina, May 17.

Pastor Russell's "D. D." sermon is to the point. This is one of his very best, and fills a long felt want. That the big "D. D's" and the little "d. d.s" had rather you would mention anthing to them on earth than the Bible is a concrete fact. I had a small chat with a "D. D." not long ago who said that Pastor Russell had never brought out anything new yet notwithstanding the fact he had never read Pastor Russell's books. He refused to read the Studies on the ground that it "took all his time teaching people to do good." Oh! the future move it away! Ten million years—leave that alone—don't mention the future to the average man—don't worry your head and heart about "the deep things of God." Leave that and get busy now! Oh! the now—the beautiful now! which is sweeping sixty ninety thousand of our friends into death! But it's none of our business where they are! If that isn't a cheap way of consoling the broken hearted I'd like to know why. I ran into a crowd of school boys the other day, accidentally, and we had what you would call "A pitched battle." They used their grandfathers "Flint and Steel," and I used a modern "harvest field rapid repeater." I killed as many of them as they did of me, notwithstanding the fact that they were well entrenched behind well built breastworks. There was heavy firing from both sides before the enemy was routed. They shot me with what "Pa and Ma" had taught them and I replied with "What saidth the Scriptures?" The battle raged furious,y! They shot me with "unquenchig fire" and I put them to flight with two small matches by quenching one and allowing the other one to burn up without quenching it. The "Rich man and Lazarus," came up from the rear but were soon repulsed with a fulladie of reason. The "Rich man," who asked for a drop of water got a whole river turned loose which washed away the "gulf" and quenched the "Rich Man's" thirst and was such a flood that it even washed twenty thousand million of Adam's dead children out of their graves so to speak! Rev. 22: 1-4. The "Rich man" became a great nation taking the place of "Uncle Sam" (who is now digging the Panama Canal. As "The Rich man" represented the Jewish nation so does "Uncle Sam" represent the United States of America. Lazarus got out of "Abraham's bosom" in a hurry and joined hands with "The Rich man." About this time the enemy was reinforced with a Sunday school teacher who acted as a kind of umpire—not taking sides with either of us only by a giggle now and then as he was some of his pet errors mowed down by the Truth's "rapid fire gun." A flag of truce was raised which collapsed into a full unconditional surender by the enemy, when I fired them with the following questions: "Which is essential to salvation—a belief in a Catholic purgatory or a belief in a Protestant hell of eternal torture?" This silenced the fort of the enemy which retreated toward the college "too do some thinking," remarked the Sunday school teacher, as we departed. Of course no more feelings were hurt and the only thing that suffered were some long cherished errors of the Dark Ages.

"As cold waters to a thirsty soul so is good news from a far country." Prov. 25: 25.

Later—I have bombarded one of the Students with a bunch of "Hail," and he says he likes it!

Ohio, May 16.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper for about three years, and I appreciate it more and more as it becomes more and more a factor in the spread of the Truth, by the publishing of Pastor Russell's Sermons, and Everybody's Bible Question Box, and Brooklyn Tabernac's Bible Studies. May the Lord bless and continue you in this service.

Yours very respectfully,

Illinois, May 20.

Pardon me for not renewing my subscription before. I also want to add my little testimony to let you know how much I appreciate the reading stuff that you put out.

Your paper is about the cleanest, specialist paper that ever gets to my home.

Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons and Question Box I enjoy very much. Wishing you continued prosperity and every success.

Respectfully yours,

CHRIST'S TRIUMPH A GLORIOUS ONE.

Victor, He Leads Forth His Captives in Multitudes—Died to Rescue Humanity—Pastor Russell Pictures the Release of Death's Prisoners and Shows From Scripture That in the Triumphal Procession Four Grades Will Participate

BOSTON, Mass., Mar. 19.—Pastor Russell spoke here in Boston Theater. In one of his discourses he spoke from this text: "When He ascended up On high, He led a multitude of captives."—Ephesians 4: 8.

This grand expression respecting the glorious outcome of the Savior's work is quoted by the Apostle Paul from the Psalms. (Psa. 68: 18.) The figure thus thrust before our mental eyes is that of a great Conqueror whose victory is being heralded. With the Romans we know that it was a custom that generals returning from wars were granted what were termed "Triumphs"—that is to say triumphal processions, that the people might have tangible evidence of their victories.

Thus, for instance, Titus, returning from the war upon the Jews, in A. D. 70, brought with him certain notable persons, and the Golden Candlestick from the Temple, and these were displayed to the eyes of the people following the conqueror. They were subsequently sculptured on the Arch of Titus, still standing in Rome. And evidently the custom was still older than the days of the Romans, since it was so prophetically set forth by the Prophet David.

Let us permit our mental eye to feast upon the scene presented in our text. Jesus, in fulfilment of the Divine program, had left the heavenly condition and descended to earth, taking a bondman's form or nature in order that He, by the grace of God might taste death for every man; in order that He might rescue Adam and his race from the dying and death condition in which they were—under Divine sentence and under the power of Satan.

Therefore the Redeemer counted not His life precious to Him, but freely delivered Himself up for our offences and died, "the Just for the unJust," that He might bring mankind back into harmony with God. His humiliation ended in death, but His triumph began when, as is recorded, God raised Him from the dead by His own power, and set Him at His right hand of His own Majesty—"far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named."

HE THAT ASCENDED FIRST DESCENDED.

The prophecy says nothing about our Lord's descendure from the heavenly glory to the earthly nature, but St. Paul supplies this feature saying, "He that ascended, what is but that He first descended, into the lower condition of the earth." Thus the Apostle asserts that in that descent ended is He that ascended above all heights, that all things may be fulfilled through Him.

An important thought here noted is that our Lord not only left the heavenly glory, but that He returned to a still more excellent glory—He did not suffer the disastrous loss of the heavenly nature as a result of His obedience in taking the human nature. As He left the heavenly nature He left the human nature to ascend again to that which He had before, with the additional glory of the divine nature.

LEADING FORTH THE CAPTIVES.

With most of the conquerors in olden times the captives were made slaves. Not so, however, will be the record of Jesus' victory. He leads forth to liberty and eternal life those who have been slaves of sin and death. His train of captives is a long one indeed; the procession has already occupied eighteen centuries, and is yet to be the great work of the thousand years of that Messianic reign!

First of all in the procession are the saints—"the Church of the Firstborn, whose names are written in Heaven." In the forefront of them we see the twelve Apostles, St. Paul taking the place of Judas. The Apostles are to be Kings who are to reign with Christ in pre-eminent positions; but following them are some others of the saintly company of Kings—in all a "little flock."

Then will come a company more numerous, but "less heroic"—a great multitude," canvassed, but "with palm branches," not antitypical Priests, but antitypical Levites, associates and servants of the Royal Priesthood, the Bride. Then will follow (Hebrews 11: 35-40) other faithful ones of the past, the Ancient Worthies. The Prophet speaks also of the "rebellious house." The class as previously specified were not rebellious, but glad and willing to endure all to do the will of the Father and to attain the liberty of sons of God, as the first-fruits of the triumph of His Lamb.

But during the thousand years of Christ's reign He will lead forth the "rebellious house"—the world of mankind—not all of them, we may be sure, for some, the Scriptures positively declare, will die the Second Death, because, after realizing their deliverance, they will love sin and will therefore be destroyed as enemies of righteousness. But it is a blessed thought that many of those who are now aliens, strangers and foreigners from God through wicked works are in this condition of opposition, not willingly, not intelligently, but by reason of the ignorance and weaknesses which came to them by heredity, under the reign of sin and death.

It is to be a distinct feature of the great Triumph of Immanuel that every eye shall be opened and every ear unstopped, that "the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth," during His glorious reign of righteousness. Are we not justified in the thought that all will follow in which all the willing and obedient shall receive the Holy Spirit, which then will be poured out "upon all flesh" even as now, during this Gospel Age, it is poured out upon God's servants and handmaidens only?

"Oh, that will be a glorious Triumph for the great Redeemer!" is the language of the Bible, "He shall see the fruitage of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied." What a glorious fruitage—not only His own exaltation—not only the perfecting of His faithful bride class, and the additional exaltations of the virgin, her companions, which follow her, and the exaltation of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets, but finally the deliverance to human perfection of all of the groaning creation will help to accept the same upon the Divine terms of loyalty to God and to the principles of His Government as these shall be made known to them.

"HE GAVE GIFTS UNTO MEN."

It was the custom in olden times that a king coming into authority and power should give gifts according to His wealth. Governors and princes would be needed and he would dispense the honors of these offices to those found faithful in his service, loyal in the defense of His cause. So in this prophetic reference to our Lord's extension it is declared, not only that He would lead forth a multitude of captives, granting them freedom, liberty, blessings, but also that He would confer certain gifts.

We might have spent valuable time guessing the nature of these gifts which the great Redeemer would dispense, but such a waste of time is unnecessary, since the Apostle proceeds to explain the matter and tells us what gifts are meant. He says, "And He gave some Apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers."

There is an astounding thought connected with this statement—that the Apostles were not self-appointed and that they had no successors, and that the work of evangelizing, or making known the "good tidings," and the pastoral work amongst believers and the teaching work amongst believers are all under the supervision of the Head of the Church, the great Victor, who redeemed us with His blood, and who proposes, first, to lead forth a bride class, and subsequently all the willing and obedient.

It behooves us to notice that the Apostle does not intimate that Jesus gave to some Methodism, to others Presbyterianism, and others Roman Catholicism, etc. No, when we find such thoughts it was because of more or less misunderstanding—because we failed to see first that there is but the "one Church of the Living God, whose names are written in heaven," and second, that that one church is not any of the various sects and parties but includes the saintly ones of all of these. The Lord knoweth them that are His."

NOT GIVEN TO CONVERT THE WORLD.

Noting carefully the Apostle's argument we perceive that the Master did not give these gifts for the conversion of the world. He does specify, however, that they were for, namely, for the perfecting of the saints for the work or the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ—the Church, the Bride-class. Is it supposable that the Apostle erred in this statement and that the fact is the reverse—that these gifts were provided for the conversion of the world all to do the will of the Father and to attain the liberty of sons of God, as the first-fruits of the triumph of His Lamb.

But during the thousand years of Christ's reign He will lead forth the "rebellious house"—the world of mankind—not all of them, we may be sure, for some, the Scriptures positively declare, will die the Second Death, because, after realizing their deliverance, they will love sin and will therefore be destroyed as enemies of righteousness. continued and needs no replenishment. We still have their instructions as fully as the early Church, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work."

That the Apostle did not understand the matter to be merely for a day, but throughout this Age, during the completion of the Church, is contrary to evidences, in its statement, manner, that all these gifts were for the edification of the body of Christ and the perfecting of the saints to the ministry—until we all come to the unity of the faith and to the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Ephesians 4: 13.

This is a wonderful statement, however we view it. Such we say that it appears to each individual member of the Church of Christ, and that each individual needs some time was not unity of faith, and that the knowledge of the Son of God, and the perfection of manhood in Christ, and to a developed stature or maturity in Christ? Or shall we understand the meaning to be, until the entire Church of Christ shall have reached a full knowledge and shall, as a whole, have come to the condition of a perfect Man, of which Christ is the Head, and we are the members—to the full development or stature of the Anointed, the Messiah, Head and member? We believe that the latter is the Apostle's thought.

Nevertheless, it cannot be disputed that the selection of these members all the way down the Age must have been along the lines here indicated. Individually, one partially developed would not be fitted for the Kingdom. One not in the unity of the faith would not be suitable. One not developed to the proper measure or stature as a Christian would not be suitable. Nothing more plain than that the individual Christian needs a great deal of instruction, edification, building up in the holy faith, testing, proving, chiseling, polishing, fitting, preparing before he shall be ready for a place in the glorious Temple of God, the Church in glory.

GOD'S PEOPLE NO LONGER NEED BE MISLED.

This thought is confirmed by the succeeding verses, in which the Apostle tells us that by the assistance of these, the Divinely provided gifts, teachers, etc., God's people need no longer be children, to be tossed to and fro, and be misled by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness of those who would deceive. On the contrary, being sincere, and speaking the truth in love, they are to grow up into membership in the Anointed One who is all things—coming fully and completely into fellowship and glorious union with the Head, even Christ.—Verses 14, 15.

Proceeding, the Apostle tells us that all who are recognized as members of the body of Christ must be properly joined to the Head—by a proper compact, or covenant, intelligently made and fully intended. This union must be complete, and it requires the entire Gospel Age to effect this development and compacting as members, that the whole Body of the Anointed may be one, symmetrical, fitted, well-organized, making increase in its members and edifying itself in love—growing in grace and in knowledge and in character-likeness to the Head of the Church. Jesus Verse 16.

In conclusion, then, the Captain of our Salvation has gone before, He has accepted us as His joint-heirs, and we are following on, filled by the gifts which He dispensed when He ascended up On High; and we, in turn, will be His gifts to the world of mankind. When as Priest and Kings we shall be associated with our Lord, we shall bless all the families of the earth with a glorious opportunity of knowledge and obedience, that they may, if they will, attain life everlasting. "the gift of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

New York, May 17.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

We thought Pastor Russell's Sermon on the "Lost Key of Knowledge" so good that we are going to send some out as sample copies.

We heartily recommend your paper to all and trust that you may have some subscribers. We appreciate the Sermons more each week, also the Sunday School Lessons and Question Box, and trust you will continue to publish them as long as the interest work goes on. We believe the newspaper is one of the best means of enlightening the people who have so long been in darkness. Praying the Lord continued blessing on the newspaper work.

We are sincerely yours,
CAROLYN A. WAGNER.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

Your paper grows better and better. The way you handle the Labor Question is satisfactory and the religious features, the best of any paper I ever saw. "Pilate's Report" is some more than worth the price you ask for the paper. The many interesting letters from the friends from different states and places are certainly very enjoyable and the Question Box for Bible students and Pastor Russell's glorious Sermons are all grand to me. May the dear Lord bless you more and more in the great work you are accomplishing. Wishing you God-speed and with Christian love and prayer.

Yours humbly in His service,
MRS. E. T. WALKER.

JOSEPH'S CARPENTER SHOP.

We have finally established the true site of the carpenter shop of St. Joseph, in Nazareth, where our Saviour passed His boyhood and early manhood. Here we may believe that He followed the calling of a carpenter.

It was by investigating the ancient traditions accepted by the early Crusaders, that we identified the holy site. The Crusaders built a chapel over the spot where they were told the carpenter's shop stood, and although this building long ago fell into ruins, it preserved the subsoil to our day, and acted as a guide to the investigators. Now we have not only found the remains of the Crusaders' church, but beneath them the remains of an older church, which appears to contain a vestige of the actual carpenter shop.

The Gospel of St. Mark, chapter vi., verse 3, tells us that the Jews asked: "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary?" This remarkable question was asked when Jesus was astonishing the inhabitants of Nazareth in His preaching in the synagogue there. It is the only suggestion in the Gospels of the material that was followed by Jesus as a boy and young man, which, of course, it is certain that St. Joseph was a carpenter by trade.

As long ago as 1620 the ruins of the church, which once stood on the site, were visited and recognized as being near or upon the spot, and in 1754 a house built upon the ruins, was pointed out by faithful pilgrims, and a chapel was raised there in 1347.

It was not until 1880 that other houses were built on the ruins were purchased, since which time the work of excavation has been going steadily on. Quite recently we were fortunate enough to find the ancient grotto or the carpenter's shop and trace the whole plan of the great Crusader church, which once stood here.

The church is only a hundred yards north of the Basilica of the Annunciation, and separated from that building to a street. When the facade of the ruined church was uncovered, we found that the bases of the pedestals at the entrance were still in place, while one of the ancient walls were still standing. The church was built with the axis exactly to the east, and the only door to the east. The whole facade resembles closely that of St. Anne in Jerusalem, which belongs to the eleventh or at latest the beginning of the twelfth century. The simplicity of the entrance and the general plan prove that it goes back to the earliest Crusaders' time. In order to enter you must go down several steps, and there is the church, some twenty-nine yards long, with an cupola or transept. The walls were almost four feet thick built of such solidity in order to support the arches. There were three apses on the eastern end of the church, the central one being eighteen feet wide and the other two half that width.

One most important point brought out by these researches is that the Crusaders, as long ago as the eleventh century, rebuilt a church which originally stood here. From the fragments of the earlier church it appears that it was built in the fifth century, or less than 450 hundred years after our Saviour's time.

A stairway was found leading down into a grotto, six feet and a half high, thirty feet long and fifteen feet wide. On the western end the grotto is connected with other grottoes, forming light and air from an opening in the center of the church. Around the main grotto are small chambers or lamps. On the south side is a passage to other grottoes, which are at present outside of the church.

What is the remarkable central grotto situated in the very middle of an ancient church, with which it is connected by a stairway, which leads from the middle of the nave of the church, at a spot right in front of the altar? These are no traces whatever of any religious ceremonies having been conducted in it. But it was certainly in the rock-hewn cave or grotto was known to the Crusaders and that they built a church over it, is plain, for, from the excavations that an ancient church of the fifth century stood here. Since the church over, it is evident that a dwelling house must have stood there even before the fifth church was erected.

The pilgrim Arculf of the seventh century reports having seen this old church, and described it to Adamnanus. The traditions gathered by Quaresmius affirm it positively. According to Arculf's description this was none other than the church over the carpenter shop of Saint Joseph. The entire line of tradition supports the statement that this is the carpenter shop.

Pennsylvania, May 13.

I have just received my second Tribune and am glad I became a subscriber on account of Brother Russell's Sermons and the way in which you publish them, but I find so many other good things in your paper also.

The Question Box is fine. I can heartily agree with all of the answers and interesting questions in the last two issues in the Question today May 14th top of last column, page five, I recone universal language, you reply that Zech. 3: 8, may yet have a literal fulfilment. This should be Zeph. 3: 8, as you will see by consulting the prophecies.

I am sure you will pardon me for calling your attention to this as some may look it up in Zech. 3: 8 and of course will fail to see the point of your thought.

You are certainly publishing a beautiful paper and again I wish to thank you for the space given Brother Russell's Sermons. I have been acquainted with him 25 years, and in all of that time he has done all he could do to help me to serve the Lord.

He has been a faithful pastor to each of his charges, but has been so hiring to shear them.

I am hoping that the favor of the Lord may abide with you in the good work you are doing. How beautiful "The Gospel of the Kingdom." God's eternal purpose to save the church of this age and steal it to the Divine nature and that we it as He all powerful agency for blessing all the families of the earth literal and dead, as promised in the Abrahamic Covenant, and sealed with Jehovah's oath. Gal. 3: 16, 27, 29 and 1 Cor. 15: 12.

With best wishes yours, etc.
HAYDEN SAMSON.

Ohio, May 16.

Reading in your valid not journal today, I see our dear beloved Brother Russell defends himself against the ebullitions and accusations of Dr. Haldeman. Pastor Russell is thoroughly in the right and Heidsman is essentially wrong. No doubt many are wondering why the good pastor is "scoring" the denominational preachers so hard, and hoping that these lines might be of some little benefit I write the following: Personal.

I have no desire that my name should appear in print, but thinking that this testimony would be to the point I write it down. I hold in my hand a letter from one of the big denominational church papers, from the editor of one of the leading Christian Journals in this fair land.

This Christian journal has to my positive knowledge had all Pastor Russell's articles in it, published against the Present Truth by various correspondents attempting to show the "errors" of "Russellism," "materialism," "premillennialism," etc. However since this great journal and its church had always boasted of the "square deal" unto all, and since I was formerly a member of the same, I wrote a very kind, moderate explanatory note concerning the glorious results of Christian reason-sacrifice, the benefits to the church and the widening benefits to accrue to the whole world. Nevertheless the editor very kindly informed me that such subjects could no longer be discussed, notwithstanding the fact that previously he had published several that I had written. Here was a puzzling anomaly, a divergence, a reading and as far from the "square deal" as day is from night!

Here are the facts in just one case, and, while it is not for me to offer caustic criticism, yet honestly speaking, the word "justice" seems to be of very little use in any prominent preachers today. From this and other instances I am forced to conclude that honesty, fairness, squareness, sincerity—and righteousness are not the standard in most centers of ecclesiastical authority. Like a hollow shell these great systems are slowly forming en masse into one gigantic church trust, a church combine, and, in so doing are standing with feasibly step retugning to mediæval-ism; proud of their attainments and achievements, waxing fat from every vestige of truth and right doctrine, and apparently blind to the fact that beating with unrelied face these pseudo systems of religion are rapidly reverting to mediæval aggrandizement, purposes and practices.

May God bless every fair-minded man to discern between truth and error, between right and wrong, between freedom and injustice, and this discerning may he see and know that Pastor Russell is battling in the battle set down for Jehovah's Justice, Love and Righteousness!

With hearty appreciation in your many labors,
JOHN H. COYLE.

I have been thinking ever since receiving the Tribune, I would write you of my appreciation of your valuable paper, thanking you for the help I received from Pastor Russell's Sermons and Question Box. May God bless you in your good work.

Sincerely yours,
MR. AND MRS. M. T. YORBURGH.

WORKING TOOL STEEL.

Information as to Hasting, Tempering and Hardening.

It is desirable that all tools should be heated in a furnace with properly attended and the temperature for the different grades of steel should not exceed 1,450 degrees F. If a gas or oil furnace is not available the old method of heating must be resorted to. Do not heave the tool to soak in the fire, as this decarbonizes the steel on the surface, which will cause severe hardness in hardening, but apply the heat slowly until the heat is heated through and then bring the heat up quickly as possible without too great heat on the sharp corners.

Experience shows us that carbon steel tools when hardened at from 700 degrees to 780 degrees centigrade expand. They neither expand nor contract, except when over 800 degrees they contract. See that the tongs are neither cold nor damp in handling tool steel, as this is liable to cause cracks through contraction. If a tool has a hole through it, a rod is better than tongs to handle it with. See that the hardening fluid is ample for the size of the tool being hardened. Want of attention to this fact is one cause for defects in hardening tools.

When cracks of a circular form occur it is an indication of uneven heating. When cracks of a vertical nature are found they show that the steel has been burned. Soft and hard places show unevenly cooled or soaked. If a tool is not moved about in the hardening fluid it will show these hard and soft places and is liable to crack. Tools will show hard and soft spots if allowed to drop to the bottom of the tank before cooling. They should be thoroughly cooled before letting sink to the bottom.

Overheated Steel.—If a tool in heating comes in direct contact with the blast of the smith's fire it will become surface burnt and will show hard and soft places in hardening.

Hardness in Gas Furnaces.—Great care should be used in heating with the gas furnace. If more gas is used than the right proportion the steel tools will follow in hardening, or, if more air than gas is used, the oxygen in the air strikes the steel, forming scale or iron on the surface. The result is a soft tool.

Tempering.—After a tool is hardened it is ready for tempering. The temper is determined by colors on the surface of the steel. The only correct way of demonstrating this is by the use of the sclerescope, which will show exactly the hardness degrees as they actually exist. One must depend altogether on the color, for a piece of soft steel would show colors as well as tool steel.

To reduce strains in tools it is a good plan to dip into the hardening bath and as soon as the cutting parts are lukel remove quickly and replunge into an oil bath. This will relieve the hardening strains.

Electricity on the Farm.

A recent demonstration of the economies effected by putting electricity to work "doing the chores" of the farm showed that electric power can supplant human muscle in what is now quite as well as the electric light can supplant the old, oil-dripping barn lantern.

The generator, driven by an oil engine, supplied current to an outfit of motors for an autogatic pump for the farm water supply, a centrifugal pump for irrigation and available for fire purposes also, a dairy installation from the dust through by belts and shafting) consisting of a refrigerating machine, a milk cooler, a cream separator, an automatic churn and butter worker, a bottle washer, an ice cream freezer, an electric grack, a large thrashing machine, corn sheliers and feed choppers, laundry machinery, milking machines, silo filler, feeding shaft for the shearer and horse and cattle groomer, ventilating fans and household equipment, including cooking devices. Satisfactory.

Uncle Sam's Water Powers.

A study of western rivers by geological survey engineers has developed the fact that many very great water powers are still owned by the government. A large number of power site withdrawals have been made by the president on the recommendation of the geological survey since May, 1909, when the first of these recommendations was made. The power site withdrawals now outstanding aggregate 1,741,622 acres, distributed along the important power streams of the western states. Reservoir withdrawals have also been made to the extent of 94,008 acres.

Marking a Device Patented.

We are in occasional receipt of a pamphlet article marked "Patented," with the date of the patent. It is doubtful, however, whether one in 100 or 500 who notices the mark realizes its importance to the patentee, says the Scientific American. The statute on the subject makes it the duty of all patentees or those holding under or making the patented article for the purpose of sale, to mark "Patented" together with the day and year the patent was granted, and the same statute provides as a penalty for not marking that "in any suit for infringement by the party failing to so mark, no damages shall be recovered by the plaintiff, except on proof that the defendant was duly notified of the infringement and continued, after such notice, to make, use or vend the article so patented."

ROAD SURFACE BREAKERS

Machine Rips Up Old Material Preparatory to Regrading.

A scarifier or surface breaker designed for attachment to a steam roller used in road work is shown in the accompanying illustration. The purpose of the scarifier is to break up the hard crust or surface of old macadam roads and put them in shape for resurfacing and grading with the material so broken up.

The scarifier consists of nine spikes spaced on a bar which is attached to the rear end of the steam roller. As the roller travels forward the spikes are forced into the surface, tearing and breaking it up to a sufficient depth to leave the whole mass loose and in a condition to be easily shaved up by a grader. The spikes are readily and lowered by steam, and steam pressure is exerted to hold them in the ground, giving a cushioned compression. When solid rock is encountered, a piston working against the steam permits the spike bar to rise enough to allow the spikes to pass over, but forces the bar down again when softer material is encountered. It is claimed that no matter what position the roller wheels take on an uneven road the scarifier will follow the surface and tear it up to the same depth in the low as in the high places.

Chinese Cutlery.

The metal chiefly used in the manufacture of knives, Chinese experts, exclude horseshoes made of very soft iron, says the United States consul at Shanghai. These last have been sold here come from Glasgow and Birmingham. It is an absolute necessity that the cold shear should be of very soft iron. The native blacksmiths will not buy old shoes of harder iron, nor will they touch those made of steel. The investigations I have been making on this subject have proved interesting. I have been unable to find any reason for their refusing steel shoes, except that they like iron which is easily workable by their primitive methods. I purchased, as an experiment, a Chinese razor down in the native city, for which I paid 30 Fungtsu (an American currency about 9 cents). Upon the strop this implement, the cutting edge of which is about two inches long, would take a fair shave but would not hold it, requiring any number of strokings before the act of shaving could be completed. After manufacture the blades are simply case hardened.

Delicate Weighing Machine.

There is a microbalance, the invention of the Italian physicist, Giuseppe Sartori, which is of such extreme delicacy that it clearly demonstrates the loss of a particle of musk by volatilization. The the invisible perfume floating in the air is indirectly weighed. The principal part of the apparatus is a very thin thread of glass, fixed at one end and extended horizontally. The microscopic object to be weighed is placed upon the glass thread near its free end and the amount of flexure produced is observed with a microscope magnifying 100 diameters.

A mote weighing one-thousandth of a milligram is said perceptibly to bend the thread.

Electric Sterilizing.

An apparatus that sterilizes milk by electric light has been invented in Holland. It contains a mercury vapor lamp, so arranged that a thin stream of milk may be made to flow over the surface of it. The violet ray from the light quickly destroy all bacteria in the milk. Demonstrations were first made with vessels containing various kinds of bacteria. The water was purified in a few minutes with but slight increase of temperature. If this method of sterilizing milk without heating proves to be practical it will have a wide field of usefulness.

Must Name Team June 11.

Because the American Olympic selection committee cannot hold its trials in Chicago June 8, that being the first Sunday after all intercollegiate and intercollegiate championships of the country are held, the Swedish Olympic committee has extended the date of closing entries to June 11 instead of MAY 30, the original date.

Waterproofing Cement.

Cement work, consisting of one part cement and three parts sand, can be made waterproof after the work has set by applying as much kerosene to the surfaces as they will absorb.

WHEEL ADJUSTMENTS.

Directions For Repairing Loose Automobile Regrinding.

There are certain operations more or less ordinary about the overhauling of an automobile which nevertheless if not attended to will cause a lot of trouble, says Blacksmith and Wheelwright. Among the class of operations may be included the care which it is necessary to take of the wheels and their parts and attachments, and under no noise of a practical nature concerning these may be permitted.

Very often there will develop in the front road wheels of a car a certain amount of play due to wear which manifests itself in a slight "wobbling" of the wheels while they are rotating. If the wheels were jacked up, and then taken hold of by the spokes and worked backwards and forwards the play will be distinctly felt. In cases where the wheels are provided with a plain bore bearing the most probable cause of the play is due to wear on the washers which takes the bearing as well as that from the polished surface of the rim round the bearing. The trouble can therefore be cured by taking off the wheel and turning out the washers. These are in most cases about one-eighth inch thick on the bearing part, and about one-quarter inch on the inside part; this is where the play can be taken up.

In order to carry out this piece of work, the washer should be put in a lathe and turned out sufficiently on the inside part to allow the play disappear, however, must be taken not to take off so much metal from the washer as to spoil the original shape. Care must also be taken that no matter what position the roller wheels take on an uneven road the washer will follow the surface and bear it up to the same depth in the low as in the high places.

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, May 20.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

The Tribune is a welcome weekly visitor in our home. We appreciate the good clear type and clean white paper which makes it so bright and attractive.

We subscribed for the paper because of the publication of Pastor Russell's sermons. We also are interested in the Bible Questions, Sunday School Lessons and Appreciations and enjoy the views very much, which some of the friends share with us through the Tribune.

God is not unfaithful to forget your work.

Yours in the interest of the Truth
MRS. F. M. CUSTER.

North Carolina, May 15.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I wish to express my appreciation of your valuable paper. I especially like Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box, Sunday School Lessons and Letters of Appreciation. I think your paper too good to keep as I generally pass it on or send it to some friends for the second reading. We were very much disappointed by not receiving it last week. It must have got lost in the mail somewhere. Now if you would be pleased to mail me a substitute (May 5th issue) I will appreciate it very much.

I wish you many blessings in thus sending out the Truth to your many readers.

Yours very truly,
MISS T. E. FARLAND.

Pennsylvania, May 19.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

I surely appreciate your valuable paper very much and especially the way you print Pastor Russell Sermons, the Bible Question Box, the Sunday School Lessons, and also the Letters from the dear friends very much. It is such a nice clean paper and such good clear print I trust that you may continue the good work.

For years I was searching the Scriptures for a clearer knowledge of the Lord's Word, but I never got the help I wanted until I got Pastor Russell's Studies in the Scriptures.

Yours truly,
MRS. ADELA HARLEY.

THE FOREIGN MISSION REPORT

We had purposed giving our subscribers a full copy of the Report of the Committee sent out by the International Bible Students Association with Pastor Russell Chairman for investigation of foreign mission conditions, etc. We find that the Report with its illustrations would occupy more of our columns than we feel justly devote to it. We have, however, made another arrangement for the benefit of such of our readers as are interested in foreign missions. We have arranged that you may write a post card giving your name and address and saying that you are subscribers to this journal. In response you will get post free an illustrated copy of the Report. Address your post card, International Bible Students Association, 17 Hicks street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—The strike of the cashiers and shipwrights of the bay cities has ended in a complete victory for the strikers, the Master Shipowners' association conceding every demand of the unions including the union shop, eight hour day and a minimum wage of $. One thousand men have returned to work.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 18.—It is stated by officials of the local Bakers' Workers' Union that arrangements have been made with most of the master bakers to inaugurate the eight hour day. The new scale just effective calls for no change in wages other than for an increase in overtime of 5 cents per hour.

Washington has decided that the eight hour law for miners passed at the last session of the Legislature is constitutional.

TAYLOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

TRUTHFUL WORDS—POLITE SPEECH.

Matthew v, 33-37; James iii, 1-12; v, 12.
May 28.

"Putting away falsehood, speak every man truth with his neighbor, for we are members one of another."—Ephesians iv, 25.

IN today's study we note the contrast between Christ's teachings and those of the religionists of His day. The Master's utterances in this matter of swearing, but the Great Teacher said, "Swear not at all." How foolish is swearing of every kind! We are not, of course, objecting to solemn affirmation or legal swearing as required by law. Note the injunction of the Master, "Let your speech be yea, yea, nay, nay"—anything further implies evil. The Master's meaning evidently is, When you say yes, let it be yes; when you say no, let it be no. Tell the truth! Your friends and neighbors by and by will learn how to value your speech.

In the second portion of our study we find a new subject, "Be not ambitious, my brethren, knowing that we shall receive severer testimony." In many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word he is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."—Saint James

The Bible teaches that we are higher critics.

We are to be ambitious to serve in this respect. They have a special gift of speech and another special gift of opportunity to use that gift in preaching a wide influence, their responsibility evidently is proportionate.

It is not for us to be fault-finders or others; there is One that judgeth; the Lord. We greatly fear, however, that many ministers are falling seriously short of uttering. Many tell us that for years they preached what they did not believe. How terrible! Surely nothing to their manhood! How serious a reflection upon their brand of Christianity!

A Little Match Starts a Big Fire.

Saint James gives some forceful illustrations. Christians should put a bridle of restraint upon their own mouths even as they put them into the mouths of their horses.

Not all of us are fluent with wide opportunities for good or evil, but in our homes, in our offices, shops, markets, we may exert a powerful influence for evil influences, far reaching for either blessings or misery, either upbuilding or down tearing character, according as we are interested in foreign missions. We have arranged that you may write a post card giving your name and address and saying that you are subscribers to this journal. In response you will get post free an illustrated copy of the Report. EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR Bible QUESTIONS ANSWERED AS PROMPTLY AS POSSIBLE, ON BY MAIL IF DESIRED, BY LETTER TO THE EDITOR OF THIS JOURNAL.

Q.—As there has never been any revelation of the Sabbath day these two thousand years before the Lord Jesus was born, will they come up out of the ground in the same way as those who have died since the death and resurrection of the Lord? Do you think that the resurrection will take place in the year 1914 A. D. If not, then give an estimate of the time when the awakening will begin. (W. A.)

Answer.—In regard to the resurrection of all who have died, both those who lived prior to the time of our Lord and since, the Scriptures are very explicit in stating forth that all the members of the race are to be awakened from the sleep of death and will come forth from the tomb. Remember the Lord's words: "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all they that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth." (John v, 28, 29, R. V.) The Prophet Daniel in the writings of the Old Testament, long before the birth of the Lord Jesus, foretold of the general resurrection of the dead, saying, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to everlasting shame and contempt." (Daniel xii, 2.) Again we read of our Lord, that He "is the prize of God hasted to every man." (Hebrews ii, 9.) And inasmuch as He died for all, then all must be awakened from the sleep of death. We know of no place in the Scriptures where the date of the resurrection is set forth. Therefore we could not say definitely 1914 A. D. is the time appointed for the awakening, or some other time. Certain scriptures, however, are plainly agreed that we are living somewhere very near the time for the Lord's return, and position for this is the time. Enough: our estimate would be that the resurrection will begin sometime during this century.

Q.—When the resurrection occurs, at the time of the second advent of the Savior, what will be the condition of all at the resurrection? Will the people come forth at the very same spot where they passed away, and will they have clothes and require food and water to sustain their lives? What will become of the people already living upon the earth at the time of the resurrection? Will it be invested in the matter of the resurrection and would like to get all of the information that can be obtained. Kindly set forth the details as much as possible from the Scriptures. (W. A.)

Answer.—The Scriptures teach that this earth is to be glorified (Habakkuk ii, 14; Matthew v, 5) when Paradise is restored (Luke xxiii, 43; Revelation ii, 7), and that it is to be an everlasting habitation for mankind (Isaiah xlv, 18; Ecclesiastes i, 4). We do not know and have not known the different members of the race will come forth, the Bible does not particularize. We may reasonably suppose, however, that in the awakening the people will come forth gradually, those having died the most recently being first awakened, and then the preceding generation next and so on back to father Adam and mother Eve. We presume that others will be supplied them as they come forth, and that they will, in general, be in harmony with the locality in which they were born. We do not believe, however, that they will assemble, except in cases, where some were influenced by the Spirit of God, and therefore by the providences they will set out and drink as is former days; we know of no teachings to the contrary. Many living at the time of the Lord's return will, we believe, continue to live on, and may make their exit from the present sphere by gradually attaining perfection, through obedience to the Lord's commands.—Ezekiel xviii, 20, 23.

Q.—We have all heard something more or less of "purgatory." As a Bible we find we have carefully searched the Scriptures endeavoring to find out some of the particulars relating to the conditions and to what there is to be found in purgatory. Is it to be purified by being singed and scorched in fire and brimstone for hundreds and thousands of years, and thus prepared to wing its flight to Heaven to be one of the New Jerusalem. A number of my friends seem to have the thought that, in order to gain admittance into the Kingdom of Heaven, one must be able to present a certificate as bill of approval good health to the gatekeeper, St. Peter. What I wish to know is: where do we find the Scripture authority for this peculiar doctrine? (H. K.)

Answer.—The word from the word "purgatory" is not to be found in the Bible, but there is a sense in which the doctrine is scriptural. The Apostle Peter, the Church of Christ, are being purged of sins now in this present life, and by literal fire and brass, but by the fiery trials and afflictions referred to by the Apostle when he said, "Think not strange concerning the fiery trials that shall come upon you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." (I Peter iv, 12.) When the Church has been completed and glorified in the close of this Christian Era, then the world in general, in the Age following, the thousand-year Era of Christ's reign, will be gradually purged or cleansed from all unrighteousness and prepared for eternal life. (See Isaiah xxvi, 9; Acts iii, 19-21.) Not only will humanity be cleansed from all impurities, but the earth as well will be purged of all that would in any way be objectionable to perfect human beings.

Q.—It is my firm conviction that Saturday is the Sabbath Day and, therefore, the day to be observed as a holy day, or rest day, unto the Lord. But I am greatly perplexed over the circumstances developing in a trip around the world. Have said to west, for in doing so, a whole day is lost somewhere on the trip, and it it should happen that Saturday is that day, there would be one Sabbath Day that would slip away unobserved. Now, I should like for you to tell me what could be done in order to comply with the command to keep the Sabbath Day holy? How could I keep a day holy when that day was lost somewhere on the voyage? (T. A. D.)

Answer.—Perhaps if one's conscience were unduly pained to such a harrowing experience the thing to do would be to circumnavigate the globe in the opposite direction and gain a day thereby, timing the journey so that Saturday would be the day recovered. This would be in accordance with the law, as would afford one ample time to reflect over the Scripture teachings on this subject of the Sabbath. Of course, doubtless would be the means of casting a greater degree of illumination on a command that should be recognized by all Bible students as applying to the Jews and not to the Christians.

Q.—Will little children grow to be men and women after they reach Heaven? Please give me your opinion of this. (C. E. B.)

Answer.—The Savior's words, as contained in Matthew xviii, 3, have been construed to mean that little children go direct to heaven, whereas the Master was teaching that only those of the following who should develop the child-like dispositions of meekness, trust and faith could enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. (Matthew xviii, 1-6, sets forth the same lesson more fully. A moment's reflection on the general teachings of the Bible will be sufficient to enable any one to realize that heavenly promises have been made only for the Church, the "overcomers," the "saints"—the called and chosen and faithful." (Revelation xvii, 14.) It is evident that these children are not called to a heavenly inheritance. How could they believe, and how overcome Satan and sin? Little children as well as all the world, aside from the saintly overcomers, are to be awakened in the resurrection morning, and gradually growing and developing will be made perfect as human beings, and being obedient to the Lord and His gracious arrangements shall have eternal life. The earth, and not heaven, will be their everlasting habitation of mankind. (Isaiah xlv, 20-25.) The Church, made up of saints, will inherit the heavenly honors and glory.

Q.—The Scriptures declare that God created and has preserved all for having devoted six days to the work of creation. (Genesis ii, 2, 3.) Again, the Apostle Paul, Hebrews iv, 4, says: For to that is entered into his rest, he also ceased from his works, as did God from His." How did God rest from His works when actually He did more of the creative work on the seventh day accomplished by the Lord Jesus, as we read—"For by Him (Christ) were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by Him and for Him?" (Colossians i, 16.)

Answer.—It is true, according to the Scriptures, that all things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made." The Logos was the active agent of the Creator through whom all the creative work was accomplished and thus the Heavenly Father did none of the actual work. Therefore, it was in the representative sense that the Father created the Universe. King Solomon he said the Lord built the Temple at Jerusalem, yet all of the work was done by his workmen. Representatively the Father rested on the six days, and representatively He rested on the seventh day.

Q.—What will be the physical condition of the earth at the second coming of Christ? (W. A.)

Answer.—The word "coming" in the Scriptures, as applied to the Lord's second advent, would in many instances be more properly translated from the Greek by the word presence, for that is the real significance of the Lord word parousia. In Matthew xxiv, 37-39, the Lord explained that as it was in the days of Noah, so also would it be in the days of the presence (not "coming") of the Son of man. The thought is that as the people in the days of Noah were going about engaged in the ordinary affairs of life, so it would be in the days of the presence of the Lord Jesus. The Lord stated at His first advent that He would leave the world and that His return would be as a thief in the night, and only those who would be watching would be aware of His presence by unit of time and reasoning. There was no "day when he was a nation," and then His presence would be revealed unto all people. During the thousand years of the Lord's presence the physical conditions of the earth will be undergoing a gradual transformation, until by the close of the days of His presence the whole earth will have become as the Garden of Eden. See the following Scriptures: Luke xxii, 43; II Corinthians xii, 4; Ezekiel xxxvi, 35; Isaiah thirty-five chapter.

Remarkable Figures Relating to the World's Biggest Trade Union--Great Tailors' Strike Continues in London. Coal Mining Industry Still Struggling with Minimum Wage Act--Enthusiastic Jute Girls Strike.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, May 21.—Before noting the course of current labor events this week a few remarks must be directed towards the annual report of the British Amalgamated Society of Engineers (which is claimed to be the biggest single trade union in the world) for 1911 which in many respects a remarkable document. It exemplifies the secure and steadr growth of the older labor union movement and presents this feature of permanent stability in curious contrast to some accounts as are available of the development of the newer, unskilled, and "militant" associations. The income from all sources is $1,231,760. Unemployment has cost $372,920, sickness $297,152 and superannuation $709,925. Contingent benefit (extra pay for men on strike) has only cost $25,200 and benevolent grants (to specially distressed members) no more than $14,630.

The revenues of the union are broadly divided into two separate funds, general and superannuated. The first amounted at the close of last year to $1,191,425 which represents about $9.75 per member, as there were rather over 121,000 members enrolled in the different classes. The superannuation fund is an interesting example of patient and careful collective thrift. It was started in 1852 for the purpose of creating a strong financial reserve to meet the rapidly growing liabilities of the Society under the head of superannuation benefit. The fund is raised by compulsory levies of $1 per annum upon all full members. After twenty years it has accumulated to $2,363,145.

The fund has always been strictly guarded both by rule and jealous administration and is never available for the ordinary contingencies of the union. While the funded monies of the society total $3,453,525 rather less than $19 per member represents the financial strength for the purposes of all its other obligations.

The rapid growth of membership is to be accounted for by the influx of men who are joining for purely prudential reasons. The National Insurance Act has obviously been the main source of impulse. The A. S. E. will become an approved society for all the purposes of the act. This step will necessitate some important modifications of rule, but a delegate meeting for the complete revision of the rules is to be held in Manchester during Whit-week and possibly several following weeks, at which this matter amongst others will be determined. Delegates from all parts (including America and Australasia) will attend, and it is probable that a very general and thorough overhaul of the union's rules and administration will be the result.

Undoubtedly the advent of the Insurance Act has occasioned the most serious consideration on the part of the officials and members. The growing suspicion that the act will in some incidious way interfere with the freedom of trade union administration is dealt with by Mr. Jenkin Jones, the general secretary, in his report. He observes: "The primary objects and functions of a trade union are to obtain and maintain satisfactory conditions of labor and wages and hours of labor to suit modern times; also to promote the ideal social condition through the union and through Parliament. The act does not propose to interfere with such functions, and the unions will insist on an interference and no subversion of their existing rights, and to maintain our position it will be even more necessary to have our union strengthened by improved organization and by amalgamation with kindred trades. So there is no visible ground or evidence that the act will weaken the influence of the power of trade unions." There are other trade union leaders who take a contrary view and assert that the National Insurance Act is an insidious attack by the Liberal government upon our trade unionism.

A comparison of the first and last years of the union's existence offers a striking object lesson in the development of the skilled trade union. The O. S. E. was founded in 1851 with 11,529 members, and ended its first year with a balance of $186,325. At the close of 1911 the membership had increased tenfold and the funds increased over thirty times.

The tailors strike continues, neither masters nor men showing any sign as yet of substantially giving way. Some of the West-end workmen have gone back and some of the masters are paying the increased rates, impelled thereto, no doubt, by the big demand for new clothes that is coming along with the fine summer weather. The masters claim that to grant the tailors' demand would mean an increase of 25 to 30 per cent on the present payments. Big denouncements also are being held by the strikers in London who have been pleased with the receipt of cablegrams of sympathy from New York and Paris. The worst trouble in connection with this strike is the quarrel between the Amalgamated Society of Tailors and Tailoresses and the London Society. The latter is a secession from the former and is the real power behind the present strike. The Amalgamated Society, very few of whose members are concerned in the present dispute, declares that the tactics adopted by the

TRADE BOOMERS PUSH SHIP CANAL.

While setting forth the pre-eminent advantages of Pittsburgh as a big bargain center for all sorts of buyers, the trade boomers who last week traveled on the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce "special" did not neglect to point out to the businessmen of the adjoining states that their interests and the interests of Pittsburgh businessmen are common ones in many respects. The president of the Chamber made a speech at Fairmont, W. Va., in which he called attention, particularly to the ship canal project. This proposed great waterway will do much to maintain and increase the industrial supremacy of the Pittsburgh district, but it will do just as much for West Virginia as it will do for Pittsburgh, and the speech showed how and why.

West Virginia's most important industry at present is coal mining; and that will be its most important industry for a long time. The prosperity of the state will largely depend on its ability to secure cheap transportation to market.

In co-operating with Pittsburgh in the building of the ship canal to connect the Ohio river with Lake Erie, West Virginia is doing the one thing which more than any other will guarantee its permanent prosperity. Everywhere water transportation is now recognized as the key to the commercial future. The great part waterways have taken in Germany's conquest of new markets has been a revelation to American producers. No less than half a dozen important waterway projects are now under way in various parts of the country. To say nothing of Panama, there will be a remarkable series of canal completions within the next few years. Among them may be mentioned the canal across New Jersey, the one across the neck of Cape Cod, and the one connecting Lake Champlain with the Hudson river. The Cape Cod canal, seven miles in length, will greatly shorten the route to water from New York to Boston, and will doubtless prove a great business boon both to the Hub and all New England. The project is being financed by August Belmont. The sixty-eight-mile canal, which is to join the waters of Champlain and the Hudson, is a New York state project and will make possible the floating of iron ore-bearing barges from the Adirondacks directly to the lower harbor of New York city. Of all these projects there is not one (excepting Panama) that is comparable in importance with the ship canal project that is to link Lake Erie. Its completion within the next five years should be the determined aim of the three great states most directly interested.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS NO LONGER CRITICISED.

The latest official report concerning the postal savings banks strengthen them as an institution and vindicate the prediction made many years ago that their establishment would not cause the decrease of a single dollar in the deposits and resources of other savings institutions. The latest report shows that the deposits in the postal banks now aggregate about $16,290,000. Considering that these depositories have been doing business for so limited a period and that their chief appeal is to those who at best can manage to save only a little, the progress that these figures attest is as remarkable as it is gratifying.

Our contemporary the Cincinnati Times Star finds bankers there changing from opposition to the postal banks to warm approval. And the same thing is observable elsewhere. The reason for this is to be found in the fact that the $16,290,000 of postal deposits has come from small hoards that never would have been hauled at all had not the system been established. There has been no noticeable withdrawal of deposits from the ordinary savings banks. The only effect upon the latter is that they have with the entire country the benefits of the increase in currency circulation. This increase in circulation is not large, although it is large enough to help, but its most gratifying feature is the assurance it gives of an anchor to windward in time of stress and peril. With the postal banks in existence there seems to be a reasonable certainty that if the time should come when large sums were withdrawn from the regular banks a considerable portion would very promptly go into the postal depositaries, instead of being withdrawn from circulation altogether. To the banks and to all the nation's business interests that is an assurance that is worth much.

A TASK CONGRESS SHOULD NOT POSTPONE.

If CONGRESS adjourns on June 15 as it now proposed to do it may be able to pass the inevitable appropriation bills along with the bogus tariff-reform bills which the two houses insist on sending to President Taft solely for campaign purposes, but many measures of real importance will be neglected. Among the most urgent of these is reform of the patent laws, which a recent decision of the Supreme Court has converted into an alarming means of increasing the power of the great monopolies.

Mr. Taft has sent Congress an emphatic special message asking for legislation to authorize him to appoint a commission to investigate the patent laws and report what changes are necessary to make them fit modern conditions. This is asking for nothing more than is reasonable and necessary, and it is to be hoped the duty will not be shirked by Congressmen in their haste to get away to the political conventions.

The reasons for prompt action are of great weight. The President in his message referred to the principal one—namely, the recent "patent monopoly" decision by the Supreme Court under which users of a certain machine were compelled to buy from the company which sold the machine a certain kind of ink for use with it. There is grave danger that under the existing law, thus interpreted, the country may suffer monopolistic oppression far surpassing anything yet seen. As the President remarks: "It is worthy of careful consideration whether or not legislation or some new lines should be enacted to prevent our patent laws from being made the basis of unjust monopoly extending beyond the legitimate protection to inventors required to promote science and the useful arts, or the means of stifling improvement and the progress of the arts."

SCHOOLHOUSE SOCIAL CENTERS.

Notwithstanding the splendid efforts of an active group of earnest social-uplift workers, the development of school-house social centers in Pittsburgh has proceeded somewhat slowly. The centers have been magnificent successes wherever established, bringing new joy into many lives. But the proper co-operation on the part of the old ward schoolboards was lacking. The control of the schools is now vested in a single board, the members of which have enjoyed privileges and opportunities in life which should make them more ready to welcome every means of enlarging and enriching the lives of others than many of the former school directors showed themselves. It is to be hoped the new board will justify in many ways the claims made for it. The establishment of schoolhouse centers is one thing that it could do with a comparatively trifling expense which the resultant improvement of our community life would repay many times.

It is incidentally worth noting that the schoolhouse social-center idea receives much attention on the program of the Recreation Congress to be held in Cleveland, O., June 5 to 8. Men and women of national prominence will discuss its effect in lessening vice and immorality, in aiding immigrants to adjust themselves to American conditions. Some school buildings are used for amateur dramatic performances, some are thrown open for dancing. In certain cities clubs are allowed to hold their regular meetings in the public school. Whether this evening use of school buildings interferes with the use of those buildings during the day for classroom purposes will be discussed. The best evidence is that it does not.

It is interesting to be told that in Illinois a plan is being considered for the establishment even of rural recreation centers throughout the state, the centers to be supported through public taxation. This plan will also be thoroughly discussed at the congress.

The recreation work of some rural schools, churches and the Grange is to be described. Many will be interested in the account of attempts of farmers' wives to provide recreation for themselves through women's clubs. Those back of the rural recreation movement believe that through it the pull of the city on young men and young women can be somewhat lessened and farm life made more attractive. They go so far as to claim with the greatest confidence that economic efficiency in rural districts may be increased through the development of a stronger rural play life.

COUNT VON BERNSTORFF, GERMAN AMBASSADOR.

COUNT JOHANN HEINRICH VON BERNSTORFF, German ambassador to the United States, comes of a diplomatic family. His father was a distinguished contemporary of Bismarck and was ambassador to England when his son was born. Count von Bernstorff had seen service in Constantinople, Belgrade, Dresden, St. Petersburg, Munich and London before his appointment to Washington. The countess was Miss Jeanne Luckemeyer, daughter of the late Edward Luckemeyer of New York, who, with his family, settled in France some years ago. The ambassador is above middle height and of rather a slight figure. He speaks English fluently and is a pleasant after dinner orator and a witty conversationalist.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

United States Supreme Court Declares Relief Benefit Contracts Cannot Be Set Up to Bar Recovery of Damages in Injury Cases--International Conference on Cost of Living is Promised--The Senate in Danger of Emasculating the Eight-Hour Bill by Amendments.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, May 27. — The eight-hour bill passed by the House is now receiving the consideration of the Senate. Numerous amendments have been offered which, if adopted, would destroy the efficiency of the bill. Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts are the two conspicuous senators desiring to amend the bill in a manner that would practically destroy its efficacy. Senator Lodge desired to insert a provision that where the Saturday half holiday was given, eight hours a day could be worked on five days of the week, with three hours on Saturday, and not be deemed a violation of the law. Senator Borah of Idaho chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, and who has charge of the bill on the floor of the Senate, opposed Senator Lodge's amendment and, after a considerable discussion, the Lodge amendment came to a vote, resulting in it being defeated by a vote of 35 to 34.

There has been one amendment agreed to providing that the provisions of the bill shall not apply "until January 1, 1915, as to any contract or contracts entered into in connection with the construction of the Isthmian Canal." This amendment is intended to leave conditions in statu quo during the completion of the Panama Canal. Another amendment was accepted relating to construction and repair of levies or revetments necessary for protection against floods, etc. The Senators who voted for the Lodge amendment, which would practically destroy the bill, are as follows: Bradley of Kentucky, Brran of Florida, Burton of Ohio, Dillingham of Vermont, Fletcher of Florida, Gallinger of New Hampshire, Lippitt of Rhode Island, Lodge of Massachusetts, McLean of Connecticut, Oliver of Pennsylvania, Richardson of Delaware, Root of New York, Sanders of Tennessee and Wetmore of Rhode Island. From the vote upon this amendment it can be safely predicted that the eight-hour bill will pass the Senate, retaining all of its effective features.

The United States Supreme Court has handed down a decision holding that common carriers cannot set up "relief benefit contracts" as a bar to recovery for damages in cases of negligence. A brakeman in the employ of the Washington Terminal Company lost his arm in 1908 in a collision between two engines in the yards at the Union station. The suit for damages followed and the lower court held the action of the employers' liability act relied on for relief as unconstitutional. On appeal this decision was reversed, and another trial was had, which resulted in the court directing a verdict for the company on the ground that the company was not a common carrier. The court of appeals was appealed to again and that court ruled that the company was a common carrier. The United States Supreme Court now finally settles the issue, by deciding the issues in favor of the injured brakeman, which carries $7,500 in damages.

The committee on Foreign Affairs to which was referred the bill appropriating money to enable the president to propose and invite foreign governments to participate in an international conference to promote an international inquiry into the causes of the high cost of living throughout the world, and to enable the United States to participate in such conference, reported the same to the House with recommendations and the report was referred to the committee of the whole house on the state of the union. This report will be taken up undoubtedly in a short time and disposed of.

The Judiciary Committee of the Senate has recommended the adoption of a resolution which has for its purpose the making of a six year presidential term and the incumbent of the office ineligible for re-election. The original draft also provided that the vice president should also be disqualified for re-election, but this was not agreed to.

Secretary Knox has forwarded to the governors of all the states certified copies of the congressional resolution providing the states with an opportunity to vote on the proposed amendment to the constitution authorizing direct election of Senators. The governors of the states are requested to bring the matter to the attention of the state legislatures for action. When the state department receives certified copies of acts by legislatures of the total number of states the proposed amendment will be promulgated by the secretary of state, and will from then forward be a part of the Constitution of the United States. There is no time limit within which an amendment must be ratified. The United States Constitution provides that when legislatures of three-fourths of the several states ratify any amendment proposed by Congress it shall become a part of the Constitution of the United States.

STREET CARMEN AFTER RAISE

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 28.—The motormen and conductors on the Springfield and Worcester Consolidated Street Railway Companies are in receipt of an increase in wages. A number of questions at issue have been agreed to. The new minimum rate of wages is 25½ cents an hour and the employes are demanding 30 cents. Besides the employes of the local and Worcester companies the same demand is being made by the trolleymen in the Connecticut cities where the New Haven railroad has subsidiary lines. No final action has been taken by the union and apparently the men are planning to make a struggle.

Valuable Statistics.

LONDON, May 27.—During the month of March the total number of workmen engaged in all disputes was 1,490,548, and the aggregate duration in lost working days during March was 24,570,500, as compared with 463,000 in the previous month.

Conductors Boost Union Label

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 28.—The local organization of the Order of Railway Conductors of this city by resolution has taken a decided stand in favor of the union label on clothing. The chairman of the local committee of arbitration has been instructed that when passenger conductors are ordered to get new uniforms it must be insisted that the firm manufacturing the same must supply the union label. This is one of the important results achieved through agitation by the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

Propspects Favorable.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 27.—Indications point to an early settlement of the lockout of the Shingle Weavers' union at Hoquiam, which has been on for nearly three years.

The appointment of a permanent industrial commission is being considered by the Canadian minister of labor.

TO PROTECT SEA TRAVEL

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Heavy penalties for failure to provide adequate life saving apparatus on board ocean steamships are provided in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Webb of North Carolina. The Judiciary Committee recommends for all passengers and crews of ocean going vessels of 3,000 tons or more are now inoperative by the statute, which provides a fine of $10,000 or ten years' imprisonment as a penalty for each violation.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

HIGH STANDARD OF DIVINE JUSTICE.

Two Pentecosts—One for the Church, Other for the World—Through Redeemer's Work — Pastor Russell Says the Divine Plan, as Revealed in the Bible, Provides Two Distinct Salvations, One for the Church, the Other for the World—Salvation of the Elect Will Be on a Higher Plane Than That of the World—Earth's Great Jubilee at Hand.

CHICAGO, May 26.—Pastor Russell delivered two addresses here. We report one of his discourses on "Pentecostal Blessings," from the text: "The grace of God which bringeth salvation hath appeared for all men." (Titus 2: 11.) He said in part:

As Bible students we find it more and more necessary to study the Scriptures discriminatingly. Righteousness and Justice represent the Divine Law, the Law of the Universe. On the other hand, such words as Mercy and Grace recognize man's fall from righteousness and tell us of the Divine sympathetic provision being exercised toward mankind with a view to their deliverance from their unrighteous condition—the opening of a way for their return to perfection and harmony with God, and to eternal life privileges of righteousness.

Every suggestion and arrangement looking toward Divine mercy is Scripturally associated with our Lord Jesus —the world's Redeemer. His death provides the ransom-price for Adam and his race, while his Messianic Kingdom is provided as the means or channel by and through which the willing and obedient of the redeemed will be brought back to perfection and made able again to fulfil the requirements of Justice and enjoy its blessings.

Hence we find the Scriptures continually setting before us the high standard of Divine Justice, and also setting before us the fact that Divine Love has provided mercy for the sinner through the efficacy of the Redeemer's work. For centuries God exhibited the principles of Divine Justice, not only in His Law which He gave to Israel—the measure of perfect man's ability—but also in the fact that Christ died, "the Just for the unjust," that He might bring us back into harmony with God and His righteousness.

Hitherto, however, God's people have unwittingly narrowed down the grace of God and minimized the work of Christ and the efficacy of His redemptive sacrifice by supposing that all of the blessings are for the Church and none for the world—that they are for the present Age, and that with its consummation all hope will expire, and the world, the non-elect, will suffer to all eternity without ever having tasted of the grace of God in Christ —without ever having come to even a knowledge of that provision for sinners.

TWO SALVATIONS—TWO PENTECOSTS.

A more careful study of the Bible is revealing to God's people all over the world the fact that He has for mankind two distinct salvations—one for the Church and the other for the world—and each of these salvations is introduced by a Pentecostal blessing. That the Church is merely a first-fruits unto God of His creatures is distinctly stated by St. James (1, 18), and this certainly implies that there will be after-fruits—the world in general.

Note the Apostle's statement respecting the meritorious value, the efficacy of Christ's sacrifice, both for the Church and for the world; he says: "He is a Propitiation for our sins (the Church), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." (1 John 2, 2.) The Church is the elect "first-fruits," or as St. Paul declares, "The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven." Through this elect Church eventually the blessing of God is to be extended to all the willing and obedient of the non-elect.

This does not mean that all mankind will attain salvation, everlasting life, but it does mean that to all will come the opportunity for escape from the curse of sin and death which came upon all through Father Adam's sin. Neither does it signify that all who gain life will gain the same kind of salvation—that all will gain everlasting life on the same plane of being. Quite to the contrary. The fact that the elect Church is called and tested in advance of the world implies that her salvation will be on a higher plane than that of the world, and this the Apostle clearly states when he assures us, "We must all be changed," because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

The change of nature from earthly to heavenly, from the human to the divine, is a part of the superior blessing provided by the Lord for those who now walk by faith in the footsteps of the Redeemer. The blessings to the world, on the other hand, will not include a change of nature, but a restoration of restoration of the willing and obedient to human perfection, such as Adam enjoyed before he sinned, before he came under the curse. Restitution therefore is synonymous with the blotting out of the curse.

OUR PENTECOST — AND THE WORLD'S.

There can be no dispute respecting the Church's Pentecost, that it began on the fiftieth day after our Lord's resurrection—ten days after its ascended up on high, there to appear in the presence of God—as the Church's Advocate. But just what that Pentecostal blessing meant to the Church is perhaps not clearly seen by all who have experienced a share in its blessings. It marks the Divine acceptance of the Church—the Divine grace which acknowledged the merit of the Savior as applied on her behalf, and echoes reged the Divine acceptance of the Church as a faithful band consecrated to walk in Jesus' footsteps.

There has been no need of a repetition of this Pentecostal blessing. It came at the beginning of the Church's period, and represents God's acceptance, for all of whom Jesus appeared as Advocate. Those blessed with that outpouring of the Holy Spirit had already devoted themselves to their Redeemer, and had already consecrated their lives to be His footstep followers. All of the same class who have lived since—a) who will eventually constitute the elect Church, were appeased for by Jesus at the same time. Hence we are not to expect Pentecosts upon the Church, but merely to expect to enter into the share upon the share of the one outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which, like the oil poured upon Aaron's head and which ran down to the skirts of his garment, will anoint us, the Church, down to the "feet," to the very last member of the Church.

Many of us had not noticed until recently that two Pentecostal blessings are mentioned by the Prophet. Our overlooking this was doubtless because it was not due time for it to be clearly understood. Now, as the time nears for the fulfilment of the second Pentecostal blessing, the force and meaning of the Scripture shines out. Another reason for its being overlooked is that by Divine arrangement, the world's Pentecost was mentioned first, and that of the Church last. But even this is appropriate, because the Divine intention was primarily toward the world, and only that of the Church comes incidentally. "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believed in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." But before making known the riches of His grace to the world, God has been pleased to foreordain the election of the Church, to be joint-heir with Jesus in the glorious work of blessing earth's seeming millions.

NOTICE HOW THE TEXT READS:

"It shall come to pass, saith the Lord, at the end of those days, that I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh [ ? ] and on those days I will pour out My Spirit upon My servants and upon My handmaidens."—Joel ii, 28, 29; Acts ii, 17.

St. Peter, in quoting the prophecy, properly applied only the portion which was due in his day, namely, that portion applicable to the servants and handmaidens of the Lord—the Church class. He left without comment the major portion of the promise, which relates to the world, and which cannot have fulfilment until the elect Church shall have been completed and glorified. The two features of the prophecy are distinctly marked, the one referring to be upon God's servants and handmaidens only, the other to be upon all flesh. The one was to be "in those days," the other, "after those days."

How strange that this was previously overlooked, you say? We reply, it is not more strange than that the Jews and he Apostles themselves overlooked many statements of prophecy which indicated the ending of Jewish favor and the beginning of a glorious opportunity of joint-heirship with Christ to the Gentiles. That part of the prophecy was discerned only when the due time came, and so this feature of Joel's prophecy pertaining to the blessing of the world and the outpouring of God's Spirit upon them passed unnoticed until now, as the time nears for its fulfilment.

There can be no question that the Holy Spirit of God has not yet come upon all flesh, nor can it be questioned that it has come during this Age upon God's servants and handmaidens. The promise therefore is but a reiteration of the things that are to be accomplished after these days—after the completion of the Church and her glorification.

JUBILEE DAY—JUBILEE YEAR.

The day of Pentecost was the grand Jubilee Day in which God's blessing was initiated marking the foreglimpses of sin and the acceptance by the heavenly Father. It was the 50th day (1 x 7 plus 1.) Every Jewish Sabbath pointed directly to this Jubilee Day as the consummation of the Sabbath day system. It was thus the antitype toward which all Sabbath days pointed. The word "Sabbath," as is well known, signifies rest, and this culmination of the Sabbath day in a fiftieth day signified the ultimate of completeness of rest. Thus was symbolically taught in the Law the grace which acknowledged the merit of the Savior as applied on her behalf, and echoes reged the Divine acceptance of the Church as a faithful band consecrated to walk in Jesus' footsteps.

There has been no need of a repetition of this Pentecostal blessing. It came at the beginning of the Church's period, and represents God's acceptance, for all of whom Jesus appeared as Advocate. Those blessed with that outpouring of the Holy Spirit had already devoted themselves to their Redeemer, and had already consecrated their lives to be His footstep followers. All of the same class who have lived since—a) who will eventually constitute the elect Church, were appeased for by Jesus at the same time. Hence we are not to expect Pentecosts upon the Church, but merely to expect to enter into the share upon the share of the one-outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which, like the oil poured upon Aaron's head and which ran down to the skirts of his garment, will anoint us, the Church, down to the "feet," to the very last member of the Church.

Many of us had not noticed until recently that two Pentecostal blessings are mentioned by the Prophet. Our overlooking this was doubtless because it was not due time for it to be clearly understood. Now, as the time nears for the fulfilment of the second Pentecostal blessing, the force and meaning of the Scripture shines out. Another reason for its being overlooked is that by Divine arrangement, the world's Pentecost was mentioned first, and that of the Church last. But even this is appropriate, because the Divine intention was primarily toward the world, and only that of the Church comes incidentally. "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believed in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." But before making known the riches of His grace to the world, God has been pleased to foreordain the election of the Church, to be joint-heir with Jesus in the glorious work of blessing earth's seeming millions.

NOTICE HOW THE TEXT READS:

"It shall come to pass, saith the Lord, at the end of those days, that I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh [ ? ] and on those days I will pour out My Spirit upon My servants and upon My handmaidens."—Joel ii, 28, 29; Acts ii, 17.

St. Peter, in quoting the prophecy, properly applied only the portion which was due in his day, namely, that portion applicable to the servants and handmaidens of the Lord—the Church class. He left without comment the major portion of the promise, which relates to the world, and which cannot have fulfilment until the elect Church shall have been completed and glorified. The two features of the prophecy are distinctly marked, the one referring to be upon God's servants and handmaidens only, the other to be upon all flesh. The one was to be "in those days," the other, "after those days."

How strange that this was previously overlooked, you say? We reply, it is not more strange than that the Jews and he Apostles themselves overlooked many statements of prophecy which indicated the ending of Jewish favor and the beginning of a glorious opportunity of joint-heirship with Christ to the Gentiles. That part of the prophecy was discerned only when the due time came, and so this feature of Joel's prophecy pertaining to the blessing of the world and the outpouring of God's Spirit upon them passed unnoticed until now, as the time nears for its fulfilment.

There can be no question that the Holy Spirit of God has not yet come upon all flesh, nor can it be questioned that it has come during this Age upon God's servants and handmaidens. The promise therefore is but a reiteration of the things that are to be accomplished after these days—after the completion of the Church and her glorification.

Thus was symbolically taught in the Law the grace which acknowledged the merit of the Savior as applied on her behalf, and echoes reged the Divine acceptance of the Church as a faithful band consecrated to walk in Jesus' footsteps.

On Pentecost Day the living believers of that time entered into rest in a sense and to a degree not before enjoyed or even understood. The Pentecostal blessings of the Holy Spirit brought to them the full assurance of sins forgiven, through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, and it also brought to them proof of their acceptance by the heavenly Father, as children of God, and "if children, then heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ our Lord." In this sense of the word Pentecost was the most notable day of the grace of God for the Church. And God's servants and handmaidens ever since, upon taking the steps required, have been admitted to that grace of forgiveness and adoption.

But it will be remembered that in the Law given to Israel there was not only one share of the one-outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which, like the oil poured upon Aaron's head and which ran down to the skirts of his garment, will anoint us, the Church, down to the "feet," to the very last member of the Church.

PATENT OWNERS' RIGHTS.

Much More Curtailed Than Holders of Other Property.

Like the owner of any other property, the patent owner cannot be compelled to part with his own except on inducements to his liking." Like the owner of unimproved real estate, the patent owner may decline to use his invention or to allow others to use it. Like real estate owners who prefer to continue owners, the patent owner may reserve to himself the right to ownership and sale and, by lease or otherwise, simply dispose of part of the right to use the invention. Like every real estate owner that is a landlord, the patent owner may require that his property be used only under certain specified conditions and for certain specified purposes and withheld from specified accessories. The rights of the patent owner are neither greater nor more unusual than the familiar rights of the real estate owners or other property owners.

Indeed, the patent owner's rights are vastly curtailed as compared with the rights of other property owners, in that the owners of every other form of property may exercise their rights above described for so long a period as they and their successors may desire, while the patent owner may exercise none of his rights beyond the expiration of his patent and at the expiration of the statutory period of seventeen years the only relinquish to the public all of his rights.—Engineering Magazine.

TUNGSTEN NOT NEW.

Metal Known to Chemists More Than a Century Ago.

While the metal tungsten has been used only during the last few years as a material for making incandescent lamp filaments, it has long been known by chemists, says Popular Mechanics. Indeed, it is practically as old as the republic of ours, for it was in 1781 that Joseph and Fausto d'Elhuiar discussed the properties of tungsten in a Spanish treatise.

Even at that time they recognized its unusual density and hence unusual weight, which makes the name tungsten, given to it by their contemporary, the Swedish chemist Scheele, and which meaning heavy stone, so appropriate. For instance, a bar of tungsten will weigh about two and a half times as much as a bar of iron or steel of the same size. This implies that the particles composing the metal tungsten must be packed much more closely together than those forming iron or steel. In fact a wonder then that the addition of tungsten to steel makes it harder and more tenacious, so as to adapt it to better use at higher speeds? This so called "tungsten steel" was first made in Germany fifty years ago and established the chief source tungsten until the latter proved itself to be the most suitable of all known materials for making lamp filaments of high efficiency.

Machine to Stop Hailstorms.

Assuming that electricity in the clouds is the sole cause of the production of hail, experiments have been made in France with apparatus designated as "electric negators" to "drain" the cloud of electricity.

In installing the apparatus huge copper points, bound together with bands of the same metal, are placed on the summit of a high tower or building, very much in the same way as lightning rods. These are connected, says Popular Mechanics, with a copper band, which leads to the ground and ends in a reservoir filled with water by the action of the atmospheric electricity flows down into the earth. The first sudden charge is replaced by a permanent one, which empties the clouds, so to speak.

Cold Water Annealing.

The following method of cold water annealing has proved to be highly successful and common grindstone will heat the steel in a mill test and then dipping it in a dark place until the red disappears; it is cold water and then be easily machined or cast. Another way of heating the dipping heat is to allow the piece to cool gradually, at the same time rubbing the steel with a piece of dry white pine When it is nearly cool enough to touch small particles of charred wood will rub off, stick to the steel and glow momentarily. When this action ceases dip the steel.

Exploration of Nova Zembla.

Three Russian exploring expeditions visited Nova Zembla during the summer of 1911, chiefly with a view to discovering mineral deposits. One party made a complete circumnavigation of the southern island in a launch, and landed at many points and carried out geological investigations. On the south coast were found the remains of a Russian settlement, the latter remains of which probably succumbed to scurvy a century or more ago. Some traces of copper and asphalt were discovered.

A Mighty Flatiron.

What undoubtedly is the largest electric flatiron in the world weighs fifty pounds and is used by a Brooklyn tailor, New York city. This sounds as if it were picked up by Gulliver on his tour in Brobdingnag, for it is so large that no man can use it. So that it may be operated it is hooked up to a machine, which raises, lowers and helps swing it.

OLD POLES MADE NEW.

Metal Bases Installed Without Interruption of Service.

A new method of re-inforcing telephone, telegraph and electric service poles that have decayed at the ground line, consists of saving all of the pole near the ground line, removing the old stump and building a new one in a steel cage, all of which may be accomplished without disturbing the wires or interrupting the service.

The steel cage is composed mainly of three-sixteenths to quarter inch steel and are furnished in several sizes, to fit the pole in the latter is of a dry, gravelly or rocky quality, to about one foot below the ground line. Then a thin mixture of cement is poured in, and the end of the sawed off pole is slipped into the base and forced down ward into it. The pole having been cut off and extending only about to the ground line in the tube, extends to the same height as before it was cut off. The thin mixture of cement or grout, forced upward by the insertion of the pole, fills all the chinks and crevices between the pole and upper portion of the tube, making the pole and tube practically one when it solidifies.

A pole carrying six crossarms was provided with a new base in less than an hour by one of the tests without disturbing the wires.—Popular Mechanics.

New Can Covering Machine.

Application has been made for a patent on a new machine for folding and sealing the lids on cans, recently invented by a Stavanger (Norway) mechanic. The machine differs from the ordinary lid folding machines in that it rolls on the lids and the chinks and openings for four sardine or other fish cans. The cans, with the lids laid on, are placed in a magazine from which they is run through the machine, which automatically fastens and seals the lids on the cans. The only hand work necessary is the placing of the lid in position on the can and putting the can in the machine in the metal plate, which can be done by a boy, while a man of some skill and experience is required to operate the old machines in which the can is placed in proper position in the machine and a lever pulled each time the lid is pressed to the can and sealed. The new machines, like the old ones, will be operated by electric power.

New Type of Block Signal.

A new type of automatic block signal which is being used on an interurban electric railway west of Cleveland, O., is believed to furnish a solution of the problem of operating block systems in cold weather. During the last winter the various railroads experienced considerable difficulty owing to the accumulation of ice and frost on the signal lamps. The lighting of the block signal is provided by a single twenty-five watt tungsten lamp supplied from the trolley through a resistance. A high speed one-tenth horse power motor drives the mechanism. the motor being designed to operate on current through a wide range of line voltage. Enough heat is furnished by the lamp and its resistance to prevent the accumulation of ice on the lense and mechanism.

Burning Cast Iron.

A German paper gives the following process for working cast iron with our oxygen: It is with a metal. Thoroughly cleanse the metal and rub it smooth. Apply evenly a coat of syrup or olive oil and heat the iron, being careful that the temperature does not rise high enough to burn the oil. Just as the oil is about to decompose, the cast iron will absorb oxygen, and this forms upon the surface a brown oxide skin, which holds securely, and is so hard that it will admit of a hard polish, thus giving it the appearance of bronze.

Burglar Proof Mail Box.

A mail box has been invented which will sound a bell wherever the postman puts mail into it. An alarm is also operated when the box is tampered with. It is operated by electric batteries.

THE GYRO COMPASS.

Ingenious Substitute For Magnetic Instrument on Naval Vessels.

By invention of the superintendent of the Naval observatory the scientific people in Washington has recently had an opportunity of inspecting a gyroscopic compass in operation. An American made instrument has been adopted for use in the United States navy, and three ships have already been fitted with this compass. This ingenious substitute for the magnetic compass has often been described in the scientific journals, but probably few of our readers are aware of the position it is expected by owners of the steamships fitting in the scheme of navel equipment. There is no present intention of adopting the gyro compass for the ordinary purposes of navigation, although this may come in time.

The great advantage that it offers, even in the present early stage of its development, is the fact that it can be installed inside the hull of a metal ship, where it will be protected from shot and shell during battle, while the magnetic compass would be useless in such a position. Although the gyro compass itself is to be placed below decks, with steering gear at hand for use when necessity compels, it will be connected electrically with a number of dials (known as "repeaters") in other parts of the ship, by which the helmsman may lay his course until the stress of battle forces him to the more sheltered gyro compass.—Scientific American.

Pigment of Egg Yolk.

Two German chemists have just isolated the yellow pigment from the yolk of the egg, the resultant being in the form of crystals. Investigations made into the chemical nature of this substance point to its being closely allied to the chlorophyll of vegetable leaves, which is formed from the chlorophyll. In this most important science the study 8,000 hens were experimentally treated, and these have yielded only sixty-two grains of pure pigment.

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, May 26.

Editor National Labor Tribune:

(Thy word is true: John 17: 17.)

As the wisdom from above is neither the father or mother of vice or folly, I am heartily glad to realize that all the appreciative letters you receive for the part you are taking in the extrellent way you set forth not only Pastor Russell's Sermons but other helpful features, such as the letters of the brethren and sisters, come out of good honest, but humble hearts, so as in seeking to hold up the hand of that servant. I know that outside of this, all the brethren and sisters would prefer not to see their names in public print. God knows I am one among the many am glad to humbly state, I have gotten beyond knowing them, in print or otherwise, and offer the flesh put in the spirit, for to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Romans 8: 6, and as in so much as to go to the brother, for God is love and sweet tempered.

Respectfully,

PRAYER A GREAT PRIVILEGE.

Matthew vi, 7-13—June 2.

"Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men to be seen of them, else ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven."—Matthew vi, 1. (R. V.)

IN today's lesson the Master tells of proper and improper giving of charity. He also explains proper and improper prayers and finally proper and improper fasting. In all these He denounces hypocrisy. His followers are to be actuated solely by a desire to please the Heavenly Father. We may be seen to do good or to pray or to fast, but we are not to do these to be seen. Of such the Lord says, "They have received their reward"—nothing more is coming to them; they get the publicity sought.

The Privilege of Prayer.

Jesus did not recommend His disciples to pray, nor did He even give them a form of prayer until requested. The Lord's people neither feel their need of Divine help to appreciate the privilege of approaching the throne of grace.

It will be noted also that our Lord merely taught His disciples: "When ye pray." As a matter of fact, the Gentiles, the world of mankind in general, have no access to the Throne of grace. "God heareth not sinners."—John ix. 31. The world in general, the race of Adam, was alienated from God through wicked works. Adam was a child of covenant with God by which he enjoyed the privilege of a son of God. This included fellowship, communion, prayer and Divine supervision and care even to the extent of everlasting life. But Adam's disobedience abolished that covenant relationship and all its privileges—Hos. vi, 7, R. V.

Praying to be seen of men.

The only way, therefore, who now enjoy the privilege of prayer are those who have been accepted of God back into covenant relationship.

Instead of exhorting our friends and neighbors to pray to God and to trust for the forgiveness of their sins, we should give them the Scriptural counsel—to repent of sin and by faith accept the forgiveness of the Father, according to the testimony of God's Word, by making a full consecration of themselves to be followers of Jesus.

A Form of Sound Words.

Responding to the request of His disciples Jesus gave a sample of a proper prayer. We note its brevity, simplicity, directness, orderliness.

(1) "Our Father which art in Heaven, hallowed (adored, honored) be Thy name." God's Name represents His Character, His Glorious, Holy personality. First of all, then, we ascribe honor, reverence, majesty, glory to our great Creator, Sustainer, Provider, Appointed way. We delight to call our Father in Heaven.

(2) Next in order we acknowledge the Divine authority. This means that our hearts are submissive to the will of God, for joy or sorrow, pleasure or pain, for life or death, and that we have confidence in the Divine power and promise that ultimately the Divine will shall be as fully done on earth as it is done in Heaven: "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven." This is the recognition of the coming of the Messiah's Kingdom and indirectly our own hopes connected with that Kingdom—that we, if faithful, shall be associated with the Lord in His glorious Throne, as the Scriptures term the reigning of Divine power and mercy to mankind, so as to effect the regeneration of the willing and obedient of the race.

"Thy Kingdom come."

(3) "Give us this day our daily bread." God has promised that our bread and our water shall be sure, that it has not promised, nor are we to ask for an abundance, wealth, riches that are ever to spoil the flesh or its luxuries. The thought is, Grant us daily such provisions for life's necessities as seemeth good to Thee for us.

(4) "Forgive us our debts as we have forgiven our debtors." Here is emphasized the Master's teaching that only the merciful shall obtain mercy, that only the forgiving shall be forgiven.

(5) "Lead us not into temptation (to abandon us there)." We feel our own weakness, imperfection, lapse, while knowing that we must be brought in Divine providence into positions of trial, testing, we may well pray not to be abandoned there, not to be left to our own strength, but that His grace may be sufficient for us.

(6) The Bible assures us that there is an Evil One, and that he has great power and influence amongst men, that he is "the prince of the power of the air," and "the god of this Age." How appropriate that we request the Lord not to abandon us to the Devil's wiles.

The words, "For Thine is the Kingdom and the power and the glory forever, Amen," are not found in the oldest Greek manuscripts, and are therefore properly omitted in the Revised Version. They are a fitting overthrow of Satan's Empire, and the binding of the Adversary for a thousand years, and the ushering in of the Divine Kingdom and power and glory, forever.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THIS DEPARTMENT BY THE BOARD APPOINTED TO TAKE CHARGE OF THE WORK.

Q.—If sad people "go to heaven when they die," what is the necessity of praying "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven?" Who would be left on the earth to do God's will? (W. P., Md.)

Answer.—This portion of the Lord's prayer expresses the sincere heart's desire of all true Christians. It is certainly not an empty petition nor a mere formality of words. It is to be fulfilled at the time of the Lord's return when He will establish the Kingdom in the earth, and the world of mankind will gradually be brought back to harmony with the righteous laws and regulations governing that Kingdom, by the restitution blessings and privileges which will be extended to all during the thousand years of Messiah's reign. Those who become "good"—righteous—in that time will never go to heaven but will remain on the earth and live forever amidst the most delightful surroundings, as Paradise will have been restored. (Acts iii. 19-21.) When men will have reached perfection, mentally, morally, and physically, then the Divine will shall be done on earth as it is in heaven. The "good people" of the present Christian Era are called saints and have been promised a heavenly or spiritual inheritance which they will enter in upon at Christ's appearing.—II Timothy iv, 8.

Q.—What was the condition of the world before creation? What is the material on hand for the creating of the world, and if so what was its condition in regard to land and water? (W. A. S.)

Answer.—The Genesis account of creation is very brief. The sacred writer does not theorize or speculate, but gives the matter bluntly and to the point sets forth the reasonable fact that the First Great Cause, God, created the heavens and the earth, and that originally the earth was without form and void, and darkness covered the face of the deep. It is a reasonable thought that all space is filled with matter or substance in some form, and we could not conceive of a perfect vacuum. Perhaps the Creator formed all of the terrestrial and celestial bodies from this inexhaustible supply of substance, which fills all space; we do not know, the Bible does not say. We do know, however, as the author-ities quoted herein record, that the earth was at one time without form and void, and that this condition was followed by a series of creative epochs, called "days," and that in these epochs the Lord gradually arranged and ordered the conditions necessary to making the earth a suitable habitation for mankind. It was during the third of these "days" that the waters and the lands were separated.

Q.—Matthew xxvii, 51-53, is as follows—"And behold the veil of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after His resurrection, and appeared unto many in the holy city." What were these "saints" and why did they appear at the time of Christ's resurrection? (O. E. S.)

Answer.—In the first place it should be noted that the "saints" did not come forth at the time of Christ's crucifixion, but "after His resurrection," and the account does not say how long "after." As to who they were, it cannot be stated that the record does not particularize sufficiently to furnish exact identification. Perhaps they were saints at the time of the Lord's resurrection were those faithful servants and Prophets of former days, such as those mentioned by the Apostle in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. As to why their bodies were caused to appear in the holy city, we might conjecture that it was to form a type or picture representing the events of the Millennial Epoche at the time of the resurrection of the entire Christ, the Body of Christ, the Church, in the end of the Age. Their "bodies" may have appeared without their becoming conscious, and they will yet awake from the sleep of death in the last days.—Daniel xii. 13.

Q.—Can you tell me the meaning of Revelation xx, 5, where it says, "And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them?" Who are the "saints" referred to, and also the "beloved city?" (M. E. J.)

Answer.—The events narrated here occur at the end of Christ's thousand years reign when Satan is loosed for a little season (verse 7). The "saints" are the faithful servants or Ancient Worthies mentioned particularly by the Apostle in Hebrews, the eleventh chapter. These, according to the Scriptures, will be the "princes in all the earth" during the period of Christ's reign and will be the representative ruling class of the Messiah's Realm. (Psalm xlv. 16.) The "beloved city" is doubtless Jerusalem, which the Scriptures intimate will be the capital of the world. In the end of the millennial reign of Christ, when all the world shall have been restored to perfection mentally, morally and physically, the final trial or test will come when Satan is released. Those who in any way will manifest the wrong condition of heart by being influenced to rebel against the "saints" will be destroyed by Divine power. "They shall be as though they had not been."—Obadiah 16.

Q.—Is it true that the decadence of religious sentiment among the masses of the people, so plainly evidenced by the declining membership and influence of the many denominations and sectarian systems, will conduce to develop a condition of anarchy and revolution throughout the civilized world? The French Revolution is said to have been caused by the tyranny and greed of the aristocracy and the clergy in oppressing the peasant and the laboring classes. The people, recognizing the injustice of the ruling powers, lost all respect for the ecclesiastical powers, and in their rage and disgust overthrew them, bringing about a condition of chaos. Are not similar conditions developing today? (J. W.)

Answer.—In every age expressions are heard from individuals prominent in the world's affairs—capitalists, food experts, ministers, and others, all prophesying threatful calamities if present conditions continue. The Scriptures do teach that a "time of trouble such as there was since there was a nation," will develop in the end of the Christian Era. (Daniel xii. 1; Matthew xxiv. 21, 22.) Unquestionably, the removal of all religious faith from the minds of men would produce anarchistic conditions. Without safe restraining influences of faith, and obedience to the laws and commandments of the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, mankind in general would have little or no regard for the principles of justice, love, and equity. It is a self-evident truth to all intelligent minds that lawlessness and corruption generally could not exist to a genuine Christian community, a community where the precepts and teachings of Christ are fully accepted and acted upon. Universal peace and prosperity can never be established upon any other basis than that of real Christianity.

Q.—What did the inspired writer mean when he said, Ecclesiastes iii, 21, "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" If there is no difference between the spirits of man and beast would you kindly let me know? Then how does one go up and the other down? (M. E.)

Answer.—In the days of King Solomon, about 1,000 B. C., when these words were written, the heathen philosophers were speculating and theorizing as to the nature of man. Some surmised that man was half human and half divine, and consequently that when death took place, the divine or spiritual half ascended up on high and had its home with the gods. It was supposed by these heathen wise men that the spirit of man was the intellectual or reasoning essence of the being, and that it lived on when the body died. They also contended that the beasts were inferior from man, in that when they died they went down into the earth, and that there was nothing that went up as with men. The sacred writer King Solomon himself, was reflecting these theories when he said "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, or the spirit of the beast that it goeth downward to the earth?" This was the supposing up of his argument of the preceding verses, wherein he declares that there is no difference in the death of men and beasts—"as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they have all one breath: so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast." It should be noted that the word "breath" and the word "spirit" in these verses are from the same Hebrew word (ruach) which in this connection signifies life. The principle of life is always the same whether it is manifested in man or in animals.

Q.—Kindly explain how we are to understand Matthew xii, 40, where we read—"For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth?" yet His body was laid in the sepulcher on Friday, and He arose Sunday morning, according to St. Luke and Matthew, 36, 36, which make only two nights and three days. (O. J.)

Answer.—The intelligent evidence is clear and strong that our Lord was not three full twenty-four-hour days in the tomb, but only parts of the three days and nights; that He was crucified on the day corresponding to our Friday afternoon, and rose on what corresponded to our Sunday morning. The showing of the type that the Paschal Lamb was to be killed sometime during the 14th of Nisan, and the wave offering of the sheaf of the first-fruits was to occur on the 16th (Leviticus xxiii. 5, 6, 10, 11), should settle the matter for all. It agrees with the repeated statements (Leviticus xv. 4; Luke xxiv. 46) that our Lord rose on the third day, according to the Scriptures. The Scriptures concerning the first-fruits is the only one which we recall as in any way pointing out the time of our Lord's resurrection. This, too, the fact that history, as represented in the traditions and customs, points out Good Friday and Easter Sunday as celebrations of our Lord's death and resurrection, should have some weight on so trivial a matter, unless some positive reason for misstating the dates can be assigned. The only Scripture seeming to oppose all these facts is the declaration that our Lord would be three days and three nights in the earth; and the only explanation that can be offered to this is, that the supposition is used in a general manner.

DESIGNS FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS' PLAY GARMENTS ARE CHARMING

PLAY clothes for children are as pretty as those for full dress occasions. Linen, chambray and pique ginghams and other heavy wash fabrics are used in making up these garments. For the very little tots there are itty aprons with fanciful decorations like the one in the sketch. This one has deep pockets for the playthings. They are bound with bands of plain contrasting material of a darker shade. A flock of geese

A suit of this sort may be worn by either a tiny girl or boy and is just the thing for romping in the sand at the seashore or for a morning at the send pile.

THE NO GLOVE MOVEMENT.

Rings With Large Settings Responsible For Change.

There is no old saying that a French woman does her gloves in the privacy of her boudoir, an English woman while coming down the stairs, and the American rags on her gloves when halfway down the street. And if this is so it would appear as though for once the Parisians are imitating their American contemporaries.

The no glove fashion is particularly noticeable in Paris, where many smart women are carrying their gloves in their hands instead of putting them on. The gloves they carry are exceedingly fine suede ones in beautiful tints of lisle, ecru and tan.

For some little time past women have been flouting the old inexorable law that the hands should be covered in the evening, and at the theaters and the less ceremonious parties the wearing of gloves has been on the decrease.

There is also a new liking for duck's foot yellow gloves, which several years ago were exceedingly modish. These are worn for morning walks.

The reason assigned for the no glove movement is the fact that rings with very large gem settings are fashionable, and muffs are exceedingly popular. It is customary to take to the theater a large muff, in which the hands are buried. But the gloves must be there, tenderly curled in the hands after the manner affected by men.

Milady's Mirror

Puffy Flesh Under Eyes.

After a period of illness sometimes the flesh will recede about the eyes. This leaves the skin loose and shrivelled in appearance. For treatment warm almond oil is excellent. Dip small soft cloths in the oil and as often as convenient during the day and when retiring at night lay them on the loose skin.

The skin about the eyes of a person who is recovering from illness is too delicate to be massaged. The small veins and capillaries are very weak, so it behooves one to be extremely careful in this treatment. Foods which are easily digested, wholesome and strengthening are preferable to dainty or fancy dishes, and resting the eyes as often as possible is recommended.

Lack of sufficient sleep and internal derangement are responsible for the rolls of loose flesh under the eyes. If you hope for a cure then see to it that internally the system is in as nearly perfect condition as possible. When you are sure of this then you can start outward treatment. First be sure you are having sufficient sleep. From seven to eight hours each night is none too much, and the best hours are from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. The loose flesh and all about the eyes externally may be gently massaged with equal parts of rosewater and glycerin. If there is any smarting sensation reduce the amount of glycerin to one-third, with two-thirds of rosewater. Once or twice a week the lye bags may be allowed to lie for fifteen minutes on the puffy flesh, and occasionally bathing the parts in cold water will also prove beneficial.

Sun Bath For the Hair.

The crisp fresh air, the bright light and the sunshine of this season of the year are all good for the hair. It is the best summer sun that is injurious to both skin and scalp. Just now and for months to come a daily sun bath would be a life giving treatment for the scalp as well as it would be for the whole body.

If you have a room into which the sun shines brightly make it your sun parlor for at least an hour during each day. Take all the pins out of your hair, shake it free and loose every morning or any time through the day and sit in the sun. This will be more wonderful to the scalp than quarts of tonic.

To get good results from a sun bath all pins must be removed from the hair. If they are not, the scalp, which needs the tonic, will be intoxicated and only the hair on top or outside will receive the bath.

The scalp, although seemingly tender, can stand a lot of sun and the hottest summer days. The girl who has exposed her head much during such weather when playing tennis, etc., will remember that near the head the color of the hair is unchanged, however much the remainder may be streaked. This is because the scalp oils protect the hair.

Therefore when taking a sun treatment the hair should be loosened, the tresses should be parted and occasionally tossed about. Sit in a comfortable chair during the process, and the hair will be found restful to the nerves as well as the head.

Sleep For Looks.

Sleep is one of the best known preservatives of youth, and every woman should get as much of it as possible.

A short nap after meals is an excellent thing. Take it if you have time to lie down only for fifteen minutes.

On getting up you will feel composed and be readiness for any tasks that may await you.

Many women think they cannot afford to rest for a few moments, yet in the end this rest pays.

Regular hours are the best of helps to keeping one's youth and good looks.

Make it your business to get to bed at a reasonable hour every night and try to keep this hour the same.

Early rising will enable you to make up for the hours given to sleep at night.

If you are troubled by sleeplessness address leisurely, brush the hair into soda cream not like a cake of soap, about taffeta trimmed with white bell buttons, and the upper bodice of net has long sleeves of green taffeta.

Toilet Hints.

Warm water, pure soap and a complexion brush are valuable aids in reducing enlarged pores. The brush should be used vigorously and followed by the application of a good skin food.

For keeping the hands white and soft use a lotion of rosewater, six ounces; glycerin, one-half ounce; tincture of benzoin, one teaspoonful; borax, one teaspoonful. Shake well and allow it to stand ten minutes before using.

Simple but valuable is a face bleach of sour milk. The milk should be applied after the skin is thoroughly cleansed and allowed to remain on until dry. If an unpleasant odor remains it will yield to a mild solution of vinegar and hot water followed by an application of cold cream.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S PLANS.

She May Set Up a Court of Her Own at Marlborough House.

Queen Alexandra may have a court of her own at Marlborough House this season after the second anniversary of King Edward's death has passed.

She is already having some of the larger rooms redecorated and refurnished, and she has told the ladies in her entourage that she means to lighten her mourning and take up public life again. She appeared at Queen's hall concert a few days ago attended by a large suit, and the storm of cheers which greeted her brought tears of pleasure.

She has always reveled in the enthusiasm with which her subjects acknowledged her presence and rejoices in the fact that even now she is far more popular than her daughter-in-law, Queen Mary, who is merely greeted by respectful salutes and a few subdued cheers.

The queen mother also intends to appear regularly at the opera. She will sometimes share the royal box with her son and his wife, but more often she will be accompanied by Princess Victoria and some members of her suit, for King George and Queen Mary are not ardent music lovers and are often seen at Buckingham palace three four or five times during the season. And then the two royal ladies are not compelled always to wish to be together more than they can help.

Queen Alexandra resents being supplanted in her position as first lady in the land, and Queen Mary disapproves of her mother-in-law's amazingly youthful appearance and hatred of as well as her frivolity and love of dress and jewels.

Crepe de Chine Underwear.

Each year the return of summer brings us something new in the way of undergarments. This year's innovation is to be crepe de chine, and there is no doubt that it will be exceedingly cool and comfortable. We will find all our old favorites developed in this material, combinations, princess slips and nightgowns, and they will all be glorified. Pink is the favorite color, though corrects are found in all the delicate shades, while the more elaborate affairs, and likewise the more expensive, are decorated with flowers, rosettes and wreaths made of chiffon and ribbon.

The more simple and practical garments are lace trimmed, ribbon being the favorite, as it is on the fine undermuslins, though Irish edging and ribbon are used.

Useful Things to Know.

Starch should be mixed with soap water, for then the linen will have a more glossy appearance and be less likely to stick to the iron.

Moldew grease spots with cold water and soda before scrubbing, as this will cause them to be more easily removed.

Good black ink mixed with the white of an egg is excellent to restore the color to black kid gloves or shoes.

Any kind of steamed bread will be tastier if it is baked ten or fifteen minutes immediately on being taken from the steamer and before being removed from the mold.

If new cake tins are put on top of the stove until they have a bluish color, but not until they become burned, cake will not stick to them during the baking as it usually does to new tins.

For the Children

Two Baby Waifs Rescued From the Sunken Titanic.

© 1912, by American Press Association.

When the steamship Carpathia, which picked up the survivors of the wrecked Titanic, came into the port of New York she carried two small French boys whom nobody knew. They were cared for by a Miss Hays of New York. The children were mere babies, one four; the other a little over two years of age, and answered to the names Louis and Lolo. They knew no other names. The babies were found wrapped in a blanket in one of the Titanic's lifeboats. According to the stories told by survivors, a man passed the children into the boat just as it was leaving the side of the ship. Officers stepped forward to prevent his taking a place in the boat, but he declared he did not wish to go, saying that the children be taken. They protested to be the sons of Mme. Navratil of Nice, France. They had been taken away by their father, who probably perished on the Titanic.

Donkey in Lion's Skin.

A donkey finding a lion's skin put by hunters in the sun to dry, bravely clothed himself with it. Returning speedily to his native village, he acutely frightened his friends and companions, both men and animals. His appearance making such a great impression he was unable to withhold his great glee and brayed out his neighbors in boisterous guffaws. Forthwith those who had died now turned upon him and gave him a merciless beating and cudgeling.

Later, while moaning and whining in his lonesome corner, his friend, the fox, gave him this advice:

"A fine appearance any disguise, but silly words will disclose a fool."

No Laughter Party.

Great fun is caused by a party given by children to children where the rule of the evening is "no laughter permitted." Every time the rule is transgressed a forfeit must be paid, to be redeemed later on, and all games are played with the one idea of provoking laughter. Every child comes in some quaint homemade costume, a prize being given for the funniest, and instead of the usual decorations, absurd toys are placed on shelves and mantelpieces, such as long boiled dogs and cats, old colored birds and monkeys, rag dolls, Teddy bears, etc., all in the funniest possible attitudes.

Slap Jack.

This game of cards can be played by not more than ten persons. The cards are dealt one by one and placed in a pile, face downward, before each player. This in turn each one takes a card from the top of his pile and, without looking at it, plays it in the center of the table. When a jack is thrown on the table all the players try to slap it, and the one who does so first takes all the cards in the center of the table and adds them to his pile. The object is to obtain all the cards, and the one who succeeds in this is the winner of the game.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

"THE LAND OF MILK AND HONEY"

Did you ever hear of Messiah's Glad Land,
Where wonderful palaces of blessing will stand?
With houses of peace and dwellings of joy,
With no one to scold and none to annoy?
Where streets are all paved with kindness and love,
And the air is all music and bright as above?
Where scales and rubbers and dismounds are sel.
All over the cities—Oh! such a sight met!
Then the tables are full of such delicate things,
All made out of fruit from the trees of the Kings!
Plum-cakes all-decked with the jellies of grace,
Resplendent with frostings and juiced to the taste!
But such wine in that kingdom—how toothsome sweet!
In goblets of gold doth the lips of each greet!
Puddings and ices all made out of Truths—
Served by swift angels—all sunny-faced youths!
Nobody's sick there—all full of glee!
Happy! Oh! Happy! What else could it be?
Love bubbles up from the font of the Lord—
Praise! Hallelujah! All about one accord!
Harps of Salvation! Flutes and the Viol!
Such raptures freedom!—All without guile!
Ah! is this not the prophets' full story—
He maketh the Earth all full of his glory!
Yes, Oh! ye Hopers! be richer than Money!
In the Land of the Promise which floweth with honey?
So let us cling fast to the Word of his Favor,
And wash every day in the Bath of the Savior!
Thus the milk of true kindness will grow here and flow,
Displacing the princes of faction and Woe!
Now who will abide to share in such bliss?
We hope you dear faithful some place will not miss!

I want to thank you for the way you publish Brother Russell's Sermons and the Bible Question Box. It's great in the extreme. There are so many that have learned to study the Bible today by reading his sermons in your paper. I want to say that is my case. Pastor Russell's Sermons have opened my eyes and taught me to study the Bible. If we don't study for ourselves it is not worth while for some one else to study for us. I'll add my thank you for your paper. It comes to me as Tidings of Great Joy as long as you hold the Truth.

I will remain,

A. M. KEYS.

Texas, May 26.

Pardon me for intruding on your valuable time and a little space in your very much appreciated paper. It comes as a refreshing draught from the fountain of present Truth and as such I accept it and thank you as the servant bearing it to us. I appreciate the letters of appreciation you publish weekly, I accept it as another means of meeting and getting acquainted with others of like precious faith. To you and all such I will say, the Lord bless thee and keep thee and make his face to shine upon thee and give thee peace. The tests are now being applied a little more severely and it is our privilege to stand for the right such may find something to do. Let's ask, let's seek, let's watch and pray let's so run as to obtain in all our ways acknowledge His and He will direct our paths.

Yours for Truth,

A. N. JOHNSON.

New York, May 23.

For some years we have been taking your paper. I esteem it highly as a labor paper and am also deeply interested in the Sermons of Pastor Russell. Living in a time when knowledge is so much increased and increased enlightment on every other subject, why should we not expect increased light on the Bible also.

It seems to me that every sermon and also the questions and answers are driving away the errors which have so long covered the Bible teachings and it is high time we learn the Truth on this subject. Trusting you will continue to print these sermons.

I remain very truly yours,

EDNA M. DAVIS.

Indiana, May 23.

The Tribune continues to hold its own as the best labor paper published and my appreciation of it is unabated, but I find the grasping creation down here in Georgia and Alabama are more interested in cotton and tobacco than in the "good tiding of great joy," which the Tribune proclaims and I am persuaded the Apostle was right when he said "the natural man perceiveth not the things of God, neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned." If it were otherwise more would be glad to pay the price asked for such a paper as the Tribune, with its "meat in due season for the household of faith," and I would be able to send you a list of new subscribers.

With good wishes,

E. S. MASON.

Illinois, May 26.

Again I have the pleasure of sending you a new subscriber. The increasing popularity of the Labor Tribune among the Friends in the Truth illustrates the truth of the saying, "merit will win."

And it seems to me that it is entirely fitting that the Gospel of God's great Love as it is manifested in Jesus Christ our dear Redeemer, should be carried about in clean vessels, such as the Watch Tower and Labor Tribune, and while the Truth is still suffering at the hands of a heedless majority we know that it is nevertheless exerting a mighty influence and that ere long it will universally prevail.

The past and the present is well described by James Russell Lowell in these words:

"Truth for ever on the scaffold,
Wrong for ever on the throne—
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above His own."

We are indeed glad to know that this "forever" of the rule of wrong is nearly at an end, and that "The Kingdom and Dominion and the Power to the people of the saints of the Most High, and all governments shall serve and obey Him."

In the hope of that glorious Kingdom, I am your brother.

C. E. SCHILLER.

Virginia, May 22.

Someone sent me a copy of the Tribune of May 9, 1912, and in it I find an exposition of the "Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus," in which these two are made to "represent the Jews' and Gentiles' position of favor and disfavor during this Christian age." Who said they represented any other except the classes to which they belong? I beg leave to say that this parable is a true picture of the attitude of rich men toward poor men in Palestine in the days of Jesus. Ostentatious wealth could dress in fine linen and fare sumptuously every day while the poor starved at their gates. The rich were more unsocial than even the dogs, because they did show sympathy for Lazarus' suffering by coming to him and "licking his sores." Jesus condemned the rich man because of his unsocial attitude toward the poor and through all the succeeding centuries the ethics of Jesus condemn rich men who see their wealth for personal luxuries while the poor starve. If Jesus of Nazareth teaches anything in this parable it is the socialization of wealth, and that a man's eternal welfare is determined by the manner in which he uses his wealth.

This, I think, is the plain meaning of the word and certainly it is the view that is needed in this Twentieth century in this country of ours. Dives will "clothes himself in fine linen and fare sumptuously every day" while the poor are crowded in unsanitary buildings amid a rising environment and "sweat" out their lives in ill ventilated shops in order to pay larger dividends to Dives. For all these things, Jesus says, God will bring these men to judgment. Of course I do not think that this is the whole teaching of Jesus concerning the attitude of rich men toward poor men; nor do I think that He teaches charity is the solution of poverty, but this parable he touches but one phase of the subject.

Yours truly,

Seems to me that each issue of the Tribune becomes more interesting. I can hardly wait for it each week. I sure enjoy all its departments, especially the Sermons, Question Box, Sunday Lessons and Letters of appreciation. Will do all I can to get subscribers in order to get the Truth to the people.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

British Miners and the Minimum Wage Act--Discont Comes to a Head--Outstanding Example of Successful Modern British Trade Unionism--London Transport Workers' Strike May Lead to National Tie-Up of All British Ports.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, May 20.—All that your correspondent has said about the manner in which the miners' Minimum Wage Act is working in this country is being well borne out by the events of this week. The conference of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain held in London on May 22 has unanimously registered its protest against those awards of the District Boards which are said to fall below the level of a living wage, has asked for the amendment of the recently-passed Minimum Wage Act, and has appealed for an interview with the Prime Minister to state its complaints against the measure.

This was so obviously a policy which would commend itself to the general body of delegates that it will cause little surprise to learn that it was adopted unanimously. At the opening of the conference the Executive Committee submitted the resolution which was in these terms:

"This conference, having received the reports of the work done by the various District Boards where decisions have been given under the Minimum Wage Act, regrets that, notwithstanding the many declarations of the Prime Minister and his colleagues that the lowest minimum rate of wages fixed for adult underground workers should be a reasonable living wage, we have a number of awards which fix the minimum rates for underground adult workmen at less than such reasonable living wage, and also that in some cases chairmen have refused to take into consideration the average wages earned by piece-workers when defining the meaning of Section 2, Paragraph 2, of the Minimum Wage Act; this conference, to our records its strongest protest against those awards, and calls upon the Government to take such immediate action as will remedy the defects complained of. The conference instructs the Executive Committee to ask for an interview with the Government, and that a further conference be held, without delay to receive the report of the deputation.

Some striking facts showing the growth and rapidly increasing resources of organized labor in this country are to be found in the financial statement and report for the year 1911, which has just been issued by the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants.

Last year was a memorable one in many respects in the history of the society, which has now been established 40 years, and for one reason in particular, seeing that the increase in membership, which leaped up from 76,143 to 110,316 created a record. During the year 48 new branches were brought into existence, making 750, which were in active life at the year end. More have since been opened.

The report, which is admirably clear and concise, points out that the most striking fact in the most strenuous in the whole history of the society, a fact which is largely accounted for, of course, by the great national railway strike last August. The unrest which prevailed in the early part of the year grew into open conflict, and for the first time in history the railwaymen were called upon to join in a national stoppage.

The year covered by the reports, therefore, was remarkable for the fact that after long years of uphill work the society succeeded in making railway trade unionism a force to be reckoned with.

The gross receipts during the year amounted to $551,720 showing an increase of no less than $93,595 over the previous year. The year's expenditure which, of course, owing to the strike, was unprecedented, totaled $572,015 against $378,329 showing an increase of $172,686.

Another great transport strike has suddenly developed. The success of last year won by the organized transport workers will be remembered. This year the strike starts with an even better prospect of success because the employers have been given less notice. The strike is the result of the strained situation brought about by the dispute between the Watermen and Lightermen's Union and their employers. The union insisted that a solitary non-unionist should either join them or be dismissed from the employ of the Mercantile Lighterage Company. The firm, refusing to comply with the terms of their agreement with the union, the latter chose to employ none but union men, caused a lock-out of all unionists. The firm has closed over their traffic to the Employers' Association, of which they are members.

The union seeing that this was a combined effort to thwart Trades Unionism, brought out those of the members who were asked by their employers to convey merchandise which was within the ordinary traffic of the recalcitrant firm. This led to a further lock-out of lighterage hands (being the men who operate the large open barges used in loading and unloading vessels in the River Thames), and the London district committee of the Transport Workers' Federation, being appealed to, lashed an order to all sections of the Federation to refuse to do work which would properly

DRAFT OF NEW WORKMEN'S ACT.

The State Industrial Accidents Commission authorized by the last legislature and appointed by Governor John K. Tener, has made a tentative draft of a workmen's compensation act. The commission is composed of David R. Reed, Pittsburgh, chairman; J. H. Callahan, Jr., Philadelphia; John J. Cushing, Monessen; Francis Feehan, President of the United Mine Workers of the Pittsburgh district; George C. Heintzelman, Sheridan; Morris Williams, Philadelphia, and Francis H. Rohlen, secretary, Philadelphia.

The draft follows the Dunn bill which was passed by the last legislature but failed in the senate. It had the support of labor bodies and the approval of many labor bodies and the approval of many corporations. The commission has incorporated many of the provisions of the Dunn measure. Copies of the tentative draft are now being sent over the state and suggestions will be considered before the bill is finally prepared for introduction into the legislature. The enactment is to be known as the "Workmen's Compensation Law of 1912."

ANTI-FEEHAN CHARGES DISPROVED.

THE so-called convention of miners of the Pittsburgh district which has been receiving some space in the daily papers for a week or more past ought not to deceive any union man. When it first met, it met in the Union Labor Temple. The National Labor Tribune having pointed out that it had no right to meet in such a place, as its purpose was to disrupt a union, the executive committee of the Iron City Central Trades Council has refused it the further use of the temple, and all good union men will uphold the council in this action.

There are, as the Tribune said two weeks ago, a few honest men in the convention, but they have been badly misled, and are in a decided minority. The majority of the men prominent in the affair are utterly discredited, insofar as any trades union standing is concerned, and are working in the interest of wealthy men whose sole aim is to break up the miners' organization in the Pittsburgh district, so that they shall be able to dictate terms to the miners not only in regard to wages but in regard to everything else.

The leaders of this so-called convention, in which there are not more than a score of men with a right to claim that they represent anybody but themselves, will not nobody much longer. No union miner has any excuse for listening to them and their hypocritical tirades against President Feehan. This is only a pretext that they are using to conceal their real purpose, which is the destruction of trades unionism in the coal industry. Mr. Feehan's opponents have had a chance to prove to a committee of the international executive board whether their charges have any foundation. The board has been here for ten days, and has heard all the witnesses offered; but we understand that not a single charge against Mr. Feehan has been substantiated. He has conducted his office with absolute integrity, and has secured more for the miners than any other man who ever held the office. Moreover, he has been fairly re-elected, as he deserved to be, in spite of the fact that money supplied by operators has been poured out like water in an effort to carry the district against him and put into the office of district president some man who would be less aggressive in his defense of the miners' interests.

When the investigating committee of the international executive board makes its report, we predict it will show clearly the dishonest character of the attacks that have been made upon Feehan. That has been the record of every insurrection ever made, and it is time that not only all union miners but the public at large should thoroughly understand the contemptible character of the miserepresentation by which the brave and able leader has been subjected.

A. A. DENOUNCES OLEO TAX.

THE National Labor Tribune is glad to see that the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tinplate Workers at its annual convention adopted a resolution denouncing the oleomargarine tax and demanding its repeal. The Tribune has labored unceasingly to secure the repeal of this most unjust of laws, and as one influential labor organization after another falls into line and takes up the fight, our confidence in the final victory is strengthened.

The pretence of the butter trust is that the tax is levied only on colored oleo it need not interfere with the sale of oleo which is uncolored.

Now, neither butter nor oleomargarine looks pleasant uncolored. Practically all butter made for sale is colored, to take away the lard-like or suet-like appearance that it has in its uncolored state. All that the oleomargarine manufacturers ask is that they be permitted to use the same harmless coloring matter to make their product marketable just as butter is made marketable. To permit butter makers to use coloring matter, but forbid its use to the oleomargarine makers, is a discrimination for which no excuse that looks water can be found.

It plainly betrays the purpose of the tax—which is not to prevent the sale of oleomargarine as butter, but to restrict and hamper its sale at all. In a word, it is a tax on coloring—a tax to prevent oleo from being treated in the same way as butter to make it presentable and fit for the table.

If the only object of the law were to prevent deception, it would free oleomargarine from the discriminating tax, allow it to be colored in the same way and by the same means as butter, and require every package exposed by dealers for sale to be plainly labeled oleomargarine, with penalties for false labeling similar to the penalties for false labeling of any other food. To argue that the tax of 10 cents a pound now imposed on the coloring of oleomargarine (but not on the coloring of butter) does not cause an enormous decrease in the consumption of oleomargarine not only among the well-to-do but among the poor, is nonsensical. That is the effect of the tax, and it is the effect the butter monopoly (which forced the legislation) intended. If the women's clubs desire to strike a telling blow at the butter trust and bring the price of butter down at least ten cents, they will insist that Congress repeal the oleomargarine tax.

A BILL TO REDUCE WAGES.

WHILE President Taft has made no announcement in regard to his intentions relative to the steel bill since that measure passed the Senate, there is little doubt among leaders of both parties at Washington that he will veto it, insisting that it was not framed in good faith or with any expectation of its becoming law. While the President does not maintain that the present duties on metals should in all instances remain unchanged, he does insist that revision should await a report of the result of the investigations the bi-partisan tariff board is making into producing costs here and abroad.

The common impression throughout the country is, of course, that the bill passed last week makes radical reductions. It does make radical reductions—dangerously radical reductions—in some schedules, but it actually increases rates in forty-three paragraphs above the rates adopted by the Democrats at the last session. Although called the iron and steel bill, the measure includes every metal known to commerce—gold, silver, nickel, copper, lead, bronze, zinc, aluminum, tin, quicksilver and antimony, and the manufactures of all these metals, including everything from artificial limbs to aeroplanes.

It was made perfectly clear in the hearings before the finance committee of the Senate that no reduction can be made at this time in many of the paragraphs of the metal bill without seriously affecting American industries, which employ hundreds of thousands of wage-earners. As Senator Stone points out, the representatives of 284 different industrial concerns located in eighteen states appeared before the Senate committee to protest against the proposed revision. Representatives of organized labor also made protests against the bill, declaring that it was unfair and unjust to American workmen. Manufacturers after manufacturer submitted facts and figures to the committee, showing that he is making little or no profit on his products at this time, endeavoring, as he has done, to maintain the standard of American wages in competition with the cheaper labor of Europe. Mr. Smoot asserted that the increased importations under the bill may exceed $100,000,000 annually, throwing many thousands of workmen out of employment. This calamity will be averted by a presidential veto, which will postpone the whole subject of tariff revision until after the election, when it can be taken up with the careful deliberation it merits.

TALCOTT WILLIAMS DIRECTS NEW SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM

EVEN those who have been inclined to deride the idea of teaching youngsters to be newspaper men by any other than the "W-I-N-D-E-R, winder, wash it!" method cannot say that Dr. Talcott Williams, the head of the new Pulitzer school of journalism, is not a practical man in his profession. In an experience covering nearly forty years he has discharged almost every duty that a man can be called upon to perform in the editorial department of a newspaper. He has been reporter, Washington correspondent, editorial writer, art and dramatic critic and managing editor. He began his newspaper life on the New York World and was with the Philadelphia Press from 1881 until the time of his appointment to the Pulitzer school. It is difficult to suggest any subject on which Dr. Williams cannot discourse fluently, interestingly and with accurate information. This is due not only to his wide reading and experience, but also to the fact that for many years he has kept a "morgue" or collection of carefully classified clippings on all subjects of human interest. It is expected that he will personally direct the instruction in the history and ethics of journalism.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The federal labor and trade unions attached directly to the American Federation of Labor, there being no international organization holding jurisdiction over the class of work performed by the membership of these unions, have been recipients of large strike benefits the last seven months. The constitution of the American Federation of Labor provides that where organizations have been in continuous good standing for one year its members (in good standing for one year also) are entitled to a strike benefit of $4 per week. The first seven months of the fiscal year, according to a report rendered by Secretary Morrison to the executive council, shows that $50,695 have been paid out as strike benefits to members of the organizations represented on. This is the largest amount of strike benefits ever paid out by the Federations in any one like period. Benefits are still being drawn by a large number of strikers.

Senator Heyburn of Idaho, than whom labor has no more uncompromising enemy, was presented an occasion during the discussion of the eight-hour bill in the Senate, to air his discounted views on labor's rights. The senator has an inexhaustible supply of vitriolic language ready for in stant use when the interests of labor are under discussion. During the debate on the eight-hour bill Senator Heyburn made use of the following language: "There is no crying need for it. If there were I would be more patient with the effort, the superhuman effort, to legislate on a subject that needs no legislation. There is no demand for it except from the paid representatives of the real workingmen, and it is the sting of a whip. I do not recognize the right of any man or the representative of organized men to send a whip all the Congress of the United States, and it will be a sad day for the government when it shall be done. * * * I will treat them as fairly and as liberally as I would the representatives of the biggest monopolies in the country, and I will not deal with them any more liberally or fairly. I will protect them against oppression, but I will not allow them to oppress others. That whip they have the power, to stir above our heads and say, 'We want this legislation, and we are going to have it, or we will see to it that you are defeated at the polls at the next election.'"

Further along in the debate Mr. Heyburn gave utterance in the following: "We have now prohibited the sturdy, robust young men of 12 and 13 and 14 years of age from participating in the support of the families of which they are members. Why? For the benefit of those young men? No man will dare to claim that, but in order to lessen the supply of labor in the interest of the agitators. That is why we did it, and I have not to carry on my shoulders the sin of participating in that kind of legislation merely because there was a hue and cry for it. There was no demand from the widows and the disabled people of the country who depend upon their children under the age which we fixed in that legislation, that we forbid by law those robust and capable supporters from performing their duty. There came to the Senate no petition from those mothers and dependent relatives and old people asking for that legislation. There were no petitions from them, and there are no petitions from that generation represented by the young men between 12 and 16 years, asking that they be relieved from the performance of their share in support of the family. Did it ever occur to Senators that we should have heard through some means from that class of people? No. We were hearing from the class of people who limit the apprentices in the fields of industry through a selfish purpose of enabling them more easily to control the field of labor within their own hands. It came from the same source." Labor will remain on the "job" in spite of misrepresentatives of the Senator Hayburn stripe.

Senator Crawford of South Dakota, in a speech recently made in the Senate advocating the passage of an amendment to the federal constitution fixing the terms of office of judges of the United States courts, said in part: "There is much which calls for criticism in the administration of our courts. There are defects in judicial procedure, both civil and criminal, which all should help to remedy. When the court is a state tribunal and the term of office is elective, the people can easily correct abuses by reforming the judicial procedure, shortening the term of judges and limiting

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Over $50,000 in Strike Benefits Paid Out in the Past Six Months by the A. F. of L.--Senator Heyburn, of Iowa, an Uncompromising Enemy of Organized Labor, Airs His Views on the Eight-Hour Bill.

HANFORD SHOULD BE IMPEACHED.

IF AS now appears, the Socialist whom United States District Judge Hanford has deprived of citizenship in the State of Washington had been fully naturalized, there is ground for Hanford's impeachment, and the impeachment ought not to be delayed. The agitation for the questionable remedy of judicial recall would have no birth or force if it were demonstrated that where a judge is guilty of wrongful conduct the people can be protected from it without resort to the proposed practice of the recall. Impeachment is a recall fitted to the conditions of each particular case. And Hanford seems richly to have deserved it. If he were merely refusing to naturalize Olson, it would be difficult to overrule him, owing to the large discretion that the law allows a judge passing upon the qualifications of applicants for naturalization. Olson, however, appears really to have been shrewdly admitted to citizenship, and Hanford's action was a cancellation of papers already issued. It therefore amounts to an attempt to disfranchise a citizen because of his political opinions.

As a Socialist, Olson believes in radical amendments of the constitution but there is hardly a citizen in the land who is not trying to amend it in important respects. To maintain that they are thereby guilty of treason or such other offense as merits cancellation of their citizenship is not merely unwise but is idiotic. The New York Evening Post, which so often accused of being the organ of established institutions and vested interests, points out that under Hanford's ruling "an applicant for citizenship who believes in the popular election of United States Senators might be rejected because the constitution provides at present that senators shall be elected by the legislatures." That he went beyond his jurisdiction, says the Buffalo News, appears plain "when one compares the Socialist doctrine with the general doctrine of Theodore Roosevelt." And the Chicago Record-Herald rightly remarks that Olson "has as much right to advocate Socialism as other citizens have to advocate the recall of judges or the Canadian government railroads, the single tax."

The trouble with Hanford evidently is that he is on the bench not as the minister of law and defender of justice, but simply as the representative of the wealth which has roused so much bitterness by its aggressions against the people. He is said to have been barred in effigy once for a decision he gave against the city of Seattle and in favor of one of the public service corporations. And according to the New York Sun (recently not a radical newspaper) the talk in Seattle is that "in contests of a serious nature coming before him he has invariably decided against the people. It was Judge Hanford who attempted to block the recall of former Mayor Gill of Seattle, on the ground that the council did not include the cost of election about to be held in the regular budget passed months before." Hanford's impeachment would serve, with Archbald's, as a wholesome warning to a certain type of judges.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

MYSTIC BABYLON AND DAUGHTERS.

Weighed in the Balances and Found Wanting—Wine of False Doctrines. Pastor Russell Treats a Difficult Subject With All Kindness—Presents a Clear View of the Divine Message—Failure of the Consolation of the Tower of Babel Explained—A Wonderful Structure and the Cause of its Downfall.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 2.—Pastor Russell addressed a large audience again in the Academy of Music, notwithstanding the season. His topic was "The Fall of Mystic Babylon." His text: "Mene, Mene Tekel, Upharsin—weighed in the balance and found wanting." (Daniel v. 25, 26.) He said:

While our message for today is "meat in due season" to the Household of Faith and every way most important to be understood, it is nevertheless a subject difficult to treat without giving offense, without being misunderstood, without seeming harsh. Bear with me, then, while expressing what I believe to be the Divine Message in just as kindly a manner as I know how.

The Scriptures which I may quote in support of my presentations seem harsh, almost to cruelty, but I assure you my hearers, that I am not responsible for the language used. My responsibility is to speak the word of the Lord. In doing this I shall endeavor to present the Lord's words in as kindly a manner as possible, and so far as possible explain some of the harsher expressions, but I must not shun to declare the whole counsel of God—and as fully as I believe He would now have His people understand it.

There was no Mystic Babylon in the days of Jesus and the Apostles. The expressions therefore in Revelation bearing upon Mystic Babylon, were prophetic of the Systems and conditions which have since arisen in the Church. The word "Babylon" has a double significance. It comes from "Babel." It calls our minds back to the period when the sons of Noah lost faith in the Divine Providential care, and the promise of the rainbow, and endeavored to erect a structure for their own preservation—the Tower of Babel. This attempt led to the confusion of tongues.

Similarly, following the days of the Apostles and the persecution of the early Church, an attempt was made to erect a great religious System for the Church's protection, not waiting for and relying upon the Divine Promise that Messiah in due time would come and establish His Kingdom for the world's blessing.

The religious Tower of Babel was, primarily, Papacy. It was a wonderful structure so far as it went, but it never accomplished the desires of its founders. It never mastered the situation and established the Church far above the power and influence of the civil governments and earthly monarchs.

It was when the Tower of Babel rose to a considerable height in dignity and grandeur that the Lord manifested His power Amongst the workmen, and confounded their speeches. Disconcerted, the further building of the Tower ceased, and the people of the different languages set up each for himself according to the different ideals. This corresponds well with the Protestant Reformation movement, and the various denominations into which those ones' Catholics became divided.

BABYLON AND ITS WALL.

Another thought connected with our subject is that the literal city of Babylon was a prototype, a prophetic figure of Mystic Babylon. The name Babylon signifies, "The gate of God"—the gateway by which access to God is to be attained. This in effect was the claim made by Papacy, and the claim she still makes, that she is a great City, a great Kingdom, that she has a great ball of Divine salvation and protection about her—a great wall built of ignorance and superstition, say her enemies.

In the Book of Revelation Jesus prophetically pictured the greatness of this City, this spiritual Empire. It is essentially religious, although it includes the great kingdoms of earth, which unitedly are styled Christendom. This great City, Babylon, is represented as being divided into ten different wards, each of which represents one of the kingdoms of Christendom, and which correspond to the ten horns of the symbolic Beast. Compare Revelation xi, 13; xvi, 19; xvii, 1.

And as this great City, or spiritual kingdom, thus includes the chief monarchies of Europe, so, under another figure, Babylon, Papacy, is represented as a "woman," ingwhose forehead was found the name, "Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots." Thus is shown in some manner the various Protestant systems of Christendom which separated from the "Mother Church" of Rome, still are daughters, still related to her, partakers of her character, traits and dispositions. Thus Babylon with her ten wards includes practically all of Europe; and Mother and Daughters of this same family name include nearly all of the Protestant denominations, as well as the Catholic Mother Church.

WHAT IS MEANT BY HARLOTRY?

It should be remembered in discussing this subject that the language is figurative—that it does not signify that either the Church of Rome or her Protestant Daughters are illmoral. The thought is that the Church of Christ was primarily a "virgin" company or persons, called out, separated from the world and its aims and ambitions—called to be saints and joint-heirs with Christ in His Kingdom. To whatever extent systems arose amongst the followers of Jesus and became affiliated with any of the kingdoms of this world—to that extent, Scripturally, figuratively, they committed harlotry—because they were exposed to the King of Kings and the Lord of lords, and were to wait for Him, that at His second coming they might become His Bride and become associated with Him in His Throne.

It will not be questioned that Papacy became affiliated with the Roman Empire and sat down on the throne of Rome, nor that the Church of England, as one of her daughters, became affiliated with the Government, and now sits representatively, in the House of Lords. It would not be questioned that the Greek Church experienced a similar betrothal and marriage to the Russian Government, the Lutheran Church to the German Empire, etc., etc. It is on this account and in this sense that the Church of Rome and her Daughter-mother and daughters, organizations of Protestants, are figuratively called by the family name of Babylon.

BABYLON'S GOLDEN CUP.

Under the figure of a woman clothed in purple and scarlet the Mother System of Babylon, long centuries ago, "made all the nations drunk with the wine," the doctrines which she had in her "golden cup." (Revelation xvii, 1-6.) The "golden cup" represents the Bible, the Divine Standard, or authority. It was intended when the wine of false doctrine was put into it—when the Bible was claimed as authority for various erroneous teachings of the Dark Ages. The intoxicating wine which made all the nations drunk, and which led them to support the "woman" and to call themselves Christian nations, Papacy still holds in her hand, and still offers to all who will receive it. But the nations are gradually sobering up and becoming less and less inclined to take more of the wine.

It is not necessary to suppose that every doctrine presented by Papacy was false and intoxicating. The thought is rather that of commingled wine—that a stupefying potion was put into the wine already in the cup. As the golden cup represents the Word of God and its Message, the stupefying potion may well be understood to be some of the doctrines—for instance, that God's Kingdom had already been set up, and that the papal throne in the world is the Throne of Christ, that the Pope reigns as Christ's Vicegerent, or substitute, and representative. Other poisonous elements threatened the people with purgatorial torture, or eternal torment, if they failed to keep in line with the Papal authority—His claimed Vicegerent authority of Christ.

The Protestant denominations were all born under these intoxicating influences and false theories. While they did separate from the Mother system, and did denounce her, nevertheless they held doctrinally to many of the intoxicating errors of her cup. Consequently they, too, claim that somehow, they know not how, Messiah's Kingdom is set up and is reigning. They, too, join in giving the nations some of the same stupefying potion the Mother gave them, telling them that they are Christian nations, even though they have anything but the Christian spirit, and are building great guns and dreadnaughts to blow each other off the face of the earth.

So strong is the power of this intoxication that the inconsistencies of such theories are not discerned by the intoxicated ones. Only the few who are gradually getting free from the stupefying potion are able, by Divine assistance, to see some of the mistakes along this line. These see that neither the Church of Rome nor any of her Daughter systems are the true Kingdom of Christ. These see from the Divine standpoint that these systems are "harlot" systems. Each of them professes to be the Bride of Christ, yet each is out of the marriage of the Lamb" is to take place at the second coming of Christ. They have therefore very generally lost sight of the fact that the "virgin" of Christ, a little flock," is to will be accounted worthy to share the marriage and become the Bride of Christ, must "wait for the Lord from Heaven" (1 Thessalonians i:10)—must be the world, keeping herself unspotted from the world, a virgin, that she may be accounted worthy to enter into the joys of her Lord, become His Queen and joint-heir in His Kingdom.

It is not to be expected that either the Mother or the Daughters, who are now claiming to reign with Christ, who are now claiming that this King-dom is already set up, who are now claiming that their unions with the kingdoms of this world are legitimate unions, have the Bridegroom's approval. It is not to be expected that these realize their own condition—that they are disloyal to the true Bridegroom and King, symbolical "harlots," in relation with the kingdoms of this world at this present time, and supporting the same and calling them by the Bridegroom's name—Christendom, which is the counterfeit Kingdom.

BABYLON, THE GREAT CITY.

In the symbolical language of the Book of Revelation, as already indicated, the name Babylon is applied, not only to the typical woman, Papacy, and her mystical Daughters, the Protestant denominations, but also applied to the great City, Mystic Babylon. The "woman" more particularly represents the ecclesiastical system, and the "city" more particularly represents the governmental features—the sacerdotal or religious authority to govern and control the kingdoms, the nations of the earth.

We call especial attention to the history respecting the literal city of Babylon, with its most wonderful walls and hanging gardens. We all remember how it was built across the river Euphrates, which flowed through its center, and was supposed to protect it fully from the hazard of an invasion. Besides its vast storehouses of food it had the whole river for its water supply.

Babylon was therefore reckoned impregnable. So Mystic Babylon, Christendom of our day, is a most masterly organization. Its walls are built of ignorance and superstition, whose great foundations were laid centuries ago. Literal Babylon's great gates of brass, which came down to the river's level, represented in Mystic Babylon worldly wisdom, human ingenuity and dexterity of organization, for the protection of the City of "waters," and to protect the City from a possible approach from that direction.

But what is signified by the "waters," the river? We answer that in symbolic language generally, water has two distinct interpretations: (1) Water symbolizes Truth. (2) Water also symbolizes revenues, from out of which comes support. And so in Revelation we read that the woman with the golden cup sitteth upon many waters; "and the waters which thou sawest are peoples and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." (Revelation xvii, 1:15.) This "woman" does not reign over one-nation or people alone. Her rule is a catholic or general one, for all nations were made more or less drunk with her false doctrines.

The water of the River Euphrates flowing through the City of Babylon might therefore be understood to signify the peoples and nations supporting Babylon by contributions, tithes and offerings.

THE EUPHRATES TO BE DRIED UP.

In Revelation not merely the name Babylon is used, long after the literal city was so blotted out that for a long time its site was unknown, but the symbolical description includes also the River Euphrates, and we read (xvi, 12) of the great River Euphrates, that "the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the Kings of the East might be prepared." If we are correct in interpreting these "waters" to signify revenues from all nations, what would be signified by the drying up of the River? We answer that it would imply a cessation of the revenues of Babylon, a decline in the contributions which heretofore have made her wealthy—millions coming every year from rich and poor of all nations for her support. It is in full accord with this Divine prediction of what is yet to come that we hear crying and distress arising from all denominations, Catholic and Protestant, to the effect that the "waters," the revenues, are being dried up. This is the time when the world is larger in population and wealth than ever before.

History tells us that the great city of Babylon was captured by Cyrus and his army after a considerable siege, which was unsuccessful until his soldiers digged a fresh channel for the river and turned its course aside. Then the River Euphrates was dried up, and the army of Cyrus entered literal Babylon, suddenly, in the night. While these things were transpiring, the princes of Babylon, corresponding to the notables of Christendom, were holding high carnival, rejoicing in their security, boasting of the strength of their walls and the impregnability of their gates, and the sureness of their waters.

As then they were using the golden vessels of the Lord's Temple from which to drink their wine, so now, in the hour of Babylon's fall, we may expect something to correspond to this—a spirit of boastfulness, of pride, of intoxication with error, apparently drawn from the Divine Word.

It was at this moment of exuberance that in the banquet hall of Belshazzar a hand appeared and with glowing pencil wrote the words of our text: "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin." "Mene"—the days of your rule have been numbered by God and are finished. "Tekel"—thou art weighed in the balances and found wanting. "Peres"—thy Kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians. The strong symbolism in the language used in respect to Mystic Babylon correspond so well with the prophetic language used respecting literal Babylon that we are warranted in understanding literal Babylon to have been a prototype of Mystic Babylon, and her fall a prefigure of the fall of Christendom.

Cyrus was prophetically mentioned in the Scriptures as the deliverer of God's people from the Babylonian captivity, before his birth, long there-

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Indiana, May 29.

I wish to say that I am greatly pleased with the paper and feel that I cannot afford to do without it. I am glad that it has been brought to my attention by some dear friends who are interested in the Bible teachings of Pastor Russell.

Hoping to soon receive the numbers due me, I am

Sincerely your friend for the Truth.
ANNA R. H. MOON.

New York, May 30.

I have just sent in my own subscription to your valuable paper must have run out so I am renewing through the Watch Tower office.

I have pleasure in noting that a number of my friends are subscribing to your paper as a result of their attention being called to its excellent features by me. I enjoy it so much that it is a pleasure to tell others about it, hoping they also may become as much interested in the religious features as I am. Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box, the Sunday School Lessons and the Letters of Appreciation are of special interest, as well as the Labor News.

Wishing you success in every way and kindest wishes for you and yours.

Very truly yours,
E. P. YORK.

Nebraska, May 29.

I wish again to express my appreciation of your valuable paper. I certainly enjoy its weekly visits very much. I especially enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and the letter of the dear friends and also the Popular Mechanics, knowing that these labor saving devices will be put to good use in the kingdom which will shortly be established over all the earth under the Greater Mediator than Moses, Christ the head and the church which is his body. May you continue the good work until you will be amply rewarded from the King of kings is my prayer for you. I am also sending money order for two new subscriptions to your paper. Please send them on your list as soon as possible. With best wishes for the Tribune, I remain,

Yours truly,
MAX MATTHEWS.

Massachusetts, May 30.

After reading Pastor Russell's Sermons in your paper for nearly a year I am convinced you must be a blessing to many. Of course I as you would't give the sermons and other religious matter so much space. Be sure you have the earnest prayers of all Bible students for your business success. Inclosed find one dollar for which you will continue to pray the dear Lord will do the rest.

An additional reader of the Tribune.
F. I. BRIGGS.

New York, May 29.

This is to inform you that I am about to renew my subscription to your very excellent paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society of Brooklyn, N. Y.

I appreciate the Tribune very much for it seems to get better and better with each succeeding issue. I am very glad that you are taking such a firm stand for the good things. I think your paper is far ahead of the many so-called religious journals published in the interest of sectarianism, as yours is in the interest of the Truth as taught in the Bible. Prefer to its religious department. The Labor News is handled with impartial fairness and an excellent feature also, but in my estimation the Sermons and the other religious features are just the proper thing.

Yours truly,
E. W. DEAN.

(Written for the National Labor Tribune.)

The "four winds" of heaven are beginning to strive,
The clouds of heaven are plain in sight,
Christ's Kingdom of Righteousness is soon to arrive,
Very soon all error will be changed to right.

Hear the voice of that servant, in this the time of end,
As he circles the globe, the glad tidings to sound.
His ration look aghast as he is invited to in,
To the meek, the promises he has found.

How plainly he points to them, on the chart of the ages,
The antitypical handwriting on the wall.
He has but to turn to the Bible's letter page,
To show the world's kingdoms, rotten-ing, ready to fall.

The saints are nearly the point of perfection,
The "mystery" will soon be known world wide.
Then the gods will be driven to the rocks of rejection,
With no place for sin, and sinners to hide.

It is now by faith that the saints can see.
The spiritual seed of Abraham by election,
And they are wondering "is it possible, can it be,"
That this worthless clay will bear such inspection."

Then will the "Bride," on the arm of her Beloved,
Restore a lost and ruined Race. Is. 11: 11.
And "whosoever will," may shout the praises of the Beloved,
And reach the chant. "Saved by grace."

Illinois, May 29.

I also want to send my thanks and to tell you how much I appreciate your paper. I have never read or seen a paper that I liked so well, the print is so good for my eyes. I want you to know how much I appreciate reading Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons, also the Letters of Appreciation. I also want to thank the editor for representing the Truth so grand. I know that you will be blessed both now and hereafter.

With best wishes, I remain,
Sincerely yours,
A. LODERGREN.

Pennsylvania, May 29.

Enclosed please find subscription for another year for the Tribune which we prize so highly. Words fail us to properly express our deep appreciation for all the many favors received through the Labor Tribune and its editor. The earnest interest you take in labor and its cause, also the various other items. I also appreciate very much the Bible Question box. It always reminds me of Isa. 28: 10, also the Sunday School Lessons, which are so highly instructive and last, but not least, Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Glad Tidings, good news, wherein all of the nations of the earth are to be blessed. This is indeed a sweet flavor in Israel, one who can play well upon his instrument—Ezek. 33: 32, which we all recognize as the truth—Jno. 8: 31, 32, for Truth is mighty and will prevail as the Truth on all subjects must eventually do. Isa. 11: 9.

G. H. HILL.

California, June 1.

Please find enclosed money order for one year's subscription to the Tribune. My reason for sending you my subscription is on account of your publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons. To my mind Pastor Russell's explanation of the Scriptures is the most logical, reasonable and harmonious explanation ever given by any man, the Scribes and Pharisees of our day to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Sincerely yours,
A. F. TOMLINSON.

Missouri, June 1.

Your good paper is much appreciated, as the religious departments are making a better man of me. What a power for good I often think you are wielding which will only be manifested when the veil will be withdrawn.

Yours truly,
H. H. RIEMER.

New York, June 1.

I take great pleasure in sending the name of another new subscriber to your valuable paper who delights in reading Pastor Russell's Sermons and in the way you publish them and the rest of the good things contained in it.

Respectfully, an old subscriber.
S. BRONNER.

Canada, May 30.

I enclose payment for two subscriptions to parties listed below.

These are continued because of the Pastor Russell feature of your paper. One of the parties subscribing is a gentlemen several years beyond 80, who is substituting your paper for another because of the unusually good type. In this he has the reading of several issues of your paper and writes that he greatly appreciates them and passes them along to other readers.

While my own special interest centers in the Scripture presentations, I am glad to help circulate your wholesome treatment of other practical questions.

Yours very truly,
W. W. BLACK.

"THE MORNING."

(Written for National Labor Tribune.) (See "Scripture Studies": Vol. 4, Page 525.) With apologies to J. W. Riley.

We've waited, the morning—is here indeed—
Surely the "night" has had the Lead;
The yearning eyes tear dimmed all night long,
Are twinkling now, in the morning Light!
"The Sun of Righteousness," with His beauty appears;
Flooding the earth with His light as He nears—
Hark! Soon the darkness will pass from down
And the earth break forth in a joyful song.

We've waited the morning—at last he Comes—
The sun, is rising, dispelling the gloom;
Flooding the earth with His golden rays—
Hark! Soon every tongue break forth in Praise!
And every Creature with one accord—
Shall in Salvation of the Lord!
We've waited, the morning is here indeed—
Soon the people will get what they need!

WOODEN DRILL PRESS.

Useful and Easily Made Machine For the Farm Workshop.

The farm workshop seldom has many tools, and especially the more expensive ones are naturally missing, for the cost of a drill press or lathe is entirely out of proportion to the amount of work for which they would be needed on a farm. One farmer solved the problem of drilling holes by making a device, almost entirely of wood, which would serve to drill any hole that may be required on farm machinery.

The illustration clearly shows its construction. The pressure of the foot on the stirrup will make the drill take hold sufficiently, but if not the wedges may be struck with a hammer. A small rope is provided to hold up the wedges when they are not in use.

The suitable nail chuck is made of a piece of tough wood, the smaller diameter being one and three-quarters inches and the larger or chuck end two and three-quarters inches. This allows a half inch fringe, which must be well lubricated when using the drill. A deeper inch hole is bored for the shank of the bit; then a slot about three-quarters of an inch in depth is cut on either side of the hole. Pieces of a broken file are inserted in the slots and a metric ferrule strung on the outside of the wood, as shown in A. The hole in the chuck is either squared or left round to fit the drills that may be on hand.

An Emergency Router.

Sometimes a carpenter not a router job runs into where he could use a router to advantage. Should he have none in his tool box a router is easily devised by taking the plane bit out of a small wood plane and using a narrow chisel instead. See the chisel edge to the right depth and tighten the wedge just as when adjusting a bit, and the router is ready for the work. It takes only a few minutes to make the change, and this emergency tool will do better work than could be accomplished by ruling the wood out with a chisel and mallet.

Covering a Stovepipe Hole.

The stovepipe hole in a chimney can be easily covered when the stove is removed for the summer by using an asbestos stove mat in the following manner: The mats ring on the rest is removed and the asbestos cut to fit the hole. Paste the asbestos on a square of manila and when thoroughly dry under a weight. Place the holes to in the chimney hole and paste the mantle in the mat. Paste a square over this. When it is necessary to clean the hole cut around the circle and remove the asbestos.

School of Telegraphy.

With the completion of a double track system of railroads the school of telegraphy at Bedford, Pa., the Pennsylvania railroad is to send out scores calling attention to the opportunity offered young men who desire to enter the railroad field.

The Bedford school of telegraphy has the same equipment as a station on a double track road. In addition to the miniature railroad, engines and cars, a regular system of manual block signals, with crossovers and sidings, has been installed. Distributed trains by telegraph and telephone is taught in the school, while the students are also given a full course in agent's work, such as filing of tariffs, keeping reports, filling out standard blanks and keeping the necessary records.

Light From Sewer Water.

It is reported that illuminating gas is to be made in Austria by a means entirely unusual process, and for this purpose a plant is being erected at the town of Braun, where gas is produced by distilling dried sediment from sewer water. The method is due to the researches of Professor Hoalg, who discovered that a chief part of the sewer water contained in suspension a solid substance which can be made to give off gas like coal or peat. It is claimed that such gas has a very high heating power, and this is even greater than coal gas.

California's Borax Production.

California is the only state which makes a commercial production of borax normally. The output for 1910, according to the United States geological survey, was 42,357 short tons, valued at $1,991,842. Less than four tons was imported. About one-half of the borax consumed is used in the enameling industry for making kitchen and sanitary ware. Each year some new use is found for the mineral.

Coast to Coast Walk Planned.

Willis Hayes, brother of the famous Johnny, and Sergeant Julius W. Murphy of the coast artillery have planned a walk from New York to San Francisco. They will walk in heavy uniform and will cook their own meals. The start will be made on May 26, and the soldiers expect to reach the coast on July 1.

A HYDROMOTOR CYCLE.

Ingenious Machine That Can Be Driven on Land or Water.

A motorcycle boat or hydromotorcycle, which can be used on land as well as on water, has been invented by a Californian, says Popular Mechanics. The boat part of the machine, with the three bladed screw propeller which drives it through the water, may be attached to any type of motorcycle by means of the special framework, drive transmissions and other attachments provided. The machine makes a speed of twenty miles an hour on land and fifteen miles on water, and but little time is required to make the change from land to water or reverse.

The hydromotorcycle sometimes becomes shaped motor boats fourteen feet long by about sixteen inches wide, each containing three air tight compartments, fastened by means of four hinges to a light frame of steel tubing. The front end of the frame is attached to the motorcycle frame just back of the handle bars without interfering with the steering, while the rear of the frame is fastened to the axle of the rear wheel by means of an ordinary tandem nut.

When the hydromotorcycle is to be converted from a land vehicle to a water craft, the floats, which are carried bottom side up for road work, are dropped down on their hinges and assembly clamped in operative position by means of two steel rods. The screw propeller, having three twelve inch blades and attached to a three foot shaft, is dropped from its inoperative position behind the seat. The propeller is driven direct from the engine, and steering is effected by means of two small rudders, one at the back of each float. The rudders are connected to the handle bars by flexible wire cords. The complete machine weighs 425 pounds, the hydro attachments weighing 225 pounds. The weight of the floats is carried by two small rubber tired wheels at the back of the frame when the machine is running on land.

New Metal Alloy.

C. F. W. Hiss, chief chemist of the Carnegie Steel company, announced recently that as the result of experiments by the Carnegie and the American Steel and Tin Plate companies, an alloy of metals which will withstand impacts of molecular and rifle bullets, and the chief enemy of fabrics and steel from the base discovered. The components are keeping a composition which will withstand another and under. The alloy was combined by adding less than one-fourth of 1 per cent of copper. If further tests prove successful it is said that it will probably revolutionize the battleship and possibly the merchant marine.

Drilling Holes in Metal.

Starting a tool with a center punch mark and drilling until the depression is gone does away the punch again is slow work on large holes and, besides, is not very accurate. I tried using a small drill and following with a larger one. Holes half an inch in diameter can be drilled through very heavy plate in this manner without any particular effort. Start the hole with an eighth inch drill and follow with a quarter inch drill. Holes can thus be drilled both quickly and accurately either by hand or on a make-shift drill press.

Removing Old Paint or Varnish.

The average person, when wanting to remember of paint or varnish, removes the old coating with sandpaper. This is a waste of time and labor, as oil paint or varnish can be removed of much easier in the following manner:

Dissolve one-half ounful of washing soda in a pint of water. Apply the article with this solution, then scrub it with a stiff brush. Rinse with clear water and let dry in the morning, while the rear of the frame is fastened to the axle of the rear wheel by means of an ordinary tandem nut.

When the hydromotorcycle is to be converted from a land vehicle to a water craft, the floats, which are carried bottom side up for road work, are dropped down on their hinges and assembly clamped in operative position

Swimming Tests in June.

The tryouts for the Olympic swimming relay team will be held at Travers island, New York, June 3, over the regular 110 yard course, which will allow conditions similar to those obtaining at Stockholm.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Pilgrim Brother J. A. Bohnet is scheduled to preach in Philadelphia Ecclesia on Sunday afternoon, June 9, in the Bible House Chapel on Arch street, North Side. It is reported that he is requested to repeat his noted discourse on the peculiar texts found in Psalms 92, 12; 35, 31. "The righteous shall flourish like a palm tree, they shall grow like the cedars of Lebanon. Those that be planted in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God. They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing." He has delivered this talk in nearly every State in the Union. It is said to abound in wonderful mathematical expression and leaves a lasting impression on the minds of his hearers. Brother Bohnet made a close study of the three trees referred to during his several trips of the Pacific coast. He is now engaged in some special work for the society he represents.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

A FAITH FOUNDATION NECESSARY

Luke vi, 28-9—June 9.

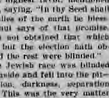
"He ye doers of the Word and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." James i, 22.

THE GREAT TEACHER in today's lesson emphasizes the necessity of knowledge and of a faith built thereupon. The blind leading the blind represent the ignorant leading the ignorant into difficulties.

The destination sought by the Jews was fellowship with and relationship to God—His highest favor, mentioned to Abraham, saying, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." St. Paul says of that promise, "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded."

The entire Jewish race was blinded and turned aside and fell into the pitfalls of confusion, darkness, separation from God. This was the very matter against which Jesus forewarned them. How important that God's people recognize the true Leader, Jesus, and heed not the voice of others!

Alas! we find that many of the great and wise of the principal pulpits of the world are undermining Faith by telling that the Bible is not Divinely inspired, that Moses and the Prophets did not write the books accredited to them, and hence indirectly saying that Jesus and the Apostles were deceived when they made quotations from the Old Testament and ascribed them to Isaiah, Jeremiah, Moses and others.



Christ and Paul the Scribe.

These great men style themselves Higher Critics and endorse the theory of evolution, which teaches the process of evolution from monkey-likeness up to God-likeness. They are thus indirectly telling their people that there was no fall from God's image and likeness, that there was no sin committed, no sentence for sin, no Redemption from sin and its sentence and that Restitution is not to be hoped for.—Acts iii, 19-21.

Humility a Character Foundation.

The parable of a man with a beam in his eye trying to pick a mote out of his brother's eye was a familiar old method whereby the Master inculcated the necessity of humility. Humility is a foundation virtue. The Latin word for humility is humus, ground. This implies that it is the soil out of which other virtues are produced. Those who think they know everything can learn nothing. How beautiful it is to realize that Jesus was humble and that all the holy angels are so!

Grapes Off a Bramble Bush.

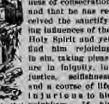
While the Scriptures forbid God's people to judge one another, they do commend to us another kind of judging. While not condemning the heart we are to judge of the outward conduct. The parable which our Lord in this lesson gives respecting the gathering of grapes from bramble bushes illustrates this point. God's people are likened to the grape-vine, which produces for many generations clusters of fruit. Mankind in general are likened to bramble bushes, ready to injure, or to destroy, one another, and are merely self-sustaining. We are to distinguish between such characters and God's people. By their fruits shall ye know them."

It is said that at times a bramble bush is overgrown by a vine so that the grapes appear to be coming from the bush. However, we are not to be misled by such. Grapes cannot bring forth evil fruitage, neither can an injurious tree bring forth good fruitage. The lesson is that those who are really God's people must be fruit bearing else they are none of His.

It is therefore useless for any man to tell us that he has given his heart to the Lord in full consecration and that he has received the sanctifying influence of the Holy Spirit and yet find him rejoicing in the taking place are in iniquity. Injustice, selfishness and a course of life injurious to his fellow-men, are sufficient proofs that the heart is not right with God.



"The fruits of them shall be known."

The results will be manifest in his daily life, because "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

The House on the Rock.

This parable illustrates two classes of believers. Both hear the Great Teacher's instructions and believe and rear faith structures and entertain heavenly hopes. But the one is more prudent than the other. One seeks for the doctrines and principles of the Divine Word and builds on a firm foundation thereupon. His faith, therefore, cannot fail whatever storms may assail.

The unwise believer builds upon the traditions of the elders, the creeds of the Dark Ages, etc. He fails to appreciate the necessity for having a proper foundation for faith and works. In the time of storm with which this Age will end all such will find the foundation swept away; they will therefore suffer great loss, though they themselves may be saved, as by fire.—Tribulation.—1 Corinthians iii. 13-15.

Her Chance.

Husband—You look sad today, my love, is it that you are ill? Wife—No, John; it's time test years not I'm wearing.—Harper's Bazar.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

ALL BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED, IN THEIR TURN, ON BY REQUEST, AT LAST TO THE EDITOR OF THIS JOURNAL.

Q.—Where is the Ark of the Covenant that was used by the Israelites in connection with their religious rites and ceremonies in the Tabernacle of the Wilderness? I have heard of different reports as to where it might be at the present time, one of which is to the effect that it was placed in the great Pyramid of Egypt in a secret chamber of the Prophet Jeremiah, and that it will not be brought forth from its hiding place and revealed to the world at the proper time. There are many that are interested in this question; can you throw any light on the matter?—(S. J. W.)

Answer.—The Ark of the Covenant which was made under the directions of Moses and placed in the Most Holy of the Tabernacle was afterwards deposited by King Solomon in the Holy of Holies of the magnificent Temple which the King had erected unto the Lord. (1 Kings vi. 19). At that time or possibly only the two tables of the Law which Moses had placed there at Horeb. The golden pot of manna and Aaron's rod which had budded were moved or had become lost prior to the time of Solomon. (1 Kings viii. 9). When the Temple was destroyed and the Israelites were taken captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar many of the golden vessels were carried away, but nothing is said concerning the Ark, or as to what finally became of it. It is supposed to have met the fate that the records of its having been used in the later Temples that were erected on the mountain. The basis for the Pyramid legend is found in one of the books of the Apocrypha, where it is stated that the Prophet Jeremiah, "being warned of God" took the Ark and buried it in a cave on Mt. Sinai. This statement has been accepted by some and interpreted to mean that Mt. Sinai is the Pyramid and the cave is the secret chamber.

Q.—We are told the Bible manuscripts were written on vellum, dating from the seventh century. These were of two kinds, one being composed in capital letters, written in a running hand without spaces, accents, or punctuation, and the reading was straightforward. Was the Bible divided into chapters and verses? (L. B. B.)

Answer.—The oldest known Greek manuscripts of the New Testament are the Codex Sinaiticus and the Codex Vaticanus, both of which were written in the fourth century. The Septuagint is a Greek version of the Old Testament made between 280 and 130 B. C. The Latin Vulgate was made by Jerome during the years A. D. 385 to 405. It is a translation from the Hebrew and Greek manuscripts and writings then known. The edition of Pope Clement XI (A. D. 1705-13) is the acme of the modern Douay version, the accepted standard of the Roman Catholic Church. The King James or Authorized Version is, for the most part, merely a revision of that known as the Bishop's Bible, with corrections made with the aid of several other versions and eight manuscripts in the Greek, none of which are older than the tenth century. The Authorized Version is, in reality, mainly from the Latin Vulgate. The present system of the division of the Bible into chapters was the invention of Cardinal Hugo, in the thirteenth century, and was first applied to the Latin Bible. The present system of verses first appeared in the edition of Robert Stephen in the year 1551. Punctuation was introduced in the latter part of the fifteenth century by Aldus Manutius, a Venetian printer, who was responsible for our full stop, colon, semi-colon, comma, marks of interrogation and exclamation, parenthesis, dash, hyphen, apostrophe and quotation marks.

Q.—What is manna, the food which the Israelites received in the Wilderness? Is it a literal food, toward the promised land? (S. J. W.)

Answer.—Manna was the miraculous supply of food on which the Israelites subsisted. Its name is said to have originated in the question ("What is it?") which they asked. (Exodus xvi. 15). It is called by the Israelites when they first saw it. According to some authorities, the name comes from the Egyptian "mennu"—food (doubtless the word from which the modern term of mana—hill of food was derived. The name manna is also designated "bread" (Exodus xvi. 4); it is called "the corn of heaven," and "the food of the mighty" (a Psalm lxxviii. 24, 25, R. V. The manna descended in the night to the form of or with the dew, and in color of bdellium (Numbers xi. 7), so that in the morning the ground looked as if it were covered with hoar frost. The grains were ground or pounded into flour, and then the flour was prepared and baked in the form of cakes, the taste of which was like that of "wafers made with honey" or "as the taste of fresh oil" (Exodus xvi. 31; Numbers xi. 8). The manna was eaten the day it was gathered; if it was left until the following morning it corrupted and bred worms, except that on manna gathered on Friday and kept for the Sabbath remained fresh. It continued to descend during the forty years the Israelites were in the wilderness, but when they arrived at Gilgal and began to eat the grain grown there, the manna ceased to fall. In order to perpetuate the memory of this providence, Aaron was told to put an omer of manna in a vessel and lay it "before the testimony" (Exodus xvi 17-35; Joshua v, 10-12).

Q.—The recent Titanic disaster brings to my mind this question: What became of those hundreds of people who perished when the vessel went down? It is reasonable to suppose that an exceedingly small number, if any, were saints, fit for heaven; yet we cannot suppose that such gallant heroes as many of them were, went to hell to be roasted and toasted in various forms, or even to purgatory, which is about as bad. Can you, Mr. Editor, explain this matter? (W. B. H.)

Answer.—We are glad to say that the minds and hearts of the people of our day and generation are too large and broad to permit them to believe that the most, if not all, of those noble men and women who went down with that great vessel were doomed to an eternity of suffering in sorrow and torment. While rejoicing in this liberality of mind and largeness of heart, that prompts one to reject the monstrous theory of eternal torment, we regret that we should charge the Bible with teaching this awful doctrine. Those who have experienced the throes of drowning is almost the last stage and then were resuscitated, will tell you that they became unconscious. They did not know anything. The Bible says of all who die that "the dead know not anything," "there is neither wisdom, device, nor knowledge in the grave whoeh wither thou goest." Those who went down into the depths of the sea, should change through the resurrection time, when the Scriptures will be fulfilled which say, "and the sea gave up the dead which were in it"—Revelation xx, 13.

Q.—Are we to believe the story of Balaam's ass? (C. B. Q.)

Answer.—The Bible account of this event is, that "the Lord opened the mouth of the ass" and caused her to speak to Balaam. Some who are ensnare of the Bible have used the incident to discredit the Scriptures. Without doubt God has the power to make an ass to speak. He could even make the stones cry out (Luke xix, 40). The incident is clearly corroborated by the Apostle Peter, saying, "Balaam, who loved the wages of unrighteousness; but was rebuked for his iniquity; the dumb ass, speaking with man's voice, forbade the madness of the Prophet" (II Peter ii. 15, 16). The Apostle shows that Balaam represents a class of teachers who have once been enlightened in the Word of God and have enjoyed His favor, and for personal profit have turned to teaching error. Evidently Balaam was heady, highminded, and relied on his own supposed greatness. The Lord chose a dumb brute with which to rebuke him, that he might really understand his own insignificance and might know that God is the All-Powerful One.

Q.—Was not the Jewish Priesthood an unjust and tyrannical arrangement? Did not Moses impose an heavy tax upon the people? We read that the people were tithed or taxed one-tenth of all they produced for the support of the priestly tribe, and Moses ordered them about as well as though he were a dictator. Why was this? (Judge.)

Answer.—That Jewish Priesthood was in fact founded upon the strictest equity. When Israel came into possession of the land of Canaan, the Levites certainly had as much right to a share of the land as the other tribes; yet, by God's express command, they were denied lands in the plains and cities for residence, scattered among the various tribes, whom they were to care for in religious matters. Instead of the land, some equivalent should surely be provided them, and the tithe system affords this reasonable, just provision. It was not enforced as a tax, but was to be paid as a voluntary contribution. Moses in place of being a tyrant, was really the ever-worked servant of the people. In place of oppressing power and privilege to himself, he placed the affairs of the nation in their hands as far as it was possible to do under the circumstances and conditions that then existed. See Numbers xi, 16, 17; Deuteronomy i, 15, 17; Exodus xviii, 13-26.

Q.—I am trying to do the best I know how; will not this entitle me to an entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven? (M. E. W.)

Answer.—If you do to the very best of your ability you will get a great lesson on your inability to do perfectly. Then, realizing that God cannot approve that which is imperfect and condemning, you will be led rightly to pray, "God be merciful to me a sinner" (Luke xviii, 13). Then the Lord will reveal to you the fact that there is only one door of salvation—Christ. Then, still desiring peace with God, you will seek Christ and be found in Him. The most God asks of anybody is that he do the best he can. We all need a Savior, for the reason, as St. Paul declares, "Ye cannot do the things that ye would" (Galatians v, 17). We cannot do perfectly because we are imperfect; we are imperfect because we were born in sin and "shapen in iniquity" (Psalm li, 5). The Jews, who were under the Law Covenant, tried to justify themselves before God by what they did, but wholly failed. In discussing this very question the Apostle points out that the only hope for deliverance is through Christ Jesus, who as the great Deliverer will come and turn away ungodliness from them (Rom. vii, 18-25).

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

London Transport Workers Continue Their Determined Strike--Unofficial Commission Decides for Men on Majority of Points--Clerks and Bookkeepers in Convention--British Letter Carriers to Demand Minimum Wages.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, June 7.—The great London transport workers' strike continues although tremendous efforts are being made by employers to break it down. Every morning at eight o'clock a series of meetings are held of strikers throughout dockland and every afternoon mass meetings of about 50,000 men are held on Tower Hill under the shadow of the Tower of London. Roughly the demands of the men may be summarized as 20 cents per hour for all classes of dock workers whether employed on the wharves, quays or riversides or on the lighters and boats on the Thames, with 25 cents per hour for overtime and double pay for work on Sundays and holidays. For the freight wagon drivers who are also being brought gradually into the strike the demand is made mainly for a 60-hour working week. Hours were reduced to 72 per week in the strike of last summer but many of the master carriers have ignored the agreement they made. Furthermore the demand is of course for the recognition of the Transport Workers' Federation and the federation ticket although this latter need not necessarily be held to mean that no non-union men will be allowed to work.

The two strike leaders, Tillett and Gosling, are putting forth immense efforts in speaking, organizing and diplomacy, each of these men being complementary to the other. Tillett is the orator, the enthuser and the flying evangelist; Gosling is the diplomatist, the organizer. Attempts are being made to import blacklegs and a few hundred of these are working under extensive police protection. There are certainly more policemen than workers in the docks at the present time.

An unofficial enquiry organized by the Government under the presidency of a great lawyer, Sir Edward Clarke, has just finished its sittings. This enquiry had no compulsory powers, not even calling evidence, but witnesses on behalf of the men and the masters voluntarily came forward. Seven points were put down for decision. After hearing both sides Sir Edward Clarke found for the men on four points, for the employers on two points, and on one—a comparatively unimportant thing—he was non-committal. It is sufficiently extraordinary to find that Government inquiry actually found in favor of the strikers on the majority of points in dispute. Despite this, however, the capitalistic press still declared that the men are entirely in the wrong, have broken agreements, and deserve no mercy. As a matter of fact the men ask no mercy. They are conscious of the justice of their claims and they smart under a sense of unfair treatment even where the employers have entered into agreements with them.

Practically no food supplies are being held up in the docks and on the ships. The exception is imported meat, which is being unloaded from the ships by men from the meat market at Smithfield under police protection. Grain and flour supplies are quite stopped and London bakers and millers have only a week's supply in hand to feed the seven million people who inhabit Greater London. Every day small sections of dock workers who had remained at work are striking, the last being the dock engineers who were working the machinery producing refrigeration on the meat ships in the docks.

Sir Edward Clarke's commission when its report was presented on the seven points suggested that the men and the masters might meet on May 31 but the employers have refused to be present. Clearly a very big attempt is being made by not only the dock cartage employers but by other organized sections of London employers to break the men this time. Every day the Government is being urged to send more police into the dock territory and soldiers have also been asked for. Military help has so far been refused although the Government is keeping several regiments under arms ready at Aldershot which is forty miles from the docks.

Strikers for the first time in the history of the English labor movement have the complete and powerful help of a daily labor newspaper, the Daily Herald," which has now been established about three months and stands for direct trade union action as the principal means of labor's emancipation. It does not denounce political action but regards that as quite secondary, anyhow at the present time.

So far the railway workers in London have not been brought within the dispute. They are very restive, however, and where it not for the fact that the officials of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants appear to be opposed to strikes on principle all the railways leading from the docks would no doubt by this time have been tied up. The Railway Review (the official organ of the A. S. R. S.) announces that a big demonstration is to be held in West Ham on May 31 when prominent members of the Transport Workers' Federation will be present and up-to-date information will be given as to the railwaymen's intentions.

Many resolutions calling for drastic action are being received at Unity House, the A. S. R. S. headquarters. The West Ham branch calls on the officials of the four railway unions to summon a meeting of the Joint Executive to order a national strike of railwaymen "to avoid the necessity of our members working like slaves." A Stratford resolution calls up on union members to refuse to "work" trans of blacklegs to the docks. The even where the employers have entered into agreements with them.

STEEL BOOM WITHOUT PRICE EXTORTION.

A BUSINESS boom is always full, matured before the majority of business men are able to identify it. It is proverbially a foundling in infancy. But most people no longer dispute that a genuine boom is now in progress in the steel industry, which has long been recognized as a most reliable barometer in trade in general. Dependable iron market authorities agree that the present expansion in the business of the mills is one of the most remarkable on record not only for the volume of business transacted but for the absence of dangerous price advances. Prices have been exceedingly firm at the moderate advances quoted, but it is very gratifying to note that there is no flighty tendency. This is indeed an unusual phenomenon, in view of the statement of one market review that "last since 1906 and 1907 has the iron and steel plant of the country run so close to capacity as today. Shipments in the steel industry are easily at the greatest rate on record and reach 91 per cent of the entire capacity of the mills. In bars, plates and shapes, the mills are so filled with orders as to forecast full operations until November 1."

What has happened heretofore in the wake of a boom demand for steel like the present demand may be gathered from the fact that in 1907 the average price for No. 1 foundry pig iron was in the neighborhood of $23 notwithstanding that the financial crisis developed in October. The highest point reached in this city on the present advance has been $14.50. Again, the Pittsburgh price for steel billets was on an average, $27.45, in 1906, $29.25 in 1907 and even in 1908 the quotation for steel billets were kept at an average of $26.31. Today with a larger demand, with mills all busy and with orders to next November, Bessemer billets are $21 to $22 at Pittsburgh.

How great a part the federal administration's recent suits against price combinations have played in the low prices accompanying the present steel boom is a matter of conjecture. But whatever the explanation the stability and reasonableness of prices are almost as great cause for satisfaction as the boom itself.

EVERY DAY ELECTION DAY

A BILL introduced in the National House of Representatives the other day by Mr. Cullop of Indiana, will hardly be agreed to, but it is an interesting symptom of the present day state of mind of the more radical "progressives." Nothing is too sweeping for them. The Cullop bill proposes a blanket amendment to the constitution providing for the popular election of all public officials, except the members of the President's cabinet, ambassadors, ministers and consuls.

By the provisions of this resolution judges of the Supreme Court would be elected for terms of eight years. The chief justice would be selected by his associates for a term of four years. Judges of the federal district courts would be elected for terms of six years. District attorneys, marshals, clerks of courts, surveyors of ports, collectors of customs, internal revenue collectors and postmasters would be elected for terms of four years. But when would the people work? There would hardly be time between elections.

STAGGERING COST OF INDUSTRIAL DISEASES.

F IT is true that industrial diseases cost the American people $172,890,800 every year, systematic endeavor to check their ravages will be one of the best ways in the world to promote the national wealth. That this is the annual labor loss (plus the cost of medical attention) due to illness among the working class is the statement made to the American Medical Association, which last week held its annual convention at Atlantic City. It claimed that at least 25 per cent of this enormous waste can be saved by proper protection of workers. The report will be presented in connection with an appeal to the government for its co-operation in a campaign to reduce disease among the industrial workers of the country. During the meeting papers were read on the subject of temperature and humidity in factories, air impurities, such as dust, fumes and gases, and the effects of air conditions upon the health of workers.

It is generally acknowledged that in governmental measures to limit the ravages of occupational diseases the United States is woefully behind most European countries. Great Britain and Germany have long given careful attention to the subject, with excellent practical results. We have made a good deal of fuss in this country about the conservation of natural resources. The health of our workers is easily the chief of those resources. It is incomparably our greatest asset. But when a bill is introduced in Congress to end even so outrageous conditions as those that make the awful disease known as phossy jaw constantly epidemic in the matchmaking industry, it is with the greatest difficulty Congress is induced to pass it. The proceedings of the American Medical Association should receive Congress' most earnest consideration.

A DISEASE TALK.

"IT IS the status of the agricultural element of a nation which in the end determines that of all everywhere, and are in large measure responsible for the "overurbanization" which Mr. Bookwalter views with such justifiable concern.

Mr. Bookwalter is not to blame. He is a fine old gentleman most highly respected by all who know him. He does what few landlords do—he tries to think about the disease which he himself is. If he does not see himself as he really is, do not blame him. His tenants do not, either. The people generally do not. But the menace of unearned increment of land is coming into the public thought, and when it has advanced a little more into the light it will have to be reckoned with in city and country.

Landlords who seek truth may well copy Mr. Bookwalter, and think about this matter. They will see that where 2,000 people live on farms in Nebraska, on Mr. Bookwalter's lands, perhaps 10,000 might live if lands were owned by those only who work or use them. They will see that the system which makes Mr. Bookwalter possible is responsible for the falling off of Nebraska's population, or its failure to grow, by from 2,000 to 8,000 rural dwellers. And they will see that the same influences operate others.

So writes John W. Bookwalter, the non-resident owner of 70,000 acres of farm land tilled by tenants.

In this case the disease speaks with reference to its own cure.

Mr. Bookwalter many years ago bought in Nebraska all this handy domain the tenants of which work early and late and share with him the proceeds of their toil. Some 250 to 400 families, comprising perhaps 2,000 people, labor for Mr. Bookwalter, giving him the means by which, year after year, he travels over the world with a valet, a secretary, and a library of several hundred volumes—an income absolutely unearned.

Gilbert K. Chesterton, in a scathing poem addressed to Hon. Walter Long, one of England's landlords, said that if he were in Long's place he would "sit tight."

"I say people look at me and see me—
Lest they might ask what madman made ME lord
Of English plowshare and of English sword!"

American lords of plowshares and swords may well be given similar advice, unless they desire to be "seen."

LOUIS BLERIOT, FAMOUS FRENCH AIR MAN AND INVENTOR

THE two best known names in aeroplane aviation are Wright and Blerlot, and if you ask a Frenchman which of the two is greater he will probably say Blerlot. As a daredevil aviator and an eminent engineer rolled into one the Frenchman is without a peer. Louis Blerlot was the first to fly across the English channel, and his flight, accomplished in thirty-three minutes, was the most epochal feat in aviation since the invention of the aeroplane. Heir to a comfortable fortune, Blerlot increased his wealth by a number of automobile inventions and then turned his attention to the making and flying of aeroplanes. His name is identified with the best known type of monoplane, which he has tested in flights which have frequently resulted in wrecks from which he has escaped by the narrowest margin. Now, it is announced, he will attempt no more hazardous flights, but will devote himself to the development of the aeroplane business which he has built up. M. Blerlot was one of the eminent Frenchmen sent to this country to represent the government at the dedication of the Champlain monument.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Labor's Eight-Hour Bill Finally Passes Both Houses of Congress and is Now in the Hands of the President--Labor-ite Frank Buchanan Enlightens House on Some Labor Matters--Executive Committee of American Federation Polling Local Unions on Referendum Project.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Labor's eight-hour bill passed the House of Representatives unanimously on December 14, 1911. The bill then went to the Senate and on Thursday, May 31, 1912, it passed with several amendments. The vote upon the bill in the Senate was yeas, 45; nays, 11; not voting, 39. The following is the vote.

For the bill: Ashurst, Bacon, Borah, Bourne, Bristow, Brown, Bryan, Catron, Chamberlain, Chilton, Clapp, Clark of Wyoming, Clarke of Arkansas, Culberson, Cullom, Curtis, Fletcher Gronna, Hitchcock, Johnson of Maine, Jones, Kern, Lodge, McLean, Martin of Virginia, Martine of New Jersey, Myers, Newlands, Overman, Perkins, Poindexter, Pomerene, Rayner, Reed, Shively, Simmons, Smith of Georgia, Smith of Michigan, Smoot, Stone, Sutherland, Tillman, Townsend, Williams and Works. Against the bill: Bradley, Dillingham, du Pont, Gallinger, Heyburn, Oliver, Page, Percy, Root, Sanders and Wetmore. On Wednesday, June 5, 1912, Chairman Wilson of the House Labor Committee, called up the amended bill, and the House concurred in the Senate amendments. Two of the amendments added by the Senate are important, one providing that the law shall not apply in the Panama Canal Zone until January 1, 1915. The amendment was for the purpose of leaving matters in statu quo in the Panama Canal Zone until the waterway shall have been completed. The other amendment changes the date for the law to go into effect to January 1, 1913. The bill now goes to the president for his approval. This law applies to government work and to contractors of government work, but does not apply to supplies usually purchased in the open market, whether manufactured to conform to particular specifications or not. Congress first adopted a law constituting eight hours a day for all laborers, workmen and mechanics employed by or on behalf of the government of the United States on June 25, 1868. By an act approved May 24, 1888, the eight-hour law was extended to letter carriers. The next change in the law became operative on August 1, 1892, when the eight-hour law was strengthening by specific provisions requiring the government to not "permit" any laborer or mechanic to work more than eight hours in any one calendar day except in cases of extraordinary emergency. It is well to state here as a matter of information that from June 25, 1868, until March 21, 1906, the enforcement of the provisions of the eight-hour law by the government officials was a reference, but upon the latter date the executive council of the American Federation of Labor received a most vigorous protest against the violation of the law. That protest in a considerable extent had the effect of securing a closer observance of the law by the officials in charge of the government works. The law just passed materially extends the scope and operation of the eight-hour law, and will be of inestimable benefit to not only workmen employed direct by the government, but will affect many institutions that do contract work for the government. One needful addition to the law provides that armor plate shall be manufactured under the eight-hour law.

"Old age at 40 is not conservation, it is brutality," declared Dr. John S. Andrews of New York recently, at the opening of the twenty-eighth annual convention of the International Association of Commissioners of Labor and Factory Inspectors. Dr. Andrews, who is the secretary of the American Association for Labor Legislation, called forcible attention to the startling work records of the country, declaring it the duty of every factory inspector to work to the end that every worker in the United States shall be able to obtain one day a week in which to enjoy home life, which, we have been taught to regard as the foundation of our social system."

Frank Buchanan, member of the Structural Iron Workers and representative one of the Chicago congressional districts, was exceedingly active in the discussion of naval appropriation bill, which recently passed the House. Mr. Buchanan is a member of the Naval Affairs Committee and during the progress of the consideration of this bill derogatory reference was made by some of the members on the floor to the political attitude assumed by the American Federation of Labor. Referring to this particular phase of the discussion Mr. Buchanan said:

"Now, something has been said here about the president of the American Federation of Labor in regard to his activity in political affairs. I know something about that matter. I know gompers personally, and respect and admire him for his brilliant intellect, great ability, sincerity of purpose, and fidelity to a principle. And I know something about his record as a laboring man. Mr. Gompers started to go into politics and when he did go into it, it was to carry out the demands of a conference that was held,

BIG ORDER FOR MUCK BAR.

(Special to National Labor Tribune.)

READING, Pa., June 10.—The local industrial situation has been aided somewhat by the receipt of a good sized muck-bar order secured by the E. & G. Brooke Iron Company, Birdsboro, Pa. For five or more years this corporation's puddle mill has been making only sufficient muck bar for its own use, the general market not calling for much, if any. To fill the order just received five more puddling furnaces have been put into service.

The shut-down of the sheet mill of the Reading Iron Company for improvements and repairs, has taken puddlers and helpers from there to Birdsboro, and some of the furnaces just started at the local plant have been manned by them. It is said that there are good prospects for a lengthy run for the puddle department of the rolling mill. The other departments of scrapping process and sheet mill operation have orders on hand, the only present slackness being the rod-mill factory which is idle this week.

I. T. U. ELECTION RESULTS.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Unofficial returns from the referendum vote on election of officers in the International Typographical Union reveals that James M. Lynch has been re-elected president. The vote for Tracy of San Francisco and Downey of New York for vice president indicates an extremely close vote, with Duncan elected. Secretary-Treasurer Hayes has been re-elected. For delegates to the T. P. of L. Morrison, Hayes, McCullough and Stevenson have been re-elected, with Morrison leading the entire ticket with over 5,000 votes. Miss Wilson Powell, Wood and Ames have been elected trustees of the union printers' home at Colorado Springs. Roberts of Washington has been elected agent for the union printers' home. The two propositions submitted to increase the salary of the president and secretary-treasurer to $5,000 per annum have been carried by a narrow margin.

LEGIEN VISITS PRINTERS' HOME.

COLORADO SPRINGS, June 10.—Carl Legien, president of the Federation of Trade Unions of Germany and secretary of the International Secretariat, together with his traveling companion and interpreter, A. Baumeister, who has just completed a lecture tour under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor, paid a visit to the Union Printers' Home in this city recently. They expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the institution and commended the patriotism and loyalty of the members of the International Typographical Union in maintaining such a magnificent establishment for its indigent members.

New England cotton mill owners employ approximately 100,000 operatives.

RAILROADERS' DEMANDS REFUSED.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—The general manager of the Pennsylvania railroad has sent a communication to the officers of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen on the Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburgh and Erie, refusing the demand that steam conductors and trainmen be placed on the electric lines of the Pennsylvania running out of New York city.

The Clearmarkers' International union, by referendum vote, has decided to hold a general convention at Baltimore, beginning September 15, its first convention in sixteen years.

The efforts to organize 25,000 Jewish workers in the east end of London is progressing successfully, and an amalgamation of the Russian and Jewish tailoring unions is already practically completed.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

"WILL BE SAVED SO AS BY FIRE."

Threads of Truth in the Purgatorial Theory—Catholic and Protestant. Pastor Russell Explains How Creeds Were Formulated During the Dark Ages—Bible Truths Distorted. Early Church Teachers Sincere, but Many of Conclusions Were False. Dissents From the Theory That Creeds Are of Greater Weight Than the Scriptures.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 5.—Pastor Russell spent Sunday in our city and delivered two addresses which were well attended. One of these, from the text, "Saved as as by fire" (1 Cor. 3: 15), we report in part. He said:

Some of my Catholic friends declare that I am more Catholic than Protestant, but I have never acknowledged this. I do say, however, that if I expected to choose between the Protestant thought that all except the elect, simply few will experience eternal torment, and the Catholic proposition that many besides the saints will be saved, by passing through purgatorial experiences, I would sooner believe the latter. And while I cannot accept the Catholic Purgatory as Biblical, I do find certain threads of Bible truth in the purgatorial theory. I can even fancy how those Bible truths gradually became distorted during the many centuries called "The Dark Ages."

During that time not only were the common people illiterate, but printing had not been invented, and Bibles were costly. That was the period during which Councils of bishops from time to time met and decided for the people what should and what should not be believed. In other words, they formulated the creeds. We do not question the sincerity of those apostolic leaders of the darker days, but we do challenge their conclusions and, comparing them with the Bible now in the hands of the masses, we know, accepting the Bible as true, that we must necessarily condemn many of their conclusions as false, and when we speak of the Bible, we include the Catholic as well as the Protestant translations of it in various languages.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH.

Many both Catholics and Protestants, tell us that we should receive the message of Councils—the creeds which they formulated—as of equal inspiration with the Bible because, say they, these Councils were composed of bishops of the Church and, under the law of Apostolic succession, these bishops had equal authority with and Divine inspiration equal to the twelve Apostles. Hence the Protestant claim that the conflict exists between the Bible and the creeds the latter should have the greater weight in our minds, as being a later production.

From this I dissent, and am glad to note that I am in better accord with the views of the present Pope, Pius X., whose recent proclamation urges upon all Catholics loyalty to the Bible and its study. If all Christians, Catholics as well as Protestants, would accept this suggestion, I believe that the resultant, untrammeled study would soon bring to Christendom in general the one unity and harmony which all desire and are striving for.

Whatever the Pope may have once believed respecting the doctrine of Apostolic succession and the equal inspiration of the bishops of today with the twelve Apostles appointed by our Lord, he sees that the people have not full confidence that the living bishops are inspired to the degree of infallibility, as were the twelve Apostles. And I would say that to my understanding that is the right thought. The Scriptures everywhere recognize the twelve Apostles of the Lamb—none more, no less. They recognize the fall of one of these, and that another took his place—St. Paul.* But there were to be no more additional bishops.

The choice of Matthias by the Apostles, before they themselves received the Holy Spirit, was invalid and without authority. Jesus, in His last message to the Church, pictured her as a "woman," having "a crown of twelve stars." And again He symbolically represents her future glory as the New Jerusalem with but twelve foundation stones, and in those the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb—no more.

The more thorough this Scriptural fact as discerned the more surely will God's people turn reverently to the inspired words and interpretations of the Divinely appointed Twelve, respecting whose teachings Jesus said, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth (as not necessary) shall be the same that are bound in heaven." No other teachers in the word's history were so thoroughly set apart to be the oracles of God, and their testimony is one—harmonious.

NOT PRESENT BUT FUTURE.

We remarked a moment ago that there is a little truth in the doctrine of purgatory. That thread connects up with our text of today. Indeed, our Catholic friends acknowledge that there is much positive comment in the Bible respecting purgatory; they merely infer it from certain texts, which say, "Saved so as by fire." This is one of their strong texts supporting the theory of purgatory. It certainly does imply that they experiences of some kind will come to some of God's people, and that these will be destined to have a purging effect.

Nothing in the text, however, gives a single suggestion to the effect that such purgatorial trials are now in progress. On the contrary, the Apostle points down to the future saying, "The fire of that day shall try every man's work of what sort it is." Those who have built with the wood, hay and stubble, even though upon the good foundation of Christ's redemptive work, will suffer loss. Only those who shall build with the precious Divine promises, the gold, silver and precious stones of the Divine Word, will pass unscathed through the fiery experiences of that day.

Nevertheless, says the Apostle, those who will suffer the loss of their entire faith structure of wood, hay and stubble—false doctrines and theories of their own and of others—will themselves be saved, because they built upon the Rock Christ Jesus. But, he adds, "They will be saved so as by fire"—saved through fiery experiences. Search as we will we find no reference to any such sufferings after death and before the resurrection. Thus we see that the Apostle is not here referring to the Bible way of which reverse teaches, that the dead are not consciously alive to experience either joy or suffering between the time of death and the resurrection; but, on the contrary, they all "sleep in the dust of their souls in the grave morning of the New Age.

St. Peter's remarks to the faithful in his day have been applicable throughout the Age, and are still applicable to us. He says, "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." (1 Peter iv. 12.) Here again he is not speaking of a purgatorial experience after death, but of a purgatorial experience in the present life. God could protect His children from every foe, from every trouble, from every sorrow, from every one of Satan's darts, but instead of doing so He permits these fiery trials to test their faith, their loyalty to Him, to the Truth, to the brethren.

PURGATORY IN THE PRESENT LIFE.

Did not Jesus thus have purgatorial experiences?—not to purge away sin, for He had none—being "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners"—but to demonstrate His loyalty to God; as the Apostle said, "He was obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." And did not the Apostles have purgatorial experiences, which were needful, and which we all need? Is it not in respect to these purgatorial experiences that the Apostle urges us to remember that God is faithful and will not suffer us to be tempted, tried, more than we are able to bear, but with every temptation, trial, provides also a way of escape?

He also assures us, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for My strength is made perfect in weakness." And in these very passages the Scriptures give us respecting our present trials, namely, that our Lord sits as a Refiner and Purifier of silver to take from us the dross and to purify us as His New Creatures in Christ Jesus, and to make us ready for the Kingdom?

It is in full accord with this that the Apostle declares of the Church that if we judge ourselves—judge our own conduct, and properly criticize ourselves for errors—we will not need to be judged or chastened with fiery trials by the Lord. But if we neglect to thus judge ourselves, and become careless, the Lord will give us chastenings, fiery trials and purgatorial experiences—to the intent that we may not be condemned with the world.

THE WORLD'S CONDEMNATION.

In this statement, to the effect that the church is now chastened that she may not be condemned with the world, we should understand the word world—to mean all outside of the Church—both Jews and Gentiles. The Church is composed, not of any sect or party, but of all those who have come into a living relationship with the Father through faith in the Lord Jesus and a full consecration of their lives to walk in His steps. The reward of the Church will be joint-heirship with the Savior in His kingdom, for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come."

The Bible teaches us that shortly the Kingdom will be established in the midst of a great "time of trouble," and that through its blessed reign of righteousness the whole world, of every nation and kindred and people and tongue, will be blessed with light, with knowledge, with opportunity. "The Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams," ushering in for earth the New Day, which all the Prophets of God have for so long foretold—the period when St. Peter styles "Times of Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets."—Acts iii. 19-21.

Since we have learned that the Bible teaches that God has blessings in store for the world under Messiah's Kingdom, we are the better prepared to understand how and why the Messianic Kingdom is to usher in the "Times of Restitution" and blessing. And we learn at the same time that God has purposed, first of all, to deal with the Church, call, test, prove, discipline them with fiery trials, before He begins His dealings with the world. We perceive that the Church is to be dealt with first because it is the Divine declaration that the Church shall share with her Lord and Savior the world—in disciplining the world, giving to the world purgatorial experiences, which will be helpful and uplifting.

The Great Time of Trouble, which our Lord declared should be expected at about the time of the completion of the Church, will be a time of special discipline upon the world—the beginning of the world's purgatorial experience. Hearken to Jesus' words, "Watch ye (disciples), therefore, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all those things coming upon the world." Describing those things our Lord said, "Men's hearts will be failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the world; for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." Many of us believe that we are in that very time now.

THE CHURCHES HAVE LOST THEIR POWER.

Surely men's hearts are failing them as they look about and see the uprisings of socialism and anarchy and the threatening of these "waves of the sea," that they will ultimately swallow up the present social order of things. Many of the people are looking to the Church at this time, hoping that as of yore ecclesiasticism will be able to control the masses. But ah, it will be different now, for, as the Master said, "The power of the heavens will be shaken"—the ecclesiastical powers will be shaken. From every side the cry goes up that the churches are becoming more and more empty, that collections are falling off and retrenchment must be the order of the day or ruin will result.

But, dear friends, in the coming trouble, under the symbolism of fire, and declares that not only will it consume the "earth," the social fabric, but the "heavens" also will be on fire and "shall pass away with a great noise"—a great commotion. Not the physical earth will burn, but the social earth; not the physical heavens will burn, but the ecclesiastical heavens.

The great and the rich have been so busily engaged in amassing wealth that they have not noticed until recently that the churches of all denominations have lost their power over the masses, and now "their hearts fail them for fear" as they come to perceive the weakness, the nothingness of ecclesiastical power as compared with the strength of socialism and anarchy amongst the masses. No wonder their hearts fail them for fear. Poor people! How we wish we could make clear to all the glorious prospects which the Bible holds out—that out of this the most awful trouble of the world's history, God graciously intends to bring the greatest blessing imaginable, that one for which we have been praying so long.

We are sure that the present Pope, Pius X., who has taken such active measures to repulse the higher criticism and evolutionary theories in the Catholic church, would fully agree without sentiment when we say that many of the great and rich of our days have been unwittingly heaping fuel upon the everything of religious faith and in the awakening of socialistic infidelity. They have given freely of their millions to the great colleges of the land, when in turn such institutions imbued in God's Word, and indirectly imbuilt in a personal God. Their influence has extended to all the principal pulpits of Protestantism and is rapidly permeating through the various strata of Protestant church membership. Thus the churches and their treasures are being emptied and the number of unbelievers is being augmented daily, hourly.

THE WORLD'S PURGATORY BEGINS.

If time permitted we could marshal many texts of Scripture showing that the time of awful trouble now impending is in the nature of a Divine judgment upon the people of our day—because we have not more wisely and more generously used the present inventions and blessings that have come to us as forerunners of the Messianic Kingdom—because of our selfishness.

In this troubles, accordant to the Bible, there will be a general reckoning and settlement of accounts between Justice and Humanity (aside from the weaknesses and imperfections of heredity), which will be estimable and forgiven through the merit of the Redeemer's sacrifice.

The settlement of accounts now will leave the slate clear for the New Dispensation. Furthermore, the blows-hare of trouble will prepare men's hearts all over the world for the enlightenment and blessings which the glorified Redeemer will shed abroad. Since all human hearts are hard, self-ish through the fall, it seems quite necessary that all should be broken, humbled, but the glorified Redeemer—the King and Priest of that Day—will then say to the world as He now says to the Church, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest" and "whoever will not obey that Prophet," that Great King of Glory, the antitype of Moses, shall be destroyed from amongst the people."—Acts iii. 23. Again Peter declares that all such shall perish like brute beasts.—II. Peter ii. 12.

The glorious result of Christ's Reign or rulership will be the gracious experiences which it will administer to those repenting them, will be to fetch all in rise eventually to perfection, so that every knee will bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God. But the purgatory of the Bible is so very different from the Purgatory conjured up by good men in the Dark Ages and pictured by Dante and Dore, that the latter are now seen to be gross travestios on the Divine arrangement, not only misinterpreting the time of the purgatorial experiences, but also their character.

"As it was in the days of Noah so shall it be in the days of the Son of Man."—Luke 17: 26. We see the same ignorance or unbelief in the coming trouble now as it was in Noah's day. As the literal giants in Noah's days (Gen. 6: 4) were a menace to the people so now there are figurative giants—huge corporations—so powerful that the people have a hard time keeping them from bringing humanity into bondage.

The "gathered heaping together of riches in the last days is also being wonderfully fulfilled and while the weeping and bewailing of the rich men is still future, this also will come to pass.—James 5: 1-4.

The fallen angels or evil spirits were restrained under chains of darkness until the Great Judgment Day (Jude 6) and the fact that spiritualistic manifestations have occurred to a day light in recent years is evidence that the Great Judgment Day is dawning and in fact the Judgment work is already proceeding especially in respect to the governmental, social, financial, social and religious institutions of "Christendom." Do we not see as foretold that the light of Truth is revealing the hidden things of darkness—the corruption and as falsehood in the various institutions of society. (1 Cor. 4: 5. We hear the sooffers scoffing as foretold in II Pet. 3: 3, 4, as something we should expect at the present time. We see the symbolic "stars" falling from their heavenly to high positions as teachers of spiritual truths and causing down to the dust worldly wisdom and teaching evolution and higher criticism and a spirit unjust in human power.—Mark 13: 25.

The drying up of Mystic Euphrates is a leading place as foretold in Rev. 16: 12.

We hear the proclamation that Babylon is fallen and we hear the voice" calling "Come out of her my people that ye be not partakers of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues." Rev. 18: 2-4. We hear the voice of the Harpers harping with their harps and singing as it were a new song—that it is indeed the old song of Moses and the Lamb for we hear them saying "Great and marvelous are all thy works Lord God Almighty, just and true are the ways thou that art King of Saints." Rev. 15: 3—Harpers. These O Lord and glorify thy name? for thou art bountiful, all nations shall come and worship before Thee when thy righteous acts are made manifest." Rev. 15: 2, 3; 19: 5-7.

The Angels are but a few of the many evidences that the end of the Gospel Age is at hand and that the glorious Age of Restitution is dawning.

Yours sincerely,
R. A. LINDBLAD.

Virginia, June 10.

Lent this the sixth time I have come up with the price for your paper and I shall come again, while you make the Tribune so valuable to me and mine.

Somehow you seem to have gotten a "sense" of things now transpiring, in a deeper sense, a truer sense of the restlessness and, one might say, the wickedness of Humanity.

You seem to be standing aloft somewhere, calling to the people as they work by, to halt a bit and take notice of what's coming.

And you speak with no uncertain sound. You even invite the people to come up to your heights, with the question they most desire.

They come and your answers to their queries are magnificent. How could you know, with such a keen perception of conditions, such a clear discernment of deep things, unless you were looking from a pinnacle above the awful turmoil of the hour?

The fact that the blindest of the blind could not appreciate the marvels contained in those great Sermons of that great Seer.

How they dissipate the clouds of error that vexed us, all through the past years.

What a comfort it must be to you to be able to point out to the people, such a Torch of Truth and say to them, "Come, be strengthened, be encouraged, be enlightened. Here is the light of Truth not due to its maker but to Him to whom good Pastor is leaned. Come dear wearied ones, open your eyes and behold the good things our God has in store for you."

I congratulate you sincerely Friend Tribune and shall try more success.

Yours for more light,
I. A. CONKLIN.

Ohio, June 9.

About seven years ago I began subscribing for your paper. It was a good paper then, but it's a better paper now. The additional religious features make it double valuable.

I subscribed for two other magazines but the Labor Tribune is one of the best that comes my way. Check enclosed for another year.

Very truly yours,
WM. H. SOPER.

Ohio, June 10.

In renewing my subscription to your grand paper allow me to offer a further word of praise, a further testimony as to the great good you are doing by making the columns of your paper as a means for the larger spread of the true gospel. Your labor of love in behalf of labor and its interests, is, in itself, highly commendable, and is no doubt duly appreciated by those whose interests you are so faithfully serving; but this new field of service is larger and grander, in that all other human activities look to the betterment of mankind as a whole, are, at last, but finger-boards of truth pointing as to this Times of Restitution as the one glorious purpose to which Divine Love and Wisdom is guiding the course of human events—"the powers of darkness" and "the wisdom of this world," to the contrary notwithstanding.

We welcome your assistance in this harvest work and our hope and prayer is that you are largely sharing with us in the bountiful blessings which the "Lord of the harvest" is bestowing upon his willing helpers.

With much love, yours,
R. B. WEST.

Minnesota, June 9.

Through the kindness of one of your subscribers I received paper. To are and read that copy was enough for me to decide that I needed such a paper.

One which combines the interest of the masses, with the interests of God's Kingdom should be in every home in the country.

What comfort and consolation is in the fact that in the near future God's Kingdom will be established and oppression will cease.

If any of your subscribers are in need of back numbers of Zion's Watch Tower, will be only glad to accommodate them by sending the number of the years wanted as long as they last. There are quite a few of nearly every from 1895 on.

Hoping to see your paper continue to give the Glad Tidings to the laboring people, I am,

Yours truly,
J. RIES.

Pennsylvania, June 10.

I see my subscription is about out so will enclose P. O. for renewal. Thanking you for your past kindness and hoping that you continued success in the future, I remain yours in the blessed hope.

WM. BENNETT.

Pennsylvania, June 10.

We appreciate greatly the way you print Pastor Russell's Sermons, so full, clear and large print; also the Bible Questions, etc. We think you have done a great work in the Tower as we think Pastor Russell's expositions of the Bible, the clearest and best we have seen or heard of. Wishing you Divine blessing and continued success for your good papers. We are,

Very truly,
J. L. KUNKLE.

Massachusetts, June 9.

Inclosed please find renewal of my subscription to the National Labor Tribune for one year.

I am very sorry that I have been so slow in sending it in; except that, as I appreciate your paper very much, especially Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and the Sunday School Lessons and also the large clear type and good paper. Asking the Lord's blessing upon you,

I remain, yours sincerely,
C. W. WEYHE.

Ohio, June 9.

Inclosed find check for another year's subscription to your valuable paper.

I have certainly received a great blessing from reading the sermons from Pastor Russell's sermons and the Question Box.

It is remarkable the good that can be accomplished through the press and the many people it reaches. Your labor of love is truly a blessing.

D. T. BECKLEY.

Pennsylvania, June 10.

Words cannot express our appreciation of your paper since we have received it through the I. B. A. A. It was recommended to us, very highly, by several friends and we have found it to be just as represented. Clean type and clear print and no padding.

If you could but realize the good work you are doing by printing Pastor Russell's Sermons and other good reading matter along Biblical lines, I think you would feel more than compensated. I feel very much assured, through a study of the Scriptures, that Pastor Russell's Sermons and "Studies in the Scriptures" are to be harmony with the Bible teachings more than any "lamp" that has ever crossed my pathway.

Should any one know positively and with Bible proof, that Pastor Russell was not in accord with the Scriptures, let us Bible Study, we would be very glad to have it brought to our notice.

Wishing you much success in your work for the Lord and hoping to spread the Good Tidings of Great Joy, instead of "bad tidings of eternal misery," we beg to remain also before in the good work.

Yours sincerely,
MR. AND MRS. JOHN H. MARTIN.

Washington, June 9.

I am writing this to give you my correct address as I cannot afford to miss one issue of your grand paper so long as they continue to publish Pastor Russell's Sermons. They are indeed Good Tidings of Great Joy, also the Lesson Helps and Questions with Answers are a I so helpful. Surely the Lord bless you in your labor of love in helping to spread these wonderful Truths. May your good work and success continue.

Sincerely,
H. E. WADE.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Ohio, June 2.

I like the Tribune and am glad the Truth is given space in its columns.

With best wishes for you and your paper, I will close.

Extra in one of the Gospel messages.

ARTHUR KUNKLE.

Arkansas, June 2.

I am enclosing money order for another year's subscription to your valuable paper. It is valuable to me, because of Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons, although I recognize it as a good clean paper in every line. I enjoy handing a copy to friends and neighbors, feeling when I do so, that I am helping spread the Glad Tidings which shall be unto all people, soon.

Yours truly,
JACK HESS.

Wisconsin, June 10.

I enjoy very much Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and the Letters of Appreciation in your valuable paper. We surely are living in a strange and marvelous day in which the prophecies of God's Word are being wonderfully fulfilled, showing clearly that the end of the Gospel Age is at hand and that the Coming Age of Restitution is dawning.

How wonderfully true and clear are the prophecies of Daniel fulfilling that in the time of the end many should run to and fro and knowledge should be increased and that the wise in Heavenly Wisdom should then understand the prophecies which Daniel was told were sealed up until the time of the end. Dan. 12: 4, 9, 10. Think of the thousands of steam and electric trains, steamships, automobiles and flying machines continually running to and fro over the face of the earth, unobserved by the world's worldlings occasionally resulting from the swiftness with which they desire to run to and fro.

How wonderfully knowledge has been increased during the Gospel Age. Previous to the Nineteenth Century but a very small portion of the people could read or write while now education is compulsory. Not only has knowledge become widespread among all classes, but it has also been greatly increased in amount so that much more is known of the secrets both of Nature and Revelation.

As the "Times of the Gentiles" draw to a close we see clearly fulfilling our Lord's prophecy that there should be "upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and waves roaring (agitating) men's hearts failing them for fear and apprehension of the things coming upon the earth."—Luke 21: 24-26. All thinking men realize that a world-wide time of trouble is impending and as foretold (Dan. 12: 1; Matt. 24: 21), it will be such a time of trouble as has not been since there was a nation. In Rev. 16: 14, it is likened to a mighty earthquake.

Another sign that the end or Harvest Age has come is the fulfillment of our Lord's prophecy that then its would join the "Call" and gather from all quarters of the nominal "heaven" by means of certain spiritual food by the Lord's servants as well as angels or eagles are by the carcass of an animal.—Matt. 24: 28. How wonderfully this prophecy is being fulfilled as God's people in every denomination as well as outside are being gathered together into unity of heart and mind by the "present Truth" as set forth in Scripture Studies and in Pastor Russell's Sermons now being published in over 1,000 newspapers.

We see also the binding of the tares into "bundles" or organizations taking place as foretold in Matt. 13: 30. We see the symbolic Fig Tree—the Jewish people—putting forth or budding or awakening to national life and returning to their own land in large numbers which was another sign given by Jesus that the time for the establishment of his kingdom would be near at hand. Matt. 24: 32, 33.

We hear the foretold federation cry among all denominations—Peace, peace when there is no peace.—Jer. 6: 14) by all the same time we behold great preparations for war going on among all nations in fulfillment of Joe. 3: 9-14.

We see the predicted binding in the symbolic "Caves" and "Dens"—Secret Societies, etc., Rev. 6: 15-17. We see the Gospel (good news) of the kingdom being preached in all the world as a witness to all nations giving them notice that their lease of power will soon expire and that the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of Christ (Matt. 24: 14; Rev. 11: 15) which is another sign of the end of the age.

POPULAR MECHANICS.

A SANITARY FOUNTAIN.

Equipped With Bubbling Cups That Can Be Lifted to the Lips.

The one great disadvantage of the ordinary bubbling cup sanitary fountain lies in the fact that the drinker, whether they be men, women or children, tall, short, fat or thin, must place their lips to the cup instead of placing the cup to the lips.

In an endeavor to remedy this disadvantage one sanitary drinking fountain manufacturer has designed a bubbler which may be raised to the height of the lips, so that the user may stand in a perfectly easy and natural position while drinking. This is made possible by a hose and cup arrangement, the hose consisting of a double tube. The inner tube is the feed pipe for the bubbler, and the outer tube acts as a waste pipe, carrying away the surplus water while the person is drinking. The flow of water through the inner tube is continuous, no matter what the position of the cup, but when the cup is lowered into its position in the fountain basin the water flows over it and discharges into the basin instead of being carried away by the outer tube.

Detecting Thunderstorms.

With instruments installed at the Lyon observatory M. Higlard has noted atmospheric electrical disturbances when these were at a considerable distance, and in some cases storms were observed when they were as much as 500 miles off. He used a modified wireless telegraph coherer and found that as sensitively detector was not good for this kind of work, as it needs to be left constantly out of the circuit and hence gets out of order. A mineral detector made with sulphide of lead and fine copper points answered very well, however, and it is as sensitive as the other type. A relay could be used to take the storm signals, but when the atmospheric effect was for off the current was much weaker and had to be received by a sensitive galvanometer with photographic registration. In this way he could observe the effects of storms at great distances which would take at least twenty-four hours to arrive.

Relics of an Old Civilization.

Paul Pelliot, the young French explorer of Chinese Turkestan, has found in caverns at Tunhuang silk rolls which are Chinese manuscripts, some of them considered by artists to be as ancient to have stepped out of "The Arabian Nights." These rolls have been immured in these grottos for 900 years and when deciphered and translated will tell the story of a civilization that flourished over a thousand years ago and is dead. The explorer brought back 3,000 rolls, but as there are 500 grottos he believes many hoards libraries will be found.

Longest Concrete Bridge.

The new bridge across the Tiber, at Rome, is the longest re-enforced concrete arch in the world, having a span of 328 feet. It surpasses by thirty-three feet the longest stone arch in the world, that of Plauen, in Germany, and by eight feet the concrete arch in the Grafton bridge at Auckland, New Zealand. Notwithstanding the size of the bridge, it is said to be one of the lightest type of construction and of a design possible to certain European engineers, but rarely attempted in America.

Earphones for the Deaf.

A device designed to improve the hearing of the deaf, recently shown before the French Academy of Science, is of particular interest because of its diminutive size. It comprises a microphone transmitter of hard rubber joined by a tube and is so small that the whole can be easily introduced into the auditory canal of the ear and be worn there without discomfort. Two sets are provided, one for each ear, and the necessary electric current is supplied by a dry cell which may be carried in a vest pocket.

Fans Prevent Frost.

To the long list of the means heretofore proposed of protecting fruits, orchards and vineyards against frost a new one has recently been added by a French scientist. He points out the fact that fruits are not feared when the wind blows. He is thus led to suggest the creation of an artificial wind by the installation of electric fans among the plants to be protected. He considers this often applicable chiefly to vineyards, but also possibly useful to orchards.

MINING OF SULPHUR.

Pumped to the Surface After It Is Melted by Hot Water.

The mining of sulphur in Louisiana is an interesting process. The sulphur deposit, situated near Lake Charles, lies about 400 feet beneath the surface and is about 100 feet thick. Beds of quicksand overlying the sulphur rendered the sinking of shafts impossible, and the sulphur is therefore pumped to the surface. A well is driven through the numerous strata to the sulphur impregnated beds in much the same manner as is usual in sinking wells for oil and gas. A well is put down, and then a second concentric four inches of pipe, having diameters ranging from ten inches to one inch. Superheated water and hot air are forced down the pipes and the excess between them to meet the sulphur and to bring it to the surface. The hot water flows down between the two outer pipes, which are respectively ten inches and six inches in diameter, and passes into the sulphur bearing mass, melting the sulphur. The mixing of sulphur melted and the range of action of the water depend on the temperature of the water and on the pressure at which it is supplied.

The heavy melted sulphur runs back into the mixing around the bottom of the well pipe, which it enters through holes provided for this purpose. Hot compressed air is forced down through the smallest or one-inch pipe and at the bottom of the well mixes with the water and sulphur and forms an emulsion, which is discharged into large rectangular cells, constructed of rough timbers lined with matched boards to carry somewhat, but they are made large as 200 by 250 by 40 feet, and the size of them are so arranged that railroad trains can pass between them. After the sulphur has cooled and solidified it is removed from the cells and is as it were a natural deposit.—United States Geological Survey.

Concerning Lightning Rods.

Experts now consider that there is more danger from lightning to anything standing alone than to any building in a city. The theory is that the many points offered by city buildings tend to conduct a silent discharge constantly from the atmosphere. Thus the potential differences and the static force never become as great over a city as they do in the open where there is no opportunity for such continuous discharge. The force of the lightning depends upon the potential difference. It seems, therefore, that lightning rods would be of much more benefit in the country than in a city. Again, when the enormous force and volume of a lightning discharge is considered it is doubtful if a small rod could have the capacity to convey so much current although it might help some.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Railway Up Mount Popocatepetl.

It is planned to run an electric railway up to the volcanic crater of the famous Mount Popocatepetl, Mexico, for the primary purpose of transporting the sulphur, of which this crater is one of the world's greatest sources. The road will be 12 kilometers long, incidentally the railway will also be used to carry tourists. Between the altitudes of 12,000 and 15,000 there will be operated as an ordinary traction road, but above this the activity is expected to be so considerable that the remainder of the distance to the summit, which is 17,794 feet above sea level, will be by cog road.

Decarbonization of Motor Cylinders.

A new method of decarbonizing of gasoline engine cylinders, imported from England and giving promise of considerable success in the production of carbon deposit troubles, consists of injecting oxygen into the cylinders by means of a special apparatus. The oxygen induces a fine red flame when it is ignited by running the engine a few minutes, and then, on the application of a flame, the oxygen combines with the carbon until the whole is burnt away. No dismantling of the engine is necessary in this method of decarbonization, which means a saving of time and trouble.

How to Drive Nails to Avoid Splitting.

When it is necessary to drive nails to pieces where there is danger of splitting add a drill of the proper size. It is not at hand for starting a hole, simply file or grind the point of the chisel to a sharp edge instead of the regular four-sided point, and drive the nail with the sharp edge thus made cutting the grain of the wood instead of splitting it by forcing it to right angles to the grain of the wood.

Phosphate Lands Reserved.

A mineral resource of the public domain that is of great potential value is the rock phosphate of Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Montana and Florida. In the discovery and classification of the lands containing it the geological survey has contributed notably to the welfare of the farming interests, for phosphate is a necessary plant food, being indeed equal to potash as a fertilizer. The world's supply of phosphate rock is very meager, but fortunately the largest known deposits have been recently discovered in the public land states. As a result of zoological examinations 2,611,140 acres of phosphate land now stand withdrawn, awaiting legislation for settlement them from speculation or monopolization.

A SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY

Brother J. A. Bonser desires an unencumbered married couple to join him permanently on the Cemetery farm, R. F. D. 5, North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., to serve under the Bible figure terms. This is a splendid opportunity for a suitable couple of Truth friends, who have some knowledge of farming to have a comfortable home amid pleasant surroundings.

Appreciations

Ohio, June 7.

I will take pleasure at this time of extending to you my most heartfelt appreciation for the many blessings which I (as well as the others of our family who are interested in the Truth) have received from reading the articles in the paper which you devote to our dear Pastor's Sermons, also the Sunday School Lessons, Question Box, Testimonials and other articles of interest. We all wish to thank you for the effort you are putting forth in helping to spread these Glad Tidings of Great Joy which shall be for all people. I am sure you will receive a great blessing for every effort which you put forth in the spreading of the Truth in this way.

I will be glad to send you any new subscribers which I may get, and also to renew my own subscription, so long as you continue to print these articles. We think the Labor Tribune a nice clean paper and can recommend it to anyone.

Yours sincerely with best wishes,
H. L. STEWART.

Virginia, June 5.

Please renew my subscription to the National Labor Tribune and send me the back copies which I have missed. I surely appreciate your paper. I love to read it. In the best part I have ever read in any newspaper and it is well gotten up in every particular. I also appreciate Pastor Russell's Sermons which are so promptly found every week in the Tribune and they are becoming more and more interesting to me and I also log to say I heard quite a number of friends complimenting the editor of the Labor Tribune for putting Pastor Russell's Sermons so promptly. May God bless you and Pastor Russell for spreading this good news of Great Joy which shall come to all people in my earnest prayer.

Your sincere friend,
B. G. WILLIAMS.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

LESSONS FROM THE LIFE OF CHRIST.

LESSON FOR JUNE 16.

LEAST IN THE KINGDOM.

Matthew xi, 2-19—June 16.

"Amongst them that are born of women there is none greater than John; yet he least in the Kingdom of God is greater than he."—Luke vii. 28.

IT WOULD be difficult to express a higher tribute to John the Baptist than Jesus paid him in our text. If John was so great a man, from the Divine standpoint, why did our Lord declare that the least in the Kingdom of Heaven would be greater than John?

When we turn on the light contained in the word "Kingdom," the entire subject becomes clear. God had promised a Messianic Kingdom, and Jesus and the apostles preached the message of that Kingdom. The steps leading to its honors were steps of obedience to God, unto death, and those whom Jesus began to take. On the cross He finished the work of proving Himself loyal. Then Jesus became the Great Conqueror, the great King of Glory, being exalted to the Heavenly state in His resurrection. He was to have associated with Him in His Throne, His Bride class; as the Great Priest, He was to have an underpriesthood, a "Royal Priesthood," as the Great Judge of the world, He was to have associates (1 Cor. 6:2, Daniel 7:22, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?"—1 Corinthians vi. 2.

In the Divine Plan the company of associates of Jesus were as much foreordained as was John the Baptist.

He Himself. Even as He was to be overcame and am set down with My Father in His Throne," these must be followers in His footsteps; none could precede Him.

"Some Better Thing For Us."

We are not to infer that those glorious changes who lived before Christ's time were less faithful than the Gospel Church, but merely that they were under the earthly dispensation, while He has promised the little of Christ the heavenly perfection. Not that the ransom for sin of mankind, come forth to attain perfection gradually during the thousand years of Messiah's reign, the record is that they will come forth perfect human beings. That will be the restitution of all things.

St. Paul explains the entire matter in Hebrews, the 11th chapter. He declares, "All these died in faith, not having received the (earthly) things promised to them, God having provided some better thing for us (the Church), that they, without us, should not be made perfect." The glorification of the Church, her resurrection to perfection, must be accomplished before the blessings thrown them can proceed to the natural seed of Abraham, and through that to all nations.—Isa. xl. 28-40.

Not the Bride but the Friend.

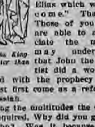
John the Baptist designed "He that hath the Bride is the Bridegroom, but the friend of the Bridegroom, hearing His voice, rejoiceth greatly. This my joy therefore is fulfilled." (John iii. 29.) He perceived that in God's providence he had a very honorable and blessed station to accomplish, but he knew that was to be neither the Bridegroom nor a member of the Bride class.

Hence his words and deeds were not to be disappointed when they come forth in the resurrection to find a Bride class selected in a higher place than theirs. On the contrary, their cup of blessing being full, and their having been begotten by a spirit nature, they will be able to comprehend any blessings higher than their own. Just, for instance, as a fish in the water, seeking a bird flying in the air, would not be jealous of the bird and its greater freedom, but, on the contrary, would be fully satisfied in the water, its natural element.

In this lesson Jesus intimates all the more, "The law and the Prophets were until John." He was the last of the Prophets. Jesus later declared, "If ye are willing to receive it, this is Elias which was for to come." That is, Those of you who are willing to receive the matter may understand that John the Baptist did a work in full accord with the prophecy that Elijah must first come before Messiah.



"Least in the Kingdom, greater than John."

Addressing the multitudes the Great Teacher said, Why did you go out to see John? Was it because God spoke through him as a Prophet as the wind sometimes moves through the reeds? Or did you go out to see a man in fine clothing and of kingly state?

What really drew to John's teaching was that he was God's Prophet; as it is written, "Behold, I send My messenger before Thy face, who shall prepare the way before Thee." This preparation for Jesus John made with the fervor of his zeal. He seemed to see that the Kingdom of Heaven was to be offered to them, and that only the holy would be ready to receive it.

Adaptability.

Fashion thyself to the circumstances of thy lot. The men whom fate hath made thy associates nerve, love and love them in sincerity and truth.—Marcus Aurelius.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED HERE IN COLUMNS, OR BY MAIL IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OR YOUR PASTOR.

Q.—Is competition in harmony with the teachings of the Bible, and if not will it ever be abrogated? (M. E. R.)

Answer.—Perhaps the most terrible and heart rending struggle that has ever been waged in the annals of the race is that which is now going on in the industrial world. It is the battle for supremacy along commercial lines. And it is costing the lives of innumerable toilers in the mills, factories, mines, and railways, and especially those thousands of those who are directing the battles in this awful war are stricken with nervous prostration and various other ailments that come from a too severe and protracted mental strain. Thus the strikes, lock-outs, and labor troubles that are daily becoming more threatening, and reflect upon the vast army of unemployed, and all the little children employed in the great mills and factories. All of this unhappy state of affairs can be traced to the general competitive system, whose main spring is selfishness. Emphatically, it is not in harmony with the teachings of the Bible. The Scriptures teach that we should do good to all men as we have opportunity, and that the Golden Rule should be our guide in our dealings with our fellowmen. The evils of the present will be superseded when the new order of things at His appearing.—1 Cor. xv. 24-28.

Q.—Have heard something about the world coming to an end. When is it coming? And what does it mean; does it mean that all people will have to get off of the earth? (J. H. B.)

Answer.—There are a number of passages in the Bible which at first glance, without careful consideration, would seem to teach that the earth or present order of things will be destroyed as to an end. However, Bible students in general now recognize that where these expressions occur they are figurative, and are using highly figurative language. The term "world" is frequently from the Greek expression signifying age or dispensation of time. Thus the Apostle Peter in the third chapter of his second epistle refers to three worlds—not three planets, but three ages or epochs. One of these passed away at the time of the Deluge in Noah's day. Surely not the planet, for we as people are still doing business on it, but that order of things was destroyed, as the Apostle proceeds to explain, this present "world" or the generation now living passes away, not a flood, but by a fiery season of trouble and destruction coming upon the world in the close of this age, which we recognize is based largely upon selfishness and is altogether unsatisfactory. A new dispensation is very near at hand and will speedily be established on the earth within the next decade.

Q.—Can you tell me who was Cain's wife, as I am curious to know? (I. B. O.)

Answer.—As there was but the one pair created by the Lord, Adam and Eve, there is only one answer, and that is commonly given when we accept the Scriptural teaching. We read that Adam had other children, both sons and daughters, besides Cain and Abel (Genesis v, 3, 4). As the race had a perfect start in Adam, and his children were nearly perfect, the dimensions results would occur from intermarriage such as would be the case with Cain. This was no more objectionable to such an extent that marriage between first cousins even, is prohibited by law in some States. We recall that Abraham married his half-sister many centuries later and after the race had greatly degenerated from the downward way. We know that Cain could not have married his brother, and that his female daughters were the only females on earth, the inevitable conclusion is that Cain married his sister. The land of Nod, where Cain resided, was a land in the near vicinity of Eden, which afterwards became known by the title Nod. The city built by him was as the Hebrew word signifies, a walled place, or in other words, a house, or villa.

Q.—Acts ii, 27, reads—"Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt Thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption." Should we understand that Jesus suffered torment in a lake of fire and brimstone for three days while in the tomb? (F. E. McE.)

Answer.—Enlightened Christian ministers and Bible students and all Greek and Hebrew scholars now know that the Greek word Aides (hell) and the Hebrew word Sheol, Psalms xvi, 10, from which the Apostle was quoting, signifies the state or condition of the dead; in other words, the grave. With this, the plain and reasonable interpretation, how consistent and harmonious are the statements of the Bible! Our Lord "poured out His soul unto death," but not unto eternal torments. He went into the tomb, the grave, from which, the Apostle says, He was "raised up from that dead (Sheol)," and it is hard to conceive why they did not translate the words correctly in every instance.

Q.—In reading over the first chapter of the book of Genesis I have been greatly perplexed by a seeming discrepancy in the account given of the creative work accomplished in the six creative days or epochs. I understand that not literal "days" of twenty-four hours each is meant but seven thousand year periods of time are indicated. Verse 3 says, "And God said, Let there be light: and there was light," and then in the 16th verse we read that God created the sun and the moon, and further that this was on the fourth day! The point is, where did the light emanate from that was created on the first day as mentioned in verse 3, if the sun was not created until the fourth day? (Light.)

Answer.—Stating the matter briefly, the earth originally was without form and void and in total darkness, because of a series of "canopies" or envelopes which surrounded it and prevented the sun's rays from illuminating it. These canopies descended to the earth by and by, and with the descent of the first the light shone through the remaining ones sufficiently to distinguish between day and night. Successive "days" or epochs were executed by the falling of other envelopes until the last one, which was a deep water and descended in the time of Noah, producing the deluge. On the fourth day the new order, the last canopy having descended, the heavens or the atmosphere being sufficiently clear, the sun could permit the sun and moon and the stars to be visible for the first time from the earth. This would seem to be the meaning of the 14th to the 18th verses.

Q.—When was the first Jewish Atonement Day, and how long was it from the times of the exodus from Egypt? (J. W. C.)

Answer.—The children of Israel left Egypt on the 15th day of the first month, Nisan, or April 15th (Exodus xii, 1-15, 41, 51). They traveled three full months, arriving at Mt. Sinai, the fourth month of the year, July 20th (Exodus xix, 1, 2). Three days were set apart for the sanctification of the people, and on the third day, July 18th, they were fully sanctified (Exodus xix, 10-16). The first forty-day period of Moses' sojourn on Mt. Sinal, began the fourth month and the eighteenth day, July 18th (Deuteronomy ix, 9-11, 15-17). Moses descended from the mount at the end of the forty days in the fifth month and the twenty-eighth day, Aug. 28th. And when he had come down he found the people worshipping a golden calf. In his wrath he broke the tables of the Law, and burned the calf, and then asked "Who is on the Lord's side?" The call was responded to by taking their stand with Moses, and the people were again sanctified by the blood of them who were slain at that time under the directions of Moses. This was accomplished in three days. The third day being the thirtieth day of the fifth month, Aug. 30th (Exodus xxxii, 15-30; Deuteronomy ix, 9-11). Moses ascended the mountain the second time on the fifth month, the thirtieth day, Aug. 30th. He remained with the Lord five forty days, and came down in the seventh month and the tenth day, Oct. 10th (Deuteronomy x, 1, 10; Exodus xxxiv, 28, 29). Here it was, and on this occasion, that Moses, with his face shining with glory, made atonement for the people by taking the blood of calves and goats, and sprinkling the Book of the Law, and then all the people (Exodus xxxiv, 32-35; xxiv, 3-8; Hebrews ix, 19-20). This was the first Jewish Atonement Day and occurred just 175 days after they had left Egypt.

Q.—Are we to understand from the following verse of Scripture that every one has an opportunity for salvation in this life?—"For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men."—Titus ii, 11. How can it be said that all men have seen the grace of God, and can be saved now when more than one billion of the race have never even heard of the Gospel of Christ, and of the remaining six hundred millions, the larger number are greatly confused by the conflicting creeds and doctrines and do not know their right hand from their left when it comes to the consideration of the way of salvation? (J. F. D.)

Answer.—It is true as the Scriptures affirm that "strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." There are not many who have found the way of salvation up to the present time when darkness is over the whole earth, and when confusion is worse confounded. The day of salvation for the world has not yet dawned upon us, and will not be ushered in until "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams" (Malachi iv, 2). Then the glorious "Orb of Day" shall shine forth in full meridian splendor, scattering all the mists and clouds of ignorance and prejudice, and illuminating the entire World of mankind with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord. Then the world will have full and ample opportunity for salvation, and the blindness of holiness, the way to eternal life, will be so plain that a way faring man though foolish shall not err therein (Isaiah xxv, 8-10). The passage should read thus—"Because the grace of God hath appeared, bringing the salvation for all men," for the Church—Christ now—and for the world in the coming age of dispensation.

The Transport Workers' Strike Still Continues With Unabated Vigor. Text of the Proposals for the Settlement of the Difficulty--The Building Trades Take Means to Unite Under One Head--Miners Still on Strike.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, June 13.—The transport workers' strike in London continues with unabated vigor. Day by day capitalists newspapers tell us that the strike is rapidly collapsing but when definite facts and figures are secured they only prove that the strike is extending. In the last week a further 7,000 men have joined the strike and as they are the workers on the cranes and engines they are a very important division. The country is being secured for blacklegs and 2,000 or 3,000 have been obtained. The strikers cannot wish their employers any more harm than having such men to work for them. They have been secured from the dregs of the population and practically all outside London. They are brought along at dead of night and furtively got into the docks under the kindly cover of darkness. They are being paid much higher rates of wages than the transport workers are striking for and they are getting free board and lodging as well. It is estimated that every blackleg is costing the employers at least five dollars a day and that between them five blacklegs do not do the work of one union docker.

The foreman in charge of these blacklegs tell some pretty stories of their difficulties. The men are on the whole of the work-shy class and when they have been got into the docks will only employ themselves as, when, and how they want to. If they choose to take a half-hour or an hour off for a rest and a game of cards they will do so while the foreman stand helplessly by. When they do work they are hopelessly incompetent and there have been more valuable packages dropped into the water and spoiled by these few days during the past fortnight than is the usual annual total for the whole of the docks when fully at work. And these are the men who are held up as loyal workers who have come to prevent the people of London being starved by the wicked strikers.

The Government is busily occupying itself with endeavors to end the strike and the unions have pulled themselves willing to meet all proposals in a conciliatory spirit. The employers are making what they call a firm stand against the men's demands and have marshalled themselves under the dirty banners of the Shipping Federation. This latter organization of shipowners was practically smashed up as a result of the seamen and firemen's strike of a year ago but it is seizing the present opportunity of resurrection. The strikers hold enormous meetings daily which are marked with the utmost enthusiasm. Some of the meetings on Tower Hill, under the shadow of the Tower of London, are attended by as many as 40,000 men at a time.

GOING AFTER ANTHRACITE TRUST.

THE House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at Washington has unanimously approved a resolution directing the secretary of Commerce and Labor to investigate the recent increase in the price of coal. It is pretty well understood that the price was raised by the anthracite trust in revenge for having been forced by public opinion and the political situation to raise the wages of the miners. The House committee's action is the first step toward retaliatory proceedings against the trust in congress. The resolution asks for "full information concerning the different elements of cost and profit included in the present high price of anthracite coal, specifying as far as practicable how much and in what particulars the coal miners were benefited by the recent strike agreement, and how much and for what reason and by what means the cost of coal to the general consumer was at the same time increased." Full and detailed answer to that inquiry will show how much of the $76,000,000 added to the cost of the domestic sizes of coal goes to defray the advance in the wages of the miners and how much is added to the profits of the railroads which compose the trust. These facts the consumers are entitled to know. If undue profits are diverted from their pockets to swell the cost of a prime necessity they are entitled to such redress and protection as the state and federal governments have the power to compel.

The Pennsylvania State Railroad Commission should not have allowed Congress to take the initiative in showing up the trust's extortion. It has full authority to investigate on its own account, and was especially under obligation to act for the reason that the trust officers, like the mine-owners, are all in this state. But the commission has always been recognized as a mere make-believe body, and the new state Republican platform promises the creation of a commission which will really do something. The utter uselessness of the present body to the people is proved by its shielding the anthracite trust in the present instance.

THE SPY TAX.

NOW that the objections which many good citizens—citizens who could not in any sense be regarded as malefactors of great wealth—have held against the tax is its inquisitorial character. That is, it tends to destroy a man's privacy and makes his personal affairs common property. Wisconsin, one of the most progressive states in the Union, has an income tax on its own account, and it is said that it is becoming general unpopular almost before it fairly gets into operation. Its having every man's private business before the eyes of his neighbors is the source of its unpopularity. The lists are about to published and no man who makes as much as $500 a year will escape the unpleasantness of having his financial measurements paraded in the newspapers.

The accepted premise to be quite as disagreeable to people of modest means as to the rich. Single persons will have to pay on amounts above $800, married persons on incomes above $1,200, and the incomes of husband, wife and children must be lumped, though the limit of exemption in the last case is a little higher. Everybody in possession of $500 a year has got to make a return to the assessor, and everybody is going to know all about every other person's means of subsistence. A proposition to repeal the law has already been made, and there is a widespread feeling in favor of putting through the repealer at the extra session of the legislature, although the possibility of this is doubted owing to the governor's overlooking the matter in his call for the session.

THE WAR ON WAR.

IT IS evident that the same force which succeeded recently in taking all force and effect out of the peace treaties are behind the movement to persuade Congress to continue the battleship-building program. It is a powerful propaganda in favor of keeping the workers of this and all other countries saddled with the burden of ceaseless war expenditures. Just what its motive is (beside the fat contracts continually at stake) is not apparent, for nobody except some crazed persons sees everything red believes there is any good reason for the terrible waste and extravagance of present naval and military expenditures. They amount in this country to the staggering sum of $500,000,000 every year—a sum which would make life another thing than what it now is for the overburdened toiling masses, if only it were spent in making their work easier, their homes better, and the comfort of their old age assured. The Democratic party will belie its professions if it does not do something for the cause of peace at this session. The outcome of the fight on the battleship appropriation is not yet certain, but there is sound truth and reason in the following resolution adopted by the American Religious association at its convention in Boston last month:

"As the expanding area of the Nation's and Lincoln's generation was the war against slavery, the commanding cause of ours is the war against war; and we urge the government and people of the United States to take the position of leadership in this great movement which they ought to take by virtue of their history, their political principles, and the peculiar conditions of safety and influence which are theirs in the family of nations. Deploring the narrowness and partisanship which worked the recent mutilation by the Senate of the general arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, we urge our people to continued and untiring endeavor to secure the conclusion at the earliest possible day of treaties of equal or broader scope with all the leading nations of the world. Rejoicing in the notable development in this time of the machinery for the legal settlement of international disputes, we emphasize the duty of the corresponding curtailment of the machinery for their settlement by force; and we express our deep satisfaction and gratitude at the strong step taken in this direction by the recent committee of our House of Representatives in its recent resolution against any addition the present year to our own force of battleships. We hail this courageous action as the promising beginning of a better policy, and appeal to all friends of peace and international progress to give it their earnest indorsement and support."
